The report of the board of review recommended to the President undertaking this project, and estimated that its cost at $160,000,000 would be economically justified. The amendment provides for a limit of cost of $150,000,000.

3. The type, plans, and cost estimate have been approved by the Chief of Engineers.

4. The project was recommended to the president by the board of review.

5. The project was duly authorized by the President pursuant to the provisions of the Emergency Appropriation Act of 1935, and work is now in progress under the direction of the Chief of Engineers.

So the objection that the time is too short to enable a board thoroughly to examine the subject and report to the President upon it is not well founded, because the data are already at hand, and all that it will be necessary for the board to do is to examine the various reports and files which have been accumulated during past years. I think they can do that within the time limited in the amendment; and it is important to do it as quickly as possible in order that there may not be an absolute disorganization of the forces now engaged in the work, and a laying-off of thousands of persons, and placing them on relief rolls.

OPPOSITION BY SHIP-OPERATING CONCERNS

The opponents of the administration have made much of what they claim to be the opposition of ship-operating concerns. It is undoubtedly a fact that many ship-operating concerns have expressed themselves as strongly opposed to the project, while others have attempted to discourage it. Among those which the record shows to be most strongly opposed is the Standard Shipping Co., a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co.

I call to the attention of the Senate the real significance of this opposition.

The question at issue is not whether the Government will build this canal for the benefit of certain ship-operating concerns but whether, when built, it will benefit the general public to an extent commensurable with its cost. That is the real question; and all attempts to divert the argument by citing opposition of ship operators are beside the point.

Ship operators realize that in the long run substantially all of the savings in the operation of ships made possible by the canal will have to be passed on to the general public in the form of lowered freight rates. They also realize that the canal will greatly stimulate shipping into and out of the Gulf of Mexico, and they fear that this will mean new competition.

The Corps of Engineers, the Department of Commerce, and the Public Works Administration have all found that the construction and operation of the canal will result in general public benefits to the greater part of the United States. These benefits are much more than sufficient to justify the cost.

The Corps of Engineers, which is the highest authority on the safety and practicability for navigation of improved waterways, has stated that the canal is safe and feasible for ships to use.

The Bureau of Navigation, which is the highest authority on questions of time and distance on given courses for ships, has stated that ships using the canal will definitely make certain savings in time and distance.

In view of these facts, it is impossible to conclude that ships will not use the canal when it is opened. Whether some ship-operating concerns wish to see the canal built is not the question we are discussing here; and all evidence of this kind only serves to prove that the canal will undoubtedly bring about vast economies to the general public.

On March 17 last I had occasion to discuss this subject at some length; and I shall not now undertake to cover the whole ground. I call attention to that speech, printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 17, and desire to refer again to only a few observations made at that time on that particular point.

At that time I exhibited here a map showing the ships as they were actually in operation at noon on the 10th day of December 1932, the ships being placed on the map by the Department of Commerce.

About 900 ships were shown, and I stated then that an additional 100 or more could not be shown because they were in portions of the world not covered by the map. These ships make more than 10,000 transits per year through the straits of Florida. Every ship shown upon the map was bound through the straits of Florida, and would have used the canal if it had been open.

No other ships were shown on the map. There was no attempt to show any other ships on the sea except those which are now using the straits of Florida to the Gulf, and which would have used this canal if it had been constructed.

The location of the ships, as indicated on this map, was furnished by the Department of Commerce. The name of each ship can be obtained from the official marine register of that date.

The average savings in time which the canal would afford to these ships, so far as coastwise traffic is concerned, would be approximately 2 days on each round trip. A ship clearing from New York to New Orleans would save 2 days by passing through the canal on the round trip. A ship from Baltimore to Galveston would save about 2 days' time by using the canal on the round trip. Ships of foreign traffic would save approximately 1½ days. Only about 30 percent of the commerce which would be carried through the canal goes foreign. Seventy percent would be coastwise, the engineers estimate. This is a steadily increasing traffic. If the map were brought up to date, it would show more than 50 additional ships.

This is the greatest stream of ocean-borne traffic in the world, and is equivalent to one ship passing through the canal every 47 minutes, day and night, throughout the year. This is the actual traffic as it exists today available to the canal. It does not include any of the traffic passing through the straits of Florida which probably would not use the canal. The traffic available to the canal at the present time amounts to 90,000,000 deadweight tons per year. This is nearly double the traffic on the Suez Canal and almost one-half again as great as that on the Panama Canal.

This is an estimate based on information from the Corps of Engineers and the Department of Commerce, and I think it indicates that there is need for this canal as a great national enterprise, adding to the national wealth, increasing the commerce and trade of the United States, and developing them beyond any enterprise which has ever been undertaken.

Another objection has been urged, and some reference has been made to the action of the Public Works Administration in rejecting the application for the grant of a loan. It has been stated that the Florida canal has been disapproved by the Public Works Administration. This is entirely incorrect. The records of the Public Works Administration show, first, that the engineering division examined the project thoroughly and reported as follows:

It is concluded that the project covered herein constitutes a public necessity and is of real social value. The project will afford much employment to many classes of skilled and unskilled labor; that the design is in accord with sound engineering practice; and that the project is economically sound. It is recommended that the loan, with or without the grant, be made.

That was the action of the engineering division of the P. W. A. Second, the records of the P. W. A. show that the Administrator, Secretary Ickes, did not accept this recommendation of his engineering board to make a loan to construct the canal as a self-liquidating project, and he has stated that he did this without reference to the economic soundness of the project, but only because he did not feel that sufficient cash tolls could be collected from ships to pay off the loan with interest within the period required by the regulations of the Public Works Administration in force at that time.

That was the holding. Application was made for a loan, which was to be paid out of tolls levied on shipping through the canal. The question of the rate of tolls, the amount of tonnage, and all that, had to be gone into and estimated, and as a loan proposition, a self-liquidating proposition, the secretary, contrary to the advice of his engineers, rejected the application. That is the situation with reference to the P. W. A. It has no real effect upon the proposal to make this a great highway of commerce, or consider it from the standpoint of river and harbor improvement.

No tolls are charged on any of our inland waterways. This is to be a free canal, a free highway of commerce, without any tolls. It is to be a sea-level canal, without any locks. The project considered by the P. W. A. was a type requiring at least two locks. The Board of Engineers had been considering a canal with three locks. The board of review reported in favor of a sea-level ship canal. That would eliminate the locks, make possible the transit of the canal in much shorter time, and save the expense of construction, maintenance, and operation of locks. That report was adopted by the President and substantially adopted by all the engineers. I think that today there is no idea of any type of canal other than a sea-level ship canal without locks.

Some arguments also have been made and statements have appeared to the effect that this project was adversely reported on by the Department of Commerce. That is decidedly incorrect. The Department of Commerce made only a statistical survey for the War Department, and made no findings whatever as to the justification for the project. A letter from the Secretary of Commerce, directed to me, explains this as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
Washington, May 18, 1936.

Hon. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR FLETCHER: In reply to your letter of May 15, I am informed by the Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce that its economic survey of the Florida ship canal was made at the request of the Chief of Engineers of the War Department for use by the Army Engineers in their study of the canal. In its survey of the economic phases of this project the Bureau did not pass upon the economic justification of the canal as related to the cost of construction.

Very sincerely,

DANIEL C. ROPER,
Secretary of Commerce.

So the statement that the Department of Commerce had reported adversely on the project is incorrect. The Department of Commerce did not pass upon the question of commercial or economic justification as related to the cost.

There is another feature in connection with the importance of this canal—that is, its use and value as a factor in national defense. I submit a letter from Rear Admiral Bassett, United States Navy, retired. He indicates clearly the tremendous value of this project as a factor in national defense. The letter is as follows:

FORT GEORGE ISLAND, FLA., May 22, 1936.

SPECIAL BOARD OF ENGINEERS,
Gulf-Atlantic Ship Canal, Camp Roosevelt, Ocala, Fla.

GENTLEMEN: I see by the press that your board has been appointed to review the reports of the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal.

As a retired rear admiral, United States Navy, and one who was, during a part of his service, hydrographer of the Navy, Washington, D. C., who since retirement has lived near the route approved for the Florida ship canal, and who has naturally, therefore, considered this project in its relation to the national defense: I wish to point out for the consideration of your board the benefits to the national defense as I view them.

Due to the fact that foreign possessions lie to the south and southeast of Florida, it would be most advantageous for the United States to be able to make the Gulf of Mexico as nearly as possible a closed sea during a war by mining the straits of Florida, and protecting the Yucatan Pass between Cuba and Central America.

With the above protection and with the Florida ship canal in existence, supply vessels and other vessels moving from the North Atlantic seaboard to the Panama Canal and to the west coast of the United States would then have a better protected passage from the eastern entrance of the Florida canal to the Panama Canal. Likewise, supply vessels and other vessels moving out of the ports of the Gulf of Mexico would be better protected until their arrival at the eastern entrance of the Florida canal, and at no time would they be as much subjected to possible submarine or other attacks than they might be by using the narrow straits of Florida.

It is clear to me that under certain conditions that might arise in a war in which the United States was involved that the peacetime route from northeast United States ports to the Panama Canal, 1,974 miles, would be abandoned to a great extent in favor of the Florida ship canal route.

Also, inasmuch as the completion of the Florida ship canal will provide a vital link in the inland waterway system from Boston to Mexico, this inside protected route will, no doubt, be used to great advantage in time of war in the movement of supplies and materials; and will thus relieve the freight congestion which was so much in evidence on the northern trunkline railroads during the World War.

In regard to the possible objections of steamship companies that the Florida ship canal is a needless expense and that vessels will not use it when completed, attention is invited to the fact that similar objections were raised when the Panama Canal was under discussion at congressional hearings. How badly they were misled in their prognostication it is idle to discuss.

I submit herewith a chart to substantiate my views, from which, I think, clear deductions can be made.

Yours very truly,

F. B. BASSETT,
Rear Admiral, United States Navy (Retired).

I quote also from a statement made to the press by the Secretary of War on April 27, in which he said:

The Florida canal is a feasible and worth-while project.
People who deride the proposed waterway as an impractical scheme do not know what they are talking about.

Mr. President, I have heard it whispered to some extent, indeed, I believe it has been stated openly, that ships will move so slowly through this canal that there will be no gain in transiting the canal instead of going around through the Straits of Florida. It is not necessary for me to refer to the fact that during certain months of the year the hazard of a voyage through the Straits of Florida ought to be considered. I will not stress that. But with reference to the speed of the ships operating through the canal I may say that the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Navigation have officially determined and reported that a normal ocean speed of 10½ knots will be maintained by ships throughout the full length of the canal, except in the central cut section, where they will proceed at 6⅔ knots. These are the official figures. For the greater part of its length the canal will be along a river which is from 1 to 2 miles wide. The cut referred to will be about 29 miles in length. Through that cut the speed will be 6⅔ knots, but through the whole distance of the canal outside of that cut the speed will be 10½ knots, which is the ordinary speed for cargo vessels.

There will be no locks to contend with. Ships will move straight through the canal, and, as I mentioned heretofore, much time will be saved in the movement of cargoes from the Atlantic coast to the Gulf of Mexico by way of the Florida ship canal.

On a previous occasion I deal with the subject in greater detail. I feel I should insist that the work of developing the Florida ship canal should proceed on its merits for the benefit of the Nation. The canal will add to the wealth of the Nation and will develop the trade and commerce of the whole country. The work should go on. It will give employment to many persons. Especially is the construction of the canal justified by every principle of river and harbor improvement adopted by this country. There is not a river and harbor project heretofore adopted and now under way which has received more thorough investigation and study and favorable consideration than has the Florida ship canal.

Mr. VANDENBERG obtained the floor.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Chavez	Keyes	Pope
Austin	Clark	King	Reynolds
Bachman	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Bailey	Copeland	Loftin	Russell
Barbour	Cousens	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Barkley	Davis	Long	Sheppard
Benson	Duffy	McAdoo	Shipstead
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Smith
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Steiwer
Borah	George	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Bulow	Glass	Murphy	Truman
Burke	Guffey	Murray	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hale	Neely	Wagner
Byrnes	Hastings	Norris	Walsh
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	White
Carey	Johnson	Pittman

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, we are back again "moondoggling" on Quoddy Bay and pipe-dreaming on the phantom Florida canal. Most of us thought—or perhaps "hoped" would be a better word—that we were through with this quarter-billion-dollar extravaganza when Congress settled with it the last time. Even the taxpayers had started to sleep at night. We assumed that the disillusioned proponents of these hapless schemes were musing as the poet mused—

> I walked beside the evening sea,
> And dreamed a dream that could not be.
> The waves that plunged along the shore
> Said only, "Dreamer, dream no more!"

But we reckon without our host. Like the music that goes " 'round and 'round and 'round and comes out here", so does Quoddy and the ship canal.

Mr. President, the ship canal is no better today than it was when the Public Works Administration turned it down as a nonliquidating project because it was unsound in its business elements. The Florida canal is no better today than when the report of the Department of Commerce—regardless of what the letter of the Secretary read by the Senator from Florida may say—indicated that there is no economic justification whatsoever for the undertaking. The Florida canal is no better today than it was the day it was turned down by the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee of the House, and then by the full Appropriations Committee of the House, and then by the House itself. The Florida canal is no better today than it was when it was turned down by the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, then by the full committee, and then by the Senate itself.

The Quoddy tidal scheme is no better today than it was when it was irrevocably and unreservedly condemned by the Federal Power Commission. It is no better today than it was when it was rejected by the Public Works Administration. It is no better today than it was when it was turned down by the Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, by the full committee, and by the House itself. It is no better today than it was when the Senate was very glad to permit it to sleep in a dusty pigeonhole in the Senate Committee on Appropriations.

Both projects are the same today that they have always been. There never was any justification for them. There is none now. All in the world that the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas does is to offer a little convenient chloroform for the congressional conscience.

Mr. President, it is perfectly amazing to me that we should confront a request for a minimum of $200,000,000 of questionable public works—and that certainly puts it mildly—at the very moment when committees of Congress are struggling in an effort to raise $600,000,000 in taxes. It seems to be next to impossible—at least, it seems to be extremely difficult—to find $600,000,000 of taxes in this country to pay the already yawning deficit of the Government; yet, in the same week and in the same breath, when with difficulty we are finding $600,000,000 to apply upon existing debts, it is proposed that the Senate shall lend its authority—by indirection, yes, but none the less lend its authority—to the creation of $200,000,000 worth of additional obligations!

You are never going to catch up with your deficit, Mr. President, if every time you dig up $600,000,000 you spend $200,000,000 of it on some new scheme. If you are ever going to overtake the balancing of Federal finances upon a sound basis you will have to start somewhere to be realistic in respect to money going out, instead of forever emphasizing the quest for money coming in.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Does not the Senator think it is an extremely anomalous situation to have the Finance Committee—one of the great committees of the United States Senate—arguing and quibbling for nearly 2 weeks in an effort to raise an additional $600,000,000, which has been requested by the Treasury Department, while at the same time the Senate itself is considering a proposition offered by the majority leader of spending $200,000,000?

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is entirely correct, and, of course, I agree with him. The statement he has made is clearly on the point. It is inconceivable to me that the consent of the Senate can be procured to an authorization of expenditures which at the very minimum will be $200,000,000, as I shall ultimately demonstrate, and which may be infinitely more, at a moment when it is so desperately difficult even to pick up a casual few million dollars to apply upon the existing national debt.

Mr. President, I agree with the distinguished Senater from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], who offers the resolution, upon just one point, and that is that this question should be settled once and for all. Let us not "shadow-box", and let us not quibble about it. If the resolution shall be adopted, it will be an authorization to the President of the United States to pick his own advisers and upon the basis of their advice to proceed into another year of these operations. It would be perfectly absurd to enter upon another year of operations and then abandon the projects. The adopting of the resolution would settle the matter once and for all. The decision which the Senate now makes will be binding upon the Senate, so far as moral responsibility goes, in respect to subsequent appropriations which will be necessary from the general funds of the Government to complete these projects.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I am quite unwilling to go along with the Senator in the statement he has just made. I am in full harmony with his views regarding the projects themselves; but I made every effort in the Committee on Commerce to make it clear that, if these projects were adopted, as it proposed here today, they should not be considered binding upon the Congress or as authorizations in the ordinary sense of the term.

I know that the Senator from Michigan regards the pending proposal as affording the possibility of salving the conscience of some Senator and permitting him to vote for it, as it is merely a relief measure. I do not feel that way about it. The very fact that these are not authorized projects and that provision is not made for their continuance in the future by reason of authorizations, is to me conclusive that we ought not to adopt this amendment now, because to me it is unthinkable that we should spend another $10,000,000 to dig out Florida "snow", as they call the sand down there, and $9,000,000 more upon Quoddy Bay, because I cannot conceive it possible, in the absence of authorization now, that there should be a continuance of the projects in the future. So by adopting the amendment we simply make a great scar upon the face of the fair State of Florida, without any hope in the future of the completion of that work, and at the same time we pour $9,000,000 into Passamaquoddy

Bay, and we will not complete the work in the future. Those are considerations which make it impossible for me to think of voting for this amendment, because, as I regard it, it would be a sad waste, an immediate waste, of $19,000,000 of the people's money. But I rose to say specifically that I do not agree with the Senator from Michigan that this is an authorization which means that in the future there will be further appropriations to complete these grotesque projects.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I am obliged to the Senator from New York for his testimony, I never quarrel with anybody who is going to vote my way about why he is going to vote my way; but I insist that, so far as I am concerned, if I were to vote for this resolution and as a result of my vote another $10,000,000 were to be spent upon the canal this year, and another $5,000,000 were to be spent upon Quoddy this year, I would feel 12 months from today, when the next appropriations are asked, that I was morally bound "to go along." It seems to me that there is no escape from that logic. The Senator from New York may disagree with the logic, but I am happy that we completely and without reservation agree that the resolution should be defeated. My point is, however, that this is our conclusive hour of decision; and we cannot avoid it. We cannot send it by proxy to the President and to some of his self-selected engineers. This is the time and hour when we decide whether we are willing to put our congressional responsibility behind these two undertakings; and that is the reason why I propose that Senators shall know a little something about what these undertakings are, in reality, before they commit themselves to any such responsibility. The resolution itself, I freely concede, is a plausible, pious, painless, pregnant, and persuasive scheme to dull the effect of this responsibility, but the responsibility remains; it is inherent in the text of the resolution, as any realistic analysis of it must disclose.

In the first place, the effort was made to tie these two projects together and to make them sink or swim together. There is no relationship whatsoever between Maine and Florida in respect to these undertakings; there is no inherent reason whatsoever why the decision upon them should have to be joint, and I cannot escape the conclusion that the purpose of putting them together—and I remind the Senate that the Commerce Committee declined to let me separate them in the committee—was so that both could jointly "gang up" on the Treasury when alone they could not hope to succeed.

The able Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], in his statement yesterday, asked for a division of the question, and I compliment him for the courageous statement he made in that connection. At least, the question is now to be divided so that each of these undertakings shall stand upon its own merits.

Secondly, looking at the resolution, which is now offered in the form of an amendment, it adroitly avoids raising the main issue. Instead it innocently seems to invite what is merely an expert survey; it seems to be merely the authorization of a quest for information, and, of course, who, from the face of the record of this session, could be less opposed to a quest for information than the junior Senator from Michigan? But, Mr. President, I will show that the quest for information is almost inevitably a direct delegation of power to six unnamed engineers to decide for us what the answer of the Senate is upon its own responsibility in respect to these two undertakings.

Mr. President, you will forgive me for being a little suspicious of these Presidential boards. I speak in no sense of reflection upon anybody's motives; but human nature is human nature. I know they never could get a board that would approve the Florida canal with finality until one day they thought of the scheme of appointing a special board of review by the President. They appointed the board, and they got exactly the report they expected and wanted. I cannot forget as to Quoddy, after every other instrumentality of the Government had said "'no'; this thing is unjustified", that when the political necessity arose to pour a little money into Maine there was a Presidential board appointed to survey Quoddy, and they got exactly the report they expected and exactly the report they wanted.

To be perfectly frank, I do not think much of these Presidential boards, and I cannot escape the conviction that the Presidential boards contemplated by the pending amendment inevitably will say that the projects are grand and the projects will be built; and I think any Senator confronting the realistic situation must use his vote in that contemplation.

Mr. President, I understand that a special Presidential board on Quoddy was appointed 2 or 3 weeks ago, and I understand that the report at this moment is upon the desk of the President. I do not know whether that is the board which will be named under this amendment; I do not know whether or not that is the report which is to be conveniently produced on July 20; but I know that is the fact, and I state it as the fact.

That is another reason why you will forgive me, Mr. President, for being suspicious of the amendment. I think the purpose of the amendment is to produce an indirect approval for Quoddy and the ship canal, when the proponents of these undertakings know that they cannot get a straight-out affirmative approval by the Congress. But they have it fixed now so that these projects never again have to come back to Congress for action during the years; they have it fixed now so that the moment the President, who is partial to these enterprises, has appointed his particular investigators and they have made their particular response the Congress is irrevocably committed to continue the expenditures upon both undertakings. The proponents of these projects are not going to take any more chances with a Congress which has flatly declined to have anything to do with either one of the projects whenever it has had a chance to meet the issue squarely.

I think it requires no very extravagant use of the imagination to contemplate the character of the reports called for by the amendment if the reports already made are not actually available somewhere. The distinguished Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], who is revered by everyone in this Chamber, read this morning from a letter or an interview or a statement of some sort made by Secretary of War Dern. Mr. Dern said:

> The canal is feasible and worth while.

Mr. Dern said:

> People who deride the proposed waterway as an impracticable scheme don't know what they are talking about.

I think I should say for the Secretary of War that when I asked him whether these were literally correct quotations, he said they were in effect, although the second quotation should have had something in it about "hare brained" schemes instead of "impracticable" scheme.

But the point I make is that Secretary of War Dern is a personal representative of the President of the United States. He is at the head of the particular Department which deals with tide harnessing and ditch digging under this administration. Mr. Dern is the official tide harnesser. Mr. Dern is the official ditch digger. He sits at the Presidential council table, and, in advance of the appointment of any piously impartial board of engineers, surrounded by all the plausible language that has been written into the amendment, in advance of any such independent investigation, the chief officer of the Government dealing with this particular responsibility announces that anybody who does not like it "does not know what he is talking about."

Mr. President, I digress to say very respectfully to the Secretary of War that I think he has set a very bad precedent for himself. In his Department is the Board of Rivers and Harbors Engineers, upon which Congress and the country have come to rely with complete faith and confidence for unprejudiced and unbiased findings in respect to engineering problems. What right has a civilian Secretary of War, in advance of a conclusive decision by his Board of Rivers and Harbors Engineers, what right has he in common, decent conscience, to prejudge the case and announce that if their report is unfavorable they "do not know what they are talking about"?

That is precisely the position in which he places himself, and it is precisely the position in which he places these engineers. It is an utterly unfair position in which to put the Board of Engineers.

They will continue to be courageous, independent, honest-minded men; but, Mr. President, in the light of the experience of General Hagood, I respectfully submit that it becomes exceedingly hazardous and precarious for the Board of Rivers and Harbors Engineers ever again, so long as Secretary Dern is their superior officer, to say there is anything wrong with the Florida canal, because the Secretary has announced in advance that if they do say so they "do not know what they are talking about."

I complain very bitterly against the situation which the Secretary thus creates. I think he should be called to account for it. I think it is a direct and specific invasion of the independence of the Board of Rivers and Harbors Engineers, an independence which must be maintained if we are to have the continuing benefits of the kind of recommendations which have been such a joy and such a reliance to us heretofore.

I submit the exhibit, however, in this connection chiefly to support my contention that the adoption of the amendment, no matter how adroitly and cunningly it may be worded, is to continue these projects. I make that assertion to support my contention that every Senator in this body, when he votes upon the amendment, cannot soothe his conscience on the theory that he is simply ordering an investigation and report. He has to face the fact that in net effect he is putting his responsibility behind two utterly and totally indefensible, uneconomic undertakings which will involve the credit of the Federal Government to the extent of a quarter of a billion dollars at a time when the credit of the Federal Government is precarious enough at best.

Mr. President, let us take another look at the amendment. The joint resolution originally introduced by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] proposed to demand this independent, complete, and wholly persuasive report in about 3 weeks. Then, when it was realized that only 3 weeks would be allowed within which to survey and assess two of the greatest, most far-reaching, most unique engineering undertakings in modern times, the able Senator from Arkansas promptly said, when he came before the Commerce Committee, that he thought the time ought to be extended. Surely, it had to be extended. It was entirely too transparent the way it was written and originally introduced. Accordingly the time was extended. Yes; it was extended another 28 days.

Mr. President, if it takes Henry A. Wallace 2 months to get a few figures out of his own files to report to the Senate of the United States—and we have no assurance yet that we will get them even in 2 months—I respectfully submit that these new boards of independent, unprejudiced, unrelated engineers must have more than July 20 as the deadline in which to submit rationally sustained findings to the President of the United States. I think the deadline itself confesses that the procedure is purely a formality, and that I am justified in saying again that every Senator is voting upon his own responsibility when he votes for the amendment, and is deciding for himself whether he is satisfied to proceed with Quoddy and with the Florida ship canal.

Mr. President, let us look at another point in the amendment which is equally transparent. There is in the amendment much pious language, undertaking to soothe the tax nerve to the extent of promising that if the estimates for the Florida canal, as reported by these three self-chosen advisories of the President, shall exceed $150,000,000, or if the Quoddy estimate shall exceed $42,000,000, the President may not go ahead. That sounds at least like protection down to the point of $150,000,000 on the canal and down to the point of $42,000,000 on the Quoddy scheme.

But it is no protection at all. I mean that literally. Suppose the estimate is made in good faith—and I do not question the good faith of anyone in respect to this operation—and shows that the canal can be built for $150,000,000 and that Quoddy can be built for $42,000,000. Suppose 3 years hence it develops that they cannot be built for these amounts, but that they will cost infinitely more; what would happen? We would go right ahead with a larger expenditure. There is nothing in the world to protect against it.

Is that an illogical prospectus? Not at all. The original estimates for the Florida canal were submitted on the basis of the June trade index for 1934. That is where they got their $142,000,000 to which the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] is referring. That was only 2 years ago.

Since that time the price index on most construction materials, according to the testimony of the Chief of the Board of Rivers and Harbors Engineers, has increased 25 percent. There goes that part of the estimate out of the window. Those figures last June were based upon the ordinary contractual operation in building the Florida canal. Instead of that, the contractual operation was abandoned and the whole thing is being done under W. P. A. on a work-relief basis; and the labor factor thereby increases at least 50 percent.

If we had been proceeding under the terms of the Robinson amendment 2 years ago, we could have smugly said to ourselves, "Well, we are protected by an estimate of $142,000,000"; and yet 2 years later the estimate would not have been worth the paper on which it was written, not because of any dishonesty or incapacity on the part of the engineers who made the estimate but because the sheer force of human events had wiped out the estimate as a reliance. The same thing may happen again. Indeed, these two particular projects are loaded with that contingency. If those persons in central and southern Florida are right who think that to cut the main water artery at the north of their State will reduce their fertile acres and areas to the status of a Sahara Desert, as one of them indicated, in whatever degree this happens the Federal Government will be responsible in damages that are incalculable and immeasurable. Where does that come into the estimate?

Up yonder at Quoddy within the past month those in charge of construction have had completely and entirely to revise half of their plans. Why? Because they are dealing in a totally novel, unexplored, unilluminated undertaking. Nobody knows what problems are to be met when we march out to sea with our power dams. Within the past 4 weeks, I repeat, the authorities in charge of Quoddy have had completely to change half of their program. Suppose they have to change it again and again and again—and I was told this morning by an engineer in whose opinion I place complete confidence that there is no more assurance at this moment that the existing plans are feasible than there is that the sun will go backward in its course. That whole contingency is yet to be explored and resolved and stabilized. What good is an estimate that the expense is not going to exceed $42,000,000? It does not amount to the paper on which it is written. It is just one more nice little piece of window dressing to make it easy for those Senators who wish to turn their backs upon their obligations to the citizens of the United States and change their minds upon this proposal to do so and have an excuse for doing so.

Mr. President, let me tell you something else about this amendment. Pretty soon, if you will be patient, I shall interest you immensely with some real bedtime stories about Quoddy and the ship canal; but at the moment I wish to pursue the clear demonstration that this joint resolution, offered in the form of an amendment to the pending bill, is sheer and colossal nonsense and nothing else.

Listen: Not a single power which the President of the United States does not now possess is given to him in the amendment. I mean that statement literally. The President has the right to call in any expert he wishes to advise him respecting these undertakings.

He has the right to make any allocations he pleases from relief funds prior to June 30, 1937. That is the way he started these things—by appointing special boards which produced the precise reports they were supposed to produce, and which, as a result, theoretically justified the allocation of relief funds to the projects. The amendment does nothing more than to authorize the boards to repeat the same thing over again, and the President does not need a bit of this authority to do it. That statement cannot be controverted.

All right. Where does that leave us? It leaves us in just one place, Mr. President. It leaves us squarely confronting the fact that all in the world this amendment seeks to do is to have the Senate and the House share the responsibility for these two undertakings without getting back any authority whatever over them. It is purely and simply a purpose to bring us into the responsibility, although we are permitted no authority after we have discovered what our responsibility is.

Mr. President, when the relief measure was on the floor of the Senate a year ago, and some of us were trying to be allowed to earmark a few allocations and special funds, we were told by the Chief Executive and his high spokesmen yonder across the aisle that that was heresy; we should not be permitted to have anything to say specifically about where the money was going. Oh, no; we could not do that! That would run counter to all the schemes and purposes of the relief program, so we did not do it. The President did it. We did not. He started these projects. We did not; but just as soon as he runs into hot water with a couple of them, he is very glad, indeed, to come back here and ask us to share the bath.

That is all there is in this amendment. It is not necessary at all in respect to the projects themselves up to June 30, 1937, and that is all the amendment covers. It is not necessary in any degree. It is solely for the purpose of putting the President in a position to say, "Well, while the blood was on my hands alone at first, now it is on the hands of the House and Senate, too." There is not going to be any blood on my hands if I can help it.

Mr. President, I think I have sustained my contention that the reality of the problem now resting at the bar of the Senate is the personal decision on the part of every Member of the Senate as to whether or not he is personally prepared to endorse Quoddy and the ship canal. Since that is the status which I believe exists, I should like to have Senators who take this responsibility seriously in any degree, and who decline to subordinate a quarter of a billion dollars to expedient politics, know a little something which perhaps they have not known about Quoddy and the ship canal.

First, let me tell you something about Quoddy. It even sounds as though it were out of the Wizard of Oz.

This is a long-time dream to harness the tides in Passamaquoddy Bay, in northeastern Maine, and to put them to work for the production of electric energy.

I do not decry the dream itself, nor the brave vision of ingenious men who would like to experiment, at our expense, in this new invasion of Nature's mysteries; but I do not see that ingenious, expensive experiments in tidal phenomena have any essential relationship to the Nation's relief problem and relief burden. I am probably wrong about that, because the entire scheme of expenditure now rampant would indicate that I am terribly old-fashioned in a very orthodox view respecting the responsibility of spending agencies to the taxpayers; but listen:

On May 7, 1936, Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology—one of the country's greatest scientists, at the head of one of the country's foremost technical colleges—resigned from Secretary Roper's much-buffeted "Business Advisory Council." Now, perhaps this is just a coincidence, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that at the same time he made a New York speech in which he flayed Quoddy as "a type of Government expenditure uneconomically and politically conceived." This is not my opinion; it is the opinion of the leading scientist in the United States in relation to subjects of this character. It is an expenditure "uneconomically and politically conceived."

Let us see if the facts do not justify that conclusion.

Since 1919 private promoters have sought in vain to develop the Quoddy project as a commercial enterprise. Even in the wildest days of speculation in the last decade investors never became that wild, although they were repeatedly invited to do so. It remained for a generous, gullible old man named Uncle Sam to rush in where others feared to tread. But even he was at first reluctant to take the plunge, and it was not until some of his wisest counselors were brushed aside in favor of advice from one of these special Presidential boards, which we are again about to create, that he finally put up the first $5,000,000.

I shall not dwell on the details. I desire only to sketch the high spots so that Senators may have at least a casual understanding of what it is they are now asked to do.

I know that much romance is to be woven into eloquent apostrophes about this unique adventure, but when the echoes of this eloquence have died away there are a few cold, hard, disagreeable facts which ought to interest and control those who must now take the responsibility of diverting enormous public funds to what Dr. Compton curtly dismisses as a project "uneconomically and politically conceived."

Mr. President, I shall now call attention to some of the facts, and I challenge anyone at any time to question any of the facts I am presenting and I will promptly produce the proof.

Fact no. 1: When Quoddy asked Secretary Ickes to become its godfather, P. W. A. made an immediate investigation. The report was made on March 16, 1934, and this is the gist of it:

> We believe that the cost of this project is so great, for the amount of power and energy produced, that disposal of this energy at a profitable figure is very doubtful. * * * We find the loan is economically unsound.

Fact no. 2: Secretary Ickes sensibly asked the Federal Power Commission also to make a Quoddy survey. It reported under date of January 3, 1934. It found no prospect of a local market for Quoddy power and no possibility of delivering it in the Boston area at a price that could successfully compete with steam-generated power. It also found—and this is the Federal Power Commission speaking:

> The switchboard cost of Quoddy power, at 40-percent load factor, would be slightly less than the corresponding cost of steam-electric power. This is an apparent rather than a real advantage, however, since the steam plant would be constructed in units of about 35,000 kilowatts as required, with initial outlay of less than $4,000,000, as compared with the enormous initial investment in the hydro project.

Now listen to this, the Federal Power Commission speaking:

> Moreover, the steam-electric power would be cheaper at the higher-load factors.

Does anyone doubt that?

Fact No. 3: The Federal Power Commission says something else which is of conclusive significance if we are to deal with this subject seriously, and I submit that $42,000,000 still continues to be a serious subject. The Federal Power Commission says something else which has become of emphasized importance in the last 2 months, of importance not only to the Federal Government but also to the great State of Maine, in the light of recent devastating floods on the rivers of Maine—such floods as it is our Federal responsibility to help curb. The Federal Power Commission said this, and I ask Senators to listen carefully:

> The development of tidal power in Passamaquoddy Bay should not be seriously considered until after the potential water powers on the rivers of Maine have been thoroughly investigated. Such an investigation might disclose that power could be developed on those rivers and transported to Eastport at a cost below switchboard cost of Quoddy tidal power.

Since that subject was last in the Congress the country has been deluged with its recent tragic flood, and it developed a totally new challenge in respect to Federal responsibility across the country. That responsibility is a responsibility to meet these devastating flood conditions.

One of the areas chiefly affected by this last calamity was the State of Maine; and if we are to deal with floods and flood conditions in the State of Maine, we have to deal with the rivers of Maine; and if we deal with the rivers of Maine, we might just as well build power dams as mere flood dams; and if we build power dams instead of flood dams, we have the testimony of our own Federal Power Commission that we can produce cheaper power than we can at Quoddy, and we can keep just as many men at work building the other dams.

What is there about this infatuation which requires us to pursue it regardless of facts, regardless of logic, regardless of alternative invitations? What is there about this thing—which Dr. Compton says is "politically conceived"—what is there about it, unless it is the potential conception itself, which makes us stick to it in spite of everything?

Now a few more facts. Fact no. 4: All the foregoing reports were submitted to a P. W. A. board of review. This board reported March 30, 1934. It agreed with the Federal Power Commission that the rivers of Maine offered far better and cheaper hydroelectric opportunities than did Quoddy. Now listen to what it says. This is the Federal Power Commission speaking. I never heard anyone question the reliability of the Federal Power Commission. I asked the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] a few days ago whether it was a reliable body, and he said it was. Remember, now, the amendment submitted by the Senator from Arkansas proposes a $42,000,000 investment to produce this hydroelectric energy at Quoddy. Listen to the Federal Power Commission:

A steam-generating plant of capacity equal to Quoddy would cost only $16,000,000.

What Senator cares to say upon his responsibility that he is prepared to waste the other $26,000,000 just because someone, in Dr. Compton's language, has "politically conceived" something which produces a progeny which I cannot define within the rules of the Senate?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWELLENBACH in the chair). Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. I am not going to vote for Quoddy, but it seems to me that the Senator from Michigan loses sight of the fact that the $16,000,000 would simply be the initial expenditure, and that the steam plant would have to be forever thereafter maintained at a definite cost.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Michigan yield to me?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Not until I have answered the Senator from Virginia.

I hope the Senator from Virginia does not think, to begin with, that I am advocating the $16,000,000 steam plant. On the contrary, I am simply pointing out that if somebody must produce power at Quoddy, the Federal Power Commission says it can be done with a steam-generating plant at about one-third of what it would cost to produce it by the other method.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield now?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator will recall that the testimony before the Committee on Commerce showed that the cost of operating the steam plant in connection with the production of electricity would be twice what it would cost to operate a tidal-power project.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I recall that the Federal Power Commission stated categorically, as I previously read, before the Senator entered the Chamber, that in the major power load the power from the steam plant will be cheaper than the power from Quoddy.

Now I quote the Federal Power Commission. It concluded:

From an economic standpoint, the time has not yet arrived for the development of this project, and the Board recommends that the application be denied.

Mr. President, let us bear in mind what has resulted from these intimate studies by the engineers of the Public Works Administration and the experts of the Federal Power Commission, two official governmental bodies which made an independent survey of Quoddy's prospectus.

I have omitted many details and many significant but inconclusive facts, such, for example, as the fact that the Quoddy proponents themselves proposed in the first instance that the Government should help finance aluminum and stainless-steel smelting plants at Eastport for the consumption of a major bloc of Quoddy power.

The P. W. A. Board of Review, another official governmental body, said:

Without these metallurgic plants—

And they have now disappeared from the picture—

the entire project is admittedly not economically justified.

These metallurgic plants are not part of the present program, and, therefore, according to the report of the P. W. A. Board of Review, the project is admittedly uneconomically justified.

Entirely aside from these collateral exhibits, however, we find that the Public Works Administration and the Federal Power Commission jointly have concluded as follows:

1. That the Quoddy project will cost a minimum of some $40,000,000, but that a comparable steam-generating plant at the same point can be constructed for $16,000,000.

2. That Quoddy power ultimately must sell for more than steam-generated power; that it will not be a low-cost operation; that it cannot compete with steam-power rates in export.

3. That there is no present or prospective market for Quoddy power at any price.

4. That hydroelectric energy, when needed, can be more cheaply generated on Maine's undeveloped rivers.

I add, on my own account, that river power can be developed entirely as a byproduct of flood control, which the Federal Government must underwrite regardless of whether Quoddy survives or not.

This was the conclusive situation, Mr. President—Quoddy was unanimously and unanswerably rejected—when the President apparently decided that he wanted to go ahead with Quoddy anyway. Undoubtedly he had his reasons. They do not concern us. The head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology says the project was not only uneconomically but also politically conceived. But no matter; on with the telltale chronology!

In spite of all this authentic information, when it became necessary to pour some political money into Maine, a new board was appointed on November 14, 1934, to make a new report. This is tremendously interesting and tremendously significant. Mark you, every spending agency in the Federal Government, calling upon all its expert resources, has said that Quoddy should not be built. All of a sudden the President says, "I am going to appoint a board of four"—one of these Presidential boards, such as the pending amendment again proposes to create—"I am going to appoint a board to find out whether all those who have reported against Quoddy knew what they were talking about."

So he appointed a board; and what do you suppose happened? Out of four members of the board, he appointed two members who were the original applicants for the Quoddy loan from the Government of the United States. Does anybody deny that? A board of four experts was appointed to survey, on behalf of the Government of the United States, a project involving, presently estimated, the expenditure of the tremendous sum of $40,000,000—but infinitely more than that in the long view. The President appointed a board of four, after every official instrumentality of the Government had turned down the Quoddy project; and half of the board of four which he named is composed of the distinguished gentlemen who had been the original applicants for a Quoddy loan from the Government of the United States! It would have been about as sensible, Mr. President, for a banker to say to an applicant for a loan, "You investigate the application and tell me whether or not I ought to make it."

This kind of a board did not need much time, of course. This kind of a board, precisely like the boards that are contemplated in the pending amendment, knew what its job was, and did it in a hurry. The board reported in 8 short weeks; and what do you suppose? The Federal Power Commission was all wrong! The Public Works Administration was all wrong! The private investors of this Nation, who for a decade had declined to proceed with the undertaking, were all wrong!

The new Presidential board, half of which was related by blood to Quoddy, said that Quoddy is a grand idea, socially desirable, engineeringly sound, and economically feasible. There was no rebuttal in this report of the Presidential board of the challenge from the Federal Power Commission. There was just the pretty picture of an aspiration. All previous reports went out of the window. The Federal Power Commission had found that Quoddy power would cost 5.63 mills per kilowatt-hour at the switchboard. P. W. A. engineers had found that it would cost 7.81 mills per kilowatt-hour at the switchboard. The new board, however, in 8 short weeks found that it would cost only 3.4 mills per kilowatt-hour at the switchboard. So the Quoddy project immediately was transmuted into a grand and glorious economic scheme which earned the $10,000,000 benediction of the President of the United States.

Portions of this scheme are not reliably settled even today. Serious engineering problems are still lingering in the realm of speculation. I quote a few revelatory sentences from the Engineering News-Record for April 23, 1936:

> The Government project still has many unknowns.

Mark that—

> The Government project still has many unknowns.

Yet the Senator from Arkansas solemnly assures us that if the present estimates do not exceed $42,000,000, we may rely upon it that that is a protection for the taxpayers—when, I repeat, it is not worth the paper upon which it is written so long as "the Government project still has many unknowns."

I continue the quotation:

> Information as to foundation conditions for the reservoir dikes was lacking; but more important still was information as to the character of the 100-foot clay beds in the bottom of the deep channels upon which it was proposed to build high rock-filled dams. * * * Mr. Cooper's preliminary examination indicated that the maximum depth of the underlying clay was about 100 feet. * * * Core drilling by the Army Engineers has revealed depths to rock reaching a maximum of 264 feet below low water.

He missed it by only 164 percent. If we should happen to proceed under the pending amendment, and should miss by 140 or 150 percent the plausible and piously protecting estimate which the Senator from Arkansas puts in his amendment, what becomes of the protection he pretends to give us?

I continue the quotation from the Engineering News-Record:

> The Haycock reservoir site has been abandoned.

They have not even got started yet, but they have already begun to abandon part of the project—

> The Haycock reservoir site has been abandoned. * * * The whole pumped-storage plan may be abandoned—

What good is the estimate which the Senator from Arkansas is talking about, when nobody knows what the project is to be? An estimate may be made in good faith on the basis of things as they are, yet day after tomorrow things as they are may have been totally wiped away.

I continue the quotation:

> The whole pumped-storage plan may be abandoned and an auxiliary steam or diesel station substituted, or interchange made with existing utility systems.

Mr. President, what good does it do us pretentiously to authorize another special board to spend 5 or 6 weeks merely in reviewing the reports heretofore rendered? Now, mark you, that is a quotation from the amendment. These boards cannot go out and find out anything for themselves—oh, no! They are merely to review the reports heretofore rendered. The result of their review of the reports heretofore rendered will be precisely like the result of the work of the last board the President appointed for a similar purpose.

So far as Congress is concerned, what right have we, with an eye to our constitutional responsibilities, to turn our backs upon the official warnings of the Public Works Administration and our own Federal Power Commission? Oh, it may be a neat escape, if escape is our objective, to authorize another cursory examination, which, without directly incriminating us, may comfortably permit this "uneconomically and politically conceived" project to eat up all its multiplied millions; but I do not believe it will fool the American people at all, nor do I believe it can satisfy the conscience of the Senate. I say to you again that if you adopt this amendment, on July 20 the President will announce that Quoddy and the canal are to be continued; and if July 20 is not P. T. Barnum's birthday, it ought to be! [Laughter.]

Mr. President, the very distinguished Governor of Maine came down and appeared before our committee. He made a very eloquent statement, which was beautifully presented, and which completely avoided any semblance or discussion of realities of the Quoddy challenge. He presented a stack of telegrams and said there were 700 telegrams from Maine; "Look at these; Maine wants you to build Quoddy; Maine begs you to build Quoddy." What Maine sought was that we continue to spend $42,000,000.

The popularity of $42,000,000 will produce 700 telegrams from any section of the country; but listen to a very simple calculation. The entire plea today for Quoddy—and this includes the testimony of the Governor of Maine—when you sift out the poppies and lilacs, is an appeal for relief. Very good. Maine is entitled to a square deal in respect to relief, and it probably has not had it, but if you are prepared, Mr. President, to spend $36,000,000 on work relief—listen to me—to employ 5,000 people, then if you deal equitably with the remainder of the people of the United States, you must be prepared to spend $26,200,000,000 to employ the rest of Harry Hopkins' 3,500,000 work-relief clients.

What Senator, in his right mind, would concede any such prospectus? And when you go down to Florida and apply the same rule where we meet the same plea that the ship-canal project must not be interrupted because it is such a grand work-relief idea, what is the mathematics that result at that point? Well, Mr. President, the Florida canal is providing work for 7,000 people; it will cost a minimum of $150,000,000. Listen! I say to you, at that rate, if you deal equitably with the remainder of the United States you have got to be prepared to spend $75,000,000,000 upon work-relief projects in order to employ the remainder of Harry Hopkins' 3,500,000 work-relief clients.

You are not going to say to me, Mr. President, that it is not our responsibility to deal equitably with the various sections of the United States; you would not dare say that. And you are not going to say to me that we would be entitled to launch a $75,000,000,000 work-relief program. So, take which horn of the dilemma you please you are not going to say to me that this thing is justified; and, if it is not justified, you cannot turn your responsibility over to any three engineers named by a complacent President of the United States. It comes right back home to you to answer for it.

Now just one further exhibit on Quoddy. I think every prominent engineer in the United States already has an opinion about Quoddy; he knows pretty well, because Quoddy has been very widely publicized, whether or not he thinks the project is economically sound. So when you tell the President to appoint a board of engineers all he has to do is to find the engineers, if he can—I will agree it will be difficult—who are partial to Quoddy and he has got the answer that he asked for.

I just want to demonstrate how difficult it is going to be for him to find six impartial, independent, high-minded engineers to bring him in a favorable report. Oh, he will find them; do not have any worry about that, but it is going to be difficult, and he will probably have to go down into the "second string" in order to fill out the board. Why? I asked for a list of 10 leading hydraulic engineers in the United States from a great authority, and I got the list. I inquired of the engineers on the list whether they had a considered opinion regarding the economic sufficiency of the Passamaquoddy tidal power project, and 10 of them replied. One of them said it was fine. I want to mention that first and I want to name him, too—Harold S. Boardman. I also want to tell the Senate where he lives—at Orono, Maine. I do not mean to reflect on him at all and I submit that it shows my own good faith when I included Maine in the list indicated.

Professor Boardman says it is fine. But what do the other nine say? They say everything, from the verdict of one engineer who apparently did not think it was worth while to spend much time writing a letter about it and so he just wired me back one word—"asinine." The other eight said there was no justification on earth for it. I will give their names—Prof. Henry Riggs, of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor; Daniel W. Mead, of Madison, Wis.; Frank A. Barbour, of Boston, Mass.; John A. McPherson, of Greenville, S. C.; H. S. Morse, of Indianapolis, Ind.; Robert Ridgway, of New York City; J. M. Howe, of Houston, Tex.; Robert E. Horton, of Voorheesville, N. Y.; and J. F. Coleman, of New Orleans, La. That is my board.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I will be delighted to yield.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator tell me how he put the question up to these engineers?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I have been waiting for a long time to engage in colloquy with the Senator from Maine on this subject.

Mr. HALE. I should like to have the information I ask for, namely, in what form did the Senator put the question up to these experts?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I will be very happy to tell the Senator verbatim. I have not a copy with me but it is approximately this:

> Will you kindly advise me whether you have any considered opinion regarding the engineering and economic sufficiency of the Passamaquoddy tidal-power project in Maine?

It was as free from prejudice as a question could be.

Mr. HALE. But, Mr. President, the Senator will not say, from the replies which he received from them, that these men have made any expert examination of the project.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Oh, no; not all of them, although perhaps I ought to read some of these letters. I thought I would save the time of the Senate on this subject, and I do not think I will persist, anyway, but to answer the perfectly appropriate question which the senior Senator from Maine has asked me, let me read one typical letter from Frank A. Barbour, civil and sanitary engineer, Fremont Building, Boston, Mass.

> I know the area involved and the market for power in that section of the country. I have kept myself informed as to the various proposed methods of development. I have no personal knowledge of the possible power output or the ultimate cost, but I have carefully studied the reports which have been published from time to time in the technical press.
> On the basis of this information, the project—measured by any of the yardsticks known to engineers—is, in my opinion, so unsound economically as to be impossible of justification from any social or welfare standpoint.
> As has been said, "it breaks all records in getting the least electricity for the money", and, even if this were not the case, there is not and will not be for generations a market for the power.
> In my opinion, Passamaquoddy should remain a project to be dropped and forgotten, as soon as possible.

I should be glad, if time permitted, to read the other letter, but I assure the Senator that they run in the same general tenor.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, from what the Senator has just read, I gather that the chief objection to this project turns around the question of the marketability of the power. It seems to me there is very little said about the engineering aspects.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Did the Senator hear this sentence?—

> It breaks all records in getting the least electricity for the money.

It seems to me that is rather conclusive.

Mr. President, I do not want to labor the Quoddy problem any longer. I have brought the reports of the Federal Power Commission, which tell us that we have no right to lend our sanction to this undertaking. I have brought the reports of the Public Works Administration engineers, which tell us that we have no right to lend our authority to this undertaking; and I have demonstrated, beyond the shadow of a doubt, it seems to me—because no one has challenged me as I have proceeded—that the sole purpose of this amendment is to commit the Congress to the permanent development of these undertakings by indirection, so as to avoid the hazard and the jeopardy of again asking for a square roll call on the merits of the projects themselves.

Mr. President, that leaves us with one other problem, and I can dismiss it very briefly relatively, because I have already previously discussed it at length in the Senate, and I have been complimented by the fact that the Senate has twice confirmed my conclusions. We are now back to the Florida canal, 200 miles long, extending from Jacksonville southwest to the Gulf.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURKE in the chair). Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Are the Passamaquoddy enterprise and the Florida canal now tied together?

Mr. VANDENBERG. When the joint resolution was referred to the Commerce Committee the two projects were tied together. In the Commerce Committee I tried to divide them because I thought it was not quite fair to revert to pork-barrel, log-rolling methods to get votes. The Commerce Committee declined to divide them. The amendment came to the floor of the Senate. The senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] yesterday asked that the question be divided when the vote is taken, and my understanding is that the Chair has ruled that he is entitled to have the question divided; so there will be two votes in the Senate, one on Quoddy and one on the Florida canal.

Mr. BORAH. That will be convenient.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That will be convenient and a little more conclusive.

Regarding the canal, I was simply indicating in a word what it is. It is a 200-mile tortuous waterway with twice as much restricted water as there is in any other waterway on earth, trailing across the northern part of Florida from Jacksonville southwest, and finally running out into the Gulf of Mexico. The canal has to be dug 25 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico itself in order to reach navigable water.

The proposed canal has been romantically discussed for 50 to 100 years, but it never remotely occurred to anybody to actually undertake it and to put any money into it until the present delightful dispensation of easy money came upon the land. Even in the presence of this delightful dispensation it was not too easy for the Florida canal to reach the Treasury because Secretary Ickes has a rather realistic viewpoint in respect to some of his responsibilities.

When the Florida project applied for a P. W. A. loan on August 14, 1933, the P. W. A. Administrator appointed several boards to inquire into it. I shall be very brief in this summary because I went over it in detail 2 months ago; but I do not want Senators to forget what it is upon which they are asked to vote.

Secretary Ickes' first board reported on costs, and it did report that a sea-level canal would cost $142,000,000 without interest and $160,000,000 with interest.

Let me digress just a moment. Senators will notice the clever language in the amendment which is now pending. In that portion of the amendment which pretends to offer a little protection by way of an upper limit on the cost of producing this atrocity, it is said:

> Provided, That the total estimated capital cost—

Note the word "capital"!—

> Capital cost of such canal shall not exceed $150,000,000.

Do Senators see what the use of the word "capital" means? It means that interest during construction is to be eliminated from the cost limitation, although, of course, unfortunately, it cannot be so conveniently eliminated when the draft is drawn on the Treasury. According to the original report, to which the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] has repeatedly referred, the real cost of the canal at that time, with a legitimate accounting for interest during construction, was $160,000,000. Thanks to the clever language of the pending amendment, interest during construction is eliminated without any particular notice to us except as we happen to understand what is meant in projects of this character by the adjective "capital" in front of the noun "cost."

The Secretary appointed another board. That board reported on the financial aspects of the Florida scheme and reported on September 13, 1934, saying:

> If 8-cent tolls were charged on the canal, the canal would pay for its maintenance and operation and repay cost of construction, without interest, in 80 years.

That is a fine business proposition! The Government could get its money back without interest in 80 years—maybe—but could not even do that unless it charged 8-cent tolls, and there are not going to be any tolls charged at all on this canal.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I am glad to yield.

Mr. FLETCHER. The proposal at that time was to make it a toll canal and the idea was to obtain a loan for building it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is correct.

Mr. FLETCHER. The 8-cent tolls may not be compared to the charge on the Panama Canal. The Panama Canal toll amounts to $1 per ton. If we should increase the rate of toll on the Florida canal we would get more revenue. Eight cents a ton is a nominal sum and is not a reasonable charge.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is entirely correct, but I fail to understand what bearing it has upon the point I was making. I was not discussing whether or not the 8-cent charge was appropriate. I was simply discussing the fact that Secretary Ickes' board found that even with the revenue which would accrue to the Government from a toll of at least 8 cents, still the project could not be justified on a business basis.

The matter went through the works of the P. W. A. and on December 21, 1934, the P. W. A. Acting Administrator, whose name, I believe, was Fleming, recommended that the Florida canal project be disapproved for a loan as "not self-liquidating." In other words, it was not a sound business proposition. That puts it in a nutshell.

January 29, 1935, the project was formally disapproved by the Secretary of the Interior acting as Public Works Administrator.

That was not entirely satisfactory to the Florida proponents, so they submitted a revised plan. The revised plan was sent around by Administrator Ickes to the various bureaus for renewed reports.

February 2, 1935, the P. W. A. legal division said "No." April 10, 1935, the P. W. A. finance division said "No."

Secretary Ickes finally declined to reopen the case and the dismissal stands today. So far as the official attitude of the Public Works Administration and Administrator Ickes is concerned, the project stands today under their condemnation.

After that there was only one way left by which to get Government money, and that was through one of the W. P. A. allocations. Of course, there had to be some excuse for making an allocation from the W. P. A. The President found himself in precisely the same situation he had confronted in Maine. The official bodies of the Government had said, "This will not do. We cannot approve it." So there had to be some new authority created in order to set up a semblance of justification of some sort. Accordingly provision was made for another of these Presidential boards, the kind which are provided in the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. To the surprise of nobody, the Presidential board which had been appointed for that purpose said it was a grand idea, and promptly $5,000,000 flowed into the canal project by allocation of September 3, 1935.

Mark you, a great deal is said about the Board of Rivers and Harbors Engineers and their reports in connection with this undertaking, and frequently a studied effort is made to make it appear that these official engineering and surveying authorities in the War Department have put their stamp of approval upon the Florida canal; but the fact is—and I quote Gen. G. B. Pillsbury, Acting Chief of Engineers, December 21, 1935:

> The customary procedure for the authorization of river and harbor projects has not been followed in the authorization of this canal.

Worse!—and this is highly significant, from the same letter—

> The review of the board has been deferred at the request—

Who do you suppose requested them to defer this official, formal, final, conclusive finding by the experts of the Government of the United States in the War Department? Who do you suppose asked them not to let anybody know what they thought about it? I am reading General Pillsbury's letter:

> The review of the board has been deferred at the request of local Florida interests desirous of submitting additional data.

Mr. President, that report has not been made to this good hour.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, the matter was then being considered by the board of review.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is not all. The Secretary of War tells me, in a letter dated May 25, 1936:

> The Florida canal project is now under formal study by the Corps of Engineers, with its customary thoroughness and fairness. The next step of that study is a responsibility of the "special board" to which you refer.

I wonder if the Secretary of War was unwittingly ironical when he used the language "its customary thoroughness and fairness" as he wrote about the Florida canal? The Corps of Engineers has not even conclusively reported yet, and we have already sunk millions of dollars in the project; and we are asked, indirectly, to put our final stamp of approval on it this afternoon through the adoption of an amendment which is sheer camouflage so far as relieving the Congress of the United States of its responsibility is concerned.

Those were the credentials the Florida canal enjoyed.

I wish to be fair about the special board of review to which the able Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] has repeatedly referred, and upon which he entirely and exclusively relies for his case. It is the only thing he has on which to rely. They did just exactly what the Presidential board in Maine did.

They were not inhibited by any of the facts that had previously been disclosed, nor by any of the recommendations previously made. They drew their own picture, and they concluded that the canal was economically justified in this fashion. Now, follow me:

They counted all the ships that had traversed the area from the Atlantic Ocean around Florida to the Gulf in a year; and then they said:

> If every one of these ships had gone through the Florida canal, it would have saved six or seven million dollars in navigation costs.

That is a very interesting contemplation, but it is an enormous "if." "If they had all gone through", there would have been a six- or seven-million-dollar benefit which would have "justified" the expenditure of one hundred and fifty or two hundred million dollars. Of course I do not see that a $7,000,000 benefit, by simple mathematics, justifies a $200,000,000 or $150,000,000 investment; but, be that as it may, I am assessing their amazing line of logic.

Mr. MURPHY rose.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator from Iowa wish to ask me something?

Mr. MURPHY. Only to suggest, as the Senator's words suggested to me, that putting the statement in the subjunctive was a good deal like a goose-farm prospectus. [Laughter.]

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator; and if he will undertake to translate that lexicon into an adequate definition of this amendment, I should like to yield to him again later.

Now, Mr. President, you see how the board of review figured out the economic "justification."

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes; I should love to yield to the Senator.

Mr. MURPHY. Having reference to the estimate which the Senator quoted of $160,000,000 as the capital cost of the canal, is the Senator prepared to say what a fair computation of interest on the capital cost would make the total cost?

Mr. VANDENBERG. The $160,000,000 figure includes the interest. The capital cost is $142,000,000. The average interest rate charged against these projects over the years is 4 percent. That brings the total to $160,000,000; but, lest the Senator may not have been here when previously I was discussing the cost figure, I call his attention to the fact that that estimate is based upon the price index of June 1934. Since then the cost of construction materials has increased 25 percent. That estimate is based upon contractual labor and not upon relief labor. The canal is now being built entirely by relief labor. Of course, the idea is perfectly fantastic that we can rely upon an estimate of $140,000,000 under those circumstances.

Let me get back, however, to the hypothesis of justification, because I think it is so amusing, or it would be if it were not so serious. If every ship that the board of review found for a year on the waters connecting the Atlantic Ocean to the Gulf had gone through the canal, there would have been a navigation saving of six or seven million dollars.

First, every ship would not go through the canal. I am not going to remind the Senate of the evidence I presented 2 months ago, except in this brief summation: I did not find a single major ship operator in the entire waters who, in response to a fair questionnaire from me, would say that he had the remotest idea of ever using the canal if it were built. On the contrary, ship operator after ship operator testified, in unequivocal language, that they did not think the enterprise was economically justified. They testified that it is not essential, and that it should not be pursued. What becomes of all these ships that the board of review counted on the ocean and the Gulf to reach this hypothetical conclusion? Why, Mr. President, they are just "painted ships upon a painted ocean." They have no relationship whatever to the mathematics that the Senate of the United States should consult upon its responsibility when it is dealing with one hundred and fifty or two hundred million dollars of the public money.

Second, the Department of Commerce, in the survey it made of the proposed canal, said that of this hypothetical trade two-thirds would be oil tankers. So two-thirds of the beneficiaries whom we are presuming to serve with this hypothetical advantage, two-thirds of the beneficiaries of this $200,000,000 grace are the oil operators and oil shippers of the country. I do not think they need our aid that much or that badly. Neither do I think all the oil tankers put together, if they did go through the canal and did get a hypothetical benefit from the transit, would reduce the price of oil to the ultimate consumer by one fraction of a mill. What becomes of this hypothetical advantage? Are we to be led astray by mere assumptions which, under analysis, utterly fail to justify themselves?

Do not take my word for that. What did the Department of Commerce survey say? The Department of Commerce made a very profound survey, and the result is attested in a pile of books about 2 feet high. Believe it or not, I have read them all, and I am perfectly prepared to discuss their contents with anybody.

This is what the Department of Commerce said:

> The consensus of opinion of that part of the shipping industry with which contact has been established in the preparation of this study appears to be that the probable cost of building the projected waterway is not justified through any benefits which might thereby accrue to the cargo or the vessel. The significance of this is that it rests primarily upon the considered opinion of the principal and naturally most interested group, namely, the tanker trade.

Mr. President, the question always inevitably arises in the minds of those who contemplate this interesting problem, why would they not use the canal if it were in existence? Let the Department of Commerce answer that question for itself.

> A significant question which has been generally raised relates to the length of time a vessel would be confined to restricted waters. It has been pointed out by ship operators that the proposed waterway would be practically twice as long as the world's longest canal—the Suez—and that roughly 36 to 40 hours would be required to move a vessel from open water to open water over this distance. The question reflects directly the reluctance of those responsible for the operation of ships to have them confined to restricted waters.

Mr. President, it is impossible to drive a ship operator into restricted water by any fiat of Congress or by any dream respecting the Florida canal. Because of many factors and many elements, the cost of operating ships in restricted waters is greater than the cost of operating ships in unrestricted waters. When the ship operators of this country almost unanimously testify that they would not use the canal even if it were available, I submit we are entitled to say they probably know what they are talking about, and that the net result of their testimony and evidence is infinitely more reliable than the hypothetical calculations of somebody who sat in a swivel chair down Pennsylvania Avenue and counted all the ships he found on the ocean off Florida and in Gulf waters during a period of 12 months.

Mr. President, I desire to refer to only one other phase of this matter, and I feel required to do so with apologies to the senior Senator from Florida because of the almost countless messages from central and southern Florida which have poured in upon me during the last 2 or 3 weeks, as they did during our previous debate, namely, that their viewpoint may be submitted to the Senate.

I will not undertake to say—it would be presumptuous if I did—what the State of Florida thinks about the Florida canal. I do not presume upon the prerogatives of my able friend the senior Senator from Florida, but I think I owe it to those of his people who have asked that their viewpoint be submitted that it should be submitted, and I say to the Senate that it is their opinion, rightly or wrongly, it is their conviction, that if this gash is cut across the northern end of Florida, it will sever the main water artery, and it will either destroy or tremendously endanger and injure the ground-water supply of those areas.

The Senator from Florida is entitled to answer me by saying that upon this question the Presidential board of review, to which I have previously referred, has said that its considered view is that there is no such menace. The fact remains that we are guessing, at best, because there are equally reliable and profound engineers who put to themselves the responsibility of asserting that the construction of the proposed canal would result in incomparable damages to central and southern Florida.

Dr. Henry S. Sharp, geologist, of Columbia University, has asserted:

> All geologists unite in predicting that the canal will cause some damage to the water supply, while a considerable number believe that it will prove to be a textbook example of the large-scale destruction of water resources by artificial interference with underground flow.

Since I used that quotation in the first debate I have had a reasonably long correspondence with Professor Sharp, and he has submitted to me a supplementary brief, in which he specifically sustains his own conclusion that we are put upon notice that we proceed at our peril so far as this water problem is concerned.

The United States Geological Survey itself says:

To summarize, there appears to be no reasonable doubt that serious adverse effects will be produced upon the important underground-water supplies of the Ocala limestone in a wide zone extending outward from the canal line by the construction of a sea-level canal along Route 13-B.

Mr. President, I do not know whether there will be resultant jeopardy or not, but I am put upon notice, and so are other Senators, that there can be jeopardy, that there may be jeopardy; some go so far as to say there probably will be jeopardy. If there is jeopardy, and if destruction in whatever degree shall pursue the fertile acres of central and southern Florida, the Government will make itself liable for a bill in damages beside which this appropriation, enormous as it is, may become merely pin money.

Mr. President, I submit we are not entitled to take that chance. I submit we cannot get any conclusive answer to this question from any 3 or 4 or 5 weeks' survey of reports previously made, as required by the amendment submitted by the Senator from Arkansas. It cannot be done in that fashion, and it is mere window dressing to talk about doing it in that fashion. The jeopardy exists. If you separate this amendment, Senators, you accept your share of responsibility for that jeopardy because you cannot hide behind these Presidential boards.

Mr. President, I merely desire to add for the RECORD, in behalf of the citizens of Florida who have urged me to bespeak their opposition, that I have had 93 petitions from civic, social, political, and religious organizations in the State of Florida, begging Congress not to bring the shadow of this menace upon them. They run all the way from the city of Sanford to the city of Orlando, to the city of Kissimmee, to the city of Winter Haven, to the city of Miami, to the city of Fort Lauderdale, to the city of Stuart, to the city of Vero Beach, to the city of Fort Pierce, to the city of Tampa, to the city of Sarasota; from the Seminole County commissioners, the Orange County commissioners, the Osceola County commissioners, the De Soto County commissioners, the Hillsboro County commissioners, the Dade County commissioners, the Broward County commissioners, the Martin County commissioners, the Sarasota County commissioners, the Seminole County Agricultural Association, and so forth, and so forth, and so forth.

Mr. President, I think I have discharged my entire responsibility in respect to these two undertakings. I had expected to present a series of amendments to each of these project definitions in the amendment, in an effort, from my viewpoint, to inject some minimum degree of rationality into them. But I have concluded that the issue is clear and distinct, and that it ought to be left clear and distinct. The Senate should vote the amendment up or down after it is divided. I shall not offer the amendments to which I have referred. I shall be content to accept the judgment of the Senate based upon the facts.

Mr. President, I say in conclusion that this amendment cannot successfully transfer to the President and to three unnamed engineers the responsibility of the American Congress over the public purse. That responsibility stays here, in spite of any detour, in spite of any camouflage. We cannot evade the responsibility 1 year from today for dipping into the general revenues of this Government to continue these projects. If we agree to this amendment today, this is the last and final hour when the Senate of the United States will say upon its responsibility that it is satisfied to have Quoddy and the Florida ship canal proceed. I, for one, vote "no."

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MALONEY in the chair) laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on certain amendments of the Senate to House bill 11418, the Agricultural Department appropriation bill, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
May 29, 1936.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate nos. 2, 16, and 71 to the bill (H. R. 11418) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes, and concur therein;

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 85 to said bill and concur therein with the following amendment:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert:

"Enforcement of the Sea Food Inspectors Act: For personal services of sea-food inspectors designated to examine and inspect sea food and the production, packing, and labeling thereof upon the application of any packer of any sea food for shipment or sale within the jurisdiction of the Federal Food and Drugs Act, in accordance with the provisions of act entitled 'An act to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended', approved August 27, 1936 (49 Stat., p. 871), $40,000"; and

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 86 to said bill and concur therein with the following amendment:

In lieu of the sum proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert "$2,077,758."

Mr. RUSSELL. I move that the Senate agree to the amendments of the House to Senate amendments Nos. 85 and 86.

The motion was agreed to.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I voted against the $4,880,000,000 bill in the last session of Congress. I did so because of my belief that it proposed an unconstitutional delegation of power to the President. I did so because I was opposed to vesting in the President of the United States authority to spend in his discretion such a staggering sum. I was hostile to the legislation because of my fear that this money would be extravagantly and wastefully spent, with sectionalism and partisanship influencing its distribution and its use. I am against the pending bill in its present form for precisely the same reasons.

Mr. President, unlimited authority has heretofore been given to the President to spend vast amounts. Billions of dollars have been appropriated and placed at his disposition. The policy of public-works expenditures is in full swing, and the pending measure simply continues and enlarges the program.

Disapproval of the program as a whole does not, in my judgment, demand that I should oppose every project within its scope. On the contrary, I feel free and I feel obligated affirmatively to express myself with respect to particular undertakings included in the general program as they from time to time are presented to me.

Mr. President, I have twice voted against the Florida canal. There is my record with respect to that project, and that record I cannot erase. Yesterday my colleague, for whose mental integrity and political courage I have unbounded respect, stated, not in words, but in fair intendment, that he was not in the market. I stand with my colleague in that declaration of principle. I do not propose by any act of mine that it may be charged or that it may be thought that a Senator of the United States from the State of Maine is for sale, whatever the price may be that is offered. Because of my past attitude, I feel compelled now to vote against the Florida canal amendment.

Mr. President, I favor the proposal for the completion of Quoddy. The President of the United States had original authority to approve this undertaking. He has under present law power to continue and complete its construction. He has available the funds to carry on the work. I had hoped that he would do so. He has, however, asked that further study of the project be made, and the amendment relating to Quoddy makes completion thereof contingent upon favorable recommendation by the commission to be designated.

I regard the pending amendment not as an enlarged authority to the President, not as a new power, but rather as a restriction and a limitation upon present power. I regret that it has seemed advisable to the President, that it has seemed necessary, to ask for further legislation which, in my judgment, makes contingent the completion of the project in the State of Maine.

I do not feel—and I have already indicated this—that opposition to the whole program of the Government makes it necessary that I should oppose an expenditure from the relief fund to be made within my own State. On the contrary, I welcome the opportunity to recapture for my State some of the contributions she, of force, makes to these huge expenditures. In so doing I am not increasing the total of expenditures to be made by the Federal Government, but I am influencing, so far as I can do so, the equitable distribution of these funds.

Mr. President, the proposal to build this tidal power plant at Passamaquoddy is not a conception of recent days. As early as 1925 the Legislature of Maine chartered a corporation authorized to build this plant. At almost the same or about the same time a Canadian charter was secured for this corporation. A statute of the State passed in 1909 forbade the exportation from the State of electrical energy developed by any corporation within the State, but upon a referendum the people of the State of Maine voted overwhelmingly to authorize the shipment of this Quoddy power to points beyond the State's limits. The engineering problems involved became the subject of study by great industrial companies of the United States, and until the crash of 1929 hope was entertained by those most intimately connected with this project that private capital would finance the undertaking.

The original plan contemplated an international undertaking, but this has been abandoned for the time being at least. As the plans have been studied they have undergone substantial change. The present project will provide for the generation of power by creating and maintaining at high-tide level a pool approximately 37 square miles in area by means of the construction of the necessary dams and filling gates. Under the plan this basin, when filled, and the sea outside will be at the same level. When the tide outside recedes approximately 5 feet, the water will be discharged from the tidal basin through the turbines for the generation of power. This operation will continue throughout the ebb tide and on the rising tide until the sea level is within 5 feet of the basin level. When the difference in head on the rising tide is only 5 feet, the turbines will be stopped. The filling gates will then be opened to refill the tidal basin, which during the period of operation will have been drawn down from 1 to 3 feet. The two cycles of operation, that is, operation during the time in which the tide is running out and during the time in which the tide is running in, will approximate 15 hours out of the 24-hour period. During the balance of the 24 hours there must be an auxiliary source of power. This may be obtained by the installation of a Diesel plant, or by connection with an existing power company. Under the plan now being followed the initial installation will provide 62,500 kilowatts at the tidal plant and 30,000 kilowatts at the auxiliary plant. The estimated cost of this plant is approximately $36,000,000, upon which somewhere in the neighborhood of six or seven million dollars has already been expended.

No man, in my opinion, can question the engineering feasibility of the Passamaquoddy undertaking. On the contrary the engineers of private companies and those of the Government as well regard the project from the engineering standpoint as wholly practicable. There have been assaults upon it because of the allegation that the cost of power there generated would be excessive, and because of an alleged absence of a market for power. I do not contend that the single unit of development now proposed will produce cheap power, but I do insistently urge that the figures adduced by the Senator from Michigan are wholly beside the mark. He has referred to various reports. He has referred to a Public Works Administration report made in March 1934 to a Federal Power Commission report made in January 1934, and to another Public Works Administration report made on March 30, 1934. Those reports are more than 2 years old. All of them dealt with and all of them related to an entirely different project than that which is now under consideration. Then, Mr. President, they were talking about two tidal basins. Then they were talking about a great reservoir into which water should be pumped at an enormous cost and held as a reserve source of power and energy. Then they were talking about a hydroelectric development on the St. Croix River to be used as an auxiliary of the tidal power plant. Figures drawn from those studies and those proposals then pending have no relation whatsoever to the present plan now under contemplation and now under discussion.

What are the figures with respect to the cost of power to be here generated?

I have immediately at hand figures, given to me within recent days, based upon the existing plan upon which the engineers have presently agreed and which has been approved by the President of the United States. On the basis of an estimated cost of $36,740,000, the report shows that the cost of power there would be 9 mills per kilowatt-hour. What is power being sold for in the State of Maine generally? From a report of the Maine Planning Commission, a body appointed by the Governor of the State and whose report was made recently, it appears that the rate for residential service in the State of Maine, while steadily decreasing in 1931 was 5.91 cents per kilowatt-hour, and that the average revenue from all electrical energy sold by the public-utility companies in Maine in 1931 was 2.3 cents per kilowatt-hour. As against those figures, I set this estimated cost at 9 mills per kilowatt-hour.

Mr. President, something has been said about there being no need for additional power in the State of Maine within a reasonable limit of time.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maine yield to his colleague?

Mr. WHITE. I yield.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator know what is the cost of power at Eastport at the present time? I have been informed that it is somewhere in the neighborhood of 8 cents per kilowatt-hour.

Mr. WHITE. I have the exact figures somewhere, but I think the Senator has stated it approximately as it is.

Mr. President, I was referring to the present power situation in the State of Maine. We have in Maine today developed approximately 630,000 horsepower. We have in our State, according to surveys recently made, a potential horsepower of 1,200,000.

Reports show that the demand for power in the State of Maine doubles in about every 8 or 10 years, and, assuming these figures to be accurate, and assuming this estimate to be accurate, the time is not far distant when the users of power in Maine will be looking elsewhere for the sources of their needed electric energy.

I do not contend, however, that the single unit of development now proposed will produce power as cheaply as it can be produced in other sections of the country. It will, however, produce power in Eastport and in the extreme eastern end of the State at a figure only approximately above that required for the generation of power from coal or the generation of power from oil.

Mr. President, this proposed single plant may, however, be regarded as an integral part of an international development originally conceived from which an abundance of relatively cheap power may be had. Those of us who believe it the part of wisdom for the Federal Government to continue with this undertaking, upon which already nearly $7,000,000 have been spent, are hopeful that power will ultimately be generated at a price commercially desirable.

We justify the project upon other grounds. First of all, Mr. President, we look upon it as a relief measure. There have been employed on this project even during this period of doubt as to its completion from 2,700 or 2,800 men to more than 5,000 men. These men, with limited exceptions, have been taken from relief rolls. The discontinuance of this work will mean that this number of men must be given employment elsewhere. It is not economical to take from three to five thousand men from an undertaking well begun and to scatter them about the State or about the country to work on projects already going or to create new projects to absorb them.

Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Michigan made the statement that it was costing $36,000,000 to furnish employment to 5,000 men upon this project, but I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the expenditure of the $36,000,000 is to furnish employment to this body of men over a period of from 3 or 4 years while this work is going on.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHITE. I yield for a question.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to ask just two questions. Does the Senator have the figures as to the cost of construction per horsepower?

Mr. WHITE. I am afraid I do not have those figures immediately available.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to ask the Senator another question. Do I understand that the Senator is advocating this project as a public power development?

Mr. WHITE. I am advocating it as a great experiment in connection with the development of power from the utilization of the tides; I am advocating it as a relief measure; I am advocating it because of its possibilities of rehabilitating a vast area in my State; and I am advocating it, to be perfectly frank, because I feel that this far eastern section of the country is entitled to some consideration in the huge expenditures of these public funds; and I will say more about that if I may proceed in my own way.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I do not like to interrupt the Senator, but there has been considerable criticism in certain sections of the country because of our public power developments in the West, and I should like to understand whether or not the Senators from Maine are now advocating public ownership of power in the State of Maine?

Mr. WHITE. I am not.

Mr. President, I was speaking about the employment of men upon this project and making reference to the statement of the Senator from Michigan that $36,000,000 was required to furnish employment to 5,000 men, and I was calling attention, when interrupted, to the fact that this project and the expenditure of $36,000,000 upon this project will run on for a period of from 3 to 4 years; and I was about to say, if you figure the life of this undertaking to its completion as involving 3 years' time, that is equivalent to the employment of 15,000 men for a single year; and when you divide $36,000,000 by 15,000 men you find that the cost is at the rate of approximately $2,400 per man per year, which is not out of line with the general cost for relief upon public-works projects throughout the entire United States.

We in Maine urge that this expenditure promises the rehabilitation of a desperately pressed section of our country and of the people thereof. In the not distant past this section of Maine was active and prosperous. Lumbering and allied operations employed thousands and brought in substantial revenue to the entire area. In large measure the lumber has gone, and profitable operation of what remains has been made well-nigh impossible by Canadian and other competition, to which strength has been added through the recently negotiated Canadian reciprocity treaty. Along the coast in this neighborhood a profitable fishery industry once flourished. That, too, has felt the impact of Canadian competition, the severity of which will be more keenly felt in the future years. In the particular county in which Eastport is located there was once, and until recently, a prosperous canning industry. That, too, has suffered severely within recent years.

In this section of Maine live a hardy, an intelligent, and an industrious citizenship, whose livelihood has been in large measure taken from them through conditions and circumstances beyond their control. Already from the work done at Quoddy new life has flowed throughout this whole area. Five thousand workers have spent portions of their money in the immediate neighborhood and have sent the balance to their homes. The local post office at Eastport reports an average of $2,000 daily in money orders. Quoddy has paid to Bangor nearly a half-million dollars in labor and supplies; and Portland, many miles away, has profited to the extent of almost a million dollars. Quoddy has paid to 170 concerns in the city of Boston nearly $900,000 up to March 30 of this year. All these returns to communities are exclusive of labor and are exclusive of large contracts closed or about to be closed.

Many of the thriving western communities built by the forty-niners and their successors are largely of the past. Except for the spectacular development of southern California, due to the discovery of her oil fields, the West in no small degree has retained its industries and its population through irrigation and water-power developments. Just as public funds have enabled the West to enlarge from a country of scattered mines and mining communities to a prosperous agricultural and manufacturing section of our country, so now are public funds required to give to the eastern portion of Maine her chance. The expenditures of the Government on this project have revived the courage and given new hope throughout this portion of our State.

Mr. President, a further justification for this undertaking is its very experimental character. No one knows the possibilities involved in this work. The distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] said that this is a novel undertaking. He said no one knows what is involved in it or what would come from it. In large measure he spoke the truth when he uttered those words. England has been experimenting with tidal power on the River Severn, and France has experimented with the ebb and flow of the tides for power purposes on the coast of Brittany, but this is the first major adventure in this field to which engineers look with interest and expectation.

Power today is generated by falling water and by the use of exhaustible natural resources. When our oil and coal are gone the single source of power in America will be our rushing inland streams, unless we unlock and open wide the now closed doors behind which hide the opportunities and the possibilities of future years. There are those who speak of this undertaking with derision, who would measure it by the dollar yardstick alone. They forget the millions upon millions of dollars which have been poured out in endless experimentation before there came into commercial usefulness a hundred necessities of the hour. I ask them what would this America be industrially today had the great laboratories of research, of experiment, and of adventure been restricted and denied by the requirement that their existence must depend upon first showing a money return.

Mr. President, Queen Elizabeth of Spain lost her jewels and Columbus languished in jail, but they gave to the world this Western Hemisphere. Pasteur and Morse and Bell and men like them all have traveled the high road of experiment. They are the ones who have enriched and enlightened the world and this Nation.

Here in America our War Department experiments with poison gas that men may die. Our Army and Navy experiment with guns, with tanks, with airships, with vessels upon the sea. In the city of Washington we may see our Bureau of Standards, which is a great organization of experimentation for the benefit of the industrial life of the United States. I am not afraid of the Federal Government directly trying this experiment that we may learn the lessons to be found therein.

Engineers of national and international prominence have a profound faith in this project. In its completion they see the hope that along the northeast coast and elsewhere in our country the ceaseless ebb and flow of the tides will give that power which modern industry and modern life demand—power which now depends in substantial and increasing degree upon the growing use of diminishing resources.

Mr. President, I have suggested that Maine has uncomplainingly made her contributions to vast expenditures of the Federal Government designed to bring to the people of other sections of our country new and larger opportunities in life.

West of the ninety-ninth meridian live about 12 percent of the population of the United States. Within this area are what we commonly call the arid portions of the West. In this section the United States Reclamation Service, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and other agencies of our Government have spent and are spending enormous sums. To June 30 of last year the total amounts advanced to the Bureau of Reclamation from the Federal Treasury totaled $243,000,000.

Other great projects have been inaugurated calling for hundreds of millions of dollars more. Grand Coulee will cost at least $395,000,000. The Central Valley plan in California calls for $170,000,000 as the estimated cost of the first development, with an ultimate development costing in excess of $600,000,000. Boulder Dam will cost $109,000,000. The all-America Canal through the Imperial Valley is estimated to cost $30,000,000. The Parker-Gila project will cost $20,000,000 more. Other undertakings bring the grand total expenditures under the Reclamation Service to $1,488,000,000.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is financing the metropolitan water district of Los Angeles to the extent of $250,000,000.

In this same general region the War Department is carrying on as rapidly as possible four mammouth projects. It is estimated that Bonneville Dam will cost $54,000,000; that Conchas Dam in New Mexico will require $12,000,000; that the Los Angeles flood-control district will receive the Government's contribution of $14,000,000; and that Fort Peck will cost $110,000,000. These War Department works, which are entirely exclusive of river and harbor work, call for a total expenditure of approximately $200,000,000. In addition to this the Indian Service has spent for irrigation and water development a total of more than $61,000,000.

None of these figures include any P. W. A. projects common to the entire United States. As to most of them there is no pretense of economic justification if by this we mean adequate and effective provision for amortization and for interest in a reasonable time and at reasonable rates. The estimated cost of these governmentally financed projects in this area reaches the staggering sum of $2,020,000,000.

Mr. President, I deplore invidious comparisons, but I submit that if such amounts are to be scattered with prodigal hand in this far western section of our country, the State of Maine is not unreasonable in asking that the Quoddy project may be completed.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I send to the desk two perfecting amendments to title II of the bill. As a result of the discussion, the committee decided to offer these amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendments to the committee amendment will be received and stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment it is proposed to strike out lines 14 to 24, inclusive, on page 31, and the numerals "1937", in line 1, page 32, and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

That in order to provide relief, work relief, and to increase employment by providing for useful projects and public works, the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works (hereinafter called the Administrator) may, upon direction of the President, use not to exceed $300,000,000 from funds on hand or to be received from the sale of securities, for the making of grants to aid in the financing of projects capable of being substantially completed, in the determination of the Administrator, not later than June 30, 1937.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, in connection with that amendment a word of explanation should be offered.

In the statement made day before yesterday in reference to the public-works provision of the bill, the statement was made by me that the Public Works Administration had $50,000,000 in cash which was available for grants. That was a general statement which had been made frequently in the committee and in the discussion. Subsequently, upon rechecking, I discovered that the $50,000,000 was available, but that the cash was under the limitation of the securities, and could be used only for loans. Therefore the committee has raised the amount in the original amendment from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000. That is, as it stood before we understood that $250,000,000 was available from the revolving fund and $50,000,000 in cash. As they are all under the same limitation, we are making the same release of restrictions apply to the entire $300,000,000.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, in reference to the pending amendment, I wish to say just a few words in response to some points raised by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG]. I desire to hurry on as fast as possible and let the Senate come to a vote; but the Senator from Michigan mentioned some opposition in the State of Florida to the canal and seemed to raise some question about the sentiment in the State.

It is due to myself, perhaps, to say—and I think it is quite true and may be of interest to the Senate—that I believe 80 percent of the people of the State are in favor of the construction of the canal. Possibly 20 percent of them may be opposed to it. Some of them are opposed to it because they do not understand the condition and because the facts have been misrepresented to them.

With reference to the water supply, in addition to the examination made as mentioned by the Senator from Michigan, a special board of five experts—the choice experts of the whole country—made a special study of the whole subject; and they have reported that there will be no consequential damage by reason of digging the canal nor any adverse effect on the water supply. The truth of the matter is that Florida is not dependent on the Great Smoky Mountains or any other mountains for its water supply. Florida gets its water supply, particularly the ground water, from the heavens. Providence provides for that. The State has an annual rainfall of 62 inches, and it is equally distributed. It has an ample rainfall. The water supply is not only sufficient to take care of all the needs of the State, but an immense amount of it moves off to the Gulf and the Atlantic.

There is no danger from that source. Some people are entirely misled on that score; but the scientific people who have examined the matter, after sinking hundreds of wells and making a thorough examination, report that there will be no damage to the water supply, and the Chief of Engineers so testified before our committee.

The Senator from Michigan mentioned the opposition of shipping. On September 5, 1934, Admiral H. I. Cone, then Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, wrote as follows:

It is axiomatic that the success or failure of any industrial enterprise is in great measure determined by the cost of operation. This is particularly true of shipping, which is so highly competitive that economies must be sought for in every item that enters into the calculation. Aside from the cost of the ship itself, no factor is more important than the element of time. To cut down the turn-around is to cut down the ratio of expense to income, and thus to reduce the outlay per voyage for fuel, wages, subsistence, stores, and every other item chargeable to the debit side of the operating account. With these considerations in mind, I cannot escape the conclusion that the proposed sea-level ship canal across the State of Florida, if operated on a basis that would preserve for the shipowner a reasonable share of the savings due to lessened time per voyage, would tend to stimulate Gulf commerce, and prove of substantial value to American shipping.

I submit that statement, and with that I submit the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] to the amendment of the committee is agreed to.

The Senator from Colorado has a further amendment to the committee amendment which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment, it is proposed to strike out lines 24 and 25, page 29, line 1, page 30, and line 2, page 30, to and including the word "completion", and in lieu thereof to insert:

No part of the funds herein appropriated shall be expended upon or be allocated to any Federal project unless the funds so expended or allocated will be sufficient to complete such project.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I inquire how this amendment arises? My attention was distracted for a moment.

Mr. ADAMS. I explained that matter when the amendments were sent up some time ago. The two amendments were sent up, and one of them was taken up first.

Mr. ROBINSON. But there was an amendment pending.

Mr. ADAMS. This is a perfecting amendment. The Senator from Arkansas has an amendment pending to a section of the committee amendment. This is a perfecting amendment to the committee amendment which underlies the Senator's amendment. I understand we have a right to perfect the committee amendment before passing upon amendments to it.

Mr. ROBINSON. My amendment merely adds to the committee amendment. I do not know what this amendment is about. I have not had an opportunity of reading it. How did the Chair entertain this amendment, with an amendment pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent.

Mr. ROBINSON. I was not advised that unanimous consent was asked. I ask the Senator from Colorado to withdraw his amendment for the present, and let us vote on the pending amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. Very well; I withdraw it. I wish to say, however, that it corrects the amendment in accordance with certain very proper suggestions, I think, which were made in the debate yesterday, as to the form of the amendment. It has been taken up with other members of the committee and seems to be an appropriate and proper amendment to improve the form of the committee's amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Let us dispose of the pending amendment first, and then we will take up the amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. Very well.

Mr. ROBINSON. As I understand, we are now ready for a vote on the pending amendment. Yesterday there was a demand for a division of the amendment. I inquire of the Chair what is the question now to be submitted to the Senate for a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the branch of the amendment relating to the Florida Canal Board.

Mr. ROBINSON. The trouble about that is that the projects are not completely separated. I have no objection to separate votes, and I am raising the question merely out of fairness to the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. That point was raised yesterday, and was decided by virtue of rule XVIII.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand that.

Mr. McNARY. It is my opinion that the vote fairly may come first upon the Florida canal project.

Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly; that is true.

Mr. McNARY. I do not see that anyone would be embarrassed by virtue of the holding of the Chair yesterday, which was entirely proper, in view of the rule. Every Senator can vote intelligently and properly, and express his views, by voting first on the project which appears first in the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas; namely, the Florida canal. Secondly, of course, the question will come on the Passamaquoddy project in Maine, and then, naturally, upon the amendment in the form in which it is finally presented.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, personally I do not make any objection to any arrangement which will fairly separate the questions; but the point I am making is that, considering the form of the amendment, it is difficult to separate the questions. If the Senator will look at the amendment, he will see what I mean.

The first paragraph apparently relates to both projects. The second paragraph relates only to the Florida canal board. The third paragraph apparently relates to the Passamaquoddy board. I think we might, by a gentleman's agreement, have an understanding that we shall vote first on the questions in the amendment relating to the Florida ship canal, and, when that vote shall have been taken, then on the questions in the amendment relating to the Passamaquoddy project.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the answer to that is an easy one. On page 3, line 17, the language of the amendment is:

> For a ship canal across the State of Florida, not to exceed $10,000,000.

The vote properly may be taken first upon that amendment. Then, if that should carry, or if it should lose, whatever the result may be, the general language of the amendment may be amended conformably with the vote and expression of the sentiment of the Senate.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly.

Mr. FLETCHER. The two phases of the amendment not being separated in general terms, I suggest that the first question should be on all that portion of the amendment which relates to the canal across the State of Florida.

Mr. McNARY. Certainly.

Mr. FLETCHER. Then the second question should be on all matters in the amendment referring to the Passamaquoddy project.

Mr. McNARY. Of course; but the thing is done by the language I read, and that follows by implication.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the questions be divided so that there may be submitted to the Senate, first, all provisions of the amendment relating to the Florida canal, and, when that matter shall have been voted upon, all provisions of the amendment relating to the Passamaquoddy project.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think that is eminently fair, and presents the matter just about as I had it in mind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and the question is on agreeing to the portion of the amendment having reference to the Florida ship canal.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I have consistently voted against putting riders on appropriation bills, and in order that there may be no misunderstanding of my attitude as to the pending question, I may say that I voted for the Florida ship canal when the matter was before us last, but I shall vote against it now, and I shall vote against the portion of the amendment relating to the Passamaquoddy project, as riders on the pending appropriation bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, in reply to what the Senator from Virginia has said, I point out to him that the amendment is not a rider in any proper use of that term. It is an amendment to a committee amendment which proposes to preclude the construction of these and other projects similarly situated unless such an amendment as that now pending shall be agreed to.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, in the judgment of the Senator from Virginia, the amendment should have been ruled out on a point of order. The fact that the Presiding Officer decided otherwise and that the Senate decided otherwise has not changed my judgment in the least.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Caraway	Keyes	Overton
Austin	Chavez	King	Pittman
Bachman	Clark	La Follette	Reynolds
Bailey	Copeland	Loftin	Robinson
Barbour	Couzens	Lonergan	Russell
Barkley	Duffy	Long	Schwellenbach
Benson	Fletcher	McAdoo	Sheppard
Bilbo	Frazier	McGill	Steiwer
Black	George	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Gibson	Maloney	Truman
Bulkley	Glass	Minton	Vandenberg
Bulow	Guffey	Murphy	Wagner
Burke	Hale	Murray	Walsh
Byrd	Hatch	Neely	Wheeler
Byrnes	Hayden	Norris	White
Capper	Johnson	O'Mahoney

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question is on the first portion of the amendment, that part of it relating to the Florida ship canal.

Mr. McNARY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McNARY. How would one opposed to the project vote?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate yesterday decided to divide the amendment. The question is now on the first portion of the amendment, whether the survey of the Florida ship canal shall be authorized. A vote in the negative would be against the survey; a vote in the affirmative would be in favor of the survey.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BILBO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON], which I transfer to the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], and vote "yea."

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD]; but being assured that if present he would vote as I shall vote and that he has been especially paired, I am at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] and vote "nay." If the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. MINTON (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE]. I am advised that if he were present he would vote "yea", and if I were permitted to vote I should vote "nay."

Mr. FRAZIER (when Mr. NYE's name was called). My colleague the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] is absent. He has a pair on this vote with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]. If my colleague [Mr. NYE] were present, he would vote "nay", and I understand that if the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] were present he would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BULKLEY. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY], who is necessarily absent. I am advised that if present he would vote as I intend to vote, and I am therefore at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. BARKLEY. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] and vote "yea."

Mr. HAYDEN. My colleague the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] is unavoidably absent due to the death of his brother. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND], who is absent. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following pairs on this vote:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN];

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT]; and

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH].

If the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] were present, he would vote "nay", and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] would vote "yea." If the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] were present, he would vote "nay", and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] would vote "yea." If the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] were present, he would vote "nay", and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] would vote "yea."

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained from the Senate on account of illness.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], the Senators from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE] and [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW] is detained in attendance of the Memorial Services at Arlington Cemetery.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] is paired on this question with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE]. If present and voting, the Senator from Alabama would vote "yea", and the Senator from Oklahoma would vote "nay." I am advised that if present the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 30, as follows:

YEAS—35

Bachman	Chavez	McAdoo	Russell
Bailey	Fletcher	McKellar	Schwellenbach
Barkley	George	Murray	Sheppard

So the branch of Mr. ROBINSON's amendment with respect to the Florida ship canal to the committee amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is on the branch of the amendment to the amendment of the committee relating to the Passamaquoddy project.

Mr. McNARY. On that question I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BARKLEY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BILBO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON], which I transfer to the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BULKLEY (when his name was called). Making the same announcement I made on the previous roll call concerning my pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY], I vote "nay."

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD]; but being advised that he has been specially paired on this question, I feel at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], who is unavoidably absent. I transfer that pair to the senior

Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK], and will vote. I vote "nay." If the Senator from South Dakota were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. FRAZIER (when Mr. NYE's name was called). My colleague [Mr. NYE] is paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "nay." I understand that the Senator from Texas, if present, would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND], who is absent. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained from the Senate on account of illness.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], the Senators from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS and Mr. RADCLIFFE], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are unavoidably detained.

I am advised that if present the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] would vote "nay" on this question.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following pairs:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. If present, the Senator from Pennsylvania would vote "nay", and the Senator from Kentucky would vote "yea."

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT]. If present, the Senator from Rhode Island would vote "nay." I am not advised how the Senator from West Virginia would vote.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] has a general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH].

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 39, as follows:

YEAS—28

Bachman	Chavez	Johnson	Pittman

So the branch of Mr. ROBINSON's amendment with respect to the Passamaquoddy project to the committee amendment was rejected.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Secretary be authorized to make the changes in the text of the amendment which are made necessary by the action which the Senate has just taken.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary is so authorized.

The question is on agreeing now to the amendment as a whole.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, does the Chair refer to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arkansas asked unanimous consent that the clerk be authorized to make the necessary changes as a result of the action just taken.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes; but I am making an inquiry as to the statement of the Chair. The Chair announced the question was on agreeing to the amendment in its entirety.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is on the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. A parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. What portion of the committee amendment has thus far been agreed to, without regard to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is advised by the Parliamentarian that the committee amendment on page 29, beginning in line 24, was submitted to the Senate; one branch of the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas has been agreed to, and now the question is on the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I understood the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] was going to offer some amendments to the paragraph which begins on line 11, page 30. Have those amendments already been agreed to? I have been detained from time to time in conference.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas was offered to the paragraph which begins in line 24, on page 29, and extends to line 10, inclusive, on page 30. The paragraph to which the Senator from Wisconsin refers has not as yet been reached. When it is reached I will offer amendments to it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. May I inform the Senator that the Chair was just about to put the question on the entire committee amendment, as amended, and if his amendments shall be considered they must be offered now?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands the parliamentary situation to be that to that portion of the committee amendment beginning on line 24, page 29, and extending down to line 11, on page 30, the Senator from Arkansas offered his amendment. The Chair was about to put the question on the adoption of that portion of the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is perfectly agreeable to me, since the Chair has inserted the words "that portion of the committee amendment." What I was concerned about was the remainder of the committee amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The pending committee amendment only extends to line 11, page 30.

Mr. JOHNSON and Mr. McNARY addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Just a moment. Is there objection to agreeing to that portion of the committee amendment as amended?

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I simply rose for the purpose of getting a clear understanding. The committee amendment runs to the end of line 11, page 32. There will be an endeavor to amend a portion of that amendment hereafter, and we will not be precluded from the offering of amendments that may be desired if we agree to the motion as submitted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will again state the situation as he understands it. The Senator from Arkansas offered an amendment to the committee amendment, beginning on line 24, page 29, and extending to line 11, on page 30. As the Chair construes the situation, if that portion of the committee amendment as amended should be agreed to it would not preclude any other portion of the committee amendment being amended.

Mr. JOHNSON. Then I beg the Chair's pardon, because I thought the committee amendment extended clear down to line 11, on page 32.

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; the committee amendment about to be acted upon only extends to line 11 on page 30.

Mr. JOHNSON. So that the amendment, if agreed to as amended by the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas, will only touch that which is prior to line 11, on page 30?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator has stated it correctly. The only portion of the committee amendment affected at the present moment is that portion beginning in line 24, page 29, and extending down to line 11, on page 30. Is there objection to agreeing to the committee amendment as amended? The Chair hears none, and the amendment as amended is agreed to. The question now is on the remainder of the committee amendment.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I wish to appeal to the Senator from Arkansas at this hour that the Senate may take a recess and that we have a unanimous-consent agreement as to business on Monday.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understood the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] desired to offer some noncontroversial amendments, and it was my impression that it would be satisfactory to the Senator from Oregon for the Senator from South Carolina to do so.

Mr. McNARY. That was true, but that was before we had the final vote on the amendment just disposed of, which has taken a great deal out of Monday's work. I am willing to wait for a few moments, but this is a holiday; I think we are all tired, and I should like to have the Senate adjourn until Monday.

Mr. ROBINSON. I will submit a request for unanimous consent. I will state to the Senate that I have discussed the matter with the Senator from Oregon, and I understand my request will be satisfactory to him and also to the Senator from Michigan, and others.

I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its labors today, it adjourn until 11 o'clock a. m., on Monday next; that, after the conclusion of the routine morning business on Monday, the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar; that at not later than 1 o'clock p. m. on Monday, the Senate resume the consideration of the unfinished business; and after the hour of 3:30——

Mr. McNARY. Make it 3 o'clock.

Mr. ROBINSON. That after the hour of 3 o'clock, no Senator shall speak more than once, or longer than 15 minutes on the bill or any amendment that may be pending or that may be offered.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly.

Mr. COPELAND. We have set 11 o'clock Monday morning for the final meeting of the conferees on the flood-control bill. It is important that we should finish the conference and have the conference report before us. Would it seriously discommode the Senator if the hour for meeting should be fixed at 12 o'clock on Monday?

Mr. ROBINSON. I am not sure that it would. Let me state that the purpose of the proposed agreement is to complete this bill on Monday next, so that on Tuesday the Senate may proceed to the consideration of other legislation.

Now, with the understanding that an effort will be made to keep the Senate in session Monday until the bill shall have been disposed of, and with a view to having Senators take notice of the fact that an evening session will be asked for if it shall prove necessary, I will modify my request, with the consent of the Senator from Oregon, so as to provide that the Senate shall meet at 12 o'clock on Monday and to fix the time 1 hour later for the conclusion of the consideration of the calendar and for the beginning of the operation of the limitation of debate on the unfinished business.

Mr. McNARY. If we retard the hour, we certainly will have a night session, which I think we all would like to avoid. Let me suggest to the Senator from New York that he have the conference to which he has referred on Tuesday, because the conference report on the bill he has in mind could not be considered by the Senate before that day in any event.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I will resubmit the request in the original form, and I hope the Senator from New York will agree to it.

Mr. COPELAND. Very well. I will undertake to reach the House Members and fix the hour of meeting on Monday at 10 o'clock a. m. instead of 11 o'clock a. m.

Mr. McNARY. I only made the suggestion because I am one of the conferees, and I am satisfied it would be agreeable all around if a meeting were held on Tuesday, and then let the original request for unanimous consent stand as presented by the Senator from Arkansas.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, my attention was diverted. I did not hear the first part of the Senator's request. I understand it relates to a call of the calendar.

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; my request is that when the Senate completes its labors today it adjourn until 11 o'clock a. m. on Monday next, and that at the conclusion of the routine morning business the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar.

Mr. NORRIS. Until when?

Mr. ROBINSON. Until the hour of 1 o'clock, when the consideration of the unfinished business will be resumed.

Mr. NORRIS. I have no objection.

Mr. McNARY. Question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and the order is made.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask the attention of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY]. Consideration of the bill has proceeded to line 10, page 30, but the paragraph preceding that, on page 29, lines 16 to 23, was passed over at the request of the Senator from Oregon yesterday. Would he now agree to have action taken upon that section?

Mr. McNARY. After conference with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] I have no objection.

Mr. BYRNES. I ask for a vote upon the adoption of the preceding section on page 29, beginning at line 16 and ending at line 23. Yesterday this amendment was passed over at the request of the Senator from Oregon, who now indicates his willingness to have action taken upon the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 29, after line 15, it is proposed to insert the following new paragraph:

The President shall cause to be made a survey of the lists of employable persons for work in continental United States provided for by the appropriations made available in this act and shall not knowingly permit to remain upon said lists any alien who is illegally within the limits of the United States or who has not filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, and wherever such a person has been employed he shall be dismissed.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, before the vote is taken I wish to ask a question or two in regard to the paragraph. In lines 16 and 17 reference is made to "a survey of the lists of employable persons for work." I should like to know just what is meant by the word "lists"? Does it contemplate the present list, or the list which was made in November of last year, or lists which may be made in the future.

Mr. BYRNES. It means the lists of persons who are eligible for employment upon Works Progress Administration projects. The direction in the paragraph would continue as to any list made during the continuation of the appropriation, as well as the list as it now stands.

Mr. FRAZIER. Under rulings of the W. P. A., as I understand, last November farmers who had been on relief prior to that time were excluded from employment on work-relief projects. I am wondering if farmers who happen to be without means for some cause or other will be excluded from the list to which reference is here made?

Mr. BYRNES. I am afraid the Senator does not understand the provisions of the paragraph. It has nothing to do with changing the lists. It simply provides that a survey shall be made of the lists for the purpose of determining whether or not aliens are upon the lists, and, if any aliens upon the lists have illegally entered the country, that they shall not be eligible to remain upon the lists. It does not change the lists at all, but simply affects such aliens who may be on the lists either now or hereafter during the continuation of the appropriation.

Mr. FRAZIER. Does it refer only to aliens?

Mr. BYRNES. The paragraph has no relation except to the aliens upon the lists.

Mr. FRAZIER. I cannot understand from the language of the paragraph how that interpretation can be made.

Mr. BYRNES. Because it provides that surveys shall be made of the lists, and wherever the name of an alien appears his name shall be removed from the list.

Mr. FRAZIER. Then, as I understand, it will be the old lists already in vogue?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes; wherever they are.

Mr. FRAZIER. The lists made up last November excluded farmers who had been on relief, and farmers who were under the resettlement projects were excluded. I want to know whether the farmers who were on relief and are now on relief are going to be taken care of.

Mr. BYRNES. The paragraph has no reference to that subject at all, but simply provides that the lists in the various employment bureaus of the United States shall be investigated to determine whether or not there are upon them any aliens who have illegally entered the country. It does not say anything about farmers and does not affect them in any way.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from South Carolina if the committee proposes to offer amendments to that portion of the amendment on page 30, lines 11 to 20? I have a number of amendments to offer to that portion of the committee amendment unless it shall be corrected by the committee itself.

Mr. BYRNES. Whenever that paragraph is reached several amendments will be offered to it. It is the next paragraph in the bill to be considered.

Mr. FLETCHER. I have a number of amendments which I desire to offer to it.

Mr. BYRNES. I can assure the Senator that a number of amendments will be offered which have the approval of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], who offered the paragraph in the committee.

PROHIBITION OF PRICE DISCRIMINATION

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, the bill (H. R. 8442) to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes", approved October 15, 1914, as amended, United States Code, title 15, section 13, and for other purposes, is on the Vice President's desk.

On April 30 of the present year the Senate passed a bill on the same subject and sent it to the House of Representatives. Instead of acting on the Senate bill, the House took up and considered a House bill relating to the same subject matter. The two bills as originally introduced were identical. The House took no notice of the Senate bill, but passed its own bill and has sent it to the Senate.

That, of course, is a parliamentary practice which is inexplicable, because it requires the Senate to pass the bill twice. It would seem that the procedure should have been to substitute the provisions of the House bill, in the form of a single amendment, to the Senate bill, and thus throw the whole subject into conference.

It is my purpose to ask the Senate to proceed to consideration of the House bill with a view to striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting, in lieu of the part stricken out, the language of the original Senate bill so that the whole subject may be in conference. That, of course, manifestly is what should have been done at the other end of the Capitol; but it was not done. It now becomes necessary for the Senate to pass another bill on the same subject.

The only proper procedure that I can think of is that which I have just described. Accordingly I ask unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the House bill to which I have referred, with the intention of moving to strike out all after the enacting clause and substituting the language of the Senate bill.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, that would leave the Senate bill as we passed it finally?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the Senator has expressed his intention of taking the action which he has outlined, but before that may be done it is necessary to grant unanimous consent; otherwise the bill must be referred to a Senate committee, which would be the procedure which was followed in connection with the original Robinson bill relating to the subject.

I am not prepared at this time to give unanimous consent to the request. There are several Members who want to consider the course of procedure to be pursued in connection with the bill, and for that reason I shall object at this time. However, I shall be willing to consider the matter again on Monday.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I should like to supplement the statement I have already made.

The course which the matter has taken, and which I have described, has put the proposed legislation in jeopardy. Only a few days of the session are left. There may not be an opportunity to force consideration of this measure. I hope it will not be necessary to do that. I hope that when my request is repeated the Senator from Oregon and other Senators will find themselves justified in granting it.

Mr. McNARY. I may add that opportunity must be given to some of the Members to consider the parliamentary situation. The Senator knows that as soon as we dispose of the unfinished business he may gain recognition from the Chair and move to do the very thing he is now seeking to have done by unanimous consent; so no rights are being lost. A little time is being given, at my request, for the purposes of study only.

Mr. ROBINSON. Of course, I am not now going to persist in the request. It would be futile to do so; but I shall renew the request on Monday.

I should like to finish the statement I began. If the bill should be referred to a committee, probably it would be impossible to have it reported in time for passage during the present session. The only effective course I have been able to devise is the one I am attempting to pursue. I am not sure that it would be in order to move to proceed to the consideration of a House bill that is on the Vice President's desk, unless it has been read twice.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has been read twice.

Mr. ROBINSON. If the bill has been read twice, it probably would be in order, but it would be necessary to displace whatever measure might be the unfinished business; and at this stage of the proceedings of the Congress it would be manifestly impossible to displace the tax bill or the relief bill for that purpose. I hope it may be found possible to dispose of the matter on Monday.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, it is my solemn judgment that if this matter goes over until Monday there will be no objection to taking up the bill with the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the one which I proposed at the request of the dairy industry, and which was inserted in the Senate bill. If the bill comes up in that fashion it is my judgment that unanimous consent will be granted, but not tonight.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the condition to which our attention has been called by the Senator from Arkansas illustrates a practice which has been going on for several years between the House and the Senate. It is unscientific and contrary to the general parliamentary practice in all parliamentary bodies.

The Senator says that the Senate passed a certain bill and sent it to the House. The committee of the House put it in a pigeonhole and reported out a House bill just like it and sent it to the Senate. That is contrary to the recognized procedure of all parliamentary bodies in all civilization; and yet it is going on regularly, right along. Senators are loath to call attention to it, because usually the criticism would come from someone who was the author of a Senate bill that had gone to the other House and to all intents and purposes had been killed there, and a similar bill introduced there would come here afterward.

Such a course delays the consideration of legislation just one step. If the Senate should proceed on the same theory on which the House has proceeded, we should not have any legislation. The Senate would be insisting on its bill and the House on its bill. The Senate bill would be in a pigeonhole in the House, and the House bill would be in a pigeonhole in the Senate, and we should not make any progress.

When a bill comes here from the House, we have a right, of course, to amend it in any way we see fit; but fair consideration requires that we should not pigeonhole it somewhere and have a Senate bill just like it passed by the Senate and sent to the House. That procedure would get us nowhere.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. ROBINSON. When the two bills were introduced they were identical. The Senate committee amended the Senate bill, as the Senator will recall, and then certain amendments were adopted on the floor. The House committee amended the House bill. I do not know what amendments were adopted on the floor of the House. The two bills were identical when they were introduced, but not when they were passed.

Mr. NORRIS. That does not make any difference.

Mr. ROBINSON. I agree that it does not make any difference, but I thought the RECORD ought to show the fact.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I will illustrate the practice I have in mind.

Several years ago, on different occasions, the Senate passed the "lame duck" joint resolution, providing for an amendment to the Constitution, and it went to the House. On one of those occasions a similar joint resolution was introduced in the House by a member of the committee which would have jurisdiction of the Senate joint resolution. The Senate joint resolution went over to the House and was kept on the Speaker's desk, as I remember, for 11 days.

I may be mistaken as to the time; it may have been more or less; but the measure was kept there for some time. In the meantime the House committee took up a joint resolution which had been introduced in the House by a member of the committee, and finally reported it to the House. It went on the House Calendar, and then the Senate joint resolution which was on the Speaker's desk was referred to the same committee, where it went into a pigeonhole, and is there yet. That was several years ago. The Senate joint resolution was held on the Speaker's desk until the House joint resolution had been reported. It is true that that was not the joint resolution which finally was enacted, and out of which the constitutional amendment grew; but it illustrates the principle I am discussing.

That has happened time and time again. I might call the Senate's attention to some very important legislation in connection with which it happened. The anti-injunction bill is another illustration. That subject had been heard by the Senate committee for several years.

The bill was passed in the Senate. It went to the House, where the same bill, word for word, was introduced—because it came from my office and went to a House Member to be introduced—was reported out by the committee, and the House bill was passed. When the bill came over here, the Senate disregarded the discourtesy that existed and took up the House bill in the regular way. It was delayed one parliamentary step by that procedure; but the law when it was finally enacted was the House bill and not the Senate bill.

As I understand, the Senator from Arkansas has stated an identical case which now exists. It is not the right way to proceed. I might name several others bills of which the same thing is true. The present presiding officer, our Vice President, was the majority leader of the House in the instance I have given, and he knows that what I am stating is the exact truth.

Various reasons are given why that procedure is sometimes followed. In the first place, it always delays legislation. In the next place, some persons think there is something in having the name of a particular man attached to a measure which afterward becomes law. It is not courtesy between the Senate and the House, however. Neither body ought to adopt that kind of procedure. It is not the right way to proceed; and I feel that some action ought to be taken to correct that evil practice, which has been going on for a good while. I hope that calling attention to the matter may be sufficient to put an end to that kind of procedure.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I give notice that I will renew my request on Monday.

BRIDGES IN ALABAMA OVER THE TENNESSEE AND OTHER RIVERS

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, Order of Business 2222, being Senate bill 4622, proposes to grant the consent of Congress for the erection of bridges in the State of Alabama. The bill has been reported from the Committee on Commerce in the usual form. I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have stated that I would not consent to action today on any general legislation, but we always make an exception in the case of a bridge bill.

Mr. BLACK. That is what I understood, and I thank the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Alabama?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 4622) to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the Alabama State Bridge Corporation to construct, maintain, and operate bridges across the Tennessee, Tombigbee, Warrior, Alabama, and Coosa Rivers, within the State of Alabama", approved May 26, 1928, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the Alabama State Bridge Corporation to construct, maintain, and operate bridges across the Tennessee, Tombigbee, Warrior, Alabama, and Coosa Rivers, within the State of Alabama", approved May 26, 1928, is amended by striking out, wherever they appear therein, the words "18 years" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "28 years."

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations (and withdrawing several nominations), which were referred to the appropriate committees.

SENATE

MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1936

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, who as at this time didst teach the hearts of Thy faithful people by sending to them the light of Thy Holy Spirit: Grant us by the same spirit to have a right judgment in all things as we face the solemn duties of this day.

Wilt Thou bestow upon our President, our Vice President, and all others in authority, wisdom and strength to know and to do Thy will, and upon every Member of the Senate that nobility of soul which sees in reason and forbearance the highest attributes of courage, that each may speak his truth as God doth bid.

Help us to be pure and honest in our lives, just and irreproachable in our dealings with our fellow men, that we may be ever dear to our friends, honored by our country, and beloved at our firesides. We ask it in the name and for the sake of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. ROBINSON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Saturday, May 30, 1936, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENTS FOR INAUGURATION OF THE PRESIDENT-ELECT

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], and the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] as the members on the part of the Senate of the Joint Committee on Arrangements for the Inauguration of the President-elect of the United States, authorized by Senate Concurrent Resolution 38.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution of the Senate of the State of California, favoring the construction and completion of the Central Valley project in California and the making of adequate appropriation therefor, which was ordered to lie on the table.

(See resolution printed in full when presented today by Mr. MCADOO.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Armstrong County Central Labor Union, of Kittanning, Pa., and the council of the city of Superior, Wis., favoring the prompt enactment of the so-called Wagner-Ellenbogen low-cost housing bill, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of International Falls Local No. 159, International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, and several citizens, of International Falls, Minn., favoring the adoption of measures looking to the making of a moderate profit by the newsprint industry, a fair wage by workers, and a fair price for farmers and other pulpwood producers, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a memorial from M. J. Steger, secretary, etc., Phoenix, Ariz., remonstrating against the confirmation of the nomination of David W. Ling, of Arizona, to be United States district judge, district of Arizona, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. GEORGE presented a petition of sundry citizens, being railroad employees of the State of Georgia, praying for the repeal of Public Law No. 399 (H. R. 8651), Seventy-fourth Congress, known as the Railroad Retirement Act of 1935, and Public Law No. 400 (H. R. 8652), Seventy-fourth Congress, known as an act to levy excise tax upon carriers and income tax upon their employees, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. COPELAND presented a petition of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., praying for the enactment of a more stringent neutrality law, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the petition of members of the National Union for Social Justice, of New York City, N. Y., praying for the enactment of the so-called Frazier-Lemke farm-debt refinancing bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALSH presented a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Student Association of Boston University, College of Liberal Arts, favoring the enactment of the so-called American youth bill, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Gas Fitters' Local Union No. 175, Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steam Fitters, of Boston, Mass., favoring the prompt enactment of the so-called Wagner-Ellenbogen low-cost housing bill, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Cambridge (Mass.) Central Labor Union, protesting against the discontinuance of W. P. A. projects and against further lay-offs of workers on such projects, and favoring the expansion of so-called white-collar projects under the W. P. A., which was ordered to lie on the table.

CENTRAL VALLEY PROJECT, CALIFORNIA

Mr. MCADOO. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks and to lie on the table a resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of California in respect to the Central Valley water project.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas California is in urgent need of the development, conservation, and stabilization of its water resources to prevent the abandonment of thousands of farms and homes and to avert tremendous financial losses; and

Whereas the State of California has prepared a comprehensive coordinated plan for the progressive economic development of the water resources of the State, carefully formulated over a period of 14 years, which provides for the control of floods and salinity encroachment, the improvement of navigation, the conservation and stabilization of water supplies for municipal, irrigation, industrial, and mining uses, and for the generation of electric power; and

Whereas the Legislature of the State of California in 1933 passed the Central Valley Project Act, which was signed by the Governor and was thereafter approved by vote of the people of the State at a special election held on December 19, 1933; and

Whereas the said Central Valley Project Act created the Water Project Authority of the State of California to execute and administer the Central Valley project, which project is a coordinated plan for the immediate needs of the great Central Valley of California; and

Whereas said Central Valley project has been investigated and approved by 13 agencies of the Federal Government and has been recommended for Federal financing; and

Whereas said project has further been recommended by the President's Committee on Water Flow and by the National Resources Board as one of the country's foremost projects for a national program of public works; and

Whereas the House of Representatives has passed H. R. 6732, authorizing the improvement of the Sacramento River in accordance with the plan as set forth in House of Representatives Document No. 35, Seventy-third Congress, which recommends a Federal contribution of $12,000,000 to the cost of the Kennett Dam of the Central Valley project; and

Whereas the said project will be self-liquidating and the cost thereof will be returned to the Federal Government from revenues obtained by the sale of water and power; and

Whereas the consummation of the said project will enable 50,000 American people to sustain themselves by their present means of livelihood and will prevent their being thrown into the ranks of the unemployed, and, further, will stop the reversion to desert of one-half million acres of highly developed and settled lands, valued at $100,000,000; and

Whereas a greater degree of flood protection in the Sacramento Valley is highly desirable; and

Whereas the construction of said project will give employment to thousands of workers now unemployed, not only in California but throughout the Nation, thereby relieving unemployment in many branches of industry, particularly in the heavy manufacturing industries in the East and Middle West; and

Whereas the Secretary of the Interior did heretofore report to the President that said project was feasible from engineering, agricultural, and financial standpoints and was adaptable for settlement and farm homes, that the estimated construction cost was adequate, and that the anticipated revenues would be sufficient to return the cost to the United States, and did approve and recommend the construction of said project, which recommendation was thereafter approved by the President; and

Whereas the President did, by virtue of the authority of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, approved April 8, 1935, allocate the sum of $15,000,000 from the appropriation made under said act to the Department of the Interior, Reclamation Service, to be reimbursable in accordance with the reclamation law, for the construction of the Central Valley project; and

Whereas said project is now in the course of construction in accordance with said allocation and it is imperative that continuing appropriations be made under congressional authorization to assure the successful completion of the project; and

Whereas the cost of said project has been carefully estimated by competent Federal and State authorities to be $170,000,000 and will be repaid to the United States in accordance with the reclamation law out of the revenues of said project; and

Whereas there is now pending before the Congress Department of the Interior appropriation bill, H. R. 10630, which, among other things, authorizes construction of said Central Valley project by the United States, and appropriates for the construction thereof the sum of $16,000,000 for the fiscal year 1937: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate, That the State of California, through its legislature, recommends the Central Valley project to the President and to the Congress of the United States as of first and prime importance to the State of California, and respectfully requests that the construction of said Central Valley project be authorized, and that adequate funds be appropriated so that the construction of said project may be continued, to the end that the same may be completed, thereby conferring lasting benefits not only upon the people of the State of California but upon the entire Nation, and thus affording substantial unemployment relief now vitally necessary and rehabilitating a vast area of valuable and highly developed lands, thereby enabling thousands of American families to sustain themselves on their present farms; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this resolution be transmitted by the secretary of the Senate of the State of California to the President and to the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to the Senators and Representatives of the State of California in the Congress.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Managers on the part of the Senate.

AMBROSE J. KENNEDY,
W. A. PITTENGER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

IMMIGRATION AND DEPORTATION OF ALIENS

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I have here five statistical tables compiled from the annual reports of the present Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization and his predecessors, and I ask to have them printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at this point, because of the studied, erroneous, and misleading statements of the present Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization last Monday in an address that appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD last Thursday, May 28, in which he says we have no immigration or alien problem and that public men who say we have are merely "playing politics."

The first two tables, A and B, compiled, as I said, from the annual reports of the Commissioner, reveal that during the first 10 years of the 1924 Quota Restriction Act, 1925–35, 3,687,547 aliens of all classes entered the United States lawfully; that our immigration officers actually counted the noses of 3,687,547 aliens entering our country legally. Doubtless, judging by the large number of high-powered autos, speed boats, and airplanes seized smuggling aliens in, as many more millions must have entered illegally.

The second pair of tables, C and D, likewise compiled from the same official sources, show that during the past 5 fiscal years, 1931 to 1935, inclusive, 949,903 aliens of all classes entered the United State legally.

No one knows how many aliens left the country. No immigration official is charged with counting aliens departing, except the aliens mandatorily deported. All we know about alien departures, other than alien deportees, is what the steamship companies, an "interested party", say. It seems to me immaterial how many the steamships report departing. Even if the nearly 7,000,000 aliens, the last and only official enumeration we have record of in the United States, left the country during the past 5 years, still we should not have allowed the 949,903 aliens who entered legally to have come into our country. We should not have allowed a single alien job seeker or alien dependent to have come here, because his coming was sure to further increase our unemployment and relief problems just that much. We have enough unemployed and enough public charges; and enough radicals, and enough criminals, and enough lawbreakers, and enough Communists without allowing not only another one to enter but to justify the prompt deportation of every such alien here.

These official statistics show there is an immigration problem, that too many aliens are entering legally, and too many are also entering illegally, and that existing alien-deportation statutes are not being enforced as they have been or as they should be. I am getting sick and tired of the present Commissioner running about the country from border to border, coast to coast, and resort to resort making statements that cannot be substantiated by the facts, and casting slurs upon Members of Congress by publicly asserting that those of us who are not in accord with his views are merely "playing politics."

I ask unanimous consent that the tables may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement and tables were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[1] Natives of nonquota countries include persons born in Canada, Newfoundland, Mexico, Cuba, Haiti, Dominican Republic, Canal Zone, or independent countries of Central or South America. The separate classification for their wives and children shows only those who were born in quota countries, but come in under the man's nonquota status.

NOTE.—The official figures for new immigrants admitted for permanent residence always differ slightly from figures developed as above. This is because in establishing these figures, it is necessary to take into account laws prior to the 1924 act in the classification, even though all admissions actually occur under the provisions of the 1924 act. The official figures for immigrants admitted for permanent residence are: 1931, 97,139; 1932, 35,576; 1933, 23,068; 1934, 29,470; 1935, 34,956; 5-year total, 220,209.

NOTATION.—The only statistics available as to the number of aliens departing from the United States is what the steamship companies report, except aliens mandatorily deported, who are counted "out" by the immigration officials. The only official and dependable statistics as to the number of aliens in the United States is the last census. There is no question but that aliens illegally and unlawfully in our country, whose number has been variously estimated by foreign-born and pro-aliens at 150,000 to 5 or 6 or 7 millions by patriotic Americans, avoided and evaded our census enumerators. With 12 millions unemployed and our relief rolls and charities, public and private, strained to the breaking point, it is immaterial how many aliens depart. If the nearly 7 million here had left last year still there would have been 5 million of our own citizens, native and naturalized, unemployed. We did not need to import and should have excluded every alien job seeker or dependent that came.

TEACHING OR ADVOCACY OF COMMUNISM IN DISTRICT PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the Senate today passed over Senate bill 4370, introduced by Senator WHEELER, repealing what is known as the "red rider", in connection with the public schools of the District of Columbia. The bill had the unanimous support of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the Appendix of the RECORD a memorandum prepared by Richard W. Hogue, director of the Independent Legislative Bureau, of Washington, concerning this bill.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

I beg to submit this memorandum on a measure which many organizations and individuals believe should receive the immediate attention of Congress.

Favorable action, without a dissenting vote, has been taken by the committee of the Senate and the House to which the measure was referred. This action followed extensive hearings by the House committee. With the exception of the Hearst papers, it has been strongly endorsed by practically the entire press of the country. The issue involved has aroused such general interest that a Nation-wide poll has recently been taken by the American Institute of Public Opinion. The published results of that poll show that a large majority in favor of the principle embodied in the bill was cast in every State in the Union.

THE ISSUE AT STAKE

The measure referred to provides for the repeal of the so-called "red rider", which the facts show was adopted not only without consideration but without the knowledge of almost every Member of Congress. The issue at stake involves:

1. The undoing of a serious though inadvertent wrong that places the Members of Congress in a false light before the country, and particularly before educators and students.

2. The lifting of an unjust ban of legislative coercion in the field of local school administration.

3. The removal from the National Capital of a dangerous precedent for political control of teachers.

It is these issues that have aroused public opinion as expressed by the Nation-wide poll referred to and by such organizations as the National Education Association with its membership of over 200,000 public-school superintendents, principals, and teachers. At its annual convention this association vigorously called for the repeal of the "red rider."

THE EVIDENCE

Conclusive evidence in favor of the immediate repeal of the "red rider" is set forth in the 283 pages of the printed hearings before the House committee. From this source the following summary is submitted:

1. The few witnesses in favor of retaining the "red rider" offered testimony which was chiefly a mass of irrelevancy, hearsay, or second-hand material. The part of their testimony that was relevant was discredited as either contrary to the facts or based upon misunderstanding or misinterpretation of the facts. This is amply shown in the report of the committee.

2. The effect of the "red rider" has been the very reverse of its alleged purpose. It has created an unhealthy interest in the subject of communism among public-school children. It has aroused the curiosity that always attaches to a forbidden and mysterious subject. Denied information at the hands of trained teachers, this curiosity seeks satisfaction from less trustworthy sources.

3. It has given school children misleading and harmful impressions. One of these reflects upon the Members of Congress who allowed the "red rider" to be enacted into law. That impression is, as expressed by one high-school student, that "it's just plain dumb."

A second impression is that something is wrong with their teachers when they are forbidden by law to handle a subject they have hitherto taught.

This has resulted in lowering classroom morale and lessening the respect and confidence of pupil toward teacher.

A third impression is that the American Government is either so frail or so devoid of public loyalty and support as to be endangered by contrast with the Soviet system of proletarian dictatorship.

4. It is an unmerited and unjust reflection upon the teaching profession. It places the whole body of teachers under suspicion, despite their unbroken record of loyalty to the oath each teacher has signed without protest. The testimony fails to show a single case of a teacher who has advocated communism or any "subversive" doctrine.

5. It is a reflection upon the Board of Education and upon the body that selects its members, namely, the Supreme Court of the District. The evidence shows that there is absolutely no excuse for the implied charge that the board members are either disloyal or guilty of gross neglect. The facts show that the reverse is true and that the present school board members are men and women of genuine patriotism, marked competence, and a strong sense of public duty.

6. It is as unnecessary as it is unjustified. It accomplishes nothing more than the long existing oath of loyalty which the teachers have lived up to. Violation of that oath and the teaching of subversive doctrines were amply provided against before the "red rider" was thought of. The Board of Education is empowered to dismiss a disloyal teacher and the Supreme Court can remove a disloyal member of that board. The fact that neither of these steps has had to be taken is a significant tribute to both the teachers and the school board. It should be sufficient cause for removing the uncalled-for insult which the "red rider" constitutes.

7. It is an unwarranted and unparalleled intrusion of legislative restriction and coercion in the field of school administration and discipline. No State has seen fit to enact similar legislation. Its effect is subversive of the American principle of committing administrative school matters to local boards of education. Congress should not inflict such demoralizing and undemocratic legislation on the residents and the schools of the Nation's Capital City or set such a precedent for the country at large.

8. It has placed both Congress and the District schools in an unfair and a false light before the people of the country.

9. Its imposition on the schools of Washington does not represent the considered judgment of the Congress. It was attached as permanent legislation to an appropriation bill, contrary to the rules of both Houses. Few members of either party in either House knew that it had been inserted at the last moment in the conference report of an appropriation bill covering 33 pages. It was not subject to debate, it was not even subject to a point of order.

Congress is not in the habit of allowing faulty and unfair legislation to be enacted by default. When such a thing happens it should be speedily corrected. The first step toward this end has been taken. Committees in both Houses have endorsed the repeal bill. The next step is the passage of the bill. This step should be taken promptly.

PROPOSED TRANSIENT LEGISLATION—EDITORIAL FROM FLORIDA TIMES-UNION

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Florida Times-Union of May 29, 1936, under the heading "Proposed Transient Legislation."

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Florida Times-Union of May 29, 1936]

PROPOSED TRANSIENT LEGISLATION

There is pending in the United States Senate a measure affecting the transient problem of America that should receive favorable action at this session. Introduced by Senator POPE, of Idaho, the measure provides for the appointment of a special Senate committee to study, survey, and investigate the movement of indigent persons across State lines.

It is receiving the support of the Florida Transient Coordinating Committee, the National Committee on the Care of Transients and Homeless, and other organizations concerned with obtaining legislation to deal with the problem from a Nation-wide standpoint. Joseph S. Diver, vice chairman of the Florida committee, returning to Jacksonville from a visit to Washington and New York, reports that the measure, in the form of a resolution, has been referred to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor and that action may be expected within a few days.

Transiency has become during the last few years one of the Nation's most serious welfare problems. It is a problem that places unnecessary burdens on different communities throughout the country as the seasons change. Persons who normally make their homes in one section get the idea into their heads that they may be able to find a job in some distant community, and by whatever means possible set out on a journey in that direction, depending upon the people resident in the intermediate areas to provide them with food, clothing, and lodging.

Others—thousands upon thousands of them—prefer the nomadic life of a transient, wandering from place to place, to remaining for any length of time in a city or community. Those belonging to this class are largely of the confirmed "panhandler" class. They don't want work and wouldn't do a day's labor unless forced to. Formerly they were known as "hoboes", but the more modern description has elevated them to the general classification of "transient." Under whatever name, however, they form a part of the general problem created by the migratory element of the American people.

What the country needs as a weapon to deal with these conditions is a law that will place transiency up to the Federal Government for its solution. Federal laws have been enacted to protect the birds of the air—those which fly from the far north southward each fall to enjoy the climate of this section and return northward when the days of spring arrive. The Government should not discriminate in favor of one and against another.

There is this to be said in favor of the feathered birds, however: They manage to find their own food and shelter by their own efforts during their stay in the South. They do not fly around from place to place making a nuisance of themselves by calling on the native birds for the use of nests already built, nor for food already stored as the result of the natives' efforts. If they did make a nuisance of themselves they would not receive the protection of the Government. Soon they would find themselves unwelcome and become the target of the hunters' guns.

There may be some variance in the analogy of the transients and the birds, but it is sufficiently accurate to emphasize the idea that better control should be established of the transient movement, and that control should be in the hands of the Federal authorities. It is an interstate proposition and should be placed on a basis where transiency can be governed adequately, without placing a hardship on anyone desiring to move from one State to another who is able to show that he is capable of taking care of himself and not becoming a charge upon a community other than that in which he was reared.

Nothing should be done by a transient-control program, however, that would curb the ambition of a man to improve his station in life by migrating from one place to another. That is not the motive behind the plans to study the problem. Something should be done, though, to keep the indigent and ne'er-do-wells within the confines of the areas that produced them, instead of letting them roam over and land at their will, eking out an existence as best they can. When such control is established, perhaps the respective communities will pay more attention to the training of youth along proper lines and other measures designed to build the finest type of citizenship.

If by the adoption of the resolution authorizing a study of the problem the Senate can start the transient ball rolling in this desirable direction, then hasten the action and let the work begin.

PROHIBITION OF PRICE DISCRIMINATION

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, on Saturday afternoon the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] referred to the anomalous procedure followed by the other House with respect to Senate bill 3154, and stated his desire to have the bill which was passed by the House, being House bill 8442, considered, and to substitute for its provisions the bill as heretofore passed by the Senate by striking out all after the enacting clause of the House bill. At that time I objected because some Senators signified a desire to study the procedure, as it was rather unusual, made so by the action of the House. After conference with those who desired to consider the matter, and after it has been explained, I find no objection to the procedure suggested by the Senator from Arkansas, as it will take the bill to conference, where it should be. So I withdraw the objection I made at that time.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 8442, being the so-called price-discrimination bill. I will state that it is my intention, if the request be granted, to move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the House bill and to insert the language of the bill passed by the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I wish to call attention to something at this time in order to bring it out into relief. I do not doubt that it will be noticed and properly attended to, but I wish to call attention to it because I regard it as important. I refer to the change made by House bill 8442 in the Senate bill in one certain respect more than any other; that is, in taking off the limitation or the standard as contained in the Senate bill with respect to the power of the Federal Trade Commission to fix quantity limits. The Senate bill provided a yardstick or a guide in that respect to the effect that where the Federal Trade Commission finds "that available purchasers in greater quantities are so few as to render differentials on account thereof unjustly discriminatory or promotive of monopoly in any line of commerce", then the Federal Trade Commission may exercise the power of fixing quantity limits and of changing the limits from time to time as may be found necessary by them.

The House bill has in it no such yardstick, no such standard, no basis for the exercise of legislative power, but provides as follows:

That the Federal Trade Commission, after due investigation and hearing to all interested parties, following insofar as applicable the procedure and subject to the recourse of the courts, provided in section 11 of this act, may issue an order fixing and establishing quantity limits and revising the same as it finds necessary, as to particular commodities or classes of commodities, and the foregoing shall then not be construed to permit differentials based on differences in quantities greater than those so fixed and established.

In other words, it is an unrestricted, unlimited power to legislate. I merely invite attention to it in order to bring it out in relief for the benefit of those who may have under consideration the conflicts between the House and Senate bills.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that I think the suggestion just made by the Senator from Vermont is well worthy of consideration by the conferees.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas to proceed to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8442) to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes", approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes.

Mr. ROBINSON. I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the text of the bill heretofore passed by the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

That section 2 of the act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes", approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. (a) That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price or terms of sale between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality where either or any of the purchases involved in such discrimination are in commerce, where such commodities are manufactured or produced and sold for use, consumption, or resale within the United States or any Territory thereof or the District of Columbia or any insular possession or other place under the jurisdiction of the United States, and where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any person who either grants or knowingly receives the benefit of such discrimination, or with customers of either of them: Provided, That where such commodities are sold for use in further manufacture and in the production of a new product to be sold to the public, nothing herein contained shall prevent discrimination in price by reason of differences in quantity of the commodity sold: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall prevent differentials in prices as between purchasers depending solely upon whether they purchase as factors, or wholesalers, or retailers, or consumers, or for use in further manufacture; nor differentials which make only due allowance for differences in the cost, other than brokerage, of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered; nor differentials which are based exclusively upon recognized changes in the market price of the product or products sold: Provided, however, That the Federal Trade Commission may, after due investigation and hearing to all interested parties, fix and establish quantity limits, and revise the same as it finds necessary, as to particular commodities or classes of commodities, where it finds that available purchasers in greater quantities are so few as to render differentials on account thereof unjustly discriminatory or promotive of monopoly in any line of commerce; and the foregoing shall then not be construed to permit differentials based on differences in quantities greater than those so fixed and established: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall prevent persons engaged in selling goods, wares, or merchandise in commerce from selecting their own customers in bona-fide transactions and not in restraint of trade: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall prevent price changes from time to time where, in response to changing conditions affecting the market for or the marketability of the goods concerned, such as but not limited to actual or imminent deterioration of perishable goods, obsolescence of seasonal goods, distress sales under court process, or sales in good faith in discontinuance of business in the goods concerned: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall prevent discrimination in price in the same or different communities made in good faith to meet competition.

"(b) Upon proof being made, at any hearing on a complaint under this section, that there has been discrimination in price or services or facilities furnished, the burden of rebutting the prima-facie case thus made by showing justification shall be upon the person charged with a violation of this section, and unless justification shall be affirmatively shown, the Commission is authorized to issue an order terminating the discrimination: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall prevent a seller rebutting the prima-facie case thus made by showing that his lower price or the furnishing of services or facilities to any purchaser or purchasers was made in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor, or the services or facilities furnished by a competitor.

"(c) That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, to pay or grant, or to receive or accept, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof, in connection with the sale or purchase of goods, wares, or merchandise, either to the other party to such transaction or to an agent, representative, or other intermediary therein where such intermediary is acting in fact for or in behalf, or is subject to the direct or indirect control, of any party to such transaction other than the person by whom such compensation is so granted or paid.

"(d) That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce to pay or contract for the payment of anything of value to or for the benefit of a customer of such person in the course of such commerce as compensation or in consideration for any services or facilities furnished by or through such customer in connection with the processing, handling, sale, or offering for sale of any products or commodities manufactured, sold, or offered for sale by such person, unless—

"(1) such payment or consideration is offered on proportionally equal terms to all other customers competing in the distribution of such products or commodities; or unless

"(2) the business, identity, or interests of such customer are in no way publicly associated, by name, reference, allusion, proximity, or otherwise, with or in the furnishing of such services or facilities, and the consideration paid therefor does not exceed the fair value of such services or facilities in the localities where furnished.

"(e) For purposes of suit under section 4 of this act, the measure of damages for any violation of this section shall, where the fact of damage is shown, and in the absence of proof of greater damage, be presumed to be the pecuniary amount or equivalent of the prohibited discrimination, payment, or grant involved in such violation; limited, however—

"(1) Under subsections (a) and (c) above, by the volume of plaintiff's business in the goods concerned, and for the period of time concerned, in such violation;

"(2) Under subsection (d) above, to the amount or share, or its pecuniary equivalent, to which plaintiff would have been entitled if the payment concerned in such violation had been made or offered in accordance with paragraph (1) of said subsection (d).

"(f) That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, knowingly to induce or receive a discrimination in price or terms of sale which is prohibited by this section.

"(g) Nothing in this section contained shall prevent the sale or purchase of crude mineral products or metals in the form in which they are loaded for shipment at prices or terms of sale based upon differences in the grade, quality, or quantity of such products, or that make only due allowance for differences in the cost of selling or transportation, or discrimination in the price of such products in the same or different communities made in good faith to meet competition.

"(h) It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, to be a party to, or assist in, any transaction of sale, or contract to sell, which discriminates to his knowledge against competitors of the purchaser in that any discount, rebate, allowance, or advertising service charge is granted to the purchaser over and above any discount, rebate, allowance, or advertising service charge available at the time of such transaction to said competitors in respect of a sale of goods of like grade, quality, and quantity; to sell, or contract to sell, goods in any part of the United States at prices lower than those exacted by said person elsewhere in the United States for the purpose of destroying competition, or eliminating a competitor in such part of the United States; or to sell, or contract to sell, goods at unreasonably low prices for the purpose of destroying competition or eliminating a competitor.

"Nothing in this subsection shall prevent a cooperative association from returning to producers or consumers, or a cooperative wholesale association from returning to its constituent retail members, the whole, or any part of, the net surplus resulting from its trading operations in proportion to purchases from, or sales to, the association.

"Any person violating any of the provisions of this subsection shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate insist on its amendment, ask for a conference, and that the Chair appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. LOGAN, Mr. VAN NUYS, Mr. MCGILL, Mr. BORAH, and Mr. AUSTIN conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to make a brief statement, which will only require 4 or 5 minutes, relating to the bill just passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, there have been unaccountable misrepresentations concerning the bill to amend section 2 of the Clayton Act relating to price discrimination. It is not possible to take note of everything published that is misleading and untrue, but this seems an appropriate time, briefly, to make clear in a general way, for the understanding of the public, the purposes of the legislation.

In illustration of the misrepresentations to which reference is made attention is now invited to an editorial in Collier's Weekly, published May 23, 1936. Editors usually inform themselves before expressing opinions on measures involving public policy. The editor who wrote the editorial mentioned was either ignorant or deliberately unfair in some of his statements.

For instance, referring to the bill which passed the Senate, which is closely analogous to the House bill, he said:

> The purpose, of course, is to use the taxing power to restrict the growth of the chains and to benefit the independent dealers.

Neither the Senate bill nor the House bill employs the taxing power or has any reference to it.

Again, the editorial contains the statement:

> Nobody thinks that chain stores or any other agency ought to have secret rebates or any other special privileges such as were current in the past. Senator ROBINSON, however, seeks to deny to the chains advantages which other merchants are allowed to enjoy.

The sole purpose of the proposed legislation is to prevent unfair discriminations by a seller in favor of certain purchasers who have enormous buying power. This is sought to be accomplished chiefly by outlawing rebates, discounts, and other allowances not made in good faith, but granted for the actual purpose of giving the beneficiary of such allowances unfair advantage over competitors.

The editorial concedes the merit of the legislation when it declares that—

> Nobody thinks that chain stores or any other agency ought to have secret rebates or any other special privilege such as were current in the past.

Another misleading statement by Collier's in the same connection is the following:

> For example, the chain stores would, by his bill, be deprived of the advantages of large-scale buying. The Senator would in effect fix the price for large orders and small orders.

This last statement contains two assertions, both of which are unsupported by the facts. First, the bill does not deprive the chain stores of the advantage of fair large-scale buying. It expressly makes allowances for such advantage when based on differences in cost. Second, it does not fix any price either for large or small orders, and merely forbids unfair discriminations in price. The seller may dispose of his commodities at any price that he pleases, and he may allow discounts for large orders, provided the discounts are based on the differences in cost.

Another statement in the editorial that is not justified by the language in the bill is:

> In cunningly devised phraseology the Federal Trade Commission would be instructed by the law not to do anything of benefit to the chain stores in fixing these prices and limits.

The sole authority vested by either bill in the Federal Trade commission is that contained in the Senate bill which authorizes the Federal Trade Commission to fix the quantity on which discounts for large purchases may be based. This is sought to be done in order to prevent monopoly.

Finally the editorial declares:

> Rebates of any kind are improper and should be prohibited by law, but that law should deal equally and justly with all.

That is exactly what the legislation seeks to accomplish. Many believe that monopoly inevitably will result in excessive prices to consumers, and that unless the rule of equality be applied monopoly in many spheres will become inevitable through unfair discriminations in favor of large buyers who may, in order to drive their feebler competitors out of existence, sell for a time at prices which it is impossible for their competitors to meet.

It is surprising that a publication enjoying the reputation that Collier's has established should give publicity to untruthful declarations and to fallacious arguments such as are embraced in the editorial referred to.

EXTENSION OF INVESTIGATION OF SO-CALLED RACKETS AND RACKETEERING

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, on page 28 of the calendar is stated the resolution (S. Res. 306) extending the authority for an investigation of so-called rackets and racketeering. It is desired that the authority given shall be continued during the next Congress without any appropria-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 306), submitted by Mr. COPELAND on May 26, 1936, was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the authority conferred by Senate Resolution No. 74, Seventy-third Congress, first session, authorizing an investigation of the matter of so-called rackets, with a view to their suppression, and Senate Resolution No. 196, Seventy-third Congress, second session, enlarging the scope of the investigation of so-called rackets and racketeering practiced in the United States, shall be extended and continued in force until the expiration of the Seventy-fifth Congress.

WELFARE OF AMERICAN SEAMEN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2003) to amend section 13 of the act of March 4, 1915, entitled "An act to promote the welfare of American seamen in the merchant marine of the United States; to abolish arrest and imprisonment as a penalty for desertion and to secure the abrogation of treaty provisions in relation thereto; and to promote safety at sea", which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, it will be recalled that this bill has been on the calendar for a long time; and I ask that House bill 8597, Calendar No. 2163, which is an identical bill coming from the House, as amended by the Senate, may be substituted for the Senate bill and considered. The bill has to do with safety of life at sea.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to substituting the House bill for the Senate bill? The Chair hears none.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8597) to amend section 13 of the act of March 4, 1915, entitled "An act to promote the welfare of American seamen in the merchant marine of the United States; to abolish arrest and imprisonment as a penalty for desertion, and to secure the abrogation of treaty provisions in relation thereto; and to promote safety at sea"; to maintain discipline on shipboard; and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

"SEC. 13. (a) That no vessel of 100 tons gross and upward, except those navigating rivers exclusively and the smaller inland lakes and except as provided in section 1 of this act, shall be permitted to depart from any port of the United States unless she has on board a crew not less than 75 percent of which, in each department thereof, are able to understand any order given by the officers of such vessel, nor unless 65 percent of her deck crew, exclusive of licensed officers and apprentices, are of a rating not less than able seamen. Every person shall be rated an able seaman, and qualified for service as such on the seas, who is 19 years of age or upward, and has had at least 3 years' service on deck at sea or on the Great Lakes, on a vessel or vessels to which this section applies, including decked fishing vessels, and vessels in United States Government service; and every person shall be rated an able seaman, and qualified to serve as such on the Great Lakes and on the smaller lakes, bays, or sounds who is 19 years of age or upward and has had at least 18 months' service on deck at sea or on the Great Lakes or on the smaller lakes, bays, or sounds, on a vessel or vessels to which this section applies, including decked fishing vessels and vessels in the United States Government service; and graduates of school ships approved by and conducted under rules prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce may be rated able seamen after 12 months' service at sea after graduation: Provided, That no boy shall be shipped on any vessel to which this section applies unless he is physically qualified to join the Navy and that no boy shall be placed on the lookout or at the wheel except for the purpose of learning, and that in narrow and crowded waters or in low visibility none below the rating of able seaman shall be permitted at the wheel: Provided further, That no deck boy shall be held qualified to fill the place of ordinary seaman until he has had at least 6 months' service as deck boy: Provided further, That upon examination, under rules prescribed by the Department of Commerce as to eyesight, hearing, and physical condition, such persons or graduates are found to be competent: Provided further, That upon examination, under rules prescribed by the Department of Commerce as to eyesight, hearing, physical condition, and knowledge of the duties of seamanship, a person found competent may be rated as able seaman after having served on deck 12 months at sea or on the Great Lakes, but seamen examined and rated able seamen under this proviso shall not in any case compose more than one-fourth of the number of able seamen required by this section to be shipped or employed upon any vessel.

"(b) Application may be made to any board of local inspectors for a certificate of service as able seaman, and upon proof being made to said board by affidavit and examination, under rules approved by the Secretary of Commerce, showing the nationality and age of the applicant, the vessel or vessels on which he has had service, that he is skilled in the work usually performed by able seamen, and that he is entitled to such certificate under the provisions of this section, the board of local inspectors shall issue to said applicant a certificate of service as able seaman, which shall be retained by him and be accepted as prima-facie evidence of his rating as an able seaman.

"(c) Each board of local inspectors shall keep a complete record of all certificates of service issued by them and to whom issued and shall keep on file the affidavits and records of examinations upon which said certificates are issued.

"(d) The collector of customs may, upon his own motion, and shall, upon the sworn information of any reputable citizen of the United States setting forth that this section is not being complied with, cause a muster of the crew of any vessel to be made to determine the fact, at which muster said reputable citizen must be present; and no clearance shall be given to any vessel failing to comply with the provisions of this section: Provided, That the collector of customs shall not be required to cause such muster of the crew to be made unless said sworn information has been filed with him for at least 6 hours before the vessel departs, or is scheduled to depart: Provided further, That any person that shall knowingly make a false affidavit for such purpose shall be deemed guilty of perjury and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment not exceeding 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, within the discretion of the court. Any violation of any provision of this section by the owner, master, or officer in charge of the vessel shall subject the owner of such vessel to a penalty of not less than $100 and not more than $500: Provided further, That the Secretary of Commerce shall make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section, and nothing herein shall be held or construed to prevent the Board of Supervising Inspectors, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce, from making rules and regulations authorized by law as to vessels excluded from the operation of this section: And provided further, That no certificate of service as able seaman shall be issued by any board of local inspectors until after examination of the applicant therefor, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce, as to his efficiency, and upon proof, as a result of such examination, that he has been trained in and is acquainted with the duties entitling him to such rating. No seaman shall be considered an 'able seaman' within the meaning of the laws of the United States relating to the manning of vessels unless he is in possession of such certificate issued by the board of local inspectors. All certificates as 'able seaman' and 'lifeboatman' issued by the several boards of local inspectors or other Federal officers prior to the passage of this act shall, within 6 months thereafter, be surrendered to such boards of local inspectors for cancelation, and there shall be issued in lieu thereof to all able seamen, and lifeboatmen found qualified by such examination new certificates as required by law: Provided, That if due to inability on the part of the Department of Commerce to carry out the provisions of this subsection with regard to all seamen, the Secretary of Commerce may, in his discretion, extend the time for a period not to exceed 3 months. Such new certificates shall be stamped with the seal of the board of local inspectors, placed partially over the signature of the applicant for such certificate; and there shall be attached thereto a photograph of the applicant. Any other safeguards which, in the judgment of the Secretary of Commerce, may be necessary and advisable to establish the authenticity of the certificate, are hereby authorized.

"(e) No vessel to which this section applies may be navigated unless all of the complement in her engine department above the rating of coal passer or wiper and below the rating of licensed officer shall be holders of a certificate of service as a qualified member of the engine department. The local inspectors of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall, upon application and examination as to competence and physical condition, as prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce, issue such a certificate of service. An applicant for such rating shall produce to such inspectors definite proof of at least 6 months' service at sea in a rating at least equal to that of coal passer or wiper in the engine department of vessels required by this act to have such certificated men.

"(f) As to the certificates of service or efficiency, the Secretary shall promulgate rules covering the form, contents, and manner of issuance, which shall include a provision that copies of these and all documents pertaining thereto be filed in the local offices and in the central office in Washington.

"(g) That the boards of local inspectors of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall, without examination (except food handlers who must be free from communicable disease), issue to all members of the crews of merchant vessels of the United States (except licensed officers), certificates of service for ratings other than as able seamen or a qualified member of the engine department, which certificates shall authorize them to serve in the capacities specified in such certificates: Provided, That such certificates shall not issue before oath has been taken before one of the said inspectors that the applicant therefor will faithfully and honestly perform all the duties required of him by law, and carry out the lawful orders of his superior officers on shipboard, and, in the case of a radio operator, shall produce to the local inspectors his unexpired license issued by the Federal Communications Commission to act in that capacity: And provided further, That when a certificate has been revoked or suspended under the provisions of subsection (h) of this section, a new certificate shall not be issued until a board of local inspectors shall determine that the issue of such new certificate is compatible with the requirements of good discipline and safety at sea.

"(h) That all certificates of service or efficiency issued by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall be subject to suspension or revocation on the same grounds and in the same manner and with like procedure as is provided in the case of suspension or revocation of licenses of officers under the provisions of section 4450 of the Revised Statutes.

"(i) It shall be unlawful to employ any person, or for any person to serve aboard any merchant vessel of the United States below the rating of licensed officer, who has not a certificate of service issued by a board of local inspectors, and anyone violating this section shall be liable to a penalty of $100 for each offense.

"(j) This section is not to amend or repeal any of the provisions of chapter 3 of title 47, United States Code—Telegraphs, Telephones, and Radio Telegraphs.

"(k) Nothing herein shall be construed to impose, sanction, or permit any condition of involuntary servitude nor to impair, restrict, or limit the right of any seaman to leave the service of any vessel when in a safe harbor.

"(l) This section shall take effect 6 months after the enactment of this act: Provided, That if it is found impracticable on the part of the Department of Commerce to furnish the certificates herein provided, the Secretary of Commerce may, in his discretion, extend the effective date for a period not exceeding 3 months."

SEC. 2. That section 2 of the act of March 4, 1915, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. That in all merchant vessels of the United States of more than 100 tons gross, excepting those navigating rivers, harbors, lakes (other than Great Lakes), bays, sounds, bayous, and canals, exclusively, the licensed officers and sailors, coal passers, firemen, oilers, and water tenders shall, while at sea, be divided into at least three watches, which shall be kept on duty successively for the performance of ordinary work incident to the sailing and management of the vessel. The seamen shall not be shipped to work alternately in the fireroom and on deck, nor shall those shipped for deck duty be required to work in the fireroom, or vice versa; nor shall any licensed officer or seaman in the deck or engine department be required to work more than 8 hours in 1 day; but these provisions shall not limit either the authority of the master or other officer or the obedience of the seamen when in the judgment of the master or other officer the whole or any part of the crew are needed for maneuvering, shifting berth, mooring, or unmooring, the vessel or the performance of work necessary for the safety of the vessel, her passengers, crew, and cargo, or for the saving of life aboard other vessels in jeopardy, or when in port or at sea, from requiring the whole or any part of the crew to participate in the performance of fire, lifeboat, or other drills. While such vessel is in a safe harbor no seaman shall be required to do any unnecessary work on Sundays or the following-named days: New Year's Day, the Fourth of July, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day, but this shall not prevent the dispatch of a vessel on regular schedule or when ready to proceed on her voyage. And at all times while such vessel is in a safe harbor, 8 hours, inclusive of the anchor watch, shall constitute a day's work. Whenever the master of any vessel shall fail to comply with this section and the regulation issued thereunder, the owner shall be liable to a penalty not to exceed $500, and the seaman shall be entitled to discharge from such vessel and to receive the wages earned. But this section shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels, or yachts."

SEC. 3. Section 4551 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 46, sec. 643) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4551. (a) Every seaman upon a merchant vessel of the United States of the burden of 100 gross tons or upward, except vessels employed exclusively in trade on the navigable rivers of the United States, shall be furnished with a book, to be known as a 'continuous discharge book', which shall be retained by him and which shall contain the signature of the seaman to whom it is so furnished and a statement of his nationality, age, personal description, photograph, and home address. Such books shall be in such form and issued by the shipping commissioners and collectors and deputy collectors of customs at ports where no shipping commissioners have been appointed in such manner as the Director of Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Commerce, shall determine. Any person, corporation, or association, other than a shipping commissioner, who shall issue or cause to be issued any such book or imitation thereof, or any person, other than the real owner, who uses or endeavors to use any such book, or who makes any statement or endorsement in any such book not herein authorized, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be imprisoned not less than 1 month nor more than 3 months, in the discretion of the court.

"(b) Upon the discharge of any seaman and the payment of his wages, the shipping commissioner shall enter in the continuous discharge book of such seaman the name of the vessel, the nature of the voyage (foreign or coastwise), the class to which the vessel belongs (steam, motor, sail, or barge), the date and place of the shipment and of the discharge of such seaman, and the rating then held by such seaman. Whenever a seaman is discharged in any collection district where no shipping commissioner has been appointed, the master of the vessel shall perform the duties of such commissioner and shall make the proper entries in such continuous discharge book; and when the seamen are not required by law to be signed on and discharged before a shipping commissioner, the master shall make such proper entries in the discharge book. Any master who fails to make such entries shall be fined the sum of $50 for each such offense.

"(c) There shall be maintained in the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation in Washington a record of every discharge book and certificate issued under the provisions of this act, together with the name and address of the seaman to whom it is issued, his next of kin, and a certified copy of all discharge entries in such book, which copy shall be forwarded to such Bureau by the shipping commissioner or person duly authorized to act as such before whom such holder is discharged.

"(d) In case of the loss of a book by shipwreck or other casualty the seaman shall be supplied with another discharge book, in which shall be entered all data contained in the last book so far as this may be available from copies of records kept by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation; in other cases of loss the seaman may obtain a duplicate of such book containing the same entries upon payment of a sum equivalent to the cost thereof to the Government, to be determined from time to time by the Secretary of Commerce."

SEC. 4. (a) The local inspectors of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall inspect the crew quarters of every American vessel at least once in each month, or at such times as such vessel shall enter an American port, and shall satisfy themselves that such quarters are of the size required by law or regulations issued thereunder, are properly ventilated and in a clean and sanitary condition, and are equipped with the proper plumbing and mechanical appliances required by law or regulations issued thereunder, and that such plumbing and mechanical appliances are in good working order and condition.

(b) Whenever it shall be found that the crew quarters of any such vessel are not of the size required by law or regulations issued thereunder or are not properly ventilated or are not in a clean and sanitary condition or are not equipped with the proper plumbing and mechanical appliances required by law or regulations issued thereunder, or that such plumbing and mechanical appliances are not in good working order and condition, the appropriate board of local inspectors shall withdraw the certificate of inspection of such vessel and refuse to reissue the same until such improper conditions have been corrected; and the master or other licensed officer of such vessel who shall have willfully or negligently permitted such vessel to be in such improper condition shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $500.

SEC. 5. (a) From and after the enactment of this act all licensed officers and pilots of vessels of the United States, shall be citizens of the United States, native-born, or completely naturalized.

(b) From and after the enactment of this act upon each departure of any such vessel from a port of the United States, 75 percent of the crew in each department thereof, excluding licensed officers, shall be citizens of the United States, native-born or completely naturalized, and thereafter the percentage of citizens as above defined shall be increased 5 percent per annum until 90 percent of the crew in each department of such vessels shall be citizens of the United States, native-born, or completely naturalized, unless the Secretary of Commerce shall, upon investigation, ascertain that such citizen seamen are not available, when, under such conditions, he may reduce the above percentages.

(c) If any vessel while on a foreign voyage is for any reason deprived of the services of any member of the crew, such position or vacancy caused by the promotion of another to such position may be supplied by a person other than defined in paragraph (a) and (b) until the first call of such vessel at a port in the United States where such replacements can be obtained.

(d) The owner, agent, or officer of any such vessel, who shall employ any person in violation of the provisions of this section, shall be subject to a penalty of $500 for each offense.

SEC. 6. That any person who (1) shall receive or have in his possession any certificate, license, or document issued to vessels or officers or seamen by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation or by any officer or employee of the United States authorized by law to represent such Bureau, to which he is not lawfully entitled, with intent unlawfully to use the same; or (2) shall use or exhibit or attempt to use or exhibit any such certificate, license, or document to which he is not lawfully entitled; or (3) shall alter or change, or attempt to change, any such certificate, license, or document by addition, interpolation, deletion, or erasure; or (4) shall forge, counterfeit, or steal, or shall attempt to forge, counterfeit, or steal, any such certificate, license, or document; or (5) shall unlawfully have in his possession, or knowingly use any such altered, changed, forged, counterfeit, or stolen certificate, license, or document; or (6) shall print or manufacture, or cause to be printed or manufactured, any blank form of such certificate, license, or document without first obtaining the authority of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation; or (7) shall have in his possession without lawful excuse, and with intent unlawfully to use the same, any blank form or such certificate, license, or document; or (8) shall in any manner transfer, or cause to be so transferred, or negotiate such transfer of, any blank form of such certificate, license, or document, or any such altered, changed, forged, counterfeit, or stolen certificate, license, or document, or any such certificate, license, or document to which the party transferring or receiving the same is not lawfully entitled; or (9) shall aid or abet the perpetration of any of the foregoing acts shall for each offense, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

SEC. 7. The Secretary of Commerce shall enforce this act as to all vessels of the United States subject to the provisions of this act through collectors of customs and other Government officers acting under the direction of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, and shall make such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 8. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of the provisions thereof, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 9. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

E. C. WILLIS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5867) for the relief of E. C. Willis, father of the late Charles R. Willis, a minor, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$3,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to E. C. Willis, father of the late Charles R. Willis, a minor, the sum of $3,000 in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States for fatal injuries suffered by the said Charles R. Willis as a result of a Government-owned truck operated by an employee of the Government striking an automobile operated by the said Charles R. Willis near Sikes, La., November 18, 1933: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. PASSAIC VALLEY SEWERAGE COMMISSIONERS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3143) for the relief of the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commissioners, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of this bill?

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, this bill provides for a payment in the amount of $109,088.03 to the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commissioners, a public body created under the laws of the State of New Jersey. The report of the Committee on Claims states the circumstances and all the facts very fully; but briefly—for I am very familiar with all the details—the Court of Claims found that on December 21, 1923, the Leviathan, bound from New York, stopped at a point about 2½ miles outside of the Ambrose Channel and there took on the pilot, one Joseph A. Bigley. With the pilot in charge, the Leviathan collided with one of the principal pipes of the plaintiff sewerage system laid in the bottom of the harbor at a point outside the channel through which the ship should have been navigated.

There was no dispute at all, and never has been, so far as I know, as to the amount of damage suffered or the circumstances which brought about the damage. The court has found that the claimant had no recourse in a court of admiralty; that while the pilot was negligent, the owner cannot be held responsible; so that the only way in which the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commissioners can be reimbursed is through congressional action.

I do not think, as I have said, that there is any item or fact in dispute here at all. The occurrence is a well-known one. It has been carefully investigated.

Mr. McKELLAR. This claim was committed to the Court of Claims, was it not?

Mr. BARBOUR. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. What did the Court of Claims hold? Did they hold that the commission was entitled to recover?

Mr. BARBOUR. No; the Court of Claims held, as I have said, that the claimant, as a public body of the State of New Jersey, had no recourse in admiralty; that they had no recourse against the steamship; and that their only recourse against the Government, because of the fact that the pilot was in command of the ship at the time, was through congressional action. In other words, there is no way in which this money can be recovered other than in the way we are now seeking to do it.

Mr. McKELLAR. What did the court hold about the amount?

Mr. BARBOUR. There is no dispute at all, may I say again to the Senator, about the amount. I can assure the Senator of that. It is a very long, well-known case; and the report, as I said at the outset, is very full and goes into all the details. The amount of damages which I have mentioned has been itemized in the report, as the Senator will see on page 4; and the opinion, which is along the line of what I have said, is certified to, as I understand, by Willard L. Hart, Chief Clerk, Court of Claims of the United States.

Mr. McKELLAR. Was the claim ever submitted to any department and a recommendation had?

Mr. BARBOUR. I think it may be truthfully said that this whole situation has gone through the gamut of everything it can go through, and the present relief is the only relief that can be afforded. It is justifiable relief for proven damage that undoubtedly was done. There is no good reason why it should not be accorded. It is not a private matter. The money will not go into the pockets of individuals, as I understand; it will go to the commissioners as such. I very much hope the bill will pass. I feel that it ought to pass.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment of the committee will be stated.

The amendment was to add at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $109,088.03 to the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commissioners, a body politic and corporate, created by and under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and by said laws vested with the title to the Passaic Valley sewer, for damage done to the outlet of said sewer at or near Robbins Reef in the harbor of New York by the steamship Leviathan, a passenger vessel owned by the Government of the United States and operated under the direction and control of the United States Shipping Board and the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, on the 21st day of December 1923: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDIANS OF FORT BELKNAP RESERVATION, MONT.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3373) to credit the tribal funds of the Indians of the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation in Montana with certain sums expended therefrom for the purchase and maintenance of a tribal herd, and for the purchase of horses destroyed during a dourine epidemic, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs, with amendments.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have a statement about this bill?

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, this is a bill to reimburse the Indians of the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation for certain losses. They had a herd of cattle on the reservation which was entirely under the control of the Government. This is a case in which the Government invested some Indian money in a herd of cattle. There was a great deal of difficulty with it; and, as a result, the Indians lost something like $71,000 of their money through the negligence of the Government agents, and through what the Indians contend was graft and corruption on the reservation. The second item is for $14,000 to reimburse the Indians for horses killed by the Government during a dourine epidemic.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Government killed them?

Mr. WHEELER. The Government killed them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments of the committee will be stated.

The amendments were, on page 1, line 6, after the word "exceeding", to strike out "$72,000" and insert "$71,138.20"; and on the same page, line 8, before the word "shall", to strike out "$16,000" and insert "$14,355"; so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the amount of tribal funds of the Indians of the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation, Mont., heretofore expended for the purchase and maintenance of a tribal herd of cattle, not exceeding $71,138.20, and for the purchase of horses destroyed during a dourine epidemic, not exceeding $14,355, shall be reimbursed from the Treasury of the United States and placed to the credit of the Fort Belknap Tribe and be available for such expenditures for the benefit of said tribe as Congress may hereafter direct.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OSCAR GUSTOF BERGSTROM

The bill (H. R. 3914) for the relief of Oscar Gustof Bergstrom was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT

The bill (S. 1636) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] desired to offer an amendment to this bill. I thought he was on the floor, but he has stepped out of the Chamber.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, the Senator from Delaware just spoke to me about this matter, and asked me to have the bill go over temporarily. He has an amendment which he desires to submit to me, and the bill will be called up later.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

NAVAL TREATY CATEGORIES OF VESSELS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5730) to amend section 3 (b) of an act entitled "An act to establish the composition of the United States Navy with respect to the categories of vessels limited by the treaties signed at Washington, February 6, 1922, and at London, April 22, 1930, at the limits prescribed by those treaties; to authorize the construction of certain naval vessels; and for other purposes", approved March 27, 1934, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with amendments, on page 2, line 9, to strike out the words "profit: Provided, That if there is a net loss on all such contracts or subcontracts completed by the particular contractor or subcontractor within any income-taxable year, such net loss shall be allowed as a credit in determining the excess profit, if any, for the next succeeding income-taxable year" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "profit"; on page 2, line 15, after the words "United States", to strike out the words "by inserting the word 'further' after the word 'Provided' "; on page 3, line 19, after the word "Provided", to strike out the words "That if there is a net loss on all such contracts or subcontracts completed by the particular contractor or subcontractor within any income-taxable year, such net loss shall be allowed as a credit in determining the excess profit, if any, for the next succeeding income-taxable year: Provided further"; and on page 4, line 17, after the word "thereof", to insert the words "And provided further, That the income-taxable years shall be such taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935, except that the above provisos relating to the assessment, collection, payment, or refunding of excess profit to or by the Treasury shall be retroactive to March 27, 1934," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3 (b) of an Act entitled "An act to establish the composition of the United States Navy with respect to the categories of vessels limited by the treaties signed at Washington, February 6, 1922, and at London, April 22, 1930, at the limits prescribed by those treaties; to authorize the construction of certain naval vessels; and for other purposes", approved March 27, 1934 (48 Stat. 505), is hereby amended by striking out the word "price" and inserting the words "prices, of such contracts within the scope of this section as are completed by the particular contracting party within the income-taxable year", after the words "of the total contract"; by inserting the words "but the surety under such contracts shall not be liable for the payment of such excess profit" after the words "property of the United States"; by deleting the word "may" after the words "the Secretary of the Treasury" and substituting therefor the word "shall"; and by adding at the end of the section the following proviso: "Provided further, That all provisions of law (including penalties) applicable with respect to the taxes imposed by title I of the Revenue Act of 1934, and not inconsistent with this section, shall be applicable with respect to the assessment, collection, or payment of excess profits to the Treasury as provided by this section, and to refunds by the Treasury of overpayments of excess profits into the Treasury: And provided further, That this section shall not apply to contracts or subcontracts for scientific equipment used for communication, target detection, navigation, and fire control as may be so designated by the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Navy shall report annually to the Congress the names of such contractors and subcontractors affected by this provision, together with the applicable contracts and the amounts thereof." so that as amended said section 3 (b) will read as follows:

"SEC. 3. (b) To pay into the Treasury profit, as hereinafter provided shall be determined by the Treasury Department, in excess of 10 percent of the total contract prices, of such contracts within the scope of this section as are completed by the particular contracting party within the income-taxable year, such amount to become the property of the United States, but the surety under such contracts shall not be liable for the payment of such excess profit: Provided, That if such amount is not voluntarily paid the Secretary of the Treasury shall collect the same under the usual methods employed under the internal-revenue laws to collect Federal income taxes: Provided further, That all provisions of law (including penalties) applicable with respect to the taxes imposed by title I of the Revenue Act of 1934, and not inconsistent with this section, shall be applicable with respect to the assessment, collection, or payment of excess profits to the Treasury as provided by this section, and to refunds by the Treasury of overpayments of excess profits into the Treasury: And provided further, That this section shall not apply to contracts or subcontracts for scientific equipment used for communication, target detection, navigation, and fire control as may be so designated by the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Navy shall report annually to the Congress the names of such contractors and subcontractors affected by this provision, together with the applicable contracts and the amounts thereof: And provided further, That the income-taxable years shall be such taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935, except that the above provisos relating to the assessment, collection, payment, or refunding of excess profit to or by the Treasury shall be retroactive to March 27, 1934."

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

JOSEPH W. HARRISON

The bill (S. 3736) authorizing and directing the appointment of Joseph W. Harrison as a captain in the Chaplain Reserve Corps was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to appoint Joseph W. Harrison in the Chaplain Reserve Corps with the rank of captain.

GOLD STAR MOTHER'S DAY

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 115) designating the last Sunday in September as Gold Star Mother's Day, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection being heard, the joint resolution will be passed over.

Mr. COPELAND subsequently said: Mr. President, I did not hear objection to Order of Business 2077. Surely no one in the Senate will object to the privilege accorded the Gold Star Mothers who would be affected by this measure.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There was objection, and the joint resolution went over under objection.

Mr. COPELAND. I ask unanimous consent that it may be considered at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Joint resolution designating the last Sunday in September as "Gold Star Mother's Day", and for other purposes

Whereas the service rendered the United States by the American mother is the greatest source of the country's strength and inspiration; and

Whereas we honor ourselves and the mothers of America when we revere and give emphasis to the home as the fountainhead of the state; and

Whereas the American mother is doing so much for the home and for the moral and spiritual uplift of the people of the United States and hence so much for good government and humanity; and

Whereas the American Gold Star Mothers suffered the supreme sacrifice of motherhood in the loss of their sons and daughters in the World War: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is hereby authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the Government officials to display the United States flag on all Government buildings, and the people of the United States to display the flag and to hold appropriate meetings at their homes, churches, or other suitable places, on the last Sunday in September, as a public expression of the love, sorrow, and reverence of the people of the United States for the American Gold Star Mothers.

SEC. 2. That the last Sunday in September shall hereafter be designated and known as "Gold Star Mother's Day", and it shall be the duty of the President to request its observance as provided for in this resolution.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE, NEBRASKA

The bill (S. 4376) authorizing the State of Iowa, acting through its State highway commission, and the State of Nebraska, acting through its department of roads and irrigation, to construct, maintain, and operate a free or toll bridge across the Missouri River at or near Dodge Street in the city of Omaha, Nebr., was announced as next in order.

Mr. BENSON. Let this go over.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection for a moment so that I may explain the bill?

Mr. BENSON. Certainly.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, this bill makes provision for the granting of a franchise for the building of a bridge across the Missouri River, and since the bill was introduced, a similar bill, House bill 12056, passed the House of Representatives, on May 19. Unless there is some serious objection to the granting of this franchise, the nature of which I do not know, I believe the bill ought to be passed. Will the Senator who made the objection state whether he wishes to persist in it?

Mr. BENSON. Yes; I wish to have the bill go over.

Mr. BURKE. Very well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 8824) for the relief of the estate of John Gellatly, deceased, and/or Charlyne Gellatly, individually, was announced as next in order.

Mr. COPELAND. Over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

LOANS TO DRAINAGE, IRRIGATION, AND CONSERVANCY DISTRICTS

The bill (H. R. 9009) to make lands in drainage, irrigation, and conservancy districts eligible for loans by the Federal land banks and other Federal agencies loaning on farm lands, notwithstanding the existence of prior liens of assessment made by such districts, and for other purposes was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RELIEF OF BLACKFEET INDIANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 243) authorizing distribution to the Indians of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, Mont., of judgment rendered by the Court of Claims in their favor, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to withdraw from the tribal fund of the Blackfeet, Blood, and Piegan Indians of the Blackfeet Reservation, Mont., credited or to be credited on the books of the Treasury under the act of March 13, 1924 (43 Stat. 21), a sufficient sum to make a per-capita distribution of $85 to each member of said tribes who was living and entitled to enrollment with said Indians on the date final judgment was rendered in their favor by the Court of Claims in the case Docket No. E-427; such per-capita distribution to be made under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

SEC. 2. The balance remaining in the tribal fund of the Blackfeet, Blood, and Piegan Indians after the per-capita distribution herein authorized shall be available for disposition by the tribal council of said Indians, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with the constitution and bylaws of the Blackfeet Tribe of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PLANT QUARANTINE

The bill (H. R. 8495) to amend certain plant-quarantine laws was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OATHS OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

The bill (S. 4519) to dispense with unnecessary renewals of oaths of office by civilian employees of the executive departments and independent establishments, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That civilian employees of the executive departments and independent establishments of the United States who, upon original appointment, have subscribed to the oath of office required by section 1757 of the Revised Statutes, shall not be required to renew the said oath because of any change in status so long as their services are continuous in the department or independent establishment in which employed, unless in the opinion of the head of the department or independent establishment the public interests require such renewal.

PRECEDENCE OF CASES IN WHICH UNITED STATES IS A PARTY

The bill (S. 4341) to give precedence to certain proceedings to which the United States is a party, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That if, in any civil or criminal proceeding to which the United States is a party, arising under the customs or internal-revenue laws, the district attorney files, at any time after joinder of issue, with the clerk of the district court in which such proceeding is pending a certificate that such proceeding involves a charge of fraud upon the revenues of the United States, thereupon such proceeding shall be given precedence over other cases on the civil or criminal docket of such court and shall be assigned for hearing and trial at the earliest practicable date, and be expedited in every way.

IMPORTATIONS FOR EXHIBITION AT NATIONAL PETROLEUM EXPOSITION

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 497) to permit articles imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at the International Petroleum Exposition, Tulsa, Okla., to be admitted without payment of tariff, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DE ROSEY C. CABELL AND OTHERS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4289) to correct the military records of DeRosey C. Cabell and others, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 7, after the name "Cabell", to strike out the name "Thomas McF. Cockrill" and to insert in lieu thereof the name "McFarland Cockrill"; on page 1, line 9, to strike out the name "Lang" and to insert in lieu thereof the name "Lange"; on line 9, to strike out the name "James DeB. Walbach" and to insert in lieu thereof the name "James deB. Walbach", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following-named officers and former officers of the United States Army shall be entitled to count all their service as cadets at the United States Military Academy in computing for any purpose length of service of any officers of the Army: DeRosey C. Cabell, McFarland Cockrill, James N. Caperton, Junius H. Houghton, Otto F. Lange, Paul B. Parker, James deB. Walbach, and Victor W. B. Wales: Provided, That this act shall not be construed as authorizing the payment of any back pay and allowances that may have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, this bill is recommended favorably by the War Department, and is designed to correct the military records of eight Army officers, seven of whom are still in the service, and all of whom were members of the 1916 class at West Point.

As a result of having already passed through a previous summer camp, 13 members of the 1916 graduating class were ordered by the War Department to report at the academy on August 28, 1912, 4 days following the enactment of the act of August 24, 1912, which act precluded service at the Academy from being counted in computing for any purpose the length of service of any officer of the Army. The other members of this class had reported upon August 24, 1912, and were not affected by the act. The Comptroller General held that the 13 ordered to report on August 28 were subject to this act and were not allowed to count their cadet service as regular officer service, although their comrades in the same class were permitted to do so. Five of the 13 already have been relieved of the effect of this ruling by acts of Congress. The effect of this bill is to afford similar treatment to the remaining eight.

The rest of the class, of course, were not affected by the act. I trust the bill will be permitted to pass.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to correct the military records of DeRosey C. Cabell, McFarland Cockrill, James N. Caperton, Junius H. Houghton, Otto F. Lange, Paul B. Parker, James deB. Walbach, and Victor W. B. Wales."

RIO GRANDE CANALIZATION PROJECT

The bill (S. 3536) authorizing construction, operation, and maintenance of the Rio Grande canalization project and authorizing appropriation for that purpose was announced as next in order.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, there is a similar bill on the calendar, being Order of Business 2140, House bill 11768, which I ask to have substituted for the Senate bill and considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. RUSSELL in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11768) authorizing construction, operation, and maintenance of Rio Grande canalization project and authorizing appropriations for that purpose.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, this is the bill about which I spoke to the Senator from Tennessee some time ago, and which I explained to him fully.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; I recall the Senator explaining the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 3536 is indefinitely postponed.

COOPERATIVE AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION WORK

The bill (S. 4520) to amend the act approved June 29, 1935 (49 Stat. 436–439), entitled "An act to provide for research into basic laws and principles relating to agriculture and to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work and the more complete endowment and support of land-grant colleges" was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, effective at the beginning of the first fiscal year following the date of enactment of this act, section 4 of title I of the act entitled "An act to provide for research into basic laws and principles relating to agriculture and to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work and the more complete endowment and support of land-grant colleges", approved June 29, 1935, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. (a) Thirty-nine percent of the sums appropriated for any fiscal year under section 3 shall be available for the purposes of section 1, including the administration and coordination of the research authorized thereunder.

"(b) Two percent of the sums appropriated for any fiscal year under section 3 shall be available for the administration of section 5 of this title.

"(c) The sums available for the purposes of section 1 shall be designated as the special research fund, Department of Agriculture, and no part of such special fund shall be used either for the prosecution of research heretofore instituted or for the prosecution of any new research project, except upon approval in writing by the Secretary. One-half of such special research fund shall be used by the Secretary for the establishment and maintenance of research laboratories and facilities in the major agricultural regions at places selected by him and for the prosecution, including administration, in accordance with section 1, of research at such laboratories."

SEC. 2. Effective at the beginning of the first fiscal year following the date of enactment of this act, section 5 (a) of title I of such act approved June 29, 1935, is amended by striking out the word "Sixty" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "Fifty-nine."

EMIGRATION OF FILIPINOS FROM THE UNITED STATES

The bill (H. R. 9991) to extend the time for applying for and receiving benefits under the act entitled "An act to provide means by which certain Filipinos can emigrate from the United States", approved July 10, 1935, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the bill go over.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I hope this bill may be passed. It is simply a measure to extend the time until December 31, 1937, when the Filipinos affected by the bill may have the opportunity to resume their citizenship.

Mr. McKELLAR. I withdraw the objection.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXAMINATION OF NUECES RIVER, TEX.

The bill (H. R. 11006) providing for the examination of the Nueces River and its tributaries in the State of Texas for flood control purposes was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

USE OF LAND IN FORT BRADY RESERVATION

The bill (H. R. 190) granting authority to the Secretary of War to license the use of a certain parcel of land situated in Fort Brady Reservation to Ira D. MacLachlan Post, No. 3, the American Legion, for 15 years, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMMUNITION STORAGE FACILITIES

The bill (H. R. 10849) to authorize an appropriation for improvement of ammunition storage facilities at Aliamanu, Territory of Hawaii, and Edgewood Arsenal, Md., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEIF ERICSON DAY

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 246) requesting the President to proclaim October 9, as Leif Ericson Day, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the word "October", to strike out "9 of each year" and to insert in lieu thereof "9, 1936", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is hereby authorized and requested to issue a proclamation designating October 9, 1936, as Leif Ericson Day and calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all Government buildings on said date and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day in schools and churches, or other suitable places, with appropriate ceremonies.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution requesting the President to proclaim October 9, 1936, as Leif Ericson Day."

THE MARINE BAND AT THE ARKANSAS CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4354) to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the Arkansas Centennial Celebration, at Little Rock, Ark., on June 2, 3, 4, and 5, 1936; the Texas Centennial, at Dallas, Tex., on June 6, 7, and 8, 1936; and the Forty-sixth National Confederate Reunion, at Shreveport, La., on June 9, 10, 11, and 12, 1936, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment of the committee was, in section 1, page 1, line 6, after the word "Arkansas", to strike out the words "on June 2, 3, 4, and 5, 1936; the Texas Centennial, at Dallas, Tex., on June 6, 7, and 8, 1936; and the Forty-sixth National Confederate Reunion, at Shreveport, La., on June 9, 10, 11, and 12, 1936" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "the Texas Centennial at Dallas, Tex., and the National Confederate Reunion at Shreveport, La., between the dates from June 2 to June 12, 1936, inclusive", so as to make the section read:

That the President is authorized to permit the band of the United States Marine Corps to attend and give concerts at the Arkansas Centennial Celebration, at Little Rock, Ark., the Texas Centennial at Dallas, Tex., and the National Confederate Reunion at Shreveport, La., between the dates from June 2, to June 12, 1936, inclusive.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I offered an amendment to the committee amendment, on line 6, page 2, to strike out "June 2" and to insert in lieu thereof "June 6", and to strike out "June 12" and to insert in lieu thereof "June 16."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment of the committee was, in section 2, on page 2, line 10, to strike out "$15,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$11,500", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. For the purpose of defraying the expenses of such band in attending and giving concerts at such celebrations and reunion there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $11,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this act: Provided, That in addition to transportation and Pullman accommodations the leaders and members of the Marine Band be allowed not to exceed $5 per day each for actual living expenses while on this duty, and that the payment of such expenses shall be in addition to the pay and allowances to which they would be entitled while serving at their permanent station.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the Arkansas Centennial Celebration, at Little Rock, Ark.; the Texas Centennial, at Dallas, Tex.; and the National Confederate Reunion, at Shreveport, La., between the dates from June 6 to June 16, 1936, inclusive."

PUNISHMENT OF RECALCITRANT WITNESSES

The bill (H. R. 8875) to clarify section 104 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title II, sec. 194) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HATCH subsequently said: I ask unanimous consent to recur to House bill 8875, Calendar No. 2139. I reported the bill for the committee, but since it was passed I have been informed that the chairman of the committee has an amendment he desires to offer to the bill. I therefore ask that the votes by which the bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed be reconsidered, and that the bill go over for the time being.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the votes by which the bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed will be reconsidered, and the bill will be passed over.

THE AIR CORPS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11920) to increase the efficiency of the Air Corps, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, on page 2, line 1, after the word "be", to insert the word "in"; on page 2, line 18, after the word "appoint", to insert the words "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate"; on page 3, line 7, after the words "grade, and", to strike out the word "that" and to insert the words "such temporary appointments may be vacated at any time upon the recommendation of the Secretary of War: Provided further, That"; on page 4, line 9, after the words "determined by the", to strike out the words "Secretary of War" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "President"; on line 11, after the word "relieved", to insert the words "from such commands", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to call to active duty, with their consent, for periods of not more than 5 years, such number of Army Air Corps Reserve officers as he may deem necessary, not to exceed 1,350.

SEC. 2. Upon the termination of such a period of active duty of not less than 3 years in duration, such Air Corps Reserve officers shall be paid a lump sum of $500, which sum shall be in addition to any pay and allowances which they may otherwise be entitled to receive.

SEC. 3. The sixth proviso of section 2, act of July 2, 1926 (44 Stat. L. 781), is hereby amended by striking out the words "Whenever used in this act a flying officer in time of peace is defined as one who has received an aeronautical rating as a pilot of service types of aircraft", and by substituting in lieu thereof the following: "A flying officer in time of peace is defined as one who has received an aeronautical rating as a pilot of service types of aircraft or one who has received an aeronautical rating as an aircraft observer: Provided, That in time of peace no one may be rated as an aircraft observer unless he has previously qualified as a pilot: Provided further, That any officer rated as an aircraft observer in time of war must subsequently qualify as a pilot before he can qualify as an observer in time of peace following such war."

SEC. 4. The President is authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to temporary rank in the grades of colonel, lieutenant colonel, and major, without vacating their permanent commissions, such numbers of officers of the Regular Army Air Corps as the Secretary of War, from time to time, may determine as necessary to meet the administrative, tactical, technical, and training needs of the Air Corps; the then resulting numbers in each grade, permanent and temporary, to be further increased by 5 percent to meet the additional needs of the War Department for Air Corps officers: Provided, That such temporary appointments shall be made in order of seniority of the appointees in each grade in accordance with their standing on the relative rank list of Air Corps officers in their permanent grade, and such temporary appointments may be vacated at any time upon the recommendation of the Secretary of War: Provided further, That when an officer holding a temporary appointment under the provisions of this section becomes entitled to permanent promotion his temporary appointment shall be vacated: Provided further, That all Air Corps officers temporarily advanced in grade take rank in the grade to which temporarily advanced after officers holding such grade through permanent appointment, and among themselves in the order in which they stand on the relative rank list of Air Corps officers in their permanent grade: Provided further, That Air Corps officers temporarily appointed under the provisions of this act shall be entitled to the pay, flying pay, and allowances pertaining to the grade to which temporarily appointed: And provided further, That no officer holding temporary rank under the provisions of this act shall be eligible to command outside his own corps except by seniority under his permanent commission.

SEC. 5. The President is hereby authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint to temporary rank from among the permanent colonels and lieutenant colonels of the Air Corps who are "flying officers" as defined herein, or as may hereafter be defined, a commanding general of the General Headquarters Air Force with the rank of major general, and such number of wing commanders with the rank of brigadier general as may be determined by the President. Officers temporarily appointed under the provisions of this section shall hold such temporary appointments until relieved from such commands by order of the President. Such temporary appointments shall not vacate the permanent commissions of the appointees nor create vacancies in the grades in which they are permanently commissioned: Provided, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to exclude the assignment to Air Corps tactical or other appropriate commands of qualified permanent general officers of the line who are "flying officers" as defined herein, or as may hereafter be defined.

SEC. 6. Such laws and parts of laws as may be inconsistent with the foregoing are hereby repealed.

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

GROS VENTRE INDIANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 245) authorizing distribution to the Gros Ventre Indians of the Fort Belknap Reservation, Mont., of the judgment rendered by the Court of Claims in their favor, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to withdraw from the Treasury and to distribute per capita, as provided herein, to the Gros Ventre Indians of the Fort Belknap Reservation, Mont., the sum arising from a judgment rendered in their favor by the Court of Claims in the case docketed as E-427, credited or to be credited to said Indians on the books of the Treasury under the act of March 13, 1924 (43 Stat. 21).

SEC. 2. That for the purpose of making the distribution herein authorized, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause a roll of said Indians to be prepared by a commission consisting of the Gros Ventre members of the Fort Belknap Community Council. In the preparation of said roll, those members of the Gros Ventre Tribe whose names appear on the allotment roll made pursuant to the act of March 3, 1921 (41 Stat. 1355), and who are alive on the date of approval of this resolution shall first be enrolled, to which number shall be added the names of all children of one-fourth or more Gros Ventre Indian blood born to all allotted Indians of the Fort Belknap Reservation, regardless of place of residence of such children or their parents: Provided, That all such children so enrolled shall be alive and in being on the date of approval of this resolution: Provided further, That there shall be added to and included in the roll herein authorized the names of George Gambler and Josephine Gambler White, two Gros Ventre Indians omitted from the Fort Belknap allotment roll due to absence from the reservation: Provided, however, That said George Gambler and Josephine Gambler White have not been enrolled with or participated in the benefits of any other tribe.

SEC. 3. When the roll herein provided for shall have been completed and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, he shall thereupon cause the per-capita share due each member of said Gros Ventre Tribe so enrolled to be credited to the individual Indian money account of such member for expenditure in accordance with the individual Indian money regulations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY IN BREMERTON, WASH.

The bill (H. R. 8884) for the relief of Mrs. Ollie Myers was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT TO EMERGENCY FARM MORTGAGE ACT OF 1933

The bill (S. 4546) to amend the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933 as amended, is further amended by adding after section 36 thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 36A. In addition to the authority granted to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by section 36 of this act, as amended, the corporation is authorized and empowered to make loans, as hereinafter provided, out of the funds available for loans under such section 36, as amended, to or for the benefit of counties, political subdivisions of States, political subdivisions of counties, and districts, duly organized under the laws of any State, in which the United States has acquired or shall hereafter acquire lands for purposes of watershed protection, timber production and conservation, protection of grazing areas, or preservation of wildlife. Such loans shall be made for the purpose of enabling any such county, political subdivision, or district (hereinafter referred to as the 'borrower') to refinance its outstanding indebtedness existing at the time the United States acquired or shall have acquired such land.

"Such loans shall be subject to the same terms and conditions as loans made under section 5 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act as amended; except that (1) the term of any such loans shall not exceed 40 years; (2) each such loan shall, in the opinion of the corporation, be reasonably and adequately secured, and, in respect to the type of security, shall be secured (a) by bonds, notes, or other obligations for the payment of which shall be pledged the full faith and credit and taxing power of the borrower or of such taxing authority as may be authorized pursuant to State law to levy assessments, taxes, or other charges for the repayment of said obligations, or (b) by bonds, notes, or other obligations which are a lien on real property situated within the boundaries of the borrower, which is taxable under existing laws, or shall be secured by both of such methods, and (c) by such other collateral as may be acceptable to the corporation; and (3) the borrower shall agree insofar as it may lawfully do so, that so long as any part of such loan shall remain unpaid the borrower will in each year apply to the repayment of such loan, or to the purchase or redemption of the obligations issued to evidence such loan, an amount equivalent to a proportionate part of the principal of the loan, taking into consideration the number of years through which the loan will mature and taking into consideration the intention to place on the taxpayers a burden as nearly uniform as practicable throughout the entire term of the loan, and that it shall at all times make provision for such reasonable reserves as may be approved by the corporation. No loan shall be made under this section until the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (A) shall have determined that by reason of the acquisition of said land by the Government the financial condition of the borrower has been sufficiently affected to warrant the making of such loan; (B) has satisfied itself as to the security supporting the outstanding bonds or other obligations of the applicant; and (C) in the case of a loan to reduce or refinance the outstanding indebtedness of an applicant, has been satisfied that an agreement has been entered into between the applicant and holders of its outstanding bonds or other obligations under which the applicant will be able to purchase or refund all or a major portion of such bonds or other obligations at a price determined by the corporation to be reasonable after taking into consideration the average market price of such bonds over the 6 months' period ending April 1, 1936, and under which a reduction will be brought about in the amount of the outstanding indebtedness of the applicant, or under which a reduction in its annual charges of principal and interest will be accomplished, resulting in benefit to the community and promoting its general welfare. Loans made under this section shall bear interest at a rate or rates to be fixed by the corporation.

"When a loan is authorized pursuant to the provisions of this section and it shall then or thereafter appear that repairs and necessary extensions or improvements to the properties of borrower are necessary or desirable for the further assurance of the ability of the borrower to repay such loan, the corporation may make an additional loan or loans to such borrower for such purposes out of the funds available for loans under such section 36, as amended.

"The proceeds of any loan applied for by a borrower under this section may be paid either to such borrower or to the holders or representatives of the holders of the bonds, notes, or other obligations to be reduced and refinanced in connection with such loan, and such loans may be made upon promissory notes collateraled by such bonds, notes, or other obligations, or through the purchase of securities issued or to be issued by such borrower. In the discretion of the corporation, the borrower may, if consistent with State law, be authorized to deliver to the holders of such original obligations, refunding bonds bearing the same rate of interest and issued on the same basis of the refunding bonds to be held by the corporation."

AMENDMENT OF PERMANENT APPROPRIATION REPEAL ACT, 1934

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4596) to amend section 21 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with an amendment, on page 2, line 1, to strike out section 2, as follows:

SEC. 2. The Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to refund to the Philippine Islands or Puerto Rico, as the case may be, the amount of any check, heretofore or hereafter issued by him on account of public-debt obligations of either of those governments, which has not been paid or presented for payment by the close of the fiscal year next following the fiscal year in which it was issued; but only upon the execution, by the government to which refund is made, of an agreement to indemnify the United States against any loss whatsoever.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, what is the purpose of the bill?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, in the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act for 1934 was contained a section which the bill under consideration seeks to repeal. Under the fiscal operations of the Philippine Islands and Puerto Rico provision is made for certain funds for the payment of their obligations. The provisions of the statute provide that if checks issued are not paid within a year the funds go back into the General Treasury. The purpose of the bill is to leave those funds with the Philippine and Puerto Rican governments so that the unpaid checks, or the funds back of them, will not become a part of the Federal funds.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, there is an amendment to strike out section 2.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the committee amendment has been agreed to.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 21 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934, be, and the same is hereby, amended by changing the period at the end thereof to a colon and inserting thereafter the following: "Provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to extend to any check heretofore or hereafter issued on account of public-debt obligations of the Philippine Islands or Puerto Rico."

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend section 21 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934."

AMENDMENT OF THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 2066, being the bill (S. 1636) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes. It will be recalled that I explained this bill to the Senate a short time ago, stating that the only purpose of the bill was to continue in effect the present law, which expires June 16 of this year, providing that the railroads should publish through rates. The only Senator who objected to it at that time, or stated that he wanted to amend the bill, was the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS]. He has given me his amendment and asked that I should offer it, and I see no objection to it. I am glad to join with the Senator in offering the amendment, which provides as follows:

At the proper place it is proposed to add the following language:

In fixing through rates and in determining what is desirable or necessary in the public interest, the Commission shall not take into consideration the necessity or desirability of diverting revenue from one railroad to another.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Montana to return to Calendar 2066?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeding to consider the bill (S. 1636) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate Commerce with amendments.

Mr. WHEELER. I offer an amendment which I thought had been adopted the other day. In reporting the bill there were some clerical errors. The amendment is offered in order to correct them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

Paragraph (3) of section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, is further amended by adding the following: "The elimination of any existing through route or joint rate, fare, charge, or classification without the consent of all carriers parties thereto or authorization by the Commission shall be deemed prima facie unreasonable and contrary to the public interest."

SEC. 2. Paragraph (4) of section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"In time of shortage of equipment, congestion of traffic, or other emergency declared by the Commission it may (either upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, at once, if it so orders without answer or other formal pleadings by the interested carrier or carriers, and with or without notice, hearing, or the making or filing of a report, according as the Commission may determine) establish temporarily such through routes as in its opinion are necessary or desirable in the public interest."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER. I submit an amendment at the request of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. After the amendment heretofore agreed to, it is proposed to add the following:

In fixing through rates, and in determining what is desirable or necessary in the public interest, the Commission shall not take into consideration the necessity or desirability of diverting revenue from one railroad to another.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REGULATION OF VESSELS OWNED IN PART BY ALIENS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1815) to require certain documents of vessels not wholly owned by citizens of the United States and navigated in the territorial waters of the United States, its Territories, or its possessions, to regulate vessels engaged in the fisheries, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in section 8, page 5, line 20, after the word "Government", to insert "subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Navy with respect to naval personnel", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 8. The Secretary of Commerce shall make such regulation as may be necessary to effect the proper enforcement of this act by collectors of customs and other officers of the Government subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Navy with respect to naval personnel, and may mitigate or remit any penalty provided for herein if in his judgment such action is justified.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 3, on page 4, line 13, after the figures "1918", it is proposed to insert "and sailing vessels owned, operated, and navigated by citizens of the United States", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That any vessel, not a vessel of the United States, engaging in the fisheries shall be subject to forfeiture: Provided, That vessels of less than 5 net tons wholly owned, operated, and navigated by citizens of the United States, and which are numbered in accordance with the act of June 7, 1918, and sailing vessels owned, operated, and navigated by citizens of the United States, shall be deemed vessels of the United States for the purposes of this act: Provided further, That no vessel of less than 5 net tons wholly owned by citizens of the United States shall be operated in the fisheries by a person not a citizen of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no vessel owned in whole or in part by any person who is not a citizen of the United States shall, under penalty of forfeiture, be operated or navigated on any waters within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, its Territories, or its possessions, unless such vessel is provided with and has on board a register, or other document of like import in lieu thereof, issued to it under and in accordance with the laws of a foreign country the government of which is recognized by the United States and is also provided with and has on board a descriptive list of the entire crew showing their rating, nationality, and residence, and a descriptive list of all others on board showing their nationality, residence, and occupation or business; also a manifest of all cargo on board: Provided, That the terms "person" and "citizen of the United States" as used in this act shall have the meaning assigned to them by sections 1 and 2 of the Shipping Act, 1916, as amended by the Merchant Marine Act of 1920.

SEC. 2. That any officer of the United States authorized to board vessels for the purpose of enforcing the revenue, navigation, and/or immigration laws of the United States, and/or any officer of the United States Navy, is hereby authorized and empowered to board any vessel within the territorial waters of the United States, its Territories, or its possessions, for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this act and to make such examination of the vessel, persons, and cargo on board, and all papers and/or documents relating or pertaining thereto which are required by this act, as may be necessary to carry out the purpose and intent thereof. If the master or person in charge or command of such vessel fails or refuses to deliver any list, manifest, or other document required by this act to be on board such vessels on demand of any officer herein authorized to examine the same, he shall be liable to a fine of not to exceed $200, for which fine the vessel shall be liable. If any person or persons obstruct or resist any authorized officer in the discharge of his duties under this act, or aid, abet, or assist in such obstruction or resistance, or if any such person or persons shall falsify any list, manifest, or other document required by this act to be on board such vessel, such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, on conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 or to imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or to both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court, and if any such person shall be an owner in whole or in part of such vessel, or an employee or agent of such owner, the vessel shall be liable for said fine: Provided, That any officer authorized by this act to enforce its provisions may arrest, or, in the case of attempted escape, may pursue and arrest the master or other person in command, who shall fail or refuse to deliver any list, manifest, or other document required by this act and any person or persons who obstruct or resist such officer in the performance of his duties, or shall aid, abet, or assist in such obstruction or resistance, or who shall falsify any such list, manifest, or other document: Provided further, That any person or persons so arrested shall be taken forthwith before the nearest commissioner of a district court of the United States who, if the evidence warrants such action, shall hold such person or persons to answer and stand trial before the court of the United States having jurisdiction of the offense: And provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed as repealing section 4336 of the Revised Statutes.

SEC. 3. That any vessel, not a vessel of the United States, engaging in the fisheries shall be subject to forfeiture: Provided, That vessels of less than 5 net tons wholly owned, operated, and navigated by citizens of the United States, and which are numbered in accordance with the act of June 7, 1918, and sailing vessels owned, operated, and navigated by citizens of the United States, shall be deemed vessels of the United States for the purposes of this act: Provided further, That no vessel of less than 5 net tons wholly owned by citizens of the United States shall be operated in the fisheries by a person not a citizen of the United States.

SEC. 4. That any vessel owned wholly or in part by a person not a citizen of the United States and engaged in fishing on the high seas or in foreign waters shall, on arriving within the territorial waters of the United States, its Territories, or its possessions, make formal entry at the nearest port of entry, and on leaving such port make formal clearance under the same conditions, regulations, and penalties as apply to vessels engaged in trade with foreign countries: Provided, That unless such vessel enters the United States from a foreign port, it shall not be required to pay tonnage dues or other fees not collectible from vessels of the United States under the same circumstances and conditions.

SEC. 5. That the provisions of this act shall be subject to the provisions of any existing treaty, convention, or agreement between the United States and any foreign government.

SEC. 6. That any vessel subject to forfeiture under any of the provisions of this act, or to liability for any other penalty prescribed herein, may be seized and proceeded against by way of libel in the district court of any district in which such vessel may be found.

SEC. 7. Nothing in this act shall be construed as repealing or limiting any existing law relative to the boarding of vessels.

SEC. 8. The Secretary of Commerce shall make such regulation as may be necessary to effect the proper enforcement of this act by collectors of customs and other officers of the Government, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Navy with respect to naval personnel, and may mitigate or remit any penalty provided for herein if in his judgment such action is justified.

SEC. 9. This act shall become effective from and after 6 months from the date of its passage.

OPERATION BY BLIND PERSONS OF STANDS IN FEDERAL BUILDINGS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4688) to authorize the operation of stands in Federal buildings by blind persons, to enlarge the economic opportunities of the blind, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Education and Labor, with an amendment in section 1, on page 1, line 6, after the words "self-supporting", to strike out "all Federal buildings having suitable locations for vending stands are hereby authorized to be made available for operation of such stands therein by blind persons licensed under the provisions of this act", and to insert, "blind persons licensed under the provisions of this act shall be authorized to operate vending stands in any Federal building where, in the discretion of the head of the department or agency in charge of the maintenance of the building, such vending stands may be properly and satisfactorily operated by blind persons"; so as to make the section read:

That for the purpose of providing blind persons with remunerative employment, enlarging the economic opportunities of the blind, and stimulating the blind to greater efforts in striving to make themselves self-supporting, blind persons licensed under the provisions of this act shall be authorized to operate vending stands in any Federal building where, in the discretion of the head of the department or agency in charge of the maintenance of the building, such vending stands may be properly and satisfactorily operated by blind persons.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, line 3, to strike out all of section 3, as follows:

SEC. 3. (a) Subject to such rules and regulations as the Commissioner of Education, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, may prescribe, the Office of Education is authorized—

(1) To purchase vending-stand equipment for use in Federal buildings. Such equipment shall be purchased on requisition of the custodian of the Federal building in which the stand is to be placed and shall thereafter remain in his custody, and be used for the purposes specified in this act; and

(2) To purchase vending-stand equipment for use in all other buildings where vending-stand concessions for blind persons have been obtained by the State licensing agencies designated by the Office of Education. Such equipment shall be purchased on requisition of such licensing agencies and loaned to such State licensing agencies under the conditions set forth in section 4 of this act.

(b) All stand equipment purchased under the provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall be made available, without charge, for the use of blind persons licensed under the provisions of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 1, after "Sec.", to strike out "4" and to insert "3"; in line 3, after the word "stands", to strike out "and desiring to secure vending-stand equipment"; and in line 16, to strike out "(3) To keep such stand equipment in other than Federal buildings in repair", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. (a) A State commission for the blind or other State agency desiring to be designated as the agency for licensing blind persons for the operation of vending stands as provided in this act shall, with the approval of the Governor of the State, make application to the Commisisoner of Education and agree—

(1) To cooperate with the Commissioner of Education and with the division of vocational rehabilitation of such State in training, placing, and supervising blind persons.

(2) To provide through loan, gift, or otherwise, for each blind person licensed to operate a stand, an adequate initial stock of suitable articles to be vended therefrom.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 18, to renumber section 5.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, to renumber section 6.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 13, to renumber section 7; in line 21, to strike out "(c) The term 'State commission for the blind' means a commission established under authority of the State and engaged primarily in work for the blind"; and in line 24, to strike out "(d)" and insert "(c)", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 6. As used in this Act—

(a) The term "United States" includes the several States, Territories, and possessions of the United States, and the District of Columbia.

(b) The term "blind person" means a person having not more than 10 per centum visual acuity in the better eye with correction.

Such blindness shall be certified by a duly licensed ophthalmologist.

(c) The term "State" means a State, Territory, possession, or the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was on page 7, line 1, to renumber section 8.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. WALSH subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the report of the Committee on Education and Labor accompanying House bill 4688.

There being no objection, the report (No. 2052) was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The Committee on Education and Labor, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4688) to authorize the operation of stands in Federal buildings by blind persons, to enlarge the economic opportunities of the blind, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon and recommend that the bill do pass with amendments.

The committee have reported H. R. 4688 in lieu of a similar measure (S. 2196), introduced by Mr. SHEPPARD, and which is pending before the committee.

This legislation would allow the setting up of stands by the blind in Federal buildings for the sale of newspapers, magazines, candy, tobacco products, etc., and provides that these stands be licensed by the Office of Education in the Department of the Interior, subject to the direction of the Commissioner of Education. The bill further provides that a survey be made of concession-stand opportunities for the blind in this country; second, that a survey be made throughout the United States of industries, with a view to obtaining information that will assist blind persons to obtain employment; third, that this data be made available to the public and especially to persons and organizations interested in helping the blind; and, fourth, that licenses be issued to blind persons, to be approved by the custodian of the building and the Commissioner of Education.

The Senate and House bills, as originally introduced, made mandatory rather than permissive the operation of stands by blind persons and excluded from the operation of such stands able-bodied persons and persons incapacitated by reasons other than blindness. These provisions were objected to by the Departments of the Treasury, Interior, and Labor, and upon the suggestion of the Secretary of the Interior, the committee have amended section 1 of the House bill, leaving "in the discretion of the head of the department or agency in charge of the maintenance of the building" whether such vending stands shall be operated by blind persons licensed under the act.

The committee has omitted section 3 of the House bill, which section authorized the Commissioner of Education, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to purchase vending-stand equipment for use in Federal buildings, and also the purchase by the Federal Government, rather than by the State, of stands and stand equipment for loan by the States to the blind operators of such stands not only in Federal but also in non-Federal buildings in such States. The Bureau of the Budget has objected to such purchases by the Federal Government, estimating the cost to be $750,000, and citing further to the Secretary of the Interior recent liberal provisions for Federal aid to the blind, namely:

"The Social Security Act of 1935 provides $3,000,000 annually for grants to the States for assistance to needy individuals who are blind. That act also provides $841,000 annually (in addition to existing annual appropriations of $1,097,000) for grants to States for vocational rehabilitation of physically disabled persons, including the blind.

The House Committee on Labor, in reporting (H. Rept. No. 1094) the bill H. R. 4688, stated in part:

"The committee held hearings on the accompanying bill, during which the committee had the benefit of listening to such representative leaders as Hon. Martin L. Sweeney, Member of Congress from Ohio; Hon. Smith W. Purdum, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General; Mr. S. P. Meadows, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor; Mr. Leonard A. Robinson, chairman of the Citizens' Welfare Sightless Committee of Cleveland; Mr. R. R. Irwin, executive director of the American Foundation for the Blind; Mr. Walter R. Handy, of the Lions International; Mr. Ralph H. Campbell, secretary of Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind; Mr. Arthur J. Lovell, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; Mr. Bert Piers, member of the committee on the blind of the Lions International.

"With rare exceptions, all those who appeared before the committee voiced their approval of this proposed legislation.

"The committee feels that this is the logical time for such legislation to be enacted into law.

"The Federal Government is spending billions of dollars to create employment opportunities for millions of persons, but not one blind person is benefited thereby. The blind cannot build bridges, buildings, and do other kinds of work now being authorized by the Public Works Administration. The blind, at the present time, receive very little benefit from the work being done by the Federal Bureau of Rehabilitation, not because this Federal agency does not want to help the blind, but rather because State commissions for the blind and other private and public agencies have been delegated the tasks of training and placing blind persons. The result has been that in some States some progress has been made by these agencies for the blind, while in other States little or no progress has been made. The fault, as can be plainly recognized, is the fact that there is no definite or practical national system or plan whereby placement work of this kind can be done. The Federal Division of Rehabilitation, together with the various State divisions of rehabilitation, can boast of having done splendid work in the training and placing of handicapped persons in the United States, despite the limited funds it has to work with. Very fine cooperation, harmony among the workers, and a keen understanding of the workers' problems account for the good work now being done by the Division of Rehabilitation.

"The committee believes that the speedy enactment of this measure into law would take care of a group of our people who are in distress and who are not being reached by any of the vast rehabilitation experiments which the Government is conducting."

The following letters from the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Labor, and the Acting Secretary of the Treasury indicate their views on this legislation:

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, April 23, 1935.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Chairman, Committee on Education and Labor,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I have received your letter of March 11 enclosing a copy of S. 2196, entitled "A bill to authorize the operation of stands in Federal buildings by blind persons, to enlarge the economic opportunities of the blind and for other purposes", and requesting a report thereon.

There are several objections to this bill. It makes mandatory rather than permissive the operation of stands by blind persons. It excludes from the operation of stands able-bodied persons and persons incapacitated by reasons other than blindness. I feel that unemployed able-bodied persons, who can perform more effective service than blind persons in certain cases, deserve consideration, since they cannot command the same public assistance and sympathy as the blind.

At the present time there are in operation 23 stands in buildings in the District of Columbia under the supervision of the National Park Service of this Department, where newspapers, magazines, candies, tobacco products, etc., are on sale. Nine of these stands are operated by the Welfare and Recreational Association of Public Buildings and Grounds, a non-profit-making corporation. The nine stands so operated employ three persons afflicted with infantile paralysis, one blind person, and 25 able-bodied persons. There are several lunch counters and soda bars operated by the association in addition to the stands mentioned, where able-bodied persons are employed because blind persons could not meet the requirements.

Fourteen stands are operated by wards of the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind. Attendants at these stands are either blind or partially blind.

In the light of the above statements, I believe the employment of blind persons at stands should not be made mandatory, and I recommend that S. 2196 should not receive favorable consideration by the Congress.

Sincerely yours,

T. A. WALTERS,
Acting Secretary of the Interior.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, May 2, 1936.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Chairman, Committee on Education and Labor,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I have received your letter of February 26 enclosing a copy of S. 2196, to authorize the operation of stands in Federal buildings by blind persons, to enlarge the economic opportunities of the blind, and for other purposes, together with suggested amendments thereto.

By a letter dated April 24, 1935, you were advised that the bill was objectionable in that it excludes from the operation of stands able-bodied persons and persons incapacitated by reasons other than blindness. There are a number of vending stands located in buildings under the jurisdiction of this Department where the employment of able-bodied persons is necessary because blind persons cannot meet the requirements. I feel that unemployed able-bodied persons who can perform more effective service than blind persons in certain cases deserve consideration, since they cannot command the same public assistance and sympathy as the blind.

It is recommended that the proposed amendments be further amended in the following manner:

Page 1, line 6, after the word "self-supporting", strike out the words "all Federal buildings having suitable locations for vending stands are hereby authorized to be made available for the operation of such stands therein by blind persons licensed under the provisions of this act", and insert the following words: "blind persons licensed under the provisions of this act shall be authorized to operate vending stands in any Federal building where, in the discretion of the head of the department or agency in charge of the maintenance of the building, such vending stands may be properly and satisfactorily operated by blind persons."

Page 3, section 4 (a), line 4, insert after the word "shall" and before the word "make", the words "with the approval of the Governor of the State."

As State agencies are limited to public agencies in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (4), section 2 (a), page 1, of the proposed amendments, it is recommended that section 7, on page 5 of S. 2196, be deleted.

If the amendments submitted with your letter are amended as indicated above, the Department would have no objection to the enactment of S. 2196.

However, I have submitted the proposed legislation, together with the amendments submitted with your letter and the amendments indicated by this Department, to the Bureau of the Budget for consideration and have been advised as follows:

"Your proposed reports recommend that the bills be amended to eliminate the mandatory requirement that all stands be awarded to the blind and leave to the discretion of the Department concerned the award of such stands as might be properly and satisfactorily operated by blind persons.

"While there would be no objection to the presentation of your proposed reports, those reports do not voice a further objection to the bills that to me is of such a character as to make it necessary to advise you that the bills, even if amended as you suggest, would still be considered as not in accord with the program of the President. I refer to the provision for purchase by the Federal Government, rather than by the State (at an estimated cost of $750,000), of stands and stand equipment for loan by the State to the blind operators of such stands not only in Federal but also in non-Federal buildings in that State. The Social Security Act of 1935 provides $3,000,000 annually for grants to the States for assistance to needy individuals who are blind. That act also provides $841,000 annually (in addition to existing annual appropriations of $1,097,000) for grants to States for vocational rehabilitation of physically disabled persons, including the blind.

"In view of these recent liberal provisions for Federal aid to the blind, and of their underlying policy of direct State management of operations under the funds provided, I think that the proposed legislation and, in particular, the proposal for purchase by the Federal Government of stands at a cost of $750,000, should be considered in conflict with the program of the President."

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, April 6, 1936.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Chairman, Committee on Education and Labor,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR WALSH: I have your letter of March 31 requesting my views with respect to a bill now pending before your committee, H. R. 4688, entitled "An act to authorize the operation of stands in Federal buildings by blind persons, to enlarge the economic opportunities of the blind, and for other purposes."

This bill proposes to extend employment opportunities for blind people by making Federal buildings throughout the country available for the operation of vending stands. The administration of the act is entrusted to the Office of Education in the Department of the Interior. Under the plan which the bill contemplates the Commissioner of Education would be authorized to designate State agencies to issue licenses to blind persons permitting them to operate such stands. In granting applications for such licenses preference is to be given to blind persons who need employment and who have resided for at least 1 year in the State where the stand is to be located. It is further provided that the Office of Education may purchase vending-stand equipment for use in Federal buildings and similar equipment for use in other buildings where licenses have been granted to blind persons by State licensing agencies.

I am informed that the proponents of this legislation have discussed the plan with various officers in the executive branch of the Government and at their request the bill has been amended so as to provide that every license granted for the operation of a vending stand in a Federal building shall be subject to the approval of the Federal agency in charge of that building.

It would seem desirable also to have a further amendment requiring that the establishment of vending stands in buildings in the District of Columbia require the consent of both the National Park Service and the head of the department occupying the building, for it would obviously be inappropriate to have stands of this character in some of the buildings here.

Inasmuch as the vocational opportunities for blind persons are very limited I am of the opinion that the enactment of a bill of this sort will serve a useful purpose. It has been demonstrated that blind persons can be trained to carry on business of this kind successfully.

There is one feature of the bill, however, which conflicts with the budgetary program of the President. I refer to the provision for purchase by the Federal Government rather than by the States (an estimated cost of $750,000) of stands and stand equipment for loan by the State to the private operators of such stands, not only in Federal but also in non-Federal buildings in the States.

Sincerely yours,

FRANCES PERKINS.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, April 27, 1936.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Chairman, Committee on Education and Labor,
United States Senate.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Reference is made to your letter of March 31, 1936, requesting the views of this Department on H. R. 4688, an act to authorize the operation of stands in Federal buildings by blind persons, to enlarge the economic opportunities of the blind, and for other purposes.

This Department is in complete sympathy with efforts to better the condition of blind persons. It is felt, however, that it is definitely unfair to restrict the economic opportunities provided by this bill to those afflicted with this one handicap. As an administrative practice, both blind and otherwise physically handicapped persons are now given employment in Federal buildings under the Department's control. There would seem to be no justification for depriving the latter class of the opportunities now afforded them and for replacing them with blind persons—as would be the likely consequence of enactment of the above bill.

For the reason above stated, this Department is definitely opposed to the enactment of H. R. 4688 in its present form.

Furthermore, I am advised by the Acting Director of the Budget that in view of recent liberal provisions for Federal aid to the blind, and of their underlying policy of direct State management of operations under the funds provided, the proposed legislation, particularly the proposal for the purchase and loan of the stands by the Federal Government, is not in accord with the program of the President, even if the objection made by this Department were obviated.

Very truly yours,

WAYNE C. TAYLOR,
Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

PROTECTION OF TRADE AND COMMERCE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3822) to amend the act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies", approved July 2, 1890, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies", approved July 2, 1890, is amended by striking out the period at the end of the first sentence thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a colon and the following: "Provided, That nothing herein contained shall render illegal contracts or agreements prescribing minimum prices or other conditions for the resale of a commodity which bears, or the label or container of which bears, the trade mark, brand, or name of the producer of such commodity and which is in free and open competition with commodities of the same general class produced by others, when contracts or agreements of that description are lawful as applied to intrastate transactions, under any statute, law, or public policy now or hereafter in effect in any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia in which such resale is made, or to which the commodity is to be transported following such resale, and the making of such contracts or agreements shall not be an unfair method of competition under section 5, as amended and supplemented, of the act entitled 'An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes', approved September 26, 1914."

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of that bill.

Mr. TYDINGS. In reply to the Senator from Tennessee let me say by way of brief explanation that this bill was reported unanimously from the Committee on the Judiciary after hearings were held. It grows out of the fact that 12 States—New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Oregon, Washington, Wisconsin, Iowa, Maryland, Ohio, Virginia, Rhode Island, and California—have all adopted acts within their States regulating loss-leader selling and the making of contracts between a manufacturer and a distributor of an article. This has been done in an effort to make trade equal and fair and to eliminate discrimination. After hearings, the committee reported the bill unanimously and favorably. It simply backs up the action of those States which have already enacted valid laws which have been passed on by the courts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES G. JOHNSON

The bill (H. R. 2479) for the relief of Charles G. Johnson, State treasurer of the State of California, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Charles G. Johnson, State treasurer of the State of California, the sum of $17,500. Such sum represents the value of 10 coupons from 3½-percent Treasury notes, series C–1930–32, nos. 3512B, 3513C, 3514D, 4361A, 4362B, 4363C, 4364D, 4365E, 4366F, and 4367H, of the $100,000 denomination, which coupons were payable on December 15, 1929, and were lost or destroyed in the office of the State treasurer of California: Provided, That none of said coupons shall have been presented to the Treasury for payment and that Charles G. Johnson shall first file in the Treasury Department a bond in the penal sum of double the amount of the sum payable pursuant to the provisions of this act, in such form and with such corporate surety as may be acceptable to the Secretary of the Treasury, to indemnify and save harmless the United States from any loss on account of such lost or destroyed coupons.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Calendar No. 1925, being Senate bill 2609, an identical bill to the one just passed, will be indefinitely postponed.

COAT OF ARMS OF THE SWISS CONFEDERATION

The bill (S. 4667) to prohibit the commercial use of the coat of arms of the Swiss Confederation pursuant to the obligation of the Government of the United States, under article 28 of the Red Cross Convention signed at Geneva, July 27, 1929, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be unlawful for any person, partnership, incorporated or unincorporated company, or association within the jurisdiction of the United States to use, whether as a trade-mark, commercial label, or portion thereof, or as an advertisement or insignia for any business or organization or for any trade or commercial purpose, the coat of arms of the Swiss Confederation, consisting of an upright white cross with equal arms and lines on a red ground, or any simulation thereof: Provided, That no person, corporation, or association that actually used or whose assignors actually used a design or insignia identical with or similar to that described herein for any lawful purpose for 10 years next preceding the effective date of this act shall be deemed forbidden to continue the use thereof for the same purpose.

SEC. 2. Any person who willfully violates the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be liable to a fine of not exceeding $500 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding 1 year, or both.

THREE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF SETTLEMENT OF DELAWARE RIVER VALLEY

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 499) authorizing and requesting the President to extend to the Government of Sweden and individuals an invitation to join the Government and people of the United States in the observance of the three hundredth anniversary of the first permanent settlement in the Delaware River Valley, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRIBUTION OF OFFICERS OF COAST GUARD

The bill (S. 4654) to amend an act entitled "An act to distribute the commissioned line and engineer officers of the Coast Guard in grades, and for other purposes", approved January 12, 1923, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act entitled "An act to distribute the commissioned line and engineer officers of the Coast Guard in grades, and for other purposes", approved January 12, 1923 (42 Stat. 1130), is hereby amended by striking out the first proviso in that section and inserting the following proviso in lieu thereof: "Provided, That any officer who is now serving or shall hereafter serve as commandant in the Coast Guard shall, when retired, be retired with the rank of commandant and with the pay of a rear admiral (upper half) of the Navy on the retired list and that an officer whose term of service as commandant has expired may be appointed a captain and shall be an additional number in that grade, but, if not so appointed, he shall take the place on the lineal list in the grade that he would have attained had he not served as commandant and be an additional number in such grade;".

LOAD LINES OF COASTWISE VESSELS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11915) to amend the Coastwise Load Line Act of 1935, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments on page 2, line 1, after the word "hour", to strike out "engaged. In establishing load water lines on passenger vessels due consideration shall be given to, and differentials shall be made for, the age and condition of the vessel, its subdivision and efficacy thereof, and the stability of the vessel in a damaged condition", and insert "engaged:", and on the same page at the beginning of line 14, to strike out "vessels" and insert "tugs, barges, and self-propelled barges", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of of the Coastwise Load Line Act, 1935, approved August 27, 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. I, title 46, sec. 88a), be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. The Secretary of Commerce is hereby authorized and directed in respect of the vessels defined above to establish by regulations from time to time the load water lines and marks thereof indicating the maximum depth to which such vessels may safely be loaded and in establishing such load lines due consideration shall be given to, and differentials made for, the various types and character of vessels and the trades in which they are engaged: Provided, That the load-line provisions of this act shall apply to the Great Lakes and that no load line shall be established or marked on any vessel which load line gives a lesser freeboard and less buoyancy than the load line established by the International Treaty on Load Lines of 1930, and that the regulations established under this proviso shall have the force of law: Provided further, That in applying the load lines to vessels on the Great Lakes and to tugs, barges, and self-propelled barges engaged in special services on inter-island voyages and on coastwise voyages from port to port in the continental United States the Secretary of Commerce is vested with discretion to vary the load-line marks from those established by said treaty when in his opinion the changes made by him will not be above the actual line of safety."

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York explain the bill?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this bill is one of three or four which follow on the calendar in immediate succession having to do with safety at sea. This particular bill has to do with the modification of the Load Line Act so that if a vessel has grown old it may be made sure that the load line is not too great. For example, the Mohawk was sunk by reason of the fact that the compartments did not come high enough. It is desired that there may be authority in the Department to insure the proper placing of the load line.

Mr. President, with regard to the first amendment the committee desires to modify the amendment which has been stated. The amendment has been considered by the committee. It is proposed to modify it so as to leave in the bill the language largely as it appeared originally:

engaged. In establishing load water lines on passenger vessels due consideration shall be given to, and differentials shall be made for, the age and condition of the vessel, its subdivision and efficacy thereof, and the probable stability of the vessel if damaged.

That is the way the committee would like to have the amendment as modified read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York to the first amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, at the beginning of line 14, it is proposed to strike out "vessel" and insert "tugs, barges, and self-propelled barges."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I have had an inquiry as to whether the language in lines 14 to 16, page 2, referring to "vessels engaged in special services on inter-island voyages," should not be eliminated.

Mr. COPELAND. That is exactly the purpose of this amendment, so that not only on the Great Lakes but also as to the Hawaiian Islands there shall be no load line marked where the vessels carry no passengers.

Mr. VANDENBERG. So the amendment which has been adopted corrects the situation to which I have referred.

Mr. COPELAND. It does.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SAFETY AT SEA IN NEIGHBORHOOD OF ICE AND DERELICTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4648) to promote safety at sea in the neighborhood of ice and derelicts, and for other purposes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, what is the purpose of this bill?

Mr. COPELAND. It is to carry out the provisions of the safety-at-sea treaty where we maintain an iceberg patrol on the Atlantic and yet have no authority of law to carry on the patrol.

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.

INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENTS ON ICE PATROL AND DERELICT DESTRUCTION

SECTION 1. The President is authorized to conclude agreements with interested maritime nations (a) to maintain in the North Atlantic Ocean a service of ice patrol, of study and observation of ice and current conditions, and of assistance to vessels and their crews requiring aid within the limits of the patrol; (b) to maintain a service of study and observation of ice and current conditions in such waters as may affect the set and drift of ice in the North Atlantic Ocean; and (c) to undertake all practicable steps to insure the destruction or removal of derelicts in the northern part of the Atlantic Ocean, east of the line drawn from Cape Sable to a point in latitude 34° north, longitude 70° west, if this destruction or removal is necessary. The President is further authorized to include in such agreements a provision for payment to the United States by the countries concerned of their proportionate share of the expense for maintenance of the services named, or for the United States to contribute its proportionate share should it be agreed that another country was to maintain the patrol.

PATROL SERVICES

SEC. 2. (a) Unless the agreements made in accordance with section 1 provide otherwise, an ice patrol shall be maintained during the whole of the ice season in guarding the southeastern, southern, and southwestern limits of the region of the icebergs in the vicinity of the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, and the patrol shall inform trans-Atlantic and other passing vessels by radio and such other means as are available of the ice conditions and the extent of the dangerous region. A service of study of ice and current conditions, a service of affording assistance to vessels and crews requiring aid, and a service of removing and destroying derelicts shall be maintained during the ice season and any or all of such services may be maintained during the remainder of the year as may be advisable.

(b) The ice-patrol vessels shall warn vessels known to be approaching a dangerous area and recommend safe routes.

(c) The ice-patrol vessels shall record the name, together with all the facts in the case, of any ship which is observed or known to be on other than a regular recognized or advertised ship route crossing the North Atlantic Ocean, or to have crossed the fishing banks of Newfoundland north of latitude 43° north during the fishing season, or, when proceeding to and from ports of North America, to have passed through regions known or believed to be endangered by ice. The name of any such ship and all pertinent information relating to the incident shall be reported to the government of the country to which the ship belongs, if the government of that country so requests.

(d) The Commandant of the Coast Guard, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall administer the services provided for in this section and shall assign thereto such vessels, material, and personnel of the Coast Guard as may be necessary. Any executive department or agency may, upon the request of the Secretary of the Treasury, detail personnel, loan or contribute material or equipment, or otherwise assist in the carrying out of the services named.

(e) The Commandant of the Coast Guard shall publish each year a report of the activities of the services provided for in this section, a copy of which shall be furnished to each interested foreign government and to each agency assisting in the work.

NORTH ATLANTIC ROUTES

SEC. 3. (a) The owner or operating agent of any passenger vessel of the United States crossing the North Atlantic Ocean shall give public notice, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, of the regular routes which he proposes such vessel will follow and of any changes made in a route, and shall require the vessel to follow the published route as far as circumstances will permit. Any passenger vessel of the United States crossing the North Atlantic Ocean shall follow, as far as circumstances will permit, the recognized ship routes; it shall avoid, as far as practicable, the fishing banks of Nowfoundland, north of latitude 43° north during the fishing season; and shall, as far as circumstances will permit, pass outside of the regions reported or known to be endangered by ice.

(b) If the owner, or operating agent, of any such passenger vessel fails to comply with this section, he shall for each offense be liable to a fine not exceeding $100.

SEC. 4. (a) The master of every vessel of the United States, when ice is reported on or near his course, shall proceed at a moderate speed or alter his course so as to go well clear of the danger zone.

(b) If the master of any such ship fails to comply with this section, he shall for each offense be liable to a fine not exceeding $500.

PUBLICATION

SEC. 5. All rules and regulations, except such as have no general applicability and legal effect or are effective only against Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof, issued, prescribed, or promulgated pursuant to authority contained herein, shall be forwarded forthwith to the Division of the Federal Register in The National Archives for filing and publishing in the Federal Register.

WIRE AND RADIO COMMUNICATIONS AT SEA

The bill (S. 4619) to amend the Communications Act of 1934, approved June 19, 1934, for the purpose of promoting safety of life and property through the use of wire and radio communications, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended by inserting after the words "for the purpose of the national defense" a comma and the words "for the purpose of promoting safety of life and property through the use of wire and radio communication."

SEC. 2. Section 3 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof four new subsections to read as follows:

"(w) (1) 'Ship' or 'vessel' includes every description of water craft or other artificial contrivance, except aircraft, used or capable of being used as a means of transportation on water, whether or not she is actually afloat.

"(2) A ship shall be considered a passenger ship if it carries or is authorized to carry more than 12 passengers.

"(3) A cargo ship means any ship not a passenger ship.

"(4) A passenger is any person carried on board a ship, except the officers and crew actually employed to man and operate the ship. Persons on board a ship shall not be considered passengers when they are carried either because of the obligation laid upon the master to carry shipwrecked, distressed, or other persons or by reason of any circumstance over which neither the master, the owner, nor the charterer (if any) has control.

"(x) 'Auto-alarm' on a foreign ship subject to the provisions of part II of title III of this act means an automatic alarm receiver which has been approved by the country to which the ship belongs: Provided, That the United States and the country in question are both parties to the same treaty or agreement in regard to the requirements for such apparatus. 'Auto-alarm' on a ship of the United States subject to the provisions of part II of title III of this act means an automatic alarm receiver approved by the Commission and which complies with at least the requirements of the General Radio Regulations annexed to the International Telecommunication Convention in force. Nothing in this act or in any other provision of law shall be construed to permit the recognition of an auto-alarm as complying with part II of title III of this act, on a foreign ship subject to such part, whose country of origin is not a party to a treaty or agreement with the United States in regard to such apparatus.

"(y) (1) For the purpose of part II of title III, a 'qualified operator' or 'operator' on a foreign ship means a person holding a certificate as such complying with the provisions of the General Radio Regulations annexed to the International Telecommunication Convention in force, or complying with an agreement or treaty between the United States and the country to which the ship belongs.

"(2) For the purpose of part II of title III, a 'qualified operator' or 'operator' on a ship of the United States means a person holding a radio operator's license of the proper class, as prescribed and issued by the Commission.

"(z) 'Harbor' or 'port' means any place to which ships may resort to load or unload passengers or goods, or to obtain fuel, water, or supplies. This term shall apply to such places whether proclaimed public or not and whether natural or artificial.

"SEC. 3. Subsection (k) of section 4 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended by substituting a colon for the period at the end of the subsection and adding the following: 'Provided further, That each year, at the beginning of the session of the Congress, the Commission shall report to the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States whether or not any new wire or radio communication legislation is required better to insure safety of life and property. If any new legislation is necessary the Commission shall prepare and submit it to the Congress.'"

SEC. 4. Section 4 of the Communications Act of 1934 is amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection to read as follows:

"(o) For the purpose of obtaining maximum effectiveness from the use of radio and wire communications in connection with safety of life and property, the Commission shall investigate and study all phases of the problem and the best methods of obtaining the cooperation and coordination of these systems. The Commission shall, by proper rules and regulations or by conditions incorporated in the authorization or license, prescribe the conditions and procedure to be observed, in harmony with the law, in communications involving safety of life and property."

SEC. 5. Paragraph (m) of section 303 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(m) (1) Have authority to suspend the license of any operator upon proof sufficient to satisfy the Commission that the licensee—

"(A) has violated any provision of any act or treaty binding on the United States, which the Commission is authorized to administer, or any regulation made by the Commission under any such act or treaty; or

"(B) has failed to carry out a lawful order of the master of the ship on which he is employed or of the person in command of the aircraft on which he is employed; or

"(C) has willfully damaged or permitted radio apparatus or installations to be damaged; or

"(D) has transmitted superfluous radio communications or signals or communications containing profane or obscene words, language, or meaning, or has knowingly transmitted—

"(1) false or deceptive signals or communications, or

"(2) a call signal or letter which has not been assigned by proper authority to the station he is operating; or

"(E) has willfully or maliciously interfered with any other radio communications or signals; or

"(F) has obtained or attempted to obtain, or has assisted another to obtain or attempt to obtain an operator's license by fraudulent means.

"(2) No order of suspension of any operator's license shall take effect until 15 days' notice in writing thereof, stating the cause for the proposed suspension, has been given to the operator licensee who may make written application to the Commission at any time within said 15 days for a hearing upon such order. The notice to the operator licensee shall not be effective until actually received by him, and from that time he shall have 15 days in which to mail the said application. In the event that physical conditions prevent mailing of the application at the expiration of the 15-day period, the application shall then be mailed as soon as possible thereafter, accompanied by a satisfactory explanation of the delay. Upon receipt by the Commission of such application for hearing, said order of suspension shall be held in abeyance until the conclusion of the hearing which shall be conducted under such rules as the Commission may prescribe. Upon the conclusion of said hearing the Commission may affirm, modify, or revoke said order of suspension."

SEC. 6. Subsection (n) 303 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(n) Have authority to inspect all radio installations associated with stations required to be licensed by any act or which are subject to the provisions of any act, or treaty binding on the United States, to ascertain whether in construction, installation, and operation they conform to the requirements of the rules and regulations of the Commission, the provisions of any act, the terms of any treaty binding on the United States, and the conditions of the license or other document under which they are constructed, installed, or operated."

SEC. 7. Section 321 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended by striking out the first sentence of subsection (a).

SEC. 8. Section 322 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 322. Every land station open to general public service between the coast and vessels or aircraft at sea shall, within the scope of its normal operations, be bound to exchange radio communications or signals with any ship or aircraft station at sea and each station on shipboard or aircraft at sea shall, within the scope of its normal operations, be bound to exchange radio communications or signals with any other station on shipboard or aircraft at sea or with any land station open to general public service between the coast and vessels or aircraft at sea: Provided, That such exchange of radio communication shall be without distinction as to radio systems or instruments adopted by each station."

SEC. 9. Section 329 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 329. The Commission is authorized to designate any officer or employee of any other department of the Government on duty in any Territory or possession of the United States to render therein such service in connection with the administration of this Act as the Commission may prescribe and also to designate any officer or employee of any other department of the Government to render such services at any place within the United States in connection with the administration of title III of this Act as may be necessary: Provided, That such designation shall be approved by the head of the department in which such person is employed."

SEC. 10. (a) The heading of title III of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"TITLE III—PROVISIONS RELATING TO RADIO

"PART I—SPECIAL PROVISIONS"

(b) Such title III is further amended by adding at the end thereof a new part as follows:

"PART II—RADIO EQUIPMENT AND RADIO OPERATORS ON BOARD SHIP

"PURPOSE

"SEC. 351. It is the purpose of this part to promote safety of life and property at sea through the use of radio.

"SHIP RADIO INSTALLATIONS AND OPERATIONS

"SEC. 352. Except as provided in section 353 hereof, it shall be unlawful—

"(a) For any ship of the United States, other than a cargo ship of less than 1,600 gross tons, to be navigated in the open sea or on the Great Lakes outside of a harbor or port, or for any ship of the United States or any foreign country, other than a cargo ship of less than 1,600 gross tons, to leave or attempt to leave any harbor or port of the United States for a voyage in the open sea or on the Great Lakes, unless such ship is equipped with an efficient radio installation in operating condition, in charge of and operated by a qualified operator or operators, adequately installed and protected so as to insure proper operation, and so as not to endanger the ship and radio installation, as hereinafter provided:

"(b) For any passenger ship of the United States of 5,000 gross tons, or over, to be navigated outside of a harbor or port, or for any such ship of the United States or any foreign country to leave or attempt to leave any harbor or port of the United States for a voyage in the open sea or on the Great Lakes, unless such ship is equipped with an efficient radio direction finder apparatus (radio compass) properly adjusted in operating condition as hereinafter provided, which apparatus, in the case of a ship of the United States, has been approved by the Commission.

"(c) In special cases, where the Commission considers that the route or conditions of the voyage make it reasonable or necessary, the above requirements may be applied to a vessel engaged on inland voyages.

"EXCEPTIONS

"SEC. 353. (a) The provisions of this part shall not apply to—

"(1) A ship of war.

"(2) A ship of the United States belonging to and operated by the Government, except a ship of the United States Shipping Board Bureau, the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation, the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service, or the Panama Railroad Co.

"(b) The Commission may, if it considers that the route or the conditions of the voyage are such as to render a radio installation unreasonable or unnecessary for the purposes of this part, exempt from the provisions of this part any ship, or any class of ships, which falls within any of the following descriptions:

"(1) Passenger ships which in the course of their voyage do not go more than 20 nautical miles from the nearest land or more than 200 nautical miles between two consecutive ports;

"(2) Cargo ships which in the course of their voyage do not go more than 150 nautical miles from the nearest land;

"(3) Barges in tow;

"(4) Sailing ships.

"(c) The Commission may exempt any foreign ship from any of the technical requirements prescribed in section 355 if such ship has on board a certificate, issued by the country to which it belongs, certifying that the radio installation complies with the radio safety rules or laws of that country: Provided, however, That the radio installation is in such operating condition that, in the opinion of the Commission, the ship can proceed to sea without danger to the passengers and crew and will be able to respond to radio calls of distress from another ship or coast station.

"OPERATORS, WATCHES, AUTO-ALARM

"SEC. 354. (a) Each cargo ship required by this part to be fitted with a radio installation and which is not fitted with an auto-alarm, and each passenger ship required by this part to be fitted with a radio installation, shall, for safety purposes, carry at least two qualified operators, and, where the hours out of port exceed 48, at least three qualified operators shall be provided.

"(b) A cargo ship, required by this part to be fitted with a radio installation, which is fitted with an auto-alarm in accordance with this title, shall, for safety purposes, carry at least one qualified operator.

"(c) Each ship of the United States required by this part to be fitted with a radio installation shall, while being navigated outside a harbor or port, keep a continuous watch by means of qualified operators: Provided, however, That in lieu thereof on a cargo ship fitted with an auto-alarm, a watch of at least 8 hours per day, in the aggregate, shall be maintained by means of a qualified operator.

"(d) The Commission shall, for safety purposes, have authority to prescribe the particular hours of watch on a ship of the United States required by this part to be fitted with a radio installation.

"(e) On all ships of the United States fitted with an auto-alarm, said apparatus shall be in operation at all times while the ship is being navigated outside of a harbor or port when the operator is not on watch.

"TECHNICAL REQUIREMENTS

"SEC. 355. The radio installation and the radio direction-finding apparatus required by section 352 of this part shall comply with the following requirements:

"(a) The radio installation shall comprise a main and an emergency or reserve installation: Provided, however, That on a cargo ship, if the main installation complies also with all the requirements of an emergency or reserve installation, the emergency or reserve installation may be omitted.

"(b) The ship's radio operating room and the emergency or reserve installation shall be placed in the upper part of the ship in a position of the greatest possible safety and as high as practicable above the deepest load water line.

"(c) The main and emergency or reserve installations shall be capable of transmitting and receiving on the frequencies and types of waves designated by the Commission for the purpose of distress and safety of navigation.

"(d) The main installation shall have a normal transmitting and receiving range of at least 200 nautical miles, that is to say, it must be capable of transmitting and receiving clearly perceptible signals from ship to ship over a range of at least 200 nautical miles by day under normal conditions and circumstances.

"(e) Sufficient power shall be available at all times to operate the main radio installation efficiently under normal conditions over the range specified in subsection (d) of this section.

"(f) The emergency or reserve installation shall include a source of energy independent of the propelling power of the ship and of any other electrical system and shall be capable of being put into operation rapidly and of working for at least 6 continuous hours. For the emergency or reserve installation, the normal range as defined in subsection (d) of this section shall be at least 100 nautical miles.

"(g) There shall be provided between the bridge of the ship and the radio room, and between the bridge and the location of the direction finding apparatus, when the direction finding apparatus is not located on the bridge, an efficient means of communication.

"(h) The direction finding apparatus shall be efficient and capable of receiving clearly perceptible radio signals and of taking bearings from which the true bearing and direction may be determined. It shall be capable of receiving signals on the frequencies prescribed for distress, direction finding, and radio beacons by the General Radio Regulations annexed to the International Telecommunication Convention in force and in new installations after the effective date of this part, such other frequencies as the Commission may for safety purposes designate.

"LIFEBOATS

"SEC. 356. Every motor lifeboat, required by treaty to which the United States is a party, by statute, or by regulation made in conformity with a treaty or statute, to be carried on a ship, shall be fitted with an efficient radio installation under such rules and regulations as the Commission may find necessary to promote the safety of life.

"APPROVAL OF INSTALLATIONS

"SEC. 357 (a). Insofar as is necessary to carry out the purposes and requirements of this part, the Commission shall have authority, for any ship subject to this part—

"(1) To approve the details as to the location and manner of installations of the equipment required by this part or of equipment necessitated by reason of the purposes and requirements of this part.

"(2) To approve installations, apparatus, and spare parts necessary to comply with the purposes and requirements of this part.

"(3) To prescribe such additional equipment as may be determined to be necessary to supplement that specified herein, for the proper functioning of the radio installation installed in accordance with this part or for the proper conduct of radio communication in time of emergency or distress.

"(b) The Commission shall have authority to issue, or provide for the issuance of, radio certificates to ships of the United States in such form as may be necessary or desirable to facilitate the entry and departure of such ships into and from foreign ports.

"TRANSMISSION OF INFORMATION

"SEC. 358. (a) The master of every ship of the United States equipped with radio transmitting apparatus, on meeting with dangerous ice, a dangerous derelict, a tropical storm, or any other direct danger to navigation, shall cause to be transmitted all pertinent information relating thereto, to ships in the vicinity and to the appropriate authorities, in accordance with rules and regulations issued by the Commission, which authorities of the United States shall, when they consider it necessary, promptly bring the information received by them to the knowledge of those concerned and foreign authorities interested.

"(b) No charge shall be made by any ship or station in the mobile service of the United States for the transmission, receipt, or relay of the information designated in subsection (a) originating on a ship of the United States or of a foreign country.

"(c) The transmission by any ship of the United States, made in compliance with subsection (a), to any station which imposes a charge for the reception, relay, or forwarding of the required information, shall be free of cost to the ship concerned and any expense incurred by the ship for transmission, relay, or forwarding of the information may be certified to the Commission for reimbursement out of moneys appropriated to the Commission for that purpose.

"(d) No charge shall be made by any ship or station in the mobile service of the United States for the transmission of distress messages and replies thereto in connection with situations involving the safety of life and property at sea.

"(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any station or carrier may render free service in connection with situations involving the safety of life and property, including hydrographic reports, weather reports, reports regarding aids to navigation and medical assistance to injured or sick persons on ships and aircraft at sea. All free service permitted by this subsection shall be subject to such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe, which rules may limit such free service to the extent which the Commission finds desirable in the public interest.

"AUTHORITY OF MASTER

"SEC. 359. The radio installation, the operators, the regulation of their watches, the transmission and receipt of messages, and the radio service of the ship except as they may be regulated by law or international agreement, or by rules and regulations made in pursuance thereof, shall in the case of a ship of the United States be under the supreme control of the master.

"FORFEITURES

"SEC. 360. The following forfeitures shall apply to this part, in addition to the penalties and forfeitures provided by title V of this act:

"(a) Any ship that leaves or attempts to leave any harbor or port of the United States in violation of the provisions of this part, or the rules and regulations of the Commission made in pursuance thereof, or any ship of the United States that is navigated outside of any harbor or port in violation of any of the provisions of this part, or the rules and regulations of the Commission made in pursuance thereof, shall forfeit to the United States the sum of $500, recoverable by way of suit or libel. Each such departure or attempted departure, and each day during which such navigation occurs, shall constitute a separate offense.

"(b) Every willful failure on the part of the master of a ship of the United States to enforce or to comply with the provisions of this act or the rules and regulations of the Commission as to equipment, operators, watches, or radio service shall cause him to forfeit to the United States the sum of $100."

SEC. 11. Paragraph (a) of section 402 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended by inserting after the words "or for modifications of an existing radio station license" a comma and the words "or suspending a radio operator's license."

SEC. 12. Subsection (b) of section 402 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph to read as follows:

"(3) By any radio operator whose license has been suspended by the Commission."

SEC. 13. Paragraph (c) of section 402 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended by inserting after the words in the last sentence "upon the application" the words "or order".

SEC. 14. Section 504 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"PROVISIONS RELATING TO FORFEITURES

"SEC. 504. (a) The forfeitures provided for in this act shall be payable into the Treasury of the United States, and shall be recoverable in a civil suit in the name of the United States, brought in the district where the person or carrier has its principal operating office, or in any district through which the line or system of the carrier runs: Provided, That in the case of forfeiture by a ship, said forfeiture may also be recoverable by way of libel in any district in which such ship shall arrive or depart. Such forfeitures shall be in addition to any other general or specific penalties herein provided. It shall be the duty of the various district attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, to prosecute for the recovery of forfeitures under this act. The costs and expenses of such prosecutions shall be paid from the appropriation for the expenses of the courts of the United States.

"(b) The forfeitures imposed by title III, part II, of this act shall be subject to remission or mitigation by the Commission, upon application therefor, under such regulations and methods of ascertaining the facts as may seem to it advisable, and, if suit has been instituted, the Attorney General, upon request of the Commission, shall direct the discontinuance of any prosecution to recover such forfeitures: Provided, however, That no forfeiture shall be remitted or mitigated after determination by a court of competent jurisdiction."

SEC. 15. Section 602 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection to read as follows:

"(e) The act entitled 'An act to require apparatus and operators for radio communication on certain ocean steamers', approved June 24, 1910, as amended, is repealed as of the effective date of title III, part II."

SEC. 16. This act shall take effect 1 year after the date of enactment.

SEC. 17. The Communications Act of 1934 is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"PUBLICATION

"SEC. 610. All rules and regulations, except such as have no general applicability and legal effect or are effective only against Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof, issued, prescribed, or promulgated pursuant to authority contained herein, shall be forwarded forthwith to the Division of the Federal Register in The National Archives for filing and publishing in the Federal Register."

SHIPOWNERS' LIABILITY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4655) relative to limitation of shipowners' liability, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4283 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 183; Supp. I, title 46, sec. 183), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4283. (a) The liability of the owner of any vessel, whether American or foreign, for any embezzlement, loss, or destruction by any person of any property, goods, or merchandise shipped or put on board of such vessel, or for any loss, damage, or injury by collision, or for any act, matter, or thing, loss, damage, or forfeiture, done, occasioned, or incurred, without the privity or knowledge of such owner or owners, shall not, except in the cases provided for in subsection (b) of this section, exceed the amount or value of the interest of such owner in such vessel, and her freight then pending.

"(b) In the case of any seagoing vessel, if the amount of the owner's liability as limited under subsection (a) is insufficient to pay all losses in full, and the portion of such amount applicable to the payment of losses in respect of loss of life or bodily injury is less than $60 per ton of such vessel's tonnage, such portion shall be increased to an amount equal to $60 per ton, to be available only for the payment of losses in respect of loss of life or bodily injury. If such portion so increased is insufficient to pay such losses in full, they shall be paid therefrom in proportion to their respective amounts.

"(c) For the purposes of this section the tonnage of a seagoing steam or motor vessel shall be her gross tonnage without deduction on account of engine room, and the tonnage of a seagoing sailing vessel shall be her registered tonnage: Provided, That there shall not be included in such tonnage any space occupied by seamen or apprentices and appropriated to their use.

"(d) The owner of any such seagoing vessel shall be liable in respect of loss of life or bodily injury arising on distinct occasions to the same extent as if no other loss of life or bodily injury had arisen.

"(e) In respect of loss of life or bodily injury the privity or knowledge of the master of a seagoing vessel or of the superintendent or managing agent of the owner thereof, at or prior to the commencement of each voyage, shall be deemed conclusively the privity or knowledge of the owner of such vessel.

"(f) As used in subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e) of this section and in section 4283A, the term 'seagoing vessel' shall not include pleasure yachts, tugs, towboats, towing vessels, tank vessels, fishing vessels or their tenders, self-propelled lighters, nondescript self-propelled vessels, canal boats, scows, car floats, barges, lighters, or nondescript non-self-propelled vessels, even though the same may be seagoing vessels within the meaning of such term as used in section 4289 of this chapter, as amended."

SEC. 2. Chapter 6 of title 46 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting after section 4283A the following new section:

"SEC. 4283B. STIPULATIONS LIMITING LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE INVALID.—It shall be unlawful for the manager, agent, master, or owner of any vessel transporting passengers between ports of the United States or between any such port and a foreign port to insert in any rule, regulation, contract, or agreement any provision or limitation (1) purporting, in the event of loss of life or bodily injury arising from the negligence or fault of such owner or his servants, to relieve such owner, master, or agent from liability, or from liability beyond any stipulated amount, for such loss or injury; or (2) purporting in such event to lessen, weaken, or avoid the right of any claimant to a trial by court of competent jurisdiction on the question of liability for such loss or injury, or the measure of damages therefor. All such provisions or limitations contained in any such rule, regulation, contract, or agreement are hereby declared to be against public policy and shall be null and void and of no effect."

SEC. 3. Section 4285 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 185) is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4285. The vessel owner, within 6 months after a claimant shall have given to or filed with such owner written notice of claim, may petition a district court of the United States of competent jurisdiction for limitation of liability within the provisions of this chapter, as amended, and the owner (a) shall deposit with the court, for the benefit of claimants, a sum equal to the amount or value of the interest of such owner in the vessel and freight, or approved security therefor, and in addition such sums, or approved security therefor, as the court may from time to time fix as necessary to carry out the provisions of section 4283, as amended, or (b) at his option shall transfer, for the benefit of claimants, to a trustee to be appointed by the court his interest in the vessel and freight, together with such sums, or approved security therefor, as the court may from time to time fix as necessary to carry out the provisions of section 4283, as amended. Upon compliance with the requirements of this section all claims and proceedings against the owner with respect to the matter in question shall cease."

SEC. 4. Section 4289 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 188), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4289. Except as otherwise specifically provided therein, the provisions of the nine preceding sections and of section 18 of the act entitled 'An act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine and encourage the American foreign carrying trade and for other purposes', approved June 26, 1884 (23 Stat. 57; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 189), shall apply to all seagoing vessels, and also to all vessels used on lakes or rivers or in inland navigation, including canal boats, barges, and lighters."

SEC. 5. Section 2 of the act entitled "An act relative to limitation of shipowners' liability", approved August 29, 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. I, sec. 183a), is hereby repealed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, let us have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this bill proposes to amend the Owners' Liability Act which was passed last year. That act places a definite responsibility upon the owner of the vessel in case of loss of life to the extent, as I recall, of $75 or $80 a ton. However, some of the smaller operators, and immoral ones, have printed on the back of the ticket in fine type that in case of death the loss shall be limited to $200 or something like that. The bill is for the protection of the American people.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN NATIONAL INSTITUTE AT PARIS, FRANCE

The bill (S. 2550) to incorporate the American National Institute (Prix de Paris), at Paris, France, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

duties, and salaries of the officers, committees, and agents of the corporation.

The said corporation shall have its principal office in Washington, in the District of Columbia; that no official of the United States shall be eligible to serve as director of the said corporation. When any director shall become an official of the United States he shall cease by virtue of this act to be a director of the corporation hereby authorized. Under no circumstance shall the United States be liable for any obligation incurred by this corporation.

SEC. 5. That said corporation may send annually a report to the Secretary of State, who shall communicate to Congress such portion thereof as he may deem of national interest and importance.

SEC. 6. That said corporation or board of regents may send each year to the Library of Congress, subject to the approval of the Joint Committee on the Library of the two Houses of Congress, or such place as may be decided upon, such works of the students of the institute as may be agreed upon between the jurors of the American National Institute and the board of regents as suitable for preservation and exhibition.

SEC. 7. That all gifts and bequests of money to the institute, unless otherwise directed by the donor, shall be invested in United States bonds, so far as may be consistent with the conditions of such gifts and bequests.

SEC. 8. That any scholarship, donated or bequeathed, shall be applied to that branch of education specified by the donor. A 3 years' scholarship, a supplementary scholarship for a year's study, enabling our laureate students to continue their studies in other art centers of Europe.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 9483) to extend the provisions of the Forest Exchange Act, as amended, to certain lands, so that they may become part of the Umatilla and Whitman National Forests, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of the bill. I should like to know from the Senators from the State in which the forest reserves are located whether they are satisfied to have an extension of the Forest Exchange Act to those reserves. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. The clerk will state the next business on the calendar.

AMOUNTS DUE ON DELINQUENT HOMESTEAD ENTRIES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3869) to authorize payment to the Indians of the Fort Peck Reservation of the amounts due on certain delinquent homestead entries, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated an amount equal to the amount of the unpaid balance of principal and interest which the Secretary of the Interior may find to be on homestead and other entries on opened lands of the Cheyenne River, Colville, Fort Berthold, Fort Totten, Fort Peck, Pine Ridge, Rosebud, Shoshone, and Standing Rock Reservations, and the Chippewa lands in Minnesota opened in accordance with the Act of January 14, 1889 (25 Stat. L. 642), on the date of the enactment of this Act, less an amount equal to the amount of payments made on such homestead entries after the enactment of this Act and before the appropriation herein authorized has been made. Such an amount when appropriated shall be placed to the credit of the Indian tribes of such reservations in the Treasury of the United States, and shall be available upon the recommendation of the Indian tribe or tribes concerned for making permanent improvements on lands of the Indians, including the development of irrigation and the granting of aid to individual Indians in establishing permanent homes, and for the purchase of lands on said reservations from individual Indians or from white owners, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, and under such regulations as he may prescribe. Title to any lands so purchased shall be taken in the name of the United States in trust for the respective Indian tribes and such lands shall not be allotted in severalty.

SEC. 2. The provisions of this Act shall in no way affect the liability of entrymen on such opened lands in the said Indian reservations to complete payments on their entries. Any payments made by said homesteaders after the appropriation authorized by this Act has been made shall be covered into the general fund of the Treasury of the United States. If any entry shall be relinquished or canceled on which the United States shall have advanced payments to the Indians of the reservation involved, said payments shall be reimbursed to the United States out of any funds on deposit in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the said Indians.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have had a very brief conversation with the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY]. I have had some knowledge of the Fort Peck Reservation and of the large sums of money which have been expended there by the Government of the United States. I am not sufficiently familiar, however, with this particular angle of the relations between the Government and the reservation. I stated to the Senator, therefore, that, while I believed that this proposed legislation was not fair to the Government, yet I would not object to it, with the understanding that I would enter a motion during the day to reconsider, and then obtain further information, with a view to having the bill disposed of at an early date.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Montana where the reservations are located which are referred to in the bill?

Mr. MURRAY. The bill applies to various Indian reservations located in the Western States. A list of them is set forth in the report of the committee and in the report from the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. POPE. Is it the purpose to include all reservations in the West which are in a similar situation?

Mr. MURRAY. Yes; the bill covers all the Indian reservations of the West where a similar situation exists.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize payment of the amounts due on delinquent homestead entries on certain Indian reservations."

GENERAL PULASKI'S MEMORIAL DAY

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 187) authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11 of each year General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 1, line 6, after the word "October", to strike out "11 of each year" and insert "11, 1936", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized and directed to issue a proclamation calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all governmental buildings on October 11, 1936, and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day in schools and churches or other suitable places, with appropriate ceremonies in commemoration of the death of Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the joint resolution?

Mr. VAN NUYS. Mr. President, the joint resolution as originally introduced authorized the President to proclaim October 11 of each year General Pulaski's Memorial Day, that being the anniversary of General Pulaski's birth. The committee reported an amendment proposing to strike out the words "of each year", and inserting "1936." The President signed a similar joint resolution last year for the year 1935, and similar measures along the line of the bill as proposed to be amended have been signed for several years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1936, General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski."

ANNIVERSARY OF BATTLE OF ANTIETAM—COINAGE OF 50-CENT PIECES

The bill (S. 4394) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam, was announced as next in order.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I move that House bill 12168, which is now on the calendar and which is identical with the Senate bill, be substituted for the Senate bill and be considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 12168) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency, on page 1, line 6, after the word "not", to strike out "less than 25" and insert "to exceed 50", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam there shall be coined at a mint of the United States to be designated by the Director of the Mint not to exceed 50,000 silver 50-cent pieces of standard size, weight, and composition and of a special appropriate single design to be fixed by the Director of the Mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, but the United States shall not be subject to the expense of making the necessary dies and other preparations for this coinage.

SEC. 2. The coins herein authorized shall bear the date 1937, irrespective of the year in which they are minted or issued, shall be legal tender in any payment to the amount of their face value, and shall be issued only upon the request of the Washington County Historical Society of Hagerstown, Md., upon payment by it of the par value of such coins, but not less than 25,000 such coins shall be issued to it at any one time and no such coins shall be issued after the expiration of 1 year after the date of enactment of this act. Such coins may be disposed of at par or at a premium by such Washington County Historical Society of Hagerstown, Md., and the net proceeds shall be used by it in defraying the expenses incidental and appropriate to the commemoration of such event.

SEC. 3. All laws now in force relating to the subsidiary silver coins of the United States and the coining or striking of the same, regulating and guarding the process of coinage, providing for the purchase of material, and for the transportation, distribution, and redemption of coins, for the prevention of debasement or counterfeiting, for the security of the coins, or for any other purposes, whether such laws are penal or otherwise, shall, so far as applicable, apply to the coinage herein authorized.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read the third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection Senate bill 4394 will be indefinitely postponed.

SAN FRANCISCO-OAKLAND BAY BRIDGE—COINAGE OF 50-CENT PIECES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4464) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in celebration of the opening of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency, with an amendment, on page 2, section 2, at the beginning of line 9, to strike out "five" and insert "twenty-five", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in celebration of the opening of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge there shall be coined at a mint of the United States to be designated by the Director of the Mint not to exceed 200,000 silver 50-cent pieces of standard size, weight, and composition, and of a special appropriate single design to be fixed by the Director of the Mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, but the United States shall not be subject to the expense of making the necessary dies and other preparations for this coinage.

SEC. 2. The coins herein authorized shall bear the date 1936, irrespective of the year in which they are minted or issued, shall be legal tender in any payment to the amount of their face value, and shall be issued only upon the request of the San Francisco Clearing House Association, upon payment by it of the par value of such coins, but not less than 25,000 such coins shall be issued to it at any one time and no such coins shall be issued after the expiration of 1 year after the date of enactment of this act. Such coins may be disposed of at par or at a premium by such association and the net proceeds shall be used by it in defraying the expenses incidental and appropriate to the celebration of such event.

SEC. 3. All laws now in force relating to the subsidiary silver coins of the United States and the coining or striking of the same, regulating and guarding the process of coinage, providing for the purchase of material, and for the transportation, distribution, and redemption of coins, for the prevention of debasement or counterfeiting, for the security of the coins, or for any other purposes, whether such laws are penal or otherwise, shall, so far as applicable, apply to the coinage herein authorized.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FOUNDING OF YORK COUNTY, MAINE—COINAGE OF 50-CENT PIECES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4608) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of York County, Maine, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency, with an amendment, in section 2, page 2, line 9, after the word "than", to strike out "five" and insert "twenty-five", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of York County, Maine, there shall be coined at a mint of the United States to be designated by the Director of the Mint not to exceed 30,000 silver 50-cent pieces of standard size, weight, and composition and of special appropriate single design to be fixed by the Director of the Mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, but the United States shall not be subject to the expense of making the necessary dies and other preparations for this coinage.

SEC. 2. The coins herein authorized shall bear the date 1936, irrespective of the year in which they are minted or issued, shall be legal tender in any payment to the amount of their face value, and shall be issued only upon the request of the Committee for the Commemoration of the Founding of York County upon payment by it of the par value of such coins, but not less than 25,000 such coins shall be issued to it at any one time and no such coins shall be issued after the expiration of 1 year after the date of enactment of this act. Such coins may be disposed of at par or at a premium by such committee, and the net proceeds shall be used by it in defraying the expenses incidental and appropriate to the commemoration of such event.

SEC. 3. All laws now in force relating to the subsidiary silver coins of the United States and the coining or striking of the same, regulating and guarding the process of coinage, providing for the purchase of material, and for the transportation, distribution, and redemption of coins, for the prevention of debasement or counterfeiting, for the security of the coins, or for any other purposes, whether such laws are penal or otherwise, shall, so far as applicable, apply to the coinage herein authorized.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FOUNDING OF ALBANY, N. Y.—COINAGE OF 50-CENT PIECES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7690) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the city of Albany, N. Y., which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That in commemoration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the city of Albany, N. Y., there shall be coined at a mint of the United States to be designated by the Director of the Mint not to exceed 25,000 silver 50-cent pieces of standard size, weight, and composition and of a special appropriate single design to be fixed by the Director of the Mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, but the United States shall not be subject to the expense of making the necessary dies and other preparations for this coinage.

SEC. 2. The coins herein authorized shall bear the date 1936, irrespective of the year in which they are minted or issued, shall be legal tender in any payment to the amount of their face value, and shall be issued only upon the request of a committee of not less than three persons duly authorized by the mayor of the city of Albany, N. Y., upon payment by it of the par value of such coins, but not less than 25,000 such coins shall be issued to it at any one time and no such coins shall be issued after the expiration of 1 year after the date of enactment of this act. Such coins may be disposed of at par or at a premium by such committee, and the net proceeds shall be used by it in defraying the expenses incidental and appropriate to the commemoration of such event.

SEC. 3. BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 11688) providing for a change in the design of the 50-cent pieces authorized to be coined in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the admission of the State of Arkansas into the Union was announced as next in order.

Mrs. CARAWAY. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

EXAMINATION AND SURVEY FOR DEEP WATER CHANNEL, LOUISIANA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4538) providing for an examination and survey for a deep-water channel from New Iberia, parish of Iberia, La., to the Gulf of Mexico, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment on page 1, after line 7, to insert "the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors"; so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination and survey to be made for a deep-water channel from New Iberia, parish of Iberia, La., to the Gulf of Mexico so as to meet the demands of present and prospective commerce, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from New York why this and a number of other measures for surveys were not included in the omnibus bill which was recently passed and which provided for I do not know how many hundreds of such surveys?

Mr. OVERTON. I may say to the Senator that the surveys in the bill referred to by him related to flood-control projects. This proposal has no relation whatever to flood control.

Mr. KING. To what is it related?

Mr. OVERTON. The bill provides for a survey in order to ascertain whether or not a deep-water channel from New Iberia, La., to the Gulf of Mexico would be economically feasible.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, this bill has relationship to navigation and commerce but not to flood control.

Mr. OVERTON. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEPORTATION OF ALIEN CRIMINALS

Mr. COOLIDGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate recur to Order of Business 1210, being Senate bill 2969, relative to the deportation of alien criminals, and so forth.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator that he wait until the call of the calendar shall have been concluded.

Mr. COOLIDGE. Very well.

BOUNDARIES OF HOT SPRINGS NATIONAL PARK, ARK.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9183) to provide for the extension of the boundaries of the Hot Springs National Park in the State of Arkansas, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment, at the end of the bill to add a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the boundaries of the Hot Springs National Park in the State of Arkansas be, and the same are hereby, extended to include the following land, to wit: Lot 11, block 101; lot 5, block 185; lot 6, block 186; lots 5, 6, and 7, block 187; and lots 1, 2, 3, 6, and 15, block 188, United States Hot Springs Reservation, as surveyed, mapped, and plotted by the United States Hot Springs Commission, and any of such lands when acquired by the Secretary of the Interior on behalf of the United States shall be and remain a part of the Hot Springs National Park, subject to all laws and regulations applicable thereto: Provided, That the lands hereinabove described may be acquired within funds already appropriated and at a cost not to exceed $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

OMAHA-COUNCIL BLUFFS MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4037) to amend the act relating to the Omaha-Council Bluffs Missouri River Bridge Board of Trustees, approved June 10, 1930, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 3, section 2, line 7, after the words "limits of", to insert "either or"; and in line 21, after the word "thereof", to insert "Any other provisions of this act or of section 3 of such act of 1930, to the contrary notwithstanding, said Commission may create a fund from all or any part of the surplus earnings of any bridge owned and operated by it, in excess of the amounts required or pledged for operation, maintenance, interest, and amortization and apply same toward the payment of bonds held by the United States and outstanding against the bridge constructed under the provisions of section 4 of such act of 1930", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Omaha-Council Bluffs Missouri River Bridge Board of Trustees, created by section 3 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of certain bridges and to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of other bridges over the navigable waters of the United States", approved June 10, 1930, shall henceforth be known and designated as the Omaha-Council Bluffs Bridge Commission, and each of its members shall be known and designated as a commissioner. The Commission may issue bonds payable from and secured by bridge revenues for the purpose of carrying out the powers vested in said Commission by this act and section 3 of such act of 1930. The Commission may enter into an agreement with any bank or corporation as trustee having the power to make such agreement, setting forth the duties of the Commission in respect of the construction, maintenance, operation, repair, and insurance of any bridge or bridges, the collection of tolls, the conservation and application of all funds, the safeguarding of moneys on hand or on deposit, and the rights and remedies of said trustee and the holders of bonds, as is customary in trust agreements respecting bonds of corporations.

SEC. 2. Any bridge constructed or to be constructed or owned and operated by said Commission shall be deemed to be an instrumentality for interstate commerce, the Postal Service, and military and other governmental purposes, and in the public interest, so that each bridge may be financed upon most advantageous terms and freed of tolls as expeditiously as possible, but in no case shall the amortization period exceed 20 years. Such bridge properties, including any bonds issued in connection therewith, real estate, easements, rights and privileges, and the income derived therefrom shall be exempt from Federal, State, municipal, and local taxation as are the publicly owned toll bridges constructed and operated by the several States, their agencies, instrumentalities, and political subdivisions. Said Commission may purchase and operate any existing bridge over the Missouri River which (including approaches) abuts upon or enters into the corporate limits of either or both the cities of Omaha, Nebr., and Council Bluffs, Iowa, and to pay the cost of any such bridge so purchased the Commission may, either separately or in conjunction with the financing of any other bridge, issue bonds as provided in this act and section 3 of such act of 1930: Provided, however, That said Commission shall operate each of the bridges under its control and charge and collect such rates of tolls for transit over same as will not reflect upon or impair the earnings of any other bridge to such an extent as to adversely affect any outstanding bonds which the Commission may have theretofore issued for account of such other bridge, and the construction of no competing bridge shall hereafter be authorized, the operation of which will adversely affect such outstanding bonds unless provision is otherwise made for the payment thereof. Any other provisions of this act or of section 3 of such act of 1930, to the contrary notwithstanding, said Commission may create a fund from all or any part of the surplus earnings of any bridge owned and operated by it, in excess of the amounts required or pledged for operation, maintenance, interest, and amortization and apply same toward the payment of bonds held by the United States and outstanding against the bridge constructed under the provisions of section 4 of such act of 1930.

(b) The Commission shall exercise the same powers, duties, and privileges, insofar as applicable, with respect to any bridge purchased under the provisions of this section as in the case of the bridge authorized to be constructed under section 3 of such act of 1930.

SEC. 3. The times for commencing and completing the construction of the bridge authorized to be built by section 3 of such act of 1930, as extended, are hereby further extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from June 10, 1936.

SEC. 4. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ARTHUR LEE DASHER

The bill (S. 4491) for the relief of Arthur Lee Dasher, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to summon Arthur Lee Dasher, late captain, Field Artillery, Regular Army of the United States, before a retiring board for the purpose of hearing his case and to inquire into all facts touching upon the nature of his disabilities, to determine and report the disabilities which, in its judgment, have produced his incapacity and whether such disabilities were incurred during his active service in the Army and were in line of duty. That if the findings of such board are in the affirmative, the President is further authorized, in his discretion, to nominate and appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the said Arthur Lee Dasher as a captain, Field Artillery, Regular Army of the United States, and to place him immediately thereafter upon the retired list of the Army with the same privileges and retired pay as are now or may hereafter be provided by law or regulations for the officers of the Regular Army: Provided, That the said Arthur Lee Dasher shall not be entitled to any back pay or allowance by reason of the passage of this act.

ADMINISTRATION OF UNITED STATES SOLDIERS' HOME

The bill (S. 4652) to provide for the administration of the United States Soldiers' Home was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, the bill merely provides that not more than five retired officers at the Soldiers' Home in Washington may be paid a small amount additional to their retired pay, the amount to be taken out of the revenues of the home. It involves no charge upon the Government.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That not to exceed five retired officers of the Regular Army may be assigned to active duty at the United States Soldiers' Home, who while so serving, and notwithstanding any other provision of law, shall be entitled to the pay and allowances of officers of the same rank and length of service on the active list of the Army: Provided, That the difference between active-duty pay and allowances and retired pay of such officers shall be paid from funds appropriated for the maintenance and operation of the Soldiers' Home.

AIR RESERVE TRAINING CORPS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11969) to promote national defense by organizing the Air Reserve Training Corps.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, at the request of the House Military Affairs Committee this bill was drafted by the War Department in order that legislation organizing an Air Reserve Training Corps would be strictly in line with the Department point of view. The bill authorizes and directs the Secretary of War to organize an Air Reserve Training Corps and to establish such rules and regulations for its operation as he may deem necessary and proper.

The War Department is of the opinion that this measure, if enacted, will encourage interest in aviation matters among the junior element of our population. The measure in no way prescribes compulsory military training.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is the expected cost of the proposal?

Mr. SHEPPARD. About $62,000 per year.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to organize the Air Reserve Training Corps, and to establish such rules and regulations as he shall deem fit and proper for carrying out the purposes and objects of this act.

SEC. 2. That all male citizens of the United States between the ages of 17 years and 24 years, of sound physical condition, good character, and with a minimum education equivalent to at least a full high-school course, shall, after agreeing to serve in the Air Corps of the Army of the United States in the event of national emergency, be eligible to be listed as candidates of said Air Reserve Training Corps, and shall be entitled to receive such emblem or designation to wear upon the clothing as the Secretary of War may prescribe while receiving such course of technical instruction and flying training as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of War is authorized to use all proper means and agencies for the encouragement of said corps, by detailing either Regular Army Air Corps officers or Air Corps Reserve officers called to extended active duty, to inspect the instruction and training of said candidates in such private flying schools, colleges, and universities, and centers of air instruction and training as may be selected by the Secretary of War for that purpose, under such regulations as he shall prescribe.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of War is further authorized to encourage the development of said corps by permitting the use of such Army air fields from time to time as may not conflict with the work of the Air Corps of the Army of the United States and further by permitting the use in ground instruction only of airplanes, aircraft generally, and equipment, belonging to the Air Corps of the Army of the United States, if and when, in the judgment of the Secretary of War, such use is wise and proper in promoting the technical training of said corps.

SEC. 5. That upon the completion of such course of training as shall have been prescribed by the Secretary of War and upon the satisfactory passage of final examination and tests as may be prescribed for candidates of said Air Reserve Training Corps, the Secretary of War shall issue certificates of appointment as members in the Air Reserve Training Corps, and said members shall then be entitled to wear at pleasure such insignia and/or other designations and decorations upon the clothing as the Secretary of War shall prescribe. These members of the Air Reserve Training Corps shall be kept listed as to their addresses, business occupations, and other pertinent facts, so that the same may be available on shortest notice for service in the national defense in the event of a national emergency.

SEC. 6. That the Secretary of War is authorized to give preferment for appointment as flying cadets (heavier-than-air) and for detail to the Regular Army Air Corps Training Center for flying instruction of the most promising and desirable members in the Air Reserve Training Corps: Provided, That they also meet the mental, moral, physical, and educational qualifications prescribed by the Secretary of War for the appointment of flying cadets of the Air Corps, Army of the United States. The limitations on the appointment of cadets under this act will be only such as the limitation of vacancies under existing laws shall dictate.

SEC. 7. Such laws or parts of laws as may be inconsistent with the foregoing are repealed.

APPLICATION OF STATE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAWS

The bill (S. 4671) to amend the act approved February 1, 1928, concerning action on account of death or personal injury within places under exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act concerning actions on account of death or personal injury within places under exclusive jurisdiction of the United States", approved February 1, 1928 (45 Stat. 54; U. S. Code of Laws, title 16, sec. 457), is amended to read as follows:

"In the case of the death of any person by the neglect or wrongful act of another within a national park or other place subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, within the exterior boundaries of any State, such right of action shall exist as though the place were under the jurisdiction of the State within whose exterior boundaries such place may be; and in any action brought to recover on account of injuries sustained in any such place the rights of the parties shall be governed by the laws of the State within the exterior boundaries of which it may be: Provided, however, That in a State having a workmen's compensation act, such act shall apply with respect to an injury or death sustained in any such place as though the place were under the jurisdiction of the State, irrespective of whether such injury or death is due to the neglect or wrongful act of another."

STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

The bill (S. 3700) for the relief of the State of Massachusetts was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Governor of the State of Massachusetts, or his duly authorized agent, the sum of $233,885.82, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, being the costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred by such State for interest and premium paid for coin in payment of such interest on bonds issued for money borrowed and expended at the request of the President of the United States during the Civil War in protecting the harbors and fortifying the coast. The accounting officers of the Treasury having found that said expenditures were so incurred and paid by the State; and which the Court of Claims in its report to Congress under the act approved July 16, 1916, as set forth in House Document 369, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session, also found had been so incurred and paid.

SURVEY OF COLORADO RIVER, TEX.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4632) providing for a survey of the Colorado River, Tex., above the county line between Coke and Runnels Counties, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 4, to strike out the word "survey" and insert the words "preliminary examination", and on page 2, line 1, after the numerals "1917", to insert "the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of the Colorado River, Tex., above the county line between Coke and Runnels Counties, with a view to the control of floods in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill providing for a preliminary examination of the Colorado River, Tex., above the county line between Coke and Runnels Counties."

COMPENSATION OF DIRECTOR OF FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

The bill (H. R. 11616) to fix the compensation of the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, effective on the first day of the first month next following the approval of this act, the compensation of the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice shall be $10,000 per annum.

SALE OF SURPLUS WAR DEPARTMENT REAL PROPERTY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4565) to authorize the sale under the provisions of the act of March 12, 1926 (Public, No. 45), of surplus War Department real property, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was in section 1 on page 2, to strike out lines 1 to 9, as follows: "Name of reservation: Fort Scammel, Maine; Fort Gorgas, Maine; Calf Island, including Little Calf Island, Mass.; Greater Brewster Island, Mass.; Port Newark Army Supply Base, N. J.; Norfolk Quartermaster Depot, Va.; Stewart Avenue Military Reservation, Atlanta, Ga.; Camp Furlong, N. Mex.; Fort Sill (portion consisting of 2,400 acres), Okla.; Fort Ward, Wash.; Boca Grande Military Reservation, Fla.", and to insert in lieu thereof the following: "Name of reservation with approximate amount of land involved in each instance: Fort Scammel, Maine, 12 acres; Fort Gorgas, Maine, 1.5 acres; Calf Island, including Little Calf Island, Mass., 18.05 acres; Greater Brewster Island, Mass., 21.7 acres; Norfolk Quartermaster Depot, Va., 180.18 acres; Stewart Avenue Military Reservation, Atlanta, Ga., 1.25 acres; Camp Furlong, N. Mex., 1,600 acres; Fort Sill (portion consisting of 2,400 acres), Okla.; Fort Ward, Wash., 320.33 acres; Boca Grande Military Reservation, Fla., 37 acres"; so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to sell or cause to be sold, under the provisions of the act of March 12, 1926, the several tracts or parcels of real property hereinafter designated, or any portion thereof, upon determination by him that said tracts or parcels are no longer needed for military purposes, and to execute and deliver in the name of the United States and in its behalf any and all contracts, conveyances, or other instruments necessary to effectuate such sale and conveyance:

Name of reservation with approximate amount of land involved in each instance: Fort Scammel, Maine, 12 acres; Fort Gorgas,

Maine, 1.5 acres; Calf Island, including Little Calf Island, Mass., 18.05 acres; Greater Brewster Island, Mass., 21.7 acres; Norfolk Quartermaster Depot, Va., 180.18 acres; Stewart Avenue Military Reservation, Atlanta, Ga., 1.25 acres; Camp Furlong, N. (a) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter of any foreign country, any written or printed letter or other communication, addressed to any person within the United States, for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States, and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any demand or request for ransom or reward for the release of any kidnaped person; or whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall deposit or cause to be deposited, as aforesaid, any letter or other communication for the purpose aforesaid, containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter of any foreign country, any written or printed letter or other communication, addressed to any person within the United States, for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States, and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter of any foreign country any written or printed letter or other communication, addressed to any person within the United States, for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States, and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any threat to injure the property or reputation of the addressee or of another, or the reputation of a deceased person, or any threat to accuse the addressee or any other person of a crime, shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

"(d) Any person violating this section may be prosecuted either in the district into which such letter or other communication was carried by the United States mail for delivery according to the direction thereon, or in which it was caused to be delivered by the United States mail to the person to whom it was addressed."

SEC. 2. That the act of May 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 781; U. S. C., title 18, sec. 408d), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"(a) Whoever shall transmit in interstate commerce, by any means whatsoever, any communication containing any demand or request for a ransom or reward for the release of any kidnaped person; or whoever, with intent to extort from any person, firm, association, or corporation any money or other thing of value, shall transmit, as aforesaid, any communication containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of another, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever shall transmit in interstate commerce, by any means whatsoever, any communication containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of another, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, with intent to extort from any person, firm, association, or corporation any money or other thing of value, shall transmit in interstate commerce, by any means whatsoever, any communication containing any threat to injure the property or reputation of the addressee or of another or the reputation of a deceased person, or any threat to accuse the addressee or any other person of a crime, shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

"(d) Any person violating the provisions of this section may be prosecuted in the judicial district from or into which such threat is transmitted, as aforesaid. The term 'interstate commerce', as used in this section, shall include communication from one State, Territory, or the District of Columbia to another State, Territory, or the District of Columbia."

INVESTIGATION OF AGRICULTURAL INCOME

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 268) to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to make an investigation with respect to agricultural income and the financial and economic conditions of agricultural producers generally", approved August 27, 1935, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That section 1 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to make an investigation with respect to agricultural income and the financial and economic condition of agricultural producers generally", approved August 27, 1935 (Public Res. No. 61, 74th Cong.), be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"That the Federal Trade Commission is hereby authorized and directed to investigate and report, at the next session of Congress—

"First. (1) The extent of the decline in agricultural income in recent years, including the amount and percentage of such decline;

"(2) The extent of the increases or decreases in recent years in the income of the principal persons or corporations engaged in the sale, manufacturing, warehousing, and/or processing or other dealing in or handling of the principal farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, and of the other principal sellers, manufacturers, middlemen, warehousemen, and/or processors of the principal farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, as compared with the decline in agricultural income, including the amount and percentage of such changes; and

"(3) The proportion of total consumer cost of representative products manufactured or processed from the principal farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, which is represented by the proceeds received by (a) the farmer; (b) the manufacturers, processors, warehousemen, and middlemen; and (c) the distributors of such principal farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, and such representative products manufactured therefrom.

"Second. The financial position of the principal persons or corporations engaged in the manufacturing, processing, warehousing, intermediate handling, distribution, and marketing of the representative major products manufactured from such farm products, including—

"(1) The capitalization and assets of such persons or corporations and the means and sources of the growth of such capitalization and assets;

"(2) The investment, costs, profits, and rates of return of such persons or corporations;

"(3) The salaries of the officers of such companies or the income of such persons; and

"(4) The extent to which said persons or corporations avoid income taxes, if at all, and the extent to which officers receiving such salaries or persons receiving such income paid income taxes thereon.

"Third. The extent of concentration of control and of monopoly in the manufacturing, processing, warehousing, intermediate handling, distribution, and marketing of representative major farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, which is maintained or has been obtained by any person or corporation or other organization, including—

"(1) Methods and devices used by such persons or corporations for obtaining and maintaining their control or monopoly of the manufacturing, marketing, processing, warehousing, intermediate handling, and distribution of such commodities, and the proportion of any such major farm commodity, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, handled by each of the large units involved; and

"(2) The extent to which fraudulent, dishonest, unfair, intimidating, and injurious methods are employed in the grading, warehousing, intermediate handling, transportation, and marketing of such farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, including combinations, monopolies, price fixing, and manipulation of prices on commodity exchanges, and by racketeering and so-called auction markets.

"Fourth. The extent to which the cooperative agencies have entered into the processing, warehousing, and marketing of representative major farm products and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, and the general effects of such cooperative agencies upon the producer and consumer.

"Fifth. The extent to which the intervention between producer and consumer of intermediaries, including warehousemen, brokers, speculators, jobbers, and other middlemen has increased, if at all, the cost of distribution of representative major farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, and the effect which the activities of such intermediaries has upon the producer and the consumer."

SEC. 2. That section 5 of the said joint resolution be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out the figures "150,000" and inserting the figures "300,000."

SEC. 3. That section 6 of the said joint resolution be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out all thereof and by substituting in lieu of the said section the following:

"SEC. 6. The Federal Trade Commission is directed to present a final report to the Congress in respect to such principal farm products and such representative products manufactured therefrom, together with recommendations for legislation not later than October 1, 1936, and a further report to the Congress in respect to table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, together with recommendations for legislation on or before January 31, 1937, and a final report in respect to the said last-mentioned products, together with any further recommendations, not later than May 31, 1937.

"It is hereby further provided that any unexpended balance of the appropriation of $150,000 made in the Independent Offices Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1936 in accordance with the authority contained in Public Resolution No. 61, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, is hereby made available for like purpose to and including October 1, 1936."

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY CO.'S LEASE

The bill (S. 4567) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to extend and renew for the term of 10 years a lease to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. of a tract of land in the United States Department of Agriculture Range Livestock Experiment Station, in the State of Montana, and for a right-of-way to said tract, for the removal of gravel and ballast material, executed under the authority of the act of Congress approved June 9, 1926, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to extend and renew for a term of 10 years that certain lease to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., bearing date the 26th day of June 1926, of a tract of land in the United States Department of Agriculture Range Livestock Experiment Station, in the State of Montana, containing an approximate area of 241.67 acres, and also a strip of land for a right-of-way to said tract, executed by the Secretary of Agriculture under the authority of the Act of Congress approved June 9, 1926, upon the terms and conditions contained in said lease, or such other terms and conditions as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem proper; said renewal and extension to inure to the benefit of Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co. (successor of said railway company), its trustees in bankruptcy, and of the corporation succeeding to the ownership of its railroad and property.

TAX ADJUSTMENTS ON STOCKS ON HAND

The bill (H. R. 11821) to correct an error in section 16 (e) (1) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, with respect to adjustments in taxes on stocks on hand, in the case of a reduction in processing tax, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (1) of subsection (e) of section 16 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is amended by striking out "subsequent to June 26, 1934" and inserting in lieu thereof "on or after June 1, 1934."

REDUCTION OF INTEREST ON LOANS BY FEDERAL LAND BANKS

The bill (H. R. 10101) to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act and the Farm Credit Act of 1935, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, let that bill go over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over temporarily.

Mr. WHEELER subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask to recur to Order of Business 2204, being the bill (H. R. 10101) to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act and the Farm Credit Act of 1935, and for other purposes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, what is the purpose of the bill?

Mr. WHEELER. It is to reduce the rate of interest from 4 to 3½ percent.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, it is to continue the rate of interest now being enforced, is it not?

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. ROBINSON. It has been recommended by the Banking and Currency Committee and has passed the House?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. WAGNER. It passed the House and was reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with an amendment.

Mr. WHEELER. I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 10101) to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act and the Farm Credit Act of 1935, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with an amendment, on page 2, line 1, after the words "period of", to strike out the word "three" and insert the word "two", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That effective July 1, 1935, the first sentence of paragraph "Twelfth" of section 12 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended and as further amended by section 3 (a) of the Farm Credit Act of 1935, is further amended by striking out the following: "occurring within a period of 1 year commencing July 1, 1935, and shall not exceed 4 percent per annum for all interest payable on installment dates occurring within a period of 2 years commencing July 1, 1936", and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "occurring within a period of two years commencing July 1, 1935."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 266) for the appointment of boards to study and report upon the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal project, Florida, and the Passamaquoddy tidal power project, Maine, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let the joint resolution go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

REGULATIONS FOR LIGHTER SERVICE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8525) prescribing regulations for carrying on the business of lighter service from any of the ports of the United States to stationary ships or barges located offshore and for the purpose of promoting the safety of navigation, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to operate any ship, boat, barge, or other means of transportation on which passengers are carried, or transported, from any port, landing, or wharf in the United States to any ship, barge, boat, or vessel anchored, or standing 3 or more miles offshore (pilot boats and vessels engaged exclusively in the fisheries excepted), without first obtaining from the Secretary of Commerce of the United States a permit to operate such vessel, such permit to be in such form and of such duration as the Secretary of Commerce of the United States may prescribe. A copy of this permit shall be kept on board each vessel and shall be exhibited on demand by qualified boarding officers, the original of such permit to be recorded in the customhouse of the port out of which such vessels operate.

SEC. 2. Before any such permit is issued for the operation of any such vessel the owner of same, or his authorized agent, shall make application therefor to the Secretary of Commerce of the United States, in which application the name or names and address or addresses of the owner or owners of such craft shall be set forth; also the port or place from which such vessel, or vessels, are to be operated; also the maximum number of persons such vessel will carry.

SEC. 3. If upon full investigation the Secretary of Commerce finds that the operation of such vessel is, or may become, a menace to navigation, or endangers human life, or is to be operated for the purpose of transporting passengers to or from any stationary or anchored vessels, barge, or other craft of similar character engaged in any business or occupation prohibited by law at the place of landing by said vessel covered by this act, the Secretary of Commerce shall deny such application and no permit for the operation of such vessel shall be issued.

SEC. 4. The Secretary of Commerce is hereby authorized to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act, and such regulations shall have the force of law.

SEC. 5. For any violation of any of the provisions of this act or of the regulations issued thereunder, the owner of the vessel shall be subject to a penalty of $500 and the master or operator of such vessel to a penalty of $300; and such penalties shall constitute a lien on such vessel which may be proceeded against summarily by way of libel in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof.

SEC. 6. The Secretary of Commerce is hereby authorized to mitigate or remit any penalty incurred for violation of this act on such terms as he may deem proper.

SEC. 7. This act shall take effect upon its enactment, except that sections 1, 5, and 6 shall take effect 60 days from the date of enactment of this act.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill a new section, as follows:

SEC. 8. The provisions of this act shall not apply to vessels engaged in fishing or the fisheries industries or to vessels engaged in transporting crews or supplies to or from vessels engaged in fishing or in the fisheries industries. The term "fishery industries" shall include salting, canning, smoking, filleting, freezing, rendering, and all other enterprises connected with the fisheries.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I find myself unable to accept the amendment, much as I should like to do so.

May I impress it upon the Senate, if I can, that the bill is sponsored by the authorities of Long Beach, Calif., the United States district attorney of Southern California, and all those who are engaged in the administration of the law. The design of it is, wholly in the State of California, for Long Beach and particularly adjacent territory, to prevent the gambling ships which ply their nefarious activities just outside of the 3-mile limit. The United States district attorney advises me that he has had three murder cases recently because of the activities upon these ships. They are not gambling ships alone but worse, and this is the only way in which the evil may be reached.

We especially except in the bill ships engaged in the fishing business, but we make the bill applicable under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce to those lighters which are carrying individuals beyond the 3-mile limit to indulge in practices which are unlawful. Permits may be granted in the discretion of the Secretary of Commerce for any ships that may be engaged otherwise if they be deemed appropriate. It is a mere question of the right to stop the practices which have been indulged in in the past. I hope it will not be necessary to have the bill loaded with an amendment, for fear it would have to go over the session without enactment at all.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, what does the amendment provide?

Mr. JOHNSON. It provides, in part, that—

The provisions of this act shall not apply to vessels engaged in fishing or the fisheries industry or to vessels engaged in transporting crews or supplies to or from vessels engaged in fishing or in the fisheries industry.

It would simply put a loophole in the bill that would blow it to pieces, because the gambling ships would insist in each defense of each crime that they had committed, that they were engaged in fishing, and they would have their lines over the rails indicating that they were doing something of that sort.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator wishes the amendment rejected?

Mr. JOHNSON. I do.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed over.

BAYOU ST. JOHN, LA.

The bill (S. 4676) declaring Bayou St. John in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream was announced as next in order.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, an identical bill was passed by the House. I move that the bill (H. R. 11792) be substituted for the Senate bill and placed upon its passage.

Mr. ROBINSON. Is the House bill on the calendar?

Mr. OVERTON. I understand it is.

Mr. ROBINSON. Let it be passed over for the moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over temporarily.

Mr. OVERTON subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to recur to Senate bill 4676, the bill we had under discussion a moment ago.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will recur to the bill.

Mr. OVERTON. I understand that the House bill to which I referred is still before the Senate Committee on Commerce, and I presume I should move that the Committee on Commerce be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, in order that I may again move that the House bill be substituted for the Senate bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Committee on Commerce will be discharged from the further consideration of House bill 11792; and, without objection, it will be substituted for the identical Senate measure, Senate bill 4676, Calendar No. 2208.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11792) declaring Bayou St. John, in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 4676 will be indefinitely postponed.

MAJ. GEN. CLARENCE R. EDWARDS

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 570) authorizing the President of the United States to award posthumously a Distinguished Service Medal to Maj. Gen. Clarence Ransom Edwards was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. MORAN

The bill (S. 4659) to authorize the payment of an annuity to William H. Moran, Chief of the Secret Service Division of the Treasury Department, upon his retirement, in recognition and appreciation of his services to the United States was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in recognition and appreciation of 53 consecutive years of faithful, courageous, and meritorious service in the Secret Service Division of the Treasury Department, the last 18 years of which were served in the capacity of Chief of such Division, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to William H. Moran, out of the annual appropriation "Salaries, Secret Service Division", beginning upon his retirement and continuing throughout his natural life, in semimonthly installments on the 15th and last days of each month, such sum as may be necessary, when added to the annuity which he will receive under the laws relating to the retirement of Government employees, to secure to him a total annuity of $4,000.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

The bill (S. 4552) to extend the retirement privilege to the Director, Assistant Directors, inspectors, and special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was announced as next in order.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Michigan the purpose of this bill?

Mr. VANDENBERG. The purpose of the bill is to enclose within the civil-service retirement system the inspectors, Directors, and special agents of the F. B. I., the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It encloses them in the system on a contribution basis, the same as all others.

Mr. COPELAND. I am very much in favor of the bill; but I wonder why the Senator favors this bill and opposes the bill to let our clerks up here have a little relief.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I do not think there is the remotest parallel. Our clerks up here may occasionally suffer political casualty, but compared with the casualty which is confronted by the G-men of the Government I fail to see any analogy whatsoever.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, this is a little civil service for the G-men. I ask that the bill go over.

Mr. COPELAND. I hope it will not go over. I should hate to be a party to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

Mr. COPELAND. I hope the Senator from Tennessee will withdraw his request.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; I cannot withdraw it, because, while I have not examined the bill carefully, as I understand, the bill creates a separate civil service for one department of the Government; and I am not going to agree to that.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator says he does not understand the bill, and then proves that he does not understand it. I ask him if he will allow me to indicate to him its purpose.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection to the Senator doing so; but, as I understand, the bill does not put these employees under civil service.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It does not.

Mr. McKELLAR. But it retires them under the laws of the civil service. It creates a civil service of their own, as I understand.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It does not create any civil service of their own at all. They already are chosen on the merit basis.

Mr. McKELLAR. Not under the civil service, though.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Not under the civil service, but on an infinitely stricter merit basis; and other noncivil service groups are already enclosed within the retirement privilege. So long as all the employees pay the same amount of money, they are entitled to equal treatment; and I do not think the Senator from Tennessee wishes to say that this particular group of Government employees, who are engaged in a hazardous business, ought to be prejudiced in this fashion.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, if the Senator will bear with me for just a moment, I feel very much distressed that I even opened my head when this bill came up, because I do believe that these men—the G-men, who are subjected to all the dangers they are—should have this protection for their families. I hope the Senator from Tennessee will let the bill go along, because it is meritorious.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will go into the subject before the next call of the calendar, and will discuss it with the Senator; but for the present I wish to have the bill go over. I do not think we ought to have several systems of civil service within the Government.

Mr. COPELAND. I thank the Senator from Tennessee; and I hope in the meantime the Senator from Michigan, will review the bill relating to the employees of the Capitol, and see if he cannot likewise give favorable consideration to that bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this point in the RECORD the recommendation of the Attorney General of the United States be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Due to the peculiar nature of their work and unusual qualifications required, the investigative personnel of the Federal Bureau of Investigation cannot properly be placed under civil-service requirements. And yet they obtain their positions under a merit system of their own, the vigor and reality of which no one challenges. It is hardly just that an investigative personnel, which is under great and continuous strain, should be denied retirement privileges which are extended to other Government employees. The enactment of the proposed legislation would go a long way toward strengthening the service, stimulating the morale, and make it possible to secure more readily the right type of men who would be willing to make a career of their work with the Department of Justice.

I am informed by the Acting Director of the Budget that the proposed legislation would not be in conflict with the program of the President.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will not the Senator also state, for the RECORD, what other departments of the Government have a separate system like this?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I shall be very glad to get the list for the Senator and put it in the RECORD.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thank the Senator.

Mr. COPELAND. I think the bill itself includes the enumeration.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes; I think the bill does recite them.

ARTHUR VAN GESTEL, ALIAS ARTHUR GOODSELL

The bill (H. R. 11164) for the relief of Arthur Van Gestel, alias Arthur Goodsell, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, in reference to the bill which has just been passed, I find that the Department recommends against it. I ask that the votes whereby it was ordered to a third reading and passed be reconsidered, and the bill allowed to go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the votes by which the bill was ordered to a third reading and passed will be reconsidered, and the bill will be passed over.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, let me make a brief statement regarding the measure, in order that it may be in the RECORD, with the permission of the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The War Department has no record of the service of the beneficiary of this bill. It passed the House on March 3; and since the bill was referred to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, that committee has very carefully gone into it. The committee found that although the Department had no record of the beneficiary's service, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, afterward President Theodore Roosevelt, Maj. Gen. Joseph Wheeler, of Confederate fame, and other officers of unquestioned integrity, testified that they knew that the beneficiary was in the service and that he was in the Medical Corps of the First Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry. In view of this evidence, and of the fact that the records of the Spanish-American War are very fragmentary and incomplete, the Senate committee decided to join the House committee and the House in favorable action on the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, it will take just a moment to read part of the letter of Secretary Dern:

The enactment of a law such as that proposed in S. 756 will be a discrimination against many other persons who have claimed similar service and who have been denied military recognition, and in view of the fact that the official records of the War Department furnish no evidence of military service rendered by Arthur Van Gestal, alias Arthur Goodsell, and in view of the many rights, privileges, and benefits usually accorded to honorably discharged soldiers, it is recommended that the bill be not favorably considered.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, in cases of this nature each claimant must establish his case. When he proves that the records of the War Department are inadequate and incomplete—which we know is true of the records pertaining to the Spanish-American War—I think he should be granted relief. The soldier does not keep those records. He has no control over them. When officers like the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt and the late General Wheeler testify to a state of facts, I think all of us would like to accept their statements as true.

Mr. BACHMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield.

Mr. BACHMAN. This case was referred to me; and in addition to what has been stated by the Senator from Arkansas and the Senator from Texas, I will state that there are in the record letters from an adjutant general and a surgeon general, who knew this man well and knew of his service in the Rough Rider Regiment. Very fragmentary records were kept of that regiment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, in view of what my colleagues say about the matter, and since they have more knowledge of it than I have, I am willing to let the bill go through; but it seems to me the bill ought not to pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection having been withdrawn, the question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 4664) authorizing the appointment of an additional district judge for the eastern district of Pennsylvania was announced as next in order.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 4673) to authorize the Attorney General to provide instruction and information on the subject of crime control was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHEELER (and other Senators). Let the bill go over.

The bill will be passed over.

APPOINTMENT AND PROMOTION OF SUBSTITUTE POSTAL EMPLOYEES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7688) to provide for the appointment and promotion of substitute postal employees, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the ratio of classified substitute railway postal clerks, classified substitute post-office clerks, classified substitute city letter carriers, classified substitute village letter carriers, classified substitute laborers, watchmen, and messengers, and classified substitutes in the motor vehicle service, to regular railway postal clerks, post-office clerks, city letter carriers, village letter carriers, laborers, watchmen, and messengers, and employees of the motor vehicle service, shall be not more than one classified substitute to six regular employees, or fraction thereof, respectively, except that in offices having fewer than six regular employees there may be one substitute clerk and one substitute carrier, and one substitute in the motor vehicle service: Provided, That where the ratio of substitutes is now in excess of these ratios, no additional classified substitutes shall be appointed until these ratios are established: Provided further, That the provisions of this act shall not operate to furlough or dismiss (1) any classified substitute railway postal clerks, post-office clerks, city letter carriers, village letter carriers, or laborers, watchmen, or messengers; or (2) any classified substitutes in the motor vehicle service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to provide for the appointment of substitute postal employees, and for other purposes."

MEMORIAL TO THOMAS JEFFERSON

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 240) to authorize the execution of plans for a permanent memorial to Thomas Jefferson.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, there is on the clerk's desk an identical bill, House bill 12027. I ask that that bill be substituted for the Senate bill and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, House bill 12027, an identical bill, will be substituted for the Senate bill.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 12027) to authorize the execution of plans for a permanent memorial to Thomas Jefferson, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate joint resolution will be indefinitely postponed.

TOLL BRIDGES ON FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAYS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4658) to aid the several States in making certain toll bridges on the system of Federal-aid highways free bridges, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 1, line 3, after the word "State", to insert "or States or political subdivision or subdivisions thereof"; and, on line 7, after the word "State", to insert "or States or political subdivision or subdivisions thereof", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the case of any State or States or political subdivision or subdivisions thereof which, prior to the date of approval of this act, shall have constructed and shall have in operation any toll bridges on the approved system of Federal-aid highways within such State or States or political subdivision or subdivisions thereof and which shall, prior to July 1, 1938, cause any such toll bridge, or toll bridges, to be made free, the Secretary of Agriculture shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay out of the Federal-aid road funds apportioned to the State not to exceed 50 percent of such amount as may be approved by the Secretary of Agriculture as the reasonable construction cost of any such toll bridge: Provided, That no payment of Federal funds shall be made on account of any such bridge which was not constructed in accordance with plans and specifications which would meet the standards required by the Secretary of Agriculture at the time such bridge was constructed, nor on account of any bridge the construction of which was commenced or completed prior to March 3, 1927: And provided further, That no such payment shall be made which will exceed 50 percent of the reasonable cost of the labor and materials which were actually incorporated in the construction of such bridge, excluding all costs of rights-of-way, property damages, and financing costs, and any amount so paid on account of any such bridge shall be used by the highway department of such State for matching unobligated Federal-aid road funds available for the State for expenditure in the improvement of highways on the system of Federal-aid highways.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, this may be a meritorious measure, but it presents a very broad aspect of road and toll-bridge construction. I should like to have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. BLACK. I shall be glad to explain it to the Senator. I will state in the beginning that the amendments which appear in the bill were added because similar amendments had been added to the House bill by the House committee. There is a similar bill now pending in the House.

Under the existing Federal-aid law, where a bridge is constructed over a Federal-aid highway the Government bears 50 percent of the expense. A number of the States have erected toll bridges over highways which are Federal-aid highways. When that was done the Federal Government did not assist as it would have done had the bridges not been toll bridges.

Under the law, if the States, or the counties, or whatever subdivisions construct a toll bridge, free the toll bridge on a Federal-aid highway, and take it out of the toll bridge class, such State or political subdivision can then receive credit on its Federal-aid funds for the 50 percent.

This would not include the Federal-aid funds to the States. It simply would do that which would have been done if the bridge had not been a toll bridge in the beginning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THERESA E. THORESON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3723) granting an annuity to Theresa E. Thoreson, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions and limitations of the Civil Service Retirement Act, of May 29, 1930, as amended, in respect of eligibility for retirement, the Civil Service Commission is authorized and directed to pay, out of the civil-service disability and retirement fund, to Theresa E. Thoreson, formerly postmaster, East Grand Forks, Minn., an annuity computed as provided in section 4 of such act, as amended; and the said Theresa E. Thoreson shall be credited with and entitled to count, for such purposes, in addition to all other periods of service to which she may be lawfully entitled, the periods of her employment as a postmaster of and employee in the post office at East Grand Forks, Minn., from July 1, 1909, to July 31, 1934, both dates inclusive. Payment of such annuity shall begin from the date of enactment of this act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the young woman named in this bill worked in the post office in East Grand Forks, Minn., for a little over 28 years. Twelve months of that time the post office was relegated from the second class to the third class. It was held by the Civil Service Commission during that time, during the war, that this lady lost her eligibility for retirement under the civil-service law.

Afterward, in 1926, a ruling was made by the Civil Service Commission that she was eligible, and all back payments for retirement were made and carried on faithfully until she was removed from office July 31, 1934. After that the Civil Service Commission ruled that she was ineligible for retirement.

The Committee on Civil Service of the Senate, which considered this measure, in view of the fact that the Civil Service Commission had ruled in 1926 that this claimant was entitled to civil-service retirement and had made her payments faithfully and worked in the post office for over 28 years, felt that she was entitled to retirement, as provided in the pending bill. I believe the bill ought to be passed, in all fairness.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OFFERING OF FINAL PROOF BY HOMESTEAD AND DESERT LAND ENTRYMEN

The bill (S. 3866) to further extend the period of time during which final proof may be offered by homestead and desert land entrymen was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to extend the period of time during which final proof may be offered by homestead entrymen", approved May 13, 1932, as amended, is amended by striking out "December 31, 1935" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 1936".

JAMES L. BARNETT

The bill (S. 565) for the relief of James L. Barnett was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of an act of the Congress of the United States of America entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes", approved May 22, 1920, and as subsequently amended, be extended and enlarged so as to grant relief to James L. Barnett, who was involuntarily retired from the Rural Mail Service of the United States by reason of personal injuries, said separation from the Service having taken place prior to the passage of the aforesaid original Retirement Act.

COMMISSIONED STRENGTH, CORPS OF ENGINEERS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4699) to provide a commissioned strength for the Corps of Engineers, United States Army, for the efficient performance of military and other statutory duties assigned to that corps, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That section 11 (Corps of Engineers), National Defense Act, as amended, is hereby further amended to provide one additional assistant to the Chief of Engineers with the rank of brigadier general, and 185 additional officers in grades from colonel to second lieutenant, inclusive: Provided, That the legally authorized commissioned strength of the Regular Army is increased by 185, which said increase shall be allotted to the Corps of Engineers: Provided further, That officers of the Corps of Engineers employed primarily on duty connected with nonmilitary public works prosecuted under the direction of the Chief of Engineers, including river and harbor improvements, flood control, and other such works, shall, while so employed, be paid their pay and allowances, mileage and travel allowances from the appropriation for the work or works upon which they are employed: And provided further, That the number of officers so engaged and so paid shall be exclusive of the commissioned strength of the Regular Army as now or hereafter limited by the funds appropriated for "Pay of the Army" in the annual War Department Appropriation Act.

Mr. WHEELER. Let the bill go over.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Montana that this bill authorizes the Chief of Engineers to take from other branches of the Army a sufficient number of engineers to enable him to carry out the additional work, of a nonmilitary character, which has been imposed on him during the last few years.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COMPENSATION TO EMPLOYEES OF CONTRACTORS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3238) to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to employees of contractors on public buildings and public works, which had been reported from the Committee on Education and Labor with amendments.

The first amendment of the committee was, in section 3, on page 3, line 2, after the word "works", to insert the words "or work for any public purpose"; on line 15, after the word "compensation", to insert the word "insurance"; on line 20, after the word "contract", to insert the words "a violation of this act"; on line 24, after the word "law", to insert the words "or where there is no State workmen's compensation law"; on page 4, line 1, after the word "employees", to strike out the words "provide liability insurance to secure the payment of compensation orders pursuant to such provisions of chapter 18 of title 33 of the Code of Laws of the United States (act of Mar. 4, 1929, 44 Stat. 1424)", and to insert in lieu thereof the words "secure the payments of compensation and the furnishing of other benefits pursuant to such provisions of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (ch. 18 of title 33 of the Code of Laws of the United States, act of Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424)", so as to read:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Federal Building Workmen's Compensation Act."

SEC. 2. When used in this act—

(1) The term "person" means individual, partnership, corporation, or association.

(2) The term "injury" means accidental injury or death arising out of and in the course of employment, and such occupational disease or infection as arises naturally out of such employment or as naturally or unavoidably results from such accidental injury, and includes an injury caused by the willful act of a third person directed against an employee because of his employment.

(3) The term "employer" shall be held to mean every person entering into a contract pursuant to section 3 of this act.

(4) The term "employee" shall be held to mean any person employed on work covered by a contract entered into pursuant to section 3 of this act, irrespective of whether such person is employed by the contractor or a subcontractor.

(5) The term "State" includes a Territory and the District of Columbia.

(6) The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense means the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia, including the territorial waters thereof.

(7) "Death" as a basis for a right to compensation means only death resulting from an injury.

(8) The singular includes the plural and the masculine includes feminine and neuter.

SEC. 3. Every contract entered into with the United States or any executive department, independent establishment, agency, or instrumentality thereof (including Government-owned and Government-controlled corporations) for the construction, alteration, or repair of any public building or public works, or work for any public purpose, shall contain provisions to the following effect, a violation of any of which shall be deemed a breach of the condition of the contract and a violation of this act:

(a) The contractor shall, before commencing performance of such contract, provide adequate workmen's-compensation insurance for employees on the work who may come within the protection of the workmen's-compensation laws of the State in which the work is to be performed.

(b) The contractor shall be deemed to satisfy the foregoing condition with respect to employees of a subcontractor if he requires such subcontractor, before commencing performance of his subcontract, to provide adequate workmen's compensation insurance for such of his employees on the work as may come within the protection of the workmen's-compensation laws of the State in which the work is to be performed, but any failure on the part of a subcontractor to provide such insurance shall be deemed a breach of contract and a violation of this act by the contractor.

(c) In the event that there are employees on the work, recovery for whose injury or death through workmen's-compensation proceedings may not validly be provided by State law, or where there is no State workmen's-compensation law, the contractor shall, with respect to the injury or death of such employees, secure the payments of compensation and the furnishing of other benefits pursuant to such provisions of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (chapter 18 of title 33 of the Code of Laws of the United States, act of Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424), as amended from time to time, as are made applicable by this act and the rules and regulations issued thereunder.

The amendments were agreed to.

The next amendment of the committee was, on page 4, line 12, in section 4 after the word "of", to strike out the words "chapter 18 of title 33 of the Code of Laws of the United States (Act of Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424)", and to insert in lieu thereof the words "the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (ch. 18 of title 33 of the Code of Laws of the United States, act of Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424)"; on line 18 after the word "inappropriate", to strike out the words "to employment on public buildings or public works"; on line 23, after the word "validly", to strike out the word "proved" and to insert the word "provided"; on page 5, line 4, after the word "subcontractor", to insert the words "Provided, however, That with respect to an injury or death occurring to an employee on United States property within the exterior boundaries of a State having a workmen's compensation law which law would otherwise be applicable to such injury or death, such property shall be deemed to be within the jurisdiction of the State for the purpose of such compensation law", so as to make the section read:

SEC 4. The provisions of the Longshoremen and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (ch. 18 of title 33 of the Code of Laws of the United States, act of Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424), as amended from time to time, insofar as such provisions are not inappropriate, shall apply in respect to the injury or death of any employee on work covered by a contract entered into pursuant to section 3 of this act, if recovery for such injury or death through workmen's-compensation proceedings may not be validly provided by State law; except in applying such provisions, the term "employer" shall be held to mean every person entering into a contract pursuant to section 3 of this act and the term "employee" shall be held to mean any person employed on work covered by such a contract irrespective of whether such person is employed by a contractor or subcontractor: Provided, however, That with respect to an injury or death occurring to an employee on United States property within the exterior boundaries of a State having a workmen's-compensation law which law would otherwise be applicable to such injury or death, such property shall be deemed to be within the jurisdiction of the State for the purpose of such compensation law.

The amendments were agreed to.

The next amendment of the committee was in section 6, on page 5, line 23, after the numerals "40" insert a comma and the word "section", so as to read:

SEC. 5. Any contractor who violates any of the provisions of this act or the rules and regulations issued thereunder shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or by both, such fine and imprisonment. This section shall not affect any other liability of the employer under this act.

SEC. 6. Any insurer who has a claim for unpaid premiums for any policies of insurance required by this act to be written shall have the right of action and of intervention against the contractor and his sureties conferred upon persons furnishing labor and materials by this act of August 13, 1894 (28 Stat. 278, U. S. C., title 40, sec. 270), as amended from time to time.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, to strike out section 7, as follows:

SEC. 7. The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary of Labor jointly shall make rules and regulations to aid in the enforcement of this act. Such rules and regulations shall prescribe the duties of the contracting officers in securing compliance with section 3 and shall authorize such contracting officers to waive the conditions of said section when compliance therewith would seriously impede the conduct of Government business.

And to insert in lieu thereof a new section, as follows:

SEC. 7. The United States Employees' Compensation Commission shall make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act. Such rules and regulations shall prescribe the duties of the contracting officers in securing compliance with section 3 of this act and shall authorize such contracting officers to waive the conditions of said section, subject to the approval of the United States Employees' Compensation Commission, when compliance therewith would seriously impede the conduct of Government business.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 9, on page 7, line 6, after the word "amended", to insert the words "or that act as extended in cases of injury or death to employees of the Tennessee Valley Authority, employees of the Federal Civil Works Administration, enrollees of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and the persons employed receiving security payments for services rendered to the United States under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935", so as to read:

SEC. 8. If any provisions of this act, or the application of such provisions to any person or circumstance, shall be held invalid, the remainder of this act, or the application of such provisions to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 9. This act shall not apply in respect to the injury or death of an employee subject to the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes", approved September 7, 1916, as amended, or that act as extended in cases of injury or death to employees of the Tennessee Valley Authority, employees of the Federal Civil Works Administration, enrollees of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and the persons employed receiving security payments for services rendered to the United States under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, after line 12, to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 10. This Act shall apply to all contracts entered into pursuant to invitations for bids issued on or after 60 days from the effective date of this Act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask that the report on this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the report (No. 2119) was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Report to accompany S. 3238]

The Committee on Education and Labor, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3238) to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to employees of contractors on public buildings and public works, having considered the same, report thereon with the recommendation that the bill do pass with amendments.

The bill, as amended, is recommended by the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Labor, the Acting Secretary of the Interior, and the Chairman of the United States Employees' Compensation Commission, and their reports upon the bill are printed at the end of this report.

The purpose of the bill is to require that every contractor entering into contracts with the United States, or any executive department, independent establishment, agency, or instrumentality thereof (including Government-owned and Government-controlled corporations), before commencing the construction, alteration, or repair of any public building or public works, shall provide workmen's compensation insurance for employees on the work who may come within the protection of the workmen's compensation laws of the State in which the work is to be performed.

The bill further provides for the application of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (approved Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424), as amended, to such employees where compensation for injury or death may not be validly provided by State compensation laws or where there is no State workmen's compensation law.

Briefly, then, the bill is intended (1) to require compliance with the State workmen's compensation law by a contractor entering into a contract with the United States (as provided in sec. 3 thereof), as a condition precedent to commencing performance of the contract, and (2) to provide Federal workmen's compensation law for employees of such a contractor at places where at present no such remedy exists under the State laws.

The bill is designed to fill a conspicuous gap in the workmen's compensation field by furnishing protection against injury to laborers and mechanics employed in connection with Government construction. At present there is no Federal statute applying workmen's compensation to such employees. The various State courts have held that such employees, even though their injuries are sustained on Federal projects, are entitled to benefits of the State workmen's compensation acts. But the result of such decisions affords only partial protection, as some States (Arkansas and Mississippi, for example) do not have workmen's compensation laws, and in other States compliance with the statute is optional.

An even more serious situation has resulted from the fact that under a recent decision of the Supreme Court (Murray v. Gerrick Co., 291 U. S. 315) there is some doubt as to whether State workmen's compensation acts, not having any extraterritorial force, have any application to deaths or injuries which occur in national parks or other property within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. This bill proposes to correct this situation by an amendment which provides expressly that a State workmen's compensation law which would otherwise be applicable to such an injury or death shall be deemed to apply with the same force and effect as if such injury or disability occurred on property within the jurisdiction of the State. The bill also attempts to provide more complete protection to workmen through a section designed to encourage insurance companies to keep policies of insurance in force, even though the contractor has defaulted in the payment of his premiums by conferring upon insurers a right of action on the contractor's bond.

The committee has adopted most of the amendments to the bill at the suggestion of the several departments which have made a study of the matter. Their recommendations are submitted herewith in full:

UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION COMMISSION,
Washington, April 28, 1936.

HON. DAVID I. WALSH,
Chairman, Committee on Education and Labor,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CHAIRMAN: Reference is made to your letter of July 17, 1935, transmitting for the Commission's suggestions and recommendations the bill (S. 3238) to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to employees of contractors on public buildings and public works.

The purpose of the bill appears to be to require contracts entered into with the United States or any executive department, independent establishment, agency, or instrumentality thereof (including Government-owned and Government-controlled corporations), for the construction, alteration, or repair of any public building or public work, to contain provisions under which the contractor will be required to provide under State law adequate workmen's compensation insurance for employees on the work who may come within the protection of the workmen's compensation laws of the State in which the work is to be performed, and where compensation may not validly be provided by State law, to require the contractor to provide insurance to secure the payment of compensation under "the provisions of chapter 18 of title 33 of the Code of Laws of the United States" (the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, approved Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424). Section 4 of the bill makes applicable, insofar as not inappropriate, the provisions of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, as amended from time to time, in cases of injury or death of employees on work covered by such a contract, if recovery for such injury or death through workmen's compensation proceedings may not be validly provided by State law.

Briefly, the bill is apparently intended (1) to require compliance with the State workmen's compensation law by a contractor entering into a contract with the United States (as provided in sec. 3 thereof), as a condition precedent to commencing performance of the contract, and (2) to provide a workmen's compensation law for employees of such a contractor at places subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States where at present no such remedy exists.

Purpose (1) of the bill, as indicated above, does not seem to require any comment other than the statement that the Commission heartily approves the requirement that all employers as defined in the bill (including subcontractors) shall secure protection for their employees as provided therein.

Purpose (2) of the bill is no doubt intended, among other things, to fill a gap now existing. There is in effect at present a Federal act authorizing suit under State law for death or personal injury within a national park or other place subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, namely, the act of February 1, 1928 (45 Stat. 54, U. S. Code, Annotated, title 16, sec. 457). This act provides a right of recovery for injuries and death by the neglect or wrongful act of another, but does not provide a remedy in cases of nonnegligent injuries to employees such as may be compensated under workmen's compensation laws. The present measure, if enacted, would apparently supersede the act of February 1, 1928, above referred to, to the extent of the remedy as against the contractor provided under the Longshoremen's Act as proposed in cases of injury or death of employees which occur in national parks and other places subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. Section 5 of the Longshoremen's Act provides that the liability of an employer prescribed therein shall be exclusive and in place of all other liability of such employer to the employee, his legal representative, dependents, etc., entitled to recover damages from such employer on account of injury or death, with a right of action against the employer in such cases where the employer fails to secure the payment of compensation as required by the Longshoremen's Act, in which event certain defenses are removed.

It has been held in several cases that a State workmen's compensation law may be invoked to compensate employees or their dependents for injuries or death sustained on Federal property or at places subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. A case in point is Lynch's case (183 N. E. 834 (Mass., Jan. 1933)), where the injury was sustained during the construction of a post-office building in Boston on ground that had been purchased by the United States, the sole concurrent jurisdiction retained by the State being that for the purpose of executing civil and criminal process. The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts held that since the workmen's compensation act of that State provided for extraterritorial force, and that as one employed in that Commonwealth can recover under that act for an injury which occurred in another State, the award under the State act should be affirmed. In consideration of the extraterritorial provision referred to, the court said: "In principle we are unable to perceive any sound ground for the application of a different rule when the injury occurs on Federal land." The court said further, however: "As there is no Federal workmen's compensation law there is no basis for a contention that the Federal Government has taken possession of the field, and for that reason all State laws on the subject were superseded." For other similar cases see: State ex rel Loney v. Industrial Accident Board (286 Pac. 408 (Mont. 1930)), where the award was sustained on the ground, among others, that the workmen's compensation law of Montana became a part of the contract between the employer and employee, notwithstanding that the injury occurred on land which had been ceded to the United States; Nickell v. Dept. of Labor & Industries (3 Pac. (2d) 1005 (Wash. 1931)); State v. Dept. of Labor & Industries (10 Pac. (2d) 213 (Wash. 1932)), where the State act was in force at the time when jurisdiction over the particular territory was ceded by the State to the United States for a national park and was held to remain in force in that territory until Congress should have passed an act to supersede it therein; State v. State Industrial Accident Board (286 Pac. 408 (Mont.)); Walsh v. Apartment Engineering & Contracting Co. (240 App. Div. (N. Y.), 1919), decided in November 1933, where the appellate division, by a divided court, sustained an award to a wire lather injured on Governors Island, ceded to the United States by New York, on the ground that the work on Governors Island was incidental to work within New York City. A dissenting opinion quoted subdivision (17) of section 8 of article I of the Constitution to support the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government over Governors Island.

The Supreme Court of the United States, however, in the case of Murray v. Gerrick & Co. (291 U. S. 316), decided February 5, 1934, sustained the Supreme Court of Washington in holding that the compensation act of that State does not apply to territory beyond the authority of the State legislature, and also that it could not have any force in the navy yard at Puget Sound, since it was adopted many years after the cession of jurisdiction by that State and the consequent acquisition of the tract by the United States, and that after the effective date of the State's cession the jurisdiction of the Federal Government was exclusive. The Court pointed out, however, that Congress may adopt such later State legislation as respects territory under its jurisdiction; and in this connection it may be noted in the light of Lynch's case, cited above, that the Washington workmen's compensation law apparently contains no provision for extraterritorial effect. This feature was not discussed by the Supreme Court in the Murray case. But the case of Hilding v. Department of Labor and Industries (298 Pac. 321), decided in April 1931, in effect judicially construes the Washington act as having extraterritorial effect. In Willis v. Oscar Daniels Co. (166 N. W. 496 (Mich.)), the Court held that where a State act ceded to the Federal Government land for a ship canal, a State workmen's compensation act thereafter passed by the State is not operative thereon.

The rule laid down by the Supreme Court in the Murray case in respect to the test of jurisdiction will no doubt affect subsequent cases. No case, however, has been noted since the decision of the Supreme Court in this case. The Commission accordingly believes that so far as purpose (2), referred to above, is concerned, there is need for the legislation proposed by the bill. At this juncture it may also be not inappropriate to call the comittee's attention to the need for workmen's compensation legislation affecting private employees employed at places subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, other than those who may be employed by contractors within the purview of section 3 of the bill. The Commission has in mind employees of concessioners and others not performing work for the United States under contract. It may be that the committee may desire to consider an addition to the bill to include employees of such employers.

As to the form of the bill, the Commission makes the following comments and suggestions:

On page 3, line 2, it is suggested that the words "or work for any public purpose" be inserted after the words "public works." It is no doubt intended that the bill should be as inclusive as possible with respect to the employees intended to be covered thereby. The addition of the words suggested may have the effect of preventing strict construction of the term "public works"; and in this connection it is to be noted that the term "public purpose" appears to have been construed in a larger and more diversified number of cases than the term "public works."

On page 3, section (c), line 23, it is suggested that the words "or where there is no State workmen's compensation law" be added after the word "law" in that line. The States of Arkansas and Mississippi do not have workmen's compensation laws. By the provision suggested employers entering into contracts with the United States within the purview of the bill for work in those States would be required to protect their employees under the applicable provisions of the Longshoremen's Act.

The term "liability insurance", appearing in line 24, on page 3, is not usually applied to workmen's compensation insurance. Moreover, no doubt self-insurance as provided for under the Longshoremen's Act may be appropriate and desirable as an alternative to an insurance policy. It would also seem that the use of the word "orders", in line 25, on page 3, may be unnecessarily restrictive of the purpose of this measure. It is therefore suggested that in lieu of the language in paragraph (c), beginning with the word "provide", in line 24, on page 3, and continuing to the end of line 2, of page 4, the following be substituted: "secure the payments of compensation and the furnishing of other benefits pursuant to such provisions of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (ch. 18, title 33, Code of Laws of the United States, act of Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424)."

It is suggested that the reference to the Longshoremen's Act, in section 4, on page 4, be made to conform to that just above indicated.

It is suggested that a comma be inserted after the word "inappropriate", in line 8, on page 4, and the words "to employment on public buildings or public works" be deleted. These words do not appear to be necessary to carry out the purpose of section 4, and they might be construed, if left in the bill, as a limitation upon the employments covered. Moreover, the scope of the act appears to be sufficiently set forth in section 3 of the bill.

On page 4, line 13, the word "proved" is no doubt intended to be "provided."

Section 7 of the bill provides, in effect, that contracting officers shall be authorized to waive the conditions of section 3 when compliance therewith would seriously impede the conduct of Government business. The Commission believes that this authority is too broad, in that it gives to the contracting officers authority to waive entirely the provisions of the proposed act and may create situations not tending to uniformity. Since the whole purpose of the measure relates to workmen's compensation for injuries sustained by employees of contractors contracting with the United States, and as the liability of the contractor is so clearly set forth in the provisions of section 3 of the bill, it may be entirely desirable and probably would be of administrative advantage to provide in section 7 for this Commission to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to aid in the enforcement of this act. So far as the Longshoremen's Act is concerned, this Commission is authorized in section 39 thereof to make rules and regulations, and section 39 would no doubt be appropriate with respect to any rules and regulations necessary to administer such provisions of the Longshoremen's Act as by the proposed act would be made to apply at places where the Federal Government has exclusive jurisdiction. The Commission deprecates giving any officer power to waive and set aside this law; but if such right of waiver be deemed necessary, the Commission suggests that any such waiver be made subject to the approval of this Commission.

It is suggested that at the end of section 9 the period be changed to a comma and the following words be added: "or that act as extended in cases of injury or death to employees of the Tennessee Valley Authority, employees of the Federal Civil Works Administration, enrollees of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and persons employed receiving security payments for services rendered to the United States under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935." Such an addition would appear to be necessary to include all employees with respect to whom the act of September 7, 1916, has been extended.

The Commission is entirely in accord with the purpose of the bill S. 3238 and accordingly recommends its enactment. This expression of the Commission's views, however, is not to be understood as a commitment with respect to the relation of the proposed legislation to the program of the President.

It is hoped that the foregoing suggestions and recommendations may be of assistance to the committee in its consideration of the bill. Delay in the submission of this report was occasioned by pressure of work in the office of the Bureau of the Budget, to which it was referred by the Commission on August 13, 1935.

Very truly yours,

(Mrs.) JEWELL W. SWOFFORD,
Chairman.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, December 21, 1935.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Committee on Education and Labor, United States Senate.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I have received your letter of July 17 requesting a report on S. 3238, entitled "A bill to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to employees of contractors on public buildings and public works."

This proposed legislation would require that contractors for the construction, alteration, or repair of any public building or public works shall, before commencing performance of such contract, provide adequate workmen's compensation insurance for employees on the work who may come within the protection of the workmen's compensation laws of the State in which the work is to be performed. The failure of the subcontractor to provide such insurance would be a breach of the contract by the contractor.

This bill is of especial significance, inasmuch as it would require that contractors provide liability insurance for employees not protected by State workmen's compensation laws, and it appears that all classes of employees would be protected thereunder. Rules and regulations would be promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Labor, and the Secretary of the Interior, jointly, prescribing the duties of contracting officers in securing compliance with section 3. Contracting officers would have the authority to waive the conditions of this section when compliance therewith would seriously impede the conduct of Government business.

The provisions of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (44 Stat. 1424), as amended, are made to apply under this proposed legislation where injury or death of any employee on work covered by a contract entered into pursuant to section 3 may not be validly provided by State law, except as to the definitions of "employer" and "employee", which definitions seek to include all classes of employers and employees on contracts of this type.

On page 4, line 2, of this bill, I note an apparent typographical error. The year "1929" should read "1927".

As this legislation, when enacted, would provide a Federal statute that would fill a serious gap in the workmen's compensation field, and would be a protection to employees of contractors on public buildings and public works, I recommend that it receive favorable consideration by the Congress.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES WEST,
Acting Secretary of the Interior.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, July 23, 1935.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Chairman, Committee on Education and Labor,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR WALSH: I have your letter of July 17, 1935, in which you request my comments on S. 3238, to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to employees on contracts on public buildings and public works.

This bill is one which I recommend for the serious consideration of your committee. It is designed to fill a conspicuous gap in the workmen's compensation field by furnishing protection against injury to laborers and mechanics employed in connection with Government construction.

As you are undoubtedly aware, there is no Federal statute applying workmen's compensation to such employees. Various State courts have held that such employees, even though their injuries are sustained on Federal projects, are entitled to benefits of the State workmen's compensation act. This line of authority, however, affords only a partial protection. Some States do not have any compensation laws, and in others compliance with the statute is optional. Moreover, in certain jurisdictions the scope of the statute is so narrow that it does not cover all workers on building projects.

Earlier in the session Senator WHEELER introduced another bill intended to remedy this situation by the device of extending the obligation of the bonds of contractors to include the payment of compensation. This bill, S. 2144, was criticized by me in my letter of March 15 to your committee as not adequate to accomplish its purpose. The instant bill, however, meets all the criticisms in my letter.

The principal substantive provisions of the present bill are contained in section 3, which requires all contracts to stipulate that the contractor shall either provide adequate workmen's compensation insurance himself or to see to it that his subcontractors carry such insurance. In the event that there are employees on the work for whom State workmen's compensation insurance could not be validly provided, the contractor then must cover such workers by providing liability insurance to secure payment of compensation awards by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission pursuant to the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (act of Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424, U. S. C., title 33, ch. 18). In other words, wherever possible all laborers and mechanics are to be covered by the local statute; but where this is impossible, either because of the absence of a statute or because the statute does not apply to death cases, certain occupations, or nonresidents, etc., such workers would be covered by the provisions of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act. And section 4 makes the provisions of that act applicable to injury or death not provable under State compensation laws.

Incidentally, this particular Federal act was apparently selected rather than the United States Employees' Compensation Act, because the former statute contemplates the participation of commercial insurance companies and has been applied successfully as a general workmen's compensation law to private employment in the District of Columbia. The fact that the proposed act is to be administered by a commission located in Washington will not mean that the workers having claims under it will have to appear here, for the Commission has a field staff.

Section 5 of the bill, the penalty section, is taken verbatim from the corresponding section in the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act.

Section 6 is intended to guard against policies being canceled because of unpaid premiums, by inducing insurers to extend credit to contractors by giving them the same cause of action on the surety bond conferred by the Hurd Act upon persons furnishing labor and materials (act of Aug. 13, 1894, 28 Stat. 278, U. S. C., title 40, sec. 270).

Section 7 directs the respective heads of the Treasury, Interior, and Labor Departments to make rules and regulations to aid in the enforcement of the act. The object of this section is to prescribe certain duties for the inspectors with respect to seeing that the insurance policies remain in force and give adequate coverage, but giving them latitude to waive these requirements where the actuarial costs of securing such policies are so high or so difficult to obtain that the business of the Government would be seriously impeded.

The last two sections of the bill were apparently added out of an abundance of caution. Section 8 contains the conventional separability clause. Section 9 makes it clear that the bill does not apply to Federal employees, including persons directly employed by the Government on projects under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 (Public Res. No. 11, 74th Cong.). Such workers are protected by section 2 of the relief act.

In reading this bill I noticed two typographical errors. The word "proved", on page 4, line 13, should read "provided." On page 5, line 8, the word "section" should be inserted before the figures "270." Except for these two amendments I have no suggestions for revision, although it is possible that the Compensation Commission, which is charged with the duty of administering a portion of the act, may have some suggestions to make with respect to the administrative sections and with provisions for the cost of administration.

Sincerely yours,

FRANCES PERKINS.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, April 13, 1935.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
Committee on Education and Labor, United States Senate.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This is with reference to your letter of July 17, 1935, requesting the suggestions and recommendations of this Department relative to S. 3238, a bill to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to employees of contractors on public buildings and public works.

This bill requires contractors to provide compensation insurance under State workmen's compensation acts for employees engaged in construction, alteration, or repair of any public building or public works of the Federal Government, and provides for the application of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act to such employees insofar as State compensation laws may not validly be made applicable to them. The bill thus follows the provisions of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act; and in order to avoid any ambiguity in, and inconsistency between, the provisions of S. 3238, it is recommended that the language of section 3 of the Longshoremen's Act (sec. 903, title 33, U. S. C.) be used throughout sections 3 and 4 of the proposed bill. Section 3 of the Longshoremen's Act provides in part as follows:

"Compensation shall be payable under this chapter in respect of disability or death of an employee, but only if the disability or death results from an injury occurring upon the navigable waters of the United States—including any drydocks—and if recovery for the disability or death through workmen's compensation proceedings may not validly be provided by State law."

It is assumed that the same result is intended under the proposed bill, namely, that contractors on Federal public buildings and public works shall provide workmen's compensation insurance under State laws where this may validly be provided by State law, and provide compensation insurance like that provided under the Longshoremen's Act where State laws may not be validly applied. It is suggested, therefore, that subsection (a) of section 3 be amended to read as follows:

"The contractor shall, before commencing performance of such contract, provide adequate workmen's compensation insurance in respect of the death or disability of any employee, recovery for which through workmen's compensation proceedings may not validly be provided for by the law of the State in which such contract is to be performed."

It is to be noted that this suggestion makes the test of the applicability of State laws depend upon whether or not such laws may be validly applied to the injury or death of the employee and not whether such laws may be applicable to the employee. It is obvious that employees engaged upon Federal public buildings and public works may also be engaged on other work undertaken by a contractor, and thus be protected by State workmen's compensation laws to that extent. As the bill is now drafted, subsection (c) of section 3 may be construed not to extend the provisions of the Longshoremen's Act to employees who may be partially protected by State laws, since such employees may not be deemed "employees on the work, recovery for whose injury or death through workmen's compensation proceedings may not validly be provided by State law." It is suggested that this subsection be revised to conform with the provisions of subsection (a) so as to read as follows:

"In respect of any injury or death of any employee, recovery for which through workmen's compensation proceedings may not validly be provided by State law, the contractor shall provide liability insurance to secure the payment of compensation orders pursuant to such provisions of chapter 18 of title 33 of the Code of Laws of the United States (act of Mar. 4, 1927, 44 Stat. 1424), as amended from time to time, as are made applicable by this act and the rules and regulations issued thereunder."

Similarly, section 4 and subsection (b) of section 3 should be harmonized to conform with the suggested revision of subsections (a) and (b) of section 3. In line 13, on page 4 of the bill, the word "provided" should be inserted in lieu of the word "proved." After the word "workmen's", in line 13, of page 3, there should be inserted in lieu of lines 14, 15, and 16, on page 3, the following: "compensation insurance in respect of the injury or death of any employee, recovery for which through workmen's compensation proceedings may not validly be provided by the laws of the State in which the contract is to be performed, but * * *."

Subsection (b) of section 5 seems to be ambiguous as to the effect of the failure on the part of any subcontractor to provide workmen's compensation insurance pursuant to an agreement under his contract. It is provided in that subsection that such failure shall be deemed to be a breach of contract by the contractor, but it is not clear whether it may also be a violation of the act, in view of the provisions of the first paragraph of section 3, which provides that a violation of any of the provisions of the subsections of section 3 shall be deemed a breach of the condition of the contract, and a violation of the act, subjecting the contractor to fine or imprisonment pursuant to section 5. If it is intended that such failure on the part of the subcontractor shall not constitute a violation of the act, though a breach of the contract, express provision should be made to that effect. There should be inserted in line 10, on page 3, after the word "contractor", the following: "but shall not be deemed a violation of this act."

The injuries or deaths, compensation for which the proposed bill seeks to provide, will generally occur on land which is subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, so that, therefore, employees covered by the proposed bill must be engaged in work on land which is subject to such exclusive jurisdiction. The act of February 1, 1928 (sec. 457, title 16, U. S. C.), provides as follows:

"In the case of the death of any person by the neglect or wrongful act of another within a national park or other place subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, within the exterior boundaries of any State, such right of action shall exist as though the place were under the jurisdiction of the State within whose exterior boundaries such place may be; and in any action brought to recover on account of injuries sustained in any such place the rights of the parties shall be governed by the laws of the State within the exterior boundaries of which it may be."

Since both this section and the provisions of S. 3238 provide remedies for deaths and injuries occurring on lands subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, it is desirable to provide expressly whether the remedies afforded by Revised Statutes 355 are impliedly repealed by the provisions of the proposed bill. If this result is not intended, it is suggested that the bill expressly provide that there may be an election to recover under Revised Statutes 355 or to recover under the applicable compensation laws.

Subject to the above suggestions, this Department recommends that the bill S. 3238 be enacted into law.

Very truly yours,

T. JEFFERSON COOLIDGE,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

POSTAGE STAMP TO COMMEMORATE FOUNDING OF HARVARD UNIVERSITY

The bill (S. 4483) to authorize the issuance of a special postage stamp in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of Harvard University was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General is authorized and directed to issue a special series of 3-cent postage stamps, of such design as he shall prescribe, in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of Harvard University.

TRAVELING AND SUBSISTENCE EXPENSES OF UNITED STATES JUDGES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4530) to amend the Subsistence Expense Act of 1926 by adding a new section to provide that section 259 of the Judicial Code, providing for traveling expenses of circuit justices, circuit and district judges actually incurred, and maintenance expenses in an amount not to exceed $10 per day, shall not be construed to be modified or repealed in any respect by any section of the Subsistence Expense Act of 1926, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That section 259 of the Judicial Code (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 28, sec. 374) is hereby reenacted, as follows:

"SEC. 259. The circuit justices, the circuit and district judges of the United States, and the judges of the district courts of the United States in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, shall each be allowed and paid his necessary expenses of travel, and his reasonable expenses (not to exceed $10 per day) actually incurred for maintenance, consequent upon his attending court or transacting other official business in pursuance of law at any place other than his official place of residence, said expenses to be paid by the marshal of the district in which such court is held or official business transacted, upon the written certificate of the justice or judge. The official place of residence of each circuit and district judge, and of each judge of the district courts of the United States in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, shall be at that place nearest his actual residence at which either a circuit court of appeals or a district court is regularly held. Every such judge shall, upon his appointment, and from time to time thereafter whenever he may change his official residence, in writing notify the Department of Justice of his official place of residence."

SEC. 2. The judges of the United States Customs Court shall each be allowed and paid his necessary expenses of travel and his reasonable expenses, not to exceed $10 per day, actually incurred for maintenance while absent from New York on official business.

SEC. 3. This act shall take effect July 1, 1936.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to reenact section 259 of the Judicial Code, relating to the traveling and subsistence expenses of circuit, district, and customs judges."

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I desire to say just a word about the bill just passed. In my opinion, this is one of the most forward-looking pieces of legislation we have had before us. It will do away with the necessity of having new Federal judgeships established. Because of the increase in the subsistence allowance, it will be possible for judges from small districts to go to the larger districts and carry on the work of the courts. I am very happy indeed that the Senate has seen fit to pass the bill.

CONVEYANCE OF LAND TO CLACKAMAS COUNTY, OREG.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9485) to convey certain lands to Clackamas County, Oreg., for public park purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment, on page 2, line 4, after the word "Provided", to strike out the words "That there shall be reserved to the United States, its patentees, or their transferees, the right to cut and remove therefrom the merchantable timber reserving to Clackamas County, Oreg., when such sale is made under the provisions of the act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218), a preference right to purchase the timber at the highest price bid," and to insert in lieu thereof the words, "That before patent issues Clackamas County shall pay to the United States the appraised price for the timber on the said lands, the money so paid to be deposited in the Oregon and California land-grant fund for distribution in the manner provided by section 10 of the act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218)", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to issue a patent to Clackamas County, Oreg., on behalf of the United States, for the southeast quarter southwest quarter, the northeast quarter southwest quarter, and the northwest quarter southeast quarter section 11, township 4 south, range 2 east, Willamette meridian, in the State of Oregon, containing 120 acres, more or less, on condition that such county shall accept and use such lands solely for public-park purposes; but if such county shall at any time cease to use such lands for public-park purposes, or shall permit the use of such lands for any other purpose, or shall alienate or attempt to alienate them, they shall revert to the United States: Provided, That before patent issues Clackamas County shall pay to the United States the appraised price for the timber on the said lands, the money so paid to be deposited in the Oregon and California land-grant fund for distribution in the manner provided by section 10 of the act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218).

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe all necessary regulations to carry into effect the foregoing provisions of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

PURCHASE OF LAND BY SCAPPOOSE, OREG.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9654) to authorize the purchase by the city of Scappoose, Oreg., of a certain tract of public land revested in the United States under the act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218).

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with amendments, on page 1, line 4, after the word "patent", to strike out the words "upon payment of $2.50 per acre, or fraction thereof"; on page 2, line 1, to strike out after the word "Provided", the words "That there shall be reserved to the United States, its patentees, or their transferees, the right to cut and remove therefrom the merchantable timber, which in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior may be cut and removed without material damage to the city reservoir, reserving to said city of Scappoose, when such sale is made under the provisions of the act of June 9, 1916, a preference right to purchase the timber at the highest price bid", and to insert in lieu thereof the words "That before patent issues the city of Scappoose shall pay to the United States the appraised price for the timber on the said lands, the money so paid to be deposited in the Oregon and California land-grant fund for distribution in the manner provided by section 10 of the act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218)", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to issue a patent to the city of Scappoose, Oreg., for the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter and the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 11, township 3 north, range 2 west, Willamette meridian, containing approximately 80 acres, subject to all valid existing rights at the time of the filing of the application by the city of Scappoose: Provided, That before patent issues the city of Scappoose shall pay to the United States the appraised price for the timber on the said lands, the money so paid to be deposited in the Oregon and California land-grant fund for distribution in the manner provided by section 10 of the Act of June 9, 1916, (39 Stat. 218).

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe all necessary regulations to carry into effect the foregoing provisions of this Act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

CHESAPEAKE BAY BRIDGE

The bill (S. 4488) authorizing the Chesapeake Bay Authority to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Chesapeake Bay, from a point in Baltimore County, Md., over Hart Island and Millers Island to a point near Tolchester, Kent County, Md., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the Postal Service, and provide for military and other purposes, the Chesapeake Bay Authority, a public body created under the laws of the State of Maryland, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Chesapeake Bay, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, from a point in Baltimore County, Md., over Hart Island and Millers Island to a point near Tolchester, Kent County, Md., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. The said Chesapeake Bay Authority is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

SEC. 3. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 40 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches; the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same; and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

SEC. 4. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

TEACHING OF COMMUNISM IN THE DISTRICT PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The bill (S. 4370) to repeal a proviso relating to teaching or advocating communism in the public schools of the District of Columbia, and appearing in the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will withdraw his objection.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I want to be perfectly frank with the Senator. I do not believe in communism, and I do not believe in its being taught in our schools, and I intend to object to this bill.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, this bill has nothing to do with the teaching of communism in our schools. There is no Member in this body who believes in that. Every educational organization in the United States has endorsed the bill, and churches of all denominations have endorsed it.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Regular order!

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to quote the following from the report of the Committee on Education and Labor:

HISTORY OF "RED RIDER" PROVISION

The provision of law which this bill, S. 4370, is intended to repeal was inserted as a rider by the House conferees in the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, approved June 14, 1935, in the fourteenth paragraph thereof, under the heading "Public schools", subheading "Miscellaneous", and reads as follows:

"Provided, That hereafter no part of any appropriation for the public schools shall be available for the payment of the salary of any person teaching or advocating communism."

The inclusion of the word "teaching" rendered it uncertain as to whether the facts about communism as a part of the social, economic, and political system of Russia, or any other country, might be presented in teaching world history, or any social studies in the public schools. Consequently, the matter was referred by the Board of Education to the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia for his opinion as to whether the facts of communism, or the social, economic, or political system of Russia, or any other country, could be taught or presented by any of the teachers in the social studies of the high schools in the District of Columbia.

The corporation counsel rendered an opinion that "* * * any teaching of communism which has for its purpose or its intended effect the nurture, the training, or the indoctrination of the pupils in communistic thought is forbidden by this statute. But I am of the opinion that the mere informing of pupils concerning the history, existence, or theories of the communistic governments, or parties, is not prohibited."

This opinion, apparently, was not concurred in by the Comptroller General of the United States, who ruled, in effect, that the teachers should not be permitted to teach the facts of communism by his decision. By his decision, there is now required a written statement by every teacher, prior to every salary payment, that during the preceding period of time to which the payment relates, he had not taught or advocated communism in any school of the District of Columbia, or elsewhere.

The result is that some 4,000 declarations must be checked over before the pay rolls for teachers are made out each pay day. If a teacher is ill or absent when the declarations are taken, she cannot get her pay until she has signed one. If any teacher were to violate this oath, she would be dealt with instantly and summarily.

The bill is designed to repeal the provision of law quoted, and I object to it.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order has been demanded.

Mr. WALSH. I ask unanimous consent to be allowed to make a very brief statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. WALSH. One of the many reasons behind the demand for the enactment of this measure is that the Comptroller General, by a decision, now requires a written statement by every teacher, prior to every salary payment, that during the preceding period of time to which the payment relates, he had not taught or advocated communism in any school of the District of Columbia, or elsewhere.

The result is that some 4,000 declarations must be checked over before the pay rolls for teachers are made out each pay day. If a teacher is ill or absent when the declarations are taken, she cannot get her pay until she has signed one. It is ridiculous and absurd, and I hope that when the calendar is called again the Senator will withdraw his objection.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, the practice of which the Senator complains is the fault of the administrative officers. There is nothing in the law which requires anything like that.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Regular order!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is demanded, and the clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

Mr. WALSH subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the report of the committee on Senate bill 4370.

There being no objection, the report (No. 2126) was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Report to accompany S. 4370]

The Committee on Education and Labor, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4370) to repeal a provision relating to teaching or advocating communism in the public schools of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with the recommendation that the bill do pass without amendment.

HISTORY OF "RED RIDER" PROVISION

The provision of law which this bill, S. 4370, is intended to repeal was inserted as a rider by the House conferees in the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, approved June 14, 1935, in the fourteenth paragraph thereof, under the heading "Public schools", subheading "Miscellaneous", and reads as follows:

"Provided, That hereafter no part of any appropriation for the public schools shall be available for the payment of the salary of any person teaching or advocating communism."

The inclusion of the word "teaching" rendered it uncertain as to whether the facts about communism as a part of the social, economic, and political system of Russia, or any other country, might be presented in teaching world history, or any social studies in the public schools. Consequently, the matter was referred by the Board of Education to the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia for his opinion as to whether the facts of communism, or the social, economic, or political system of Russia, or any other country, could be taught or presented by any of the teachers in the social studies of the high schools in the District of Columbia.

The corporation counsel rendered an opinion that—

"* * * any teaching of communism which has for its purpose or its intended effect the nurture, the training, or the indoctrination of the pupils in communistic thought is forbidden by this statute. But I am of the opinion that the mere informing of pupils concerning the history, existence, or theories of the communistic governments, or parties, is not prohibited."

This opinion, apparently, was not concurred in by the Comptroller General of the United States, who ruled, in effect, that the teachers should not be permitted to teach the facts of communism by his decision. By his decision, there is now required a written statement by every teacher, prior to every salary payment, that during the preceding period of time to which the payment relates, he had not taught or advocated communism in any school of the District of Columbia, or elsewhere.

The result is that some 4,000 declarations must be checked over before the pay rolls for teachers are made out each pay day. If a teacher is ill or absent when the declarations are taken, she cannot get her pay until she has signed one. If any teacher were to violate this oath, she would be dealt with instantly and summarily.

HOUSE COMMITTEE ACTION

Hearings on a similar bill (H. R. 11375) to repeal this so-called "red rider" were held by the Subcommittee on Education of the House Committee on the District of Columbia. In an excellent report (H. Rept. No. 2593) the committee unanimously recommended to the House the passage of the repeal amendment.

THE SENATE COMMITTEE REASONS FOR FAVORING THE REPEAL OF THE "RED RIDER"

First, the "red rider" should be repealed in the interest of the pupils of the public schools of the District of Columbia. These young persons should have the opportunity of getting acquainted with the principles of communism as well as with the principles of any other important economic or political system. If pupils do not learn about such movements in the schools, they will hear about them from partisan sources and will be more likely to look with favor upon the proposals of communism than if they obtained their instruction from competent and impartial teachers in the schools.

Second, the present bill should be enacted for the sake of the teachers in schools of the District of Columbia. The "red rider" has placed upon them an unjust stigma. In all the testimony that has been produced at congressional hearings, no reliable indications have appeared that any teacher in the District schools believes in communism—to say nothing about teaching it. The implication created by the "red rider", that the teachers need such a restraint, is gratuitous, ungenerous, and unworthy of the Congress of the United States.

Third, the "red rider" is likewise unfair to the School Board of the District of Columbia. This agency has the responsibility of protecting the pupils against doctrines in the classroom which are contrary to morality, patriotism, or the law of the land. No evidence has been produced tending to show that the School Board has been unfaithful to this responsibility. The contrary assumption which is carried in the "red rider" is a gratuitous insult to the Board.

Fourth, the extraordinary enactment which the present bill seeks to repeal is out of harmony with the American tradition of freedom of speech and teaching. According to this tradition, the freedom to express and teach wrong doctrines is a lesser evil than a policy of repression, that is to say, it is a smaller practical evil. The policy of repressing can easily be extended to cover doctrines which are beneficial to public welfare, merely on the ground that they are new or "radical." This situation has actually arisen in the congressional hearings on the "red rider"; for several apparently responsible persons have denounced well-known textbooks by well-known American historians on the ground that they are communistic, whereas they are merely progressive and speak in a friendly way of moderate measures of social and economic reform.

Fifth, the "red rider" is futile, since teachers who believe in communism (if there be any such in the public schools of the District of Columbia) will have no moral scruple against teaching communism in the schools and then taking an oath that they have not done so.

Sixth, as long as this astounding enactment remains unrepealed it will constitute a bad example for the legislatures of our several States. As long as it remains a part of the law of the District of Columbia, it will continue to hold the Congress in reproach in the eyes of all Americans who are faithful to American traditions and who possess common sense.

DANGEROUS PRECEDENT

The greatest danger to education lies in the attempt, under the guise of patriotism, to suppress freedom of teaching, inquiry, and discussion. If statutes such as this are to be enacted, it would not be long before similar enchoachments were imposed upon teachers in private schools, and then extended to require that such teachers shall not teach any particular kind of religion, or the principle of any political party, such as the Democratic, Republican, or the Farmer-Labor Parties. As has been pointed out by Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, any attempt to insure patriotism by oaths would have to require not only all teachers, but preachers, radio performers, newspapermen, movie directors, comic artists, and, most certainly, parents themselves to swear fealty.

Furthermore, a statute such as this is detrimental to the morale of the teachers and the students in the city of Washington. It is impossible to have a satisfactory relation between teacher and pupil when the latter knows that the teacher is forbidden to discuss certain subjects, such as Russia or communism. The consequence is that when these subjects are reached in the history and civics classes, the teachers are confronted by a law which forbids them to give the facts. Even in geography classes, teachers have omitted mention of Russia in the study of Europe. Indeed, evidence has been presented to members of the committee to the effect that in a few instances children in the public schools of Washington, whose parents are suspected of entertaining communistic views, have heckled teachers by asking them apparently innocent questions in regard to Russia and its present form of government, they knowing the restrictions upon the teachers. Of course, teachers may "explain" communism if they do not "advocate" it, but the testimony before the House committee indicates that no teacher would dare take advantage of this for fear of misrepresentation and resultant loss of employment. Whereas once teachers directed the minds of the children to the superiority of our institutions over the communistic, now this opportunity is lost, as they omit the section devoted to the Soviet Union.

ARGUMENTS OF OPPOSITION

The opposition to the "red rider" provision is based upon grounds that relate in no way to the merits or demerits of doctrines that are obnoxious to every member of the committee.

Those outside the Congress who favor the repeal of this clause have been as vigorous in denouncing the principles of communism as have the most vigorous advocates of the "red rider." Furthermore, the repeal of this provision would not give the Board of Education of the District of Columbia or the teachers authority or encouragement to advocate communism. In the opinion of the committee, the effect would be exactly to the contrary.

If the Senate supports the view of the committee and this law is repealed, the Board of Education will have full responsibility, which it should militantly exercise in preventing the use of radical textbooks in the schools and the employment of teachers inculcating subversive doctrines into the minds of the school children of Washington.

The committee have not overlooked the fact that the minds of pupils are impressionable and that they may be easily influenced by the crusading spirit of one who teaches subversive doctrines. Undoubtedly there are throughout the country students in colleges and universities, and perhaps in some high schools, who have been induced to join organizations where communistic policies are advocated. Such organizations and practices are regrettable and should be stamped out, but requiring an oath will not do it.

CONCLUSION

It is a satisfaction that no State has imitated the ill-advised law which Congress allowed to be placed in the school system of the District of Columbia. It is to be borne in mind that this language was inserted when the District of Columbia appropriation bill was in conference, and it was enacted without discussion and without advertence by a great majority of the Members of Congress—a reflection upon our national lawmakers. This injurious imputation cannot be removed too soon.

ELECTIONS IN PUERTO RICO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4528) to regulate the conduct of elections in Puerto Rico, which had been reported from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs with amendment, in section 4, on page 3, line 15, after the word "equal", to insert the word "voting"; on line 16, after the word "elections", to insert the words "throughout the election process"; on page 4, line 3, after the word "district" and the period, to insert the words: "In order to give full force and effect to the policy and intention of this section, not only in the election itself but throughout the election process, voting representation in the insular board of election and the local boards of election shall be as per the situation existing during the last preceding election in the island and in each senatorial and representative district thereof, until candidates for the next election shall have been duly nominated and registered", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the general election to be held in the island of Puerto Rico on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November 1936, and all processes related thereto, shall be carried out as determined by the legislative authority of Puerto Rico: Provided, That only citizens, male or female, registered in the Federal census of 1935–36 as being 21 years of age or over at the time of the election and who shall otherwise be qualified to vote, shall be entitled to vote in said election: And provided further, That the voting shall take place in enclosures, whether in buildings or in the open, in the following manner:

All voters except candidates and other persons for whom the laws of Puerto Rico make special provision must be within their polling place at noon, after which time no other person shall be allowed to enter the polling place for the purpose of voting. Upon entering the polling place, voters will receive a numbered card entitling them to vote in the order of their arrival. Voting shall then proceed as prescribed by law, the names being called from the list and the voting carried out secretly as prescribed by law. After voting each voter shall be allowed to leave the polling place. The election will continue in each polling place until every citizen therein, who has not been challenged according to law, shall have cast his or her vote.

The Governor of Puerto Rico may by proclamation change the time limit herein prescribed, and provide for the separate assembling and voting of men and women, if in his judgment such action would be conducive to more orderly voting, and may likewise prescribe the time limits for the voting of the men and for the voting of the women; but such action shall not be taken after the 1st of September preceding the election, nor without the consent of every political party represented on the board of elections, said consent to be given through unanimous resolution of said board.

SEC. 2. Any person who shall interfere with or attempt to prevent voting in the manner prescribed herein or by the laws of Puerto Rico shall be guilty of a felony and punished by imprisonment for not more than 5 years and not less than 1 year. The United States District Court for Puerto Rico and the insular district courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction over cases arising under this law.

SEC. 3. All provisions of this law, excepting the ones related to the Federal census of 1935–36, shall apply to all future elections in Puerto Rico.

SEC. 4. No law regulating elections shall be enacted by the legislative authority of Puerto Rico by virtue of which any candidate for the office of Resident Commissioner or for the insular senate or for the insular house of representatives is denied equal voting representation in the insular board of elections throughout the election process, the local boards of election throughout the election process, and in each polling place on election day, with other candidates running for the same office. This provision shall apply to candidates appearing on the ticket of any party which polled 10 percent or more of the entire vote of the island for Resident Commissioner in the last preceding election: Provided, That in each senatorial or representative district in which all parties have different candidates for the same office, each candidate shall be entitled to full representation in the local election boards, and in all polling places, within that district. In order to give full force and effect to the policy and intention of this section, not only in the election itself but throughout the election process, voting representation in the insular board of election and the local boards of election shall be as per the situation existing during the last preceding election in the island and in each senatorial and representative district thereof, until candidates for the next election shall have been duly nominated and registered. Any law or portion of law contrary to this section shall not be valid.

SEC. 5. The insular board of election, with the approval of the Governor, shall have power to make rules and regulations for the carrying out of the provisions of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Maryland whether it is necessary to have this elaborate bill in order to insure safe elections in Puerto Rico.

Mr. TYDINGS. It is. A few days ago I put into the RECORD a statement of the registrations in Puerto Rico, showing that in about 10 or 15 large cities the registrations amounted from 120 to 130 percent of the population. I am advised by responsible Puerto Rico leaders that unless such a bill as this shall be enacted there will be serious bloodshed in the elections which are to be held the coming fall. As I recall, about 17 persons were shot at the time of the last election, and Governor Winship has called a special session of the legislature to meet in anticipation of the enactment of this measure.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will remember that my colleague and I are really Senators from Puerto Rico, and we hope that the chairman of the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs will bear that in mind, because whatever touches the interests of Puerto Rico touches us.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me say to the Senator from New York that the committee has borne that in mind. I believe that the overwhelming preponderance of opinion in Puerto Rico is in favor of the enactment of the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COMMITTEE TO STUDY PUERTO RICAN INDEPENDENCE

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 270) to provide for the appointment of a committee to study the question of Puerto Rican independence was announced as next in order.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Maryland the significance of this joint resolution dealing with Puerto Rico?

Mr. TYDINGS. I shall be glad to inform the Senator. The administration is very anxious before any specific action is taken touching Puerto Rico that the matter be thoroughly investigated, and the joint resolution provides that a commission be created, four members to be appointed by the President of the Senate, four members by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, one member by the Secretary of State, one member by the Secretary of the Interior, and one member by the special executive authority of each of the four major registered political parties in Puerto Rico. Every point of view and statement of fact thereby will be available, and before the Senate takes any action we will have the whole picture before us. The commission is to be a fact-finding commission.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I find myself in sympathy with the measure. I thought it was a very precipitous thing to introduce a joint resolution providing for independence for the Puerto Rican people. The pending bill, I assume, is intended to provide for investigation and study of the situation.

Mr. TYDINGS. It gives every person his day in court.

Mr. COPELAND. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 270) to provide for the appointment of a committee to study the question of Puerto Rican independence, which had been reported from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs with an amendment, in section 1, page 1, line 3, after "committee of", to strike out "seventeen" and insert in lieu thereof "fifteen"; on the same page, line 6, after "President", to strike out "one member" and insert in lieu thereof "four members"; in line 7, after "Senate", to strike out "one member" and insert "four members", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby created a committee of 15 members to study the question of Puerto Rican independence, to be composed of a chairman to be appointed by the President, four members appointed by the President of the Senate, four members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, one member appointed by the Secretary of State, one member appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, and one member appointed by the central executive authority of each of the four major registered political parties in Puerto Rico, namely, the Liberal Party, the Republican Party, the Socialist Party, and the Nationalist Party.

SEC. 2. Said committee shall study the question of Puerto Rican independence in all its aspects, including the financial and economic relationships best suited to both the United States and Puerto Rico under such independence, and, in general, to inquire into the present and future relations between the United States and Puerto Rico. Said committee shall render its report to the President of the United States not later than January 20, 1937, and the President shall, within 30 days after receipt thereof, transmit said report, together with his recommendations thereon to the Congress.

SEC. 3. Said committee may hold hearings in the United States and in Puerto Rico. The members of the committee shall serve without compensation, but shall be reimbursed for all reasonable expenses incurred pursuant hereto, including traveling expenses, necessary clerical and stenographic assistance, and such other services as may be necessary or desirable to effectuate the purposes of this joint resolution.

SEC. 4. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $25,000 to cover the necessary expenses of said committee, including traveling expenses, rent in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, and contract stenographic reporting services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TRANSPORTATION OF PERSONS SERVING UNITED STATES IN VIRGIN ISLANDS

The bill (H. R. 7025) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to furnish transportation to persons in the service of the United States in the Virgin Islands, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TERM OF DISTRICT COURT, CLINTON, OKLA.

The bill (S. 4352) to provide for the establishment of a term of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Oklahoma at Clinton, Okla., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a term of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Oklahoma shall be held annually at Clinton, Okla., on the first Monday in October: Provided, That suitable rooms and equipment for holding court at Clinton shall be furnished without expense to the United States.

EXTENSION OF LAWS TO PUERTO RICO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1392) to extend the provisions of certain laws to the island of Puerto Rico, which had been reported from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 4, after "the" to strike out "island" and to insert "Territory"; on the same page, line 11, after the words "and the" to strike out "island" and insert "Territory"; and at the end of the bill to add a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, the Territory of Puerto Rico shall be entitled to share in appropriations now or which may hereafter become available for apportionment under the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes", approved July 11, 1916, and any act amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, upon the same terms and conditions as any of the several States, and the Territory of Puerto Rico shall be included in the calculations to determine the basis of apportionment of such funds: Provided, That the system of roads on which Federal-aid apportionments to the Territory of Puerto Rico shall be expended may be determined and agreed upon by the highway departments of said Territory and the Secretary of Agriculture without regard to the limitations in section 6 of the Federal Highway Act respecting the selection and designation of such system of roads; and, when the system first determined and agreed upon shall have been completed, additions thereto may be made in like manner as funds become available for the construction and maintenance of such additions.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I think by the bill it is intended to extend to Puerto Rico the privileges now enjoyed by the States, and therefore it seems desirable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

AIR CORPS OF THE UNITED STATES ARMY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11140) to provide more effectively for the national defense by further increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of the Air Corps of the Army of the United States, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 2, line 4, after the word "Provided", to strike out "That of the increase authorized herein not to exceed 4,000 serviceable airplanes, including equipment and accessories, shall be attained at any time during the next 5 years" and to insert in lieu thereof "That of the increase authorized herein not to exceed 2,320 serviceable airplanes, including equipment and accessories, are authorized to be obtained immediately", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the authorized strength in airplanes, equipment, and accessories of the Army Air Corps established by the act approved July 2, 1926 (44 Stat. 780), is hereby increased to such numbers as will permit the Secretary of War to complete the equipment and organization and to maintain in the Army Air Corps the special Army air organization known as G. H. Q. Air Force, and our overseas defenses, together with a 25-percent reserve for such forces, and to procure such other airplanes and equipment, including spare parts, supplies, and accessories, for such other purposes as are necessary to provide for the mission of the Army Air Corps: Provided, That of the increase authorized herein not to exceed 2,320 serviceable airplanes, including equipment and accessories, are authorized to be obtained immediately.

SEVENTIETH NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT, G. A. R.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 465) to amend the joint resolution of July 18, 1935, relating to the Seventieth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, to be held in the District of Columbia in September 1936, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That section 1 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution giving authority to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to make special regulations for the occasion of the Seventieth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, to be held in the District of Columbia in the month of September 1936, and for other purposes, incident to the said encampment", approved July 18, 1935, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to make such special regulations for the occasion of the encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic which shall take place in the District of Columbia during the month of September 1936 as they shall deem advisable for the preservation of public order and the protection of life and property, to be in force 1 week prior to said encampment, during said encampment, and 1 week subsequent thereto, such special regulations shall be published in one or more of the daily newspapers of the District of Columbia, and no penalty prescribed for the violation of such regulations shall be enforced until 5 days after such publication. Any person violating any of the aforesaid regulations, or the aforesaid schedule of fares, shall, upon conviction thereof in the police court of the said District, be liable for such offense to a fine not to exceed $100, and in default of payment of such fine to imprisonment in the workhouse (or jail) of said District for not longer than 60 days. This resolution shall take effect immediately upon its approval, and the sum of $15,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary, payable from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and from the revenues of the District of Columbia in equal parts, is hereby appropriated. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized, in conjunction with the citizens' executive committee of the Grand Army of the Republic, who shall be appointed by the said Commissioners, to expend the said sum of $15,000 to carry out the provisions of section 1 of this joint resolution, and for such expenses incident to the encampment as the said Commissioners, in their discretion and judgment, may deem advisable."

SEC. 2. That portion of section 5 of such joint resolution of July 18, 1935, which precedes the first proviso is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. That the Superintendent of National Capital Parks, subject to the approval of the Director of National Park Service, is hereby authorized to grant permits to the citizens' executive committee for the entertainment of the Grand Army of the Republic for the use of any reservation or other public spaces in the city of Washington on the occasion of the seventieth national encampment, in the month of September 1936, which, in his opinion, will inflict no serious or permanent injuries upon such reservations or public spaces, or statuary therein; and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia may designate for such and other purposes on the occasion aforesaid such streets, avenues, and sidewalks in the said city of Washington as they may deem proper and necessary for the erection of reviewing stands, platforms, or other structures, and that no person or corporation shall be authorized to erect or use such stands, platforms, or other structures without permission of said committee:".

CHALMETTE NATIONAL MONUMENT, LA.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5368) to provide for the addition of certain lands to the Chalmette National Monument in the State of Louisiana, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with amendments, in section 1, page 1, line 4, after "condemnation", to insert "out of any funds allocated or appropriated for the purpose or"; in line 6, after "funds", to strike out "and/or accept by donation, in behalf of the United States"; in line 7, after "easements, and", to strike out "buildings within 10 miles" and to insert "buildings, not to exceed an area of 98 acres in addition to the present area of 32 acres", so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to acquire, by purchase or by condemnation, out of any funds allocated or appropriated for the purpose or out of any donated funds, lands, easements, and buildings, not to exceed an area of 98 acres in addition to the present area of 32 acres, of the boundaries of the Chalmette National Monument as shall be designated by the Secretary of the Interior as necessary or desirable for the extension of said monument, and/or maintenance thereof, the title and evidence of title to lands acquired to be satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the State of Louisiana shall cede and transfer its jurisdiction to the property on which said monument is to be completed in accordance with the provisions of act no. 41 of the legislature of that State, approved July 19, 1902.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 10, to strike out section 2, as follows:

SEC. 2. That the areas now within the Chalmette National Monument and the Chalmette National Cemetery, together with such additions as may hereafter be made thereto, shall be known as the "Chalmette National Historical Park", under which name the aforesaid national park shall be entitled to receive and to accept all moneys heretofore or hereafter appropriated for the Chalmette National Monument and the Chalmette National Cemetery.

The amendment was agreed to.

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers, George W. Middleton, who was a member of the Sixth Company, Coast Artillery Corps, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a private of that organization on September 17, 1919: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to or after the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 4581) authorizing the payment of certain salaries and expenses of employees of the General Land Office was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, this is a very unusual bill. Without explanation, let it be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

JOHN EASTER HARRIS

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] if he is willing that the Senate recur to Calendar No. 2056, being Senate bill 3041?

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3041) to authorize the appointment of John Easter Harris as a major, Corps of Engineers, Regular Army, which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That upon the occurrence of a vacancy in the grade of major in the Regular Army such vacancy may be filled by the appointment by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, of John Easter Harris, if found physically qualified, as a major, Corps of Engineers, Regular Army, the rank held by him at the time of his separation from the service: Provided, That no pay or allowances antedating an acceptance under an appointment pursuant to this act shall accrue thereunder.

HARDING TOWN SITE, FLORIDA

The bill (S. 4707) for the relief of certain purchasers of lots in Harding town site, Florida, and for the relief of the heirs of Lewis G. Norton, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue a patent to any person who, as a result of an auction sale of lots in Harding town site, Florida, conducted during February 1924 by a representative of the Department of the Interior, agreed to purchase a lot in such town site and who, (1) prior to the date of approval of this act, has paid to the United States 75 percent or more of the agreed purchase price of such lot, or (2) within 12 months after the date of approval of this act makes payment to the United States which, together with payment previously made, amounts to 75 percent of the agreed purchase price of such lot.

SEC. 2. As used in this act, the term "person" includes an individual, partnership, corporation, or association.

SEC. 3. In view of the equities appearing in the decision of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida in the case of United States v. Norton, no. 2885 (14 Fed. (2d) 184), the unsold lots in said Harding town site, being lot 1 of block 4, lot 6 of block 5, lot 14 of block 7, and lots 4 and 11 of block 10, are hereby granted to the heirs of Lewis G. Norton, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to issue a patent therefor to the said heirs. This grant is made in satisfaction of all claims by the heirs against the United States in connection with said town site.

SNOQUALMIE NATIONAL FOREST, WASH.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4393) to authorize the revision of the boundaries of the Snoqualmie National Forest, in the State of Washington, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That any lands which are in private ownership within the following-described area, which are found by the Secretary of Agriculture to be chiefly valuable for national-forest purposes, may be offered in exchange under the provisions of the act of March 20, 1922 (42 Stat. 465), as amended by the act of February 28, 1925 (43 Stat. 1090), and upon acceptance of title shall become part of the Snoqualmie National Forest; and any lands in public ownership lying within such described area found to be valuable for national-forest purposes may, upon recommendation of the Secretaries of Agriculture and of the Interior, be added to the Snoqualmie National Forest by proclamation of the President, subject to valid existing claims:

Township 20 north, range 7 east, sections 1 and 12;

Township 21 north, range 7 east, sections 1, 12, 13, 24, 25, 36;

Township 20 north, range 8 east, sections 1 to 30, inclusive, and sections 20 to 24, inclusive;

Township 21 north, range 8 east, all;

Township 20 north, range 9 east, sections 7 to 15, inclusive;

Township 20 north, range 10 east, sections 7, 13, 17 to 24, inclusive, sections 27, 28, and 29;

Township 27 north, range 10 east, west half section 16, all section 17, east half section 18, northeast quarter section 19, north half section 20, northwest quarter section 21;

Township 20 north, range 11 east, sections 17, 18, and 19;

All Willamette base and meridian.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CRATERS OF THE MOON NATIONAL MONUMENT, IDAHO

The bill (H. R. 7930) to eliminate certain lands from the Craters of the Moon National Monument, Idaho, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the north half and north half of the south half section 16, township 2 north, range 24 east, Boise meridian, Idaho, be, and the same are hereby, eliminated from the Craters of the Moon National Monument.

MAMMOTH CAVE NATIONAL PARK, KY.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11791) to make available for national-park purposes certain lands within the area of the proposed Mammoth Cave National Park, Ky., which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment, in section 1, page 1, line 10, after "purpose", to insert "and the proviso at the end of section 1 of said act of May 25, 1926, is hereby repealed", so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That all lands purchased from funds heretofore allocated and made available by Executive order, or otherwise, or which hereafter may be allocated and made available for the acquisition of lands for conservation of forestation purposes within the maximum boundaries of the Mammoth Cave National Park as authorized by the act of May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 635), be, and the same are hereby, made a part of the said park as fully as if originally acquired for that purpose and the proviso at the end of section 1 of the said act of May 25, 1926, is hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 12220) to authorize the adjustment of the boundary of the Fort Marion National Monument, Florida, in the vicinity of Fort Marion Circle, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. COPELAND. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

G. A. TROTTER

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of G. A. Trotter, former superintendent and special disbursing agent of the Zuni Indian Agency, for payments aggregating $102.40 made to Will Halloran as mileage for the use of his personally owned automobile while performing his official duties as road supervisor in the Indian Service.

KICKAPOO INDIANS OF OKLAHOMA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4152) validating certain conveyances by Kickapoo Indians of Oklahoma made prior to February 17, 1933, providing for actions in partition in certain cases, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments, in section 1, page 1, line 3, after "conveyances", to insert "made to Ira L. Couch, A. J. Ownby, Fred L. Rooker, Wallace Estell, Jr., J. D. Shepherd, or any of them, or to their grantors"; on the same page, line 8, after the word "quarter", to insert "of northwest quarter"; on page 2, line 17, after "were", to insert "made after September 11, 1922, and"; and in line 20, after the date "1933", to strike out "or to have been" and to insert "are hereby", so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That all conveyances made to Ira L. Couch, A. J. Ownby, Fred L. Rooker, Wallace Estell, Jr., J. D. Shepherd, or any of them, or to their grantors purporting to convey an inherited interest in Kickapoo lands allotted in Oklahoma in and to the following-described real estate, to wit: The northeast quarter of northwest quarter, and lot 1 of the northwest quarter section 19, township 12 north, range 2 east; lot 11, northeast quarter section 17, and lot 3, northeast quarter section 18, and lot 3, northeast quarter section 20, and lot 2, northwest quarter section 20, and lot 2, northeast quarter section 18, township 12 north, range 1 east; the north half southeast quarter section 19, township 11 north, range 3 east; the northwest quarter southeast quarter and lot 2 of the southeast quarter section 8, township 12 north, range 1 east; lot 4 of section 16, lot 5 of section 17, and lot 1 of section 20, township 12 north, range 1 east; lots 3 and 4 of the northeast quarter section 7, township 12 north, range 1 east; west half southeast quarter section 3, township 11 north, range 2 east; east half southeast quarter section 3, township 11 north, range 2 east; east half northeast quarter section 10, township 11 north, range 2 east; lots 7 and 8 of the southeast quarter section 13, township 11 north, range 2 east; the north half southeast quarter section 4, township 11 north, range 2 east, where such instrument or instruments were made after September 11, 1922, and recorded in the office of the registrar of deeds for the county in which said lands are located, prior to February 17, 1933, are hereby ratified and confirmed as valid conveyances of an inherited interest.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Indian Affairs was, in section 2, page 3, line 12, after "therein", to insert "except where such grantee is a restricted Indian", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That any such grantee, his heirs or assigns, in any such deed conveying an undivided interest to any part of said land may maintain a suit to partition the same against any restricted Indian who is a part owner of said lands in the United States

District Court for the Western District of Oklahoma in accordance with the law governing partitions in the State of Oklahoma. The United States shall be made a party to such action, and jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon such court to hear and determine such causes, and service may be had on the United States by serving one copy of the petition or bill in equity on the United States attorney for the western district of Oklahoma 41 days before said cause is set for trial, and any conveyance ordered made by said court in such proceedings shall operate to remove all restrictions on the lands conveyed to the grantee therein, except where such grantee is a restricted Indian.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOINT RESOLUTIONS PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 415) to carry out the intention of Congress with reference to the claims of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota against the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, this seems to be contrary to the recommendations of the Department, and I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 207) to amend the act of July 3, 1926, entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment in claims which the Crow Tribe of Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes" (44 Stat. L. 807) was announced as next in order.

Mr. COPELAND. I ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York withhold his objection for a moment? This is a Senate joint resolution which the Crow Indians are very anxious to have passed. It gives the Supreme Court jurisdiction to determine whether or not the Crow Indians, who were given inadequate consideration under a mistake of facts, be given the opportunity to present their matter in the Court of Claims. If the court so finds, then the court is given effective jurisdiction to render judgment notwithstanding previous action.

Mr. COPELAND. I find adverse reports from the Department, and it seems to me that it is so significant a thing, going back to an old claim, that certainly we ought not to pass the joint resolution without some consideration. I am sorry, but I must object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

EZRA CURTIS

The bill (H. R. 10174) for the relief of Ezra Curtis was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DIAMOND JUBILEE COMMITTEE, YANKTON, S. DAK.

The bill (S. 4643) authorizing the Secretary of War to lend certain Army equipment to the Diamond Jubilee Committee, Yankton, S. Dak., for the accommodation of persons attending the celebration to be held by such committee during June 1936 was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of the Joint Resolution No. 11, approved March 2, 1913, as amended, the Secretary of War is authorized to lend, at his discretion, to the Diamond Jubilee Committee, Yankton, S. Dak., for use in the accommodation of persons attending the celebration to be held by such committee at Yankton, S. Dak., from June 7, 1936, to June 13, 1936, both dates inclusive, such Army equipment, including regular Army tents, cots, and blankets, as such committee may deem necessary for such purpose. No expense shall be caused the United States Government by the delivery and return of such property, the same to be delivered from the nearest quartermaster depot at such time prior to such celebration as may be agreed upon by the Secretary of War and such committee; and the Secretary of War, before delivering such property, shall take from such committee a good and sufficient bond for the safe return of such property in good order and condition and the whole without expense to the United States.

FLORENCE KERR FACEY

The bill (S. 3733) authorizing the issuance of a patent to certain lands in the State of Montana to Florence Kerr Facey was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions and limitations of the act entitled "An act to provide for agricultural entry of lands withdrawn, classified, or reported as containing phosphate, nitrate, potash, oil, gas, or asphaltic minerals", approved July 17, 1914, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to issue, upon payment of final commissions, to Florence Kerr Facey, of Havre, Mont., an unrestricted patent to the east half northwest quarter, and lots 1 and 2, section 19, township 32 north, range 33 east, Montana principal meridian (Great Falls, 053718), upon her filing an abstract of title to the land showing her to be the equitable owner thereof, save for the pendency of any application for a permit or lease thereof under the act approved February 25, 1920, and paying into the land office at Great Falls, Mont., the sum of $6.

VINCENT FORD

The bill (S. 4625) for the relief of Vincent Ford was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to place Second Lt. Vincent Ford, Army Air Corps Reserve, upon the retired list of the Army with three-fourths of the active-duty pay of his grade: Provided, That a duly constituted Army retiring board finds that the said Vincent Ford is incapacitated for service by reason of physical disability incurred in the line of duty: Provided further, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

PERCY C. WRIGHT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1769) for the relief of Percy C. Wright, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to place First Lt. Percy C. Wright, Army Air Corps Reserve, upon the retired list of the Army with three-fourths of the active-duty pay of his grade: Provided, That a duly constituted Army retiring board finds that the said Percy C. Wright is incapacitated for service by reason of physical disability incurred in the line of duty: Provided further, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossd for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF BANKRUPTCY ACT

The bill (H. R. 8940) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States, approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto" was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of that bill.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I wish to inquire whether this is the same bill passed by the Senate 2 or 3 weeks ago?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised by the clerk that this is substantially the bill recently passed by the Senate. The bill was recalled from the House and recommitted, and has been reported by the Senate Committee on the Judiicary, and is now on the calendar with an amendment.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. In view of the fact that the Senate acted upon it, I do not believe that as a matter of order of business the bill could be disposed of in the short time allowed under the calendar proceeding, and I shall ask that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CONSTRUCTION AT MILITARY POSTS

The bill (S. 4722) to authorize appropriations for construction at military posts, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $33,675,135, to be expended for the construction and installation at military posts of such buildings and utilities and appurtenances thereto as may be necessary, as follows: Provided, That appropriations for this purpose are authorized for 4 fiscal years, in amounts for each approximately as follows: For the first fiscal year, a total of $8,929,376; for the second fiscal year, a total of $8,435,828; for the third fiscal year, a total of $8,426,699; for the fourth fiscal year, a total of $7,883,232:

ARTICLES OWNED BY PRESIDENT AND MRS. GEORGE WASHINGTON

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, from the Committee on the Library, I report back favorably the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 237) to provide for the appraisal and purchase of certain articles owned by President and Mrs. George Washington, and I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

There being no objection, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 237) to provide for the appraisal and purchase of certain articles owned by President and Mrs. George Washington was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby created a commission, to be composed of the Secretary of the Senate, the Clerk of the House of Representatives, and the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, or his duly authorized representative, to appraise the value of the following articles which were formerly owned by President and Mrs. George Washington and which are now on display at the United States National Museum by permission of the present owners: One marquee tent, one marquee tent roof, three tent poles, 23 tent pins, two tent pouches, and one iron treasure chest. The commission is authorized to purchase such articles on behalf of the United States at a price not to exceed the value of such articles as appraised by the commission. Such articles when purchased shall remain on display at the United States National Museum.

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this joint resolution.

DEPORTATION OF CRIMINAL ALIENS

Mr. COOLIDGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to recur to Calendar No. 1210, being Senate bill 2969.

Mr. WHEELER. I object to that. That bill was debated on the floor for some time.

Mr. COOLIDGE. May I make an explanation?

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator may make an explanation, but I shall object to the bill being taken up by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. COOLIDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Montana withhold the objection so that I may state that it is proposed to offer for the bill a substitute which has been agreed upon?

Mr. WHEELER. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. McNARY. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is demanded, and the hour of 1 o'clock having arrived——

CERTAIN SALARIES OF GENERAL LAND OFFICE EMPLOYEES

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senate to recur to Calendar No. 2249, being Senate bill 4581?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asks the present consideration of a bill the title of which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 4581) authorizing the payment of certain salaries and expenses of employees of the General Land Office.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, this bill proposes to provide for the payment of the salaries of a number of employees of the Department of the Interior for work which has already been done. It was assumed that the money was available until the Comptroller General decided that the particular funds were not available for the payment of these salaries.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, when that bill was reached I objected to it, because there was no explanation, but since hearing the explanation, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection the bill (S. 4581) authorizing the payment of certain salaries and expenses of employees of the General Land Office was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the allotment to the General Land Office under section 1, title II, of the Emergency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, of $163,000 for necessary office work incident to surveys and resurveys of the public lands, is hereby extended and made available for said purpose for the period of July 1 to September 11, 1935, inclusive, and the payment of unpaid salaries for said period is hereby authorized, and the General Accounting Office shall allow credit in disbursing officers' accounts for salaries and expenses so paid for said period.

CORPORATE REORGANIZATIONS UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY LAW

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I objected when order of business 2264, being House bill 8940, was reached and asked that it go over. With the understanding with the Senator in charge of the bill that if tomorrow when I ask for a reconsideration of the bill, if I shall then decide to do so, there will be no objection, I will withdraw my objection to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I ask unanimous consent that the bill may now be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of House bill 8940?

Mr. KING. What is the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 8940) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States, approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto."

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, on page 4, line 20, after the word "value of", to strike out "secured debts" and insert "security"; in line 21, after the word "over" to insert "but which in no event need amount to more than $25,000, and three or more creditors who have provable claims against a corporation principally engaged in owning, holding, or selling real estate, real-estate mortgages, or oil and gas royalties, or three or more holders of beneficial interest certificates in a common-law trust, principally engaged in owning, holding, or selling real estate, real-estate mortgages, or oil and gas royalties which amount in the aggregate, in excess of the value of the security held by them, if any, to $1,000 or over"; and on page 5, in line 18, after the word "appointed", to insert "or a receiver has been appointed for the collection of rents and profits from property constituting not less than 50 percent of the debtor's property, or a bond has been approved in lieu of such receivership in a foreclosure proceeding by a court of competent jurisdiction before which any such proceeding is pending, or a trustee under an indenture, mortgage, or deed of trust covering not less than 50 percent of the debtor's property, has taken possession thereof," so as to make the section read:

That subdivision (a) of section 77B of the act of July 1, 1898, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", as amended, be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 77B. Corporate reorganizations: (a) Any corporation which could become a bankrupt under section 4 of this act, and any railroad or other transportation corporation, except a railroad corporation authorized to file a petition or answer under the provisions of section 77 of this act, and except as hereinafter provided, may file an original petition, or, before adjudication in an involuntary proceeding, an answer, or in any proceeding pending in bankruptcy, whether filed before or after this section becomes effective, provided the present operations of such corporation do not exclude it hereunder, and whether or not the corporation has been adjudicated a bankrupt, a petition stating the requisite jurisdictional facts under this section; the nature of the business of the debtor; in brief description, the assets, liabilities, capital stock, and financial condition of the debtor; if a prior proceeding is pending, the name of the court in which it is pending and the nature of such proceeding; facts showing the need for relief under this section; and that the corporation is insolvent or unable to meet its debts as they mature and that it desires to effect a plan of reorganization. The petition shall be filed with the court in whose territorial jurisdiction the corporation, during the preceding 6 months or the greater portion thereof, has had its principal place of business or its principal assets, or in any territorial jurisdiction in the State in which it was incorporated. The court shall, upon petition, transfer such proceedings to the territorial jurisdiction where the interests of all the parties will be best subserved. The petition or answer shall be accompanied by payment to the clerk of a filing fee of $100, which shall be in addition to the fees required to be collected by the clerk under other sections of this act. Upon the filing of such a petition or answer the judge shall enter an order either approving it as properly filed under this section if satisfied that such petition or answer complies with this section and has been filed in good faith, or dismissing it. If the petition or answer is so approved, an order of adjudication in bankruptcy shall not be entered and the court in which such order approving the petition or answer is entered shall, during the pendency of the proceedings under this section, have exclusive jurisdiction of the debtor and its property wherever located for the purposes of this section, and shall have and may exercise all the powers, not inconsistent with this section, which a Federal court would have had it appointed a receiver in equity of the property of the debtor by reason of its inability to pay its debts as they mature. The corporation shall be referred to in the proceedings as a 'debtor.' Any corporation the majority of the capital stock of which having power to vote for the election of directors is owned, either directly or indirectly through an intervening medium, by any debtor, or substantially all of whose properties are operated by such debtor under lease or operating agreement, may file, with the court in which such debtor had filed its petition or answer, and in the same proceeding, a petition stating that it is insolvent or unable to meet its debts as they mature and that it desires to effect a plan of reorganization in connection with, or as a part of, the plan of reorganization of such other debtor; and thereupon such court, if it approves such petition, shall have the same jurisdiction with respect to such corporation, its property, and its creditors and stockholders as the court has with respect to such other debtor. Three or more creditors who have provable claims against any corporation which amount in the aggregate to not less than 5 percent of the total amount of all indebtedness of such corporation as shown by a balance sheet, as of a date within the preceding 12 months, of the corporation or by its latest annual report or by its books and which amount in the aggregate, in excess of the value of security held by them, if any, to $1,000 or over, but which in no event need amount to more than $25,000, and three or more creditors who have provable claims against a corporation principally engaged in owning, holding, or selling real estate, real-estate mortgages, or oil and gas royalties, or three or more holders of beneficial interest certificates in a common-law trust, principally engaged in owning, holding, or selling real estate, real-estate mortgages, or oil and gas royalties which amount in the aggregate, in excess of the value of the security held by them, if any, to $1,000 or over, may, if such corporation has not filed a petition or answer under this section, file with the court in which such corporation might file a petition under this section, a petition stating the requisite jurisdicitonal facts under this section, the nature of the business of such corporation, a general description of its assets, liabilities, capital stock, and financial condition, if a prior proceeding in bankruptcy or equity receivership is pending, the name of the court in which it is pending and the nature of such proceedings, facts showing the need of relief under this section, that such corporation is insolvent or unable to meet its debts as they mature, and if the corporation has not been adjudicated a bankrupt, or a receiver of the corporation has not been appointed, or a receiver has been appointed for the collection of rents and profits from property constituting not less than 50 percent of the debtor's property, or a bond has been approved in lieu of such receivership in a foreclosure proceeding by a court of competent jurisdiction before which any such proceeding is pending, or a trustee under an indenture, mortgage, or deed of trust covering not less than 50 percent of the debtor's property, has taken possession thereof, that it has committed an act of bankruptcy within 4 months preceding the date of the filing of the petition, and that such creditors propose that it shall effect a reorganization; and such corporation shall, within 10 days after the service of a copy of such petition upon it, answer such petition. If such answer shall admit (a) the jurisdiction of the court, and (b) the material allegations of the petition, the court shall enter an order approving the petition as properly filed under this section if satisfied that it complies with this section and has been filed in good faith, or dismiss it if so satisfied. If such answer shall deny any material allegation of the petition, the judge shall determine summarily the issues presented by the pleadings, without the intervention of a jury, and if the material allegations of the petition are sustained by the proofs and the court is satisfied that the petition complies with this section and has been filed in good faith, it shall approve the petition; otherwise the court shall dismiss the petition; and if any such petition shall be so approved, the proceedings thereon shall continue with like effect as if the corporation had itself filed a petition or answer under this section. In case any such petition or answer or proceedings shall be dismissed in the manner provided in this subdivision (a) or in subdivision (c), clause (8), of this section, the same shall not constitute an act of bankruptcy or an admission of insolvency or be admissible in evidence, without the consent of the debtor, in any proceedings then or thereafter pending or commenced under this act or in any Federal or State court. If three or more creditors who have provable claims which amount in the aggregate in excess of the value of securities held by them, if any, to $1,000 or over, or if stockholders holding 5 percent in number of all shares of stock of any class of the debtor outstanding shall, prior to the hearing provided for in subdivision (c), clause (1), of this section appear and controvert the facts alleged in the petition or answer, the judge shall determine as soon as may be the issues presented by the pleadings, without the intervention of a jury, and unless the material allegations of the petition or answer are sustained by the proofs, the proceedings shall be dismissed."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, on page 12, line 23, after the word "the", to strike out "judges" and insert "judge", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. Subdivision (c) of section 77B of the act of July 1, 1898, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Upon approving the petition or answer or at any time thereafter, the judge, in addition to the jurisdiction and powers elsewhere in this section conferred upon him, (1) may, after hearing upon notice to the debtor and to such others as the judge may determine temporarily continue the debtor in possession or appoint a trustee or trustees of the debtor's estate, and shall require the debtor, or such trustee or trustees, if appointed, to give such notice as the order may direct to creditors and stockholders and to cause publication thereof to be made at least once a week for 2 successive weeks of a hearing to be held within 30 days after such appointment, or, if no such appointment, within 30 days after the approval of the petition or answer, at which hearing or any adjournment thereof, or at any subsequent hearing after notice, the judge may make permanent any such appointment, or terminate it and restore the debtor to possession, or, if no trustee has been appointed, may appoint a trustee or trustees, and may remove any such trustee or trustees and continue the debtor in possession or appoint a substitute trustee or trustees and may appoint an additional trustee or trustees: Provided, however, That if the debtor is continued in possession, or if the management of the debtor is appointed trustee, no compensation shall be allowed the management as trustee in addition to the compensation of the management as salary, which salary shall not be in an amount greater than the salary of which the management was in receipt at the time of the approval of the petition or answer; (2) shall fix the amount of the bond of every such trustee, and every such trustee, upon filing such bond, shall have all the title and shall exercise, subject to the control of the judge and consistently with the provisions of this section, all the powers of a trustee appointed pursuant to section 44 of this act, and if authorized by the judge, the same powers as those exercised by a receiver in equity to the extent consistent with this section, and, subject to the authorization and control of the judge, the power to operate the business of the debtor during such period, fixed or indefinite, as the judge may from time to time prescribe; (3) may, for cause shown, authorize the debtor or the trustee or trustees, if appointed, to issue certificates for cash, property, or other consideration approved by the judge for such lawful purposes, and upon such terms and conditions and with such security and such priority in payments over existing obligations, secured or unsecured, as may be lawful in the particular case; (4) shall require the debtor, or the trustee or trustees if appointed, at such time or times as the judge may direct, and in lieu of the schedules required by section 7 of this act, to file such schedules and submit such other information as may be necessary to disclose the conduct of the debtor's affairs and the fairness of any proposed plan; and may direct the debtor, or the trustee or trustees if appointed, to prepare (a) a list of all known bondholders and creditors of, or claimants against, the debtor or its property, and the amounts and character of their debts, claims, and securities, and the last known post-office address or place of business of each creditor or claimant, and (b) a list of the stockholders of each class of the debtor, with the last known post-office address or place of business of each, which lists shall be open to the inspection of any creditor or stockholder of the debtor, during reasonable business hours, upon application to the debtor, or to the trustee or trustees, if appointed, and the contents of such lists shall not constitute admissions by the debtor or the trustees in a proceeding under this section or otherwise; (5) may direct the rejection of contracts of the debtor executory in whole or in part; (6) shall determine a reasonable time within which the claims and interests of creditors and stockholders may be filed or evidenced and after which no such claim or interest may participate in any plan, except on order for cause shown, the manner in which such claims and interests may be filed or evidenced and allowed, and, for the purposes of the plan and its acceptance, the division of creditors and stockholders into classes according to the nature of their respective claims and interests; and may, for the purposes of such classification, classify as an unsecured claim, the amount of any secured claim in excess of the value of the security therefor, such value to be determined in accordance with the provisions of section 57, clause (h), of this act; (7) shall cause reasonable notice of such determination and of all hearings for the consideration of any proposed plan, or of the dismissal of the proceedings, or the liquidation of the estate, or the allowance of fees or expenses, to be given creditors and stockholders by publication or otherwise; (8) if a plan of reorganization is not proposed or accepted within such reasonable period as the judge may fix, or, if proposed and accepted, is not confirmed, may, after hearing, whether the proceeding be voluntary or involuntary, either extend such period or dismiss the proceeding under this section or, except in the case of a railroad or other public utility or of a debtor which has not been found by the judge to be insolvent, direct the estate to be liquidated, or direct the trustee or trustees to liquidate the estate, appointing a trustee or trustees if none shall previously have been appointed, as the interests of the creditors and stockholders may equitably require; (9) may allow a reasonable compensation for the services rendered and reimbursement for the actual and necessary expenses incurred in connection with the proceeding and the plan by officers, parties in interest, depositaries, reorganization managers, and committees or other representatives of creditors or stockholders, and the attorneys or agents of any of the foregoing and of the debtor, but appeals from orders fixing such allowances may be taken to the circuit court of appeals independently of other appeals in the proceeding and shall be heard summarily; (10) in addition to the provisions of section 11 of this act for the staying of pending suits against the debtor, may enjoin or stay the commencement or continuation of suits against the debtor until after final decree; and may, upon notice and for cause shown, enjoin or stay the commencement or continuance of any judicial proceeding to enforce any lien upon the estate until after final decree; and (11) may refer any matters to a special master, who may be one of the referees in bankruptcy, for consideration and report, either generally or upon specified issues, and allow such master a reasonable compensation and reimbursement for his services and actual and necessary expenses. The debtor shall have the right to be heard on all questions. Any creditor or stockholder shall have the right to be heard on the question of the permanent appointment of any trustee or trustees, and on the proposed confirmation of any reorganization plan, and upon filing a petition for leave to intervene, on such other questions arising in the proceeding as the judge shall determine. In case a trustee is not appointed, the debtor shall continue in the possession of its property, and, if authorized by the judge, shall operate the business thereof during such period, fixed or indefinite, as the judge may from time to time prescribe, and shall have all the title to and shall exercise, consistently with the provisions of this section, all the powers of a trustee appointed pursuant to this section, subject at all times to the control of the judge, and to such limitations, restrictions, terms, and conditions as the judge may from time to time impose and prescribe. While the debtor is in possession (a) its officers shall be entitled to receive only such reasonable compensation as the judge shall from time to time approve, and (b) no person shall be elected or appointed to any office, to fill a vacancy or otherwise, without the prior approval of the judge."

The next amendment was, on page 13, after line 10, to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 3. The first sentence of subdivision (m), section 74, of the act of July 1, 1898; entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", as amended, be, and it is hereby, amended to read as follows: "The filing of a debtor's petition or answer seeking relief under this section shall subject the debtor and his property, wherever located, to the exclusive jurisdiction of the court in which the order approving the petition or answer as provided in subsection (a) is filed, and this shall include property of the debtor in the possession of a trustee under a trust deed or a mortgage, or a receiver, custodian, or other officer of any court in a pending cause, irrespective of the date of appointment of such receiver or other officer, or the date of the institution of such proceedings: Provided, That it shall not affect any proceeding in any court in which a final decree has been entered unless the debtor's right of redemption has not expired."

That section 74, subsection (e), be amended to read as follows: "An application for the confirmation of a composition or extension proposal may be filed in the court of bankruptcy after, but not before, it has been accepted in writing by a majority in number of all creditors whose claims if unsecured have been allowed, or if secured are proposed to be affected by an extension proposal, which number must represent a majority in amount of such claims; and the money or security necessary to pay all the costs of the proceedings, and in case of a composition, the consideration to be paid by the debtor to his creditors have been deposited in such place as shall be designated by and subject to the order of the court. After the first meeting of the creditors as provided in subdivision (c), the debtor fails to obtain the acceptance of a majority in number of all creditors whose claims are affected by an extension proposal representing a majority in amount, the debtor may submit a proposal for an extension, including a feasible method of financial rehabilitation for the debtor which is for the best interest of all the creditors, including an equitable liquidation for the secured creditors whose claims are affected."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was on page 14, after line 24, to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 4. The provisions of subdivision (a) of said section 77B, as amended by this amendatory act, except that which requires three or more creditors to have provable claims amounting to not less than 5 percent but not less than $1,000 nor more than $25,000 of the total amount of all indebtedness of such corporation in the manner set forth in said section to file a petition under said section, shall apply to all petitions under said section 77B filed prior to the effective date of this amendatory act which shall not have been approved prior to said date. The provisions of sections 2 and 3 of this amendatory act shall apply to all proceedings under sections 74 and 77B pending on the effective date of this act in which a plan of extension or composition or reorganization has not been finally confirmed by the court or judge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, after line 13, to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 5. The first sentence of subdivision (i) of section 77B of the act of July 1, 1898, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", is amended by striking out all of the first sentence of said subdivision (i) after the words "if the petition or answer is approved" and inserting the following in lieu thereof "The trustee or trustees appointed under this section, or the debtor if no trustee is appointed, shall be entitled forthwith to possession of and vested with title to all property of the debtor, including property in the possession of any receiver or prior trustee, whether appointed by a court or otherwise, and the judge shall make such orders as he may deem equitable for the protection of obligations incurred by such receiver or prior trustee and for the payment of such reasonable administrative expenses and allowances as may be fixed by the court in any proceeding in which such receiver or prior trustee was appointed."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I wish to interrogate the Senator in charge of the bill with respect to one point. Does this bill contain a provision that would excuse guarantors and sureties from turning in their assets in an equal degree with the principal?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I do not know that I understand the question of the Senator. I think the Senator is referring to a different measure than that under consideration.

Mr. AUSTIN. That is what I am trying to find out. If this is the bill that contains that provision, I should object to its consideration.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. This bill does not contain the provision to which the Senator alludes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 12027) to authorize the execution of plans for a permanent memorial to Thomas Jefferson, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 1252. An act for the relief of Odessa Mason;

H. R. 6163. An act for the relief of Mrs. Murray A. Hintz;

H. R. 9496. An act to protect the United States against loss in the delivery through the mails of checks in payment of benefits provided for by laws administered by the Veterans' Administration;

H. R. 10565. An act for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brien; and

H. J. Res. 525. Joint resolution to enable the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission to carry out and give effect to certain approved plans, and for other purposes.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 1 o'clock having arrived, under the unanimous-consent agreement the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Barkley	Borah	Byrd
Austin	Benson	Brown	Byrnes
Bachman	Bilbo	Bulkley	Capper
Bailey	Black	Bulow	Caraway
Barbour	Bone	Burke	Carey
Chavez	Hastings	Minton	Smith
Clark	Hatch	Moore	Steiwer
Coolidge	Hayden	Murphy	Thomas, Okla.
Copeland	Holt	Murray	Thomas, Utah
Couzens	Johnson	Neely	Townsend
Davis	Keyes	Norris	Truman
Dieterich	King	O'Mahoney	Tydings
Duffy	La Follette	Overton	Vandenberg
Fletcher	Loftin	Pope	Van Nuys
Frazier	Lonergan	Radcliffe	Wagner
George	Long	Reynolds	Walsh
Gerry	McAdoo	Robinson	Wheeler
Gibson	McGill	Russell	White
Glass	McKellar	Schwellenbach
Guffey	McNary	Sheppard
Hale	Maloney	Shipstead

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. MCNARY obtained the floor.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President——

Mr. MCNARY. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. HASTINGS. I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment, as amended, beginning on page 29, line 24, and extending down to and including line 10 on page 30, was agreed to and also to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] relating to the Florida canal to the committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, may we have the motion stated?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to be informed as to just what portions of the committee amendment the Senator from Delaware is moving to reconsider.

Mr. HASTINGS. I am moving to reconsider the vote whereby the amendment was adopted permitting the engineers to report on the Florida ship canal and the President, after such report, to expend certain sums of money.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If the Senator will bear with me his motion, then, is confined exclusively to the so-called Robinson amendment?

Mr. HASTINGS. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. President, I do not at this time propose to make any remarks in respect to the motion I have just entered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Delaware desire the present consideration of the motion, or does he merely enter the motion to reconsider?

Mr. HASTINGS. I merely wish to enter the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion of the Senator from Delaware will be entered.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I wish to discuss generally the bill now pending before the Senate. I desire to see if I can emphasize its importance, and I want in the first place to review briefly the situation with respect to the Treasury of the United States.

On June 30, 1933, 4 months after the present administration came into power, the reports show that during that fiscal year there was expended by the Government $5,142,953,627, representing the largest expenditures up to that time in the history of the country during peace times. The appropriations for the fiscal year 1934 were greater than those for the fiscal year 1933 by $1,962,096,458, there thus being nearly a $2,000,000,000 increase in expenditures in 1934 over those of the year 1933.

In 1935 the expenditures exceeded those of 1934 by $270,775,081.

In 1936, the present year, the Director of the Budget estimates the expenditures, exclusive of the bonus, will be $302,884,708 more than was expended in the year 1935.

The estimate for 1937 exceeds the estimate for 1936, exclusive of the bonus, by $593,844,497.

Thus if we take a 5-year period beginning with 1933, with an expenditure of $5,142,953,627, and add the accumulated expenditures each year over the other, we get a total increase in the year 1937 over the year 1933 of $3,129,600,743, making the total for the next year, $8,272,554,370.

When we are called upon to give to the President of the United States another sum amounting to $1,425,000,000, and bearing in mind the experience we have had with the $4,880,000,000 voted last year and the $3,300,000,000 voted the previous year, it seems to me it is time to consider seriously where this expenditure is to end and what is to happen to the country if it does not soon end.

Much has been said in the press, on the floor of the Senate, in the House of Representatives, and at other places, about how easy it is to raise sufficient funds to meet the so-called necessary expenses of the Government—necessary from the point of view of the present administration. We are now told—we have been so told by certain members of the Finance Committee—that the way to raise additional revenue is to get it from those who have the ability to pay, namely, those who are in the upper brackets of the income taxes, and from the wealthy corporations which have large surpluses, and so forth.

The President himself has referred to large corporations and to persons with large fortunes as being "industrial autocrats."

Mr. President, I invite attention to a fact which it seems to me is important to be considered by those who have the notion that these huge sums of money can be raised from such sources. The testimony before the Finance Committee during the pendency of the present revenue measure showed that the Treasury Department itself estimated that the entire statutory income, subject to taxation, of all the corporations in the United States during the year 1936 would amount to $7,200,000,000, so that if we should take all that the corporations earned and apply it to the demands of the President of the United States for the coming fiscal year, we would find that we were short the sum of $1,072,554,370.

If we add to that sum of $1,072,000,000 all the money that is received from individual income taxes, amounting to $936,000,000, we would still be short something like $136,000,000. Bear in mind if we should take all the income of all those corporations and then should take the income taxes of all the people who pay into the Federal Treasury and should add them together, we would still be short $136,000,000.

I think it is pretty generally conceded that we cannot go very much higher in the surtax brackets than we have already gone, because at the present time there are citizens who are paying into the Federal Treasury 75 percent of all their incomes. I take it that if we should go much beyond that point it would be held that we were beyond the bounds of reasonableness and that we could not take more without being charged with confiscating the fortunes of those people.

Let me invite attention to a further fact. If we should take all the present income as estimated by the Treasury of the United States and undertake to pay the deficit and balance the Budget, and if we did it by taking all of it from the corporations, it would be necessary to increase the taxes of the corporations from the present rate of 15 or 16 percent to 57 or 58 percent.

Mr. President, it seems to me these figures demonstrate that there must be some other means of meeting these expenses or of cutting down the expenses of the Government, which would be the very much more sensible thing to do.

In order that I may show to those who believe they ought not to be concerned and have no reason to be concerned about the taxes which are necessary to be levied in order to run the Government, let me invite their attention to the fact that without the corporations and without the tax we are now levying against them, the credit of the Federal Government probably would be destroyed.

The alcoholic beverage tax, according to the estimate of the Treasury, amounts to $554,800,000. The tobacco tax amounts to $504,044,000. The manufacturing excise taxes, which are called the nuisance taxes, amount to something over $400,000,000. The only thing that is not directly affected, though I suppose the free traders would argue that the people are also affected by it, is the customs income, which amounts to $354,000,000.

If I have demonstrated that we cannot meet the expenses by corporation taxes, if we cannot meet them by increasing the income taxes, then I say the people of the country are entitled to know that these huge expenditures must be reduced or finally all the people of the Nation will be directly taxed in order to meet the obligations and expenses of the Government.

I invite attention to these matters at this time because we are now called upon to pass a bill which, in my judgment, when we bear in mind the evidence which has been produced before the country as to what happened to previous appropriations like it, shows upon its face that the money will be in a large part wasted and not used for the purposes for which the Congress intends.

Let me pass on now from that general picture of the financial situation and give brief consideration to the bill itself.

I made a speech on the floor of the Senate with respect to the $4,880,000,000 appropriation. I made some predictions then with respect to it. I believe the evidence and developments since the appropriation of that sum of money clearly show that my warnings and the warnings of other Senators at that time ought to have been heeded by the Congress. We are again called upon to do what? To appropriate to the President of the United States, to expend as his discretion may dictate, $1,450,000,000, for what purpose? For relief and work relief on useful projects in the United States.

No such thing as that ever happened until this administration came into power. No such authority had been granted by any Congress up to the time we were called on to pass a $3,300,000,000 fund. No such thing as that had ever happened before, because the Congress remembered the history of its own country, remembered what happened when the great Declaration of Independence was signed and when the Constitution was written, remembered the history of England, and remembered how the people fought to get control and to get away from the king the right to levy the tax. But bear in mind that that is only one important part of our freedom. The right to levy a tax is only a part of it. The expenditure of the tax after it is collected is just as important; and it is just as important to hold on to that power as it is to hold on to the taxing power itself.

What have we done? In my judgment, we have destroyed all the precedents that have built America and upon which we have builded a great country. We have done the one thing which, in my judgment, puts us nearer a dictatorship than any other suggestion that could be made or any other course that could be taken. Whenever the Congress of the United States either loses control of the taxing power and passes it over to some other person or loses control of the purse, loses control of the tax after it has been collected, that minute we start to imitate some great country in Europe which thinks it is getting along well under a dictatorship; that minute we start to destroy America; that minute we start to destroy the Republic.

I say this, Mr. President, in all seriousness, and I say it as perhaps the last thing I expect to say in the Senate: I know some persons will say, and may say today for all I know, that this is merely the "swan song" of a Republican who is more interested in his party than he is in his country. Mr. President, that is not true. That is not true of many men in the Senate. That is not true of many New Dealers. The point is, they are mistaken, and I know they are mistaken, and I wish to issue this last warning as a patriotic citizen of America.

Mr. President, it would be bad enough if this thing went no further than to give advantage to one political party over another. That is what the bill does. Nobody doubts it any more. The evidence is entirely too clear to have any question raised about it. Everybody knows it; and at the time we all spoke of the $4,880,000,000 appropriation as a campaign fund for the Democratic Party. It may be that that statement was somewhat exaggerated, because none of us intended to charge that the whole sum of money would be used for campaign purposes; but we did intend to charge, and we charge anew, with all the evidence at hand that any reasonable person needs, that it has been so used, either with or without the approval of the President of the United States. It makes no difference whether we can prove that he approves the use of the money in that manner or not; the fact that it has been done, and the fact that the President has control of the money is sufficient of itself to condemn him in the minds of the American people. They will condemn him, and they will do so in no uncertain terms.

It may be true, for all I know, that there are enough persons in this country who can be purchased to control an election. It may be that America can be corrupted sufficiently if a sufficient fund is available. I am not yet satisfied that it can be done. I am not yet satisfied that American principles have been lost by either the poor or the ignorant of America. I believe, after all, when the time comes, America will show its true colors, regardless of how much corruption there may be on the part of the New Dealers, regardless of how much money there may be in the hands of the local politicians, ready to be handed over to this man or that man, to convince them that they ought to vote this way or that way in order to keep their jobs.

No, Mr. President; I have not lost faith in America. I do say, however, that Congress has no right to give anybody the opportunity to do the things they are sure to do when we pass this kind of a bill. That is the complaint I have. My complaint is of the Congress itself, not of the people of the United States. The Congress has no authority to do any such thing as this.

Let me cool off a little and come back to a discussion of the bill itself. Is it any wonder that men get excited when they consider a thing like this?

I desire to call attention to some of the details of this bill. Bear in mind that the President is given the absolute right, as the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] called to the attention of the Senate the other day, to spend all this money, just so he can sufficiently identify it to call it "relief" or "work relief." With that qualification, there is no limit to what he may do. Not a single dollar of it is compelled to go in any particular direction.

The whole amount is subject to the President's discretion; and if he can pin on it the badge of "relief" or "work relief", he is within the terms of the measure we are about to pass.

The bill is camouflaged a little bit, and perhaps it is helped some by a provision that—

> This appropriation shall be available for the following classes of public projects, Federal and non-Federal—

It does not make a bit of difference whether or not the Federal Government is interested in the project at all. It may be Federal or non-Federal.

> and the amounts to be used for each class shall not, except as hereinafter provided, exceed the respective amounts stated, namely: (a) Highways, roads, and streets, $413,250,000.

That simply means that the President may not spend for that purpose out of this fund more than that sum, with the qualification that it may be increased 15 percent in his discretion.

The Constitution of the United States states that Congress may provide for the construction of post offices and post roads; but did it ever occur to anybody to give to the President of the United States sufficient money to go into the State of Pennsylvania and build the kind of road he desired to build in Pennsylvania, beginning at whatever place he cared to start from, and ending at whatever place he wished to go to? If the Congress desired to build a road in Pennsylvania under that provision of the Constitution, the most natural thing for it to do would be to have before it a survey of the road, with a description of it, and with a reasonable estimate as to what it would cost, and then we would authorize its construction.

Under this bill, however, the President does not have to do anything of the kind. He may go and build a street in some town in Pennsylvania, and then he may go into another State and build a piece of road, or he may go into a town in some other State and build a street there. There is no limit to where the President may go; and I ask, in all fairness, is that sort of a situation necessary? Is that sort of a situation desirable, even if it be within the terms of the Constitution itself?

Then the bill goes on to provide for the construction of public buildings. Is the Congress today prepared to permit the President to go into my State and build a public building for the State at the expense of the Federal Government and to be used by the State? He may do just that under this bill, and the State does not have to contribute a dime toward the cost of construction.

I should be inclined to give the President some authority with respect to public buildings, but I certainly should confine it to Federal buildings. It never would occur to any reasonable man in Congress, unless he were pressed on by the ambitious President of the United States, to give anybody any such authority as that.

The distinguished Senator from Idaho said the other day:

> We could appropriate money to John Doe to build a bridge, and he might build it. He might make a mistake, but that would be within the Constitution, because that would be administrative.

That is all very true, but we certainly would know where the bridge was to be built when we appropriated the money. We ought to know where it was to be built, and we ought to know what kind of a bridge was to be built, when we appropriated the money.

But let me pass on. That is not all of it. The President may use this money for—> parks and other recreational facilities, including buildings therein; * * * public utilities, including sewer systems, water supply, and purification, * * * flood control * * *, assistance for educational, professional, and clerical persons.

Mr. President, I desire to call attention to this matter, and I should like to have the chairman of the committee or someone else, if he knows, tell me to what this refers. Here is a provision, "Women's projects, $85,500,000."

Will someone tell me how descriptive that is of what Congress wants done? Is anyone going to vote for a bill, under normal conditions, which comes here appropriating $85,500,000 for "Women's projects"? If such a bill were introduced and sent to a committee, I inquire, what would be the first thing the members of the committee would do about it? I suppose they would have some hearings with respect to it, and they would call in the person who introduced the bill. They would try to find out what he meant, and when they found out what he meant they would write it into the bill. They would not leave any fool thing like this on the statute books. The whole business is silly.

I started to say it was crooked, but I might be misunderstood. I do not mean that. The committee which considered the matter did a fine job, so that I could not use that language; but I say it is perfectly silly to leave on the statute books a provision whereby we appropriate $85,500,000, plus a possible 15-percent addition, making $100,000,000, for "Women's projects."

I should like to know what a woman's project is. I will tell the Senate what it is, or may very well be under this measure. A woman's project is some kind of a project which has been conceived in the mind of some woman such as Mrs. Roosevelt, or some other socialistically inclined person. That is what it means when it refers to women's projects, some project conceived in some woman's mind; and if she happens to get it from her husband and it did not come from her own mind first, it would not come within the law, because that would be a man's idea, and the law therefore would not be applicable.

Women's projects. Does that mean what I have described? I ask someone to tell me whether that is what it means. If it is not, then tell me what it does mean.

Women's projects may mean, perhaps, some kind of projects whereby women are employed. If so, what kind of projects are they? Let us be specific if we want to use any sense at all in passing legislation.

There are some other things here which are even more wide open than that. There is a provision for "Miscellaneous work projects, $71,250,000."

I know something about what miscellaneous means. I know that that is intended to cover any kind of a project one can think of. I say to the Senator from Oregon it may be that that has some advantage in it, because while I could not possibly read into this bill a provision that the President was confined to these things mentioned in the bill, it may be that that is the case when we take into consideration that we have appropriated so much and said that he can use this for roads and streets, that he can use the other for public buildings, he can use this much for women's projects, and when we make provision for "miscellaneous work projects" it may be reasonably argued that he is confined to these things which have been specified in the bill.

Oh, the Senator shakes his head, and I think he is absolutely correct; there is no such hope as that. It cannot be confined to that, and just as certainly as that we live the President will find some new scheme, some new kind of boondoggling of which no one ever before heard, before he gets very far with this $1,425,000,000, because we all know who is going to run it, and we are apprehensive because we know who is going to run it. We know Harry Hopkins is going to do this job, and while the Senator from Oregon has said he has done a better job than some other could have done, possibly, God knows that is not good enough for real benefit anywhere.

I am opposed to putting $1,425,000,000 into the hands of some social worker, some man who has had no experience at all in business, who knows nothing about the payment of taxes, who in all his life probably has never paid $5,000 in taxes. That is how much experience he has had as a businessman and as an important man in the country. If he does not find something new to do with it, he will be disappointed, and the people of the United States will be greatly surprised, at least.

Mr. President, talk about this thing being constitutional! If it is constitutional, we ought to tear up the Constitution itself. I shall not try to argue whether it is constitutional or not, because we do not need to argue it. We know, if we know anything about America's history, that it is unconstitutional. We know it is against the principles for which America has stood, and that ought to be sufficient.

But I must not take long in dealing with a thing which is so absurd on its face that it should not have consideration from intelligent people in any part of the world. It is so silly that I cannot describe it without being offensive. I do desire to speak for a few minutes about our experience with it so that no man who votes for it may be surprised.

I think it is our duty to point out the evidence we have at hand; and while that would take entirely too long, there are some high points in it to which I desire to call the attention of the Senate.

The country knows that with all the effort we have put forth we have not been able to get a resolution out of the committee approving an investigation of the expenditure of the huge sum of money we have appropriated in the past. Why do they not let us have it? They know they dare not. If there was a true picture put in language so the people could understand all the devilment that has gone on with the money we have heretofore appropriated, if that could be laid before the Senate and the country, you would not dare even consider another appropriation like it.

I, like the Senator from Oregon, do not attach any particular blame to Harry Hopkins. I think he is doing as well as he could do; and that is not saying much. I do not charge him with doing anything dishonest. I do not even charge him with doing things for the benefit of the New Deal politically. I know he has the wrong concept of relief in the United States.

We have heard both political parties urge upon the country the desirability of the improved condition of every citizen, but not until this went into the law did we find that it was necessary to improve the relief conditions in the United States. We have tried to improve the standard of living of the people of the United States. That has been what we have sought to do for years. But Hopkins comes along and wants to improve the relief conditions in the United States, just as the Senator from Oregon pointed out in the fine speech he made upon this subject the other day.

I say that when you begin with that sort of thing, and when you turn over a billion, four hundred and twenty-five million dollars to a man who has that kind of a scheme in his mind, you are running this country into obligations from which our children and our children's children will never be able to extricate it.

With respect to his politics, he has one cardinal thought in his mind, and it is very important. It is very important from Mr. Farley's point of view. He agrees with Mr. Hopkins a hundred percent. Mr. Hopkins says, "I would be a damn fool if I should pick somebody to run the W. P. A. who did not believe in the New Deal."

Mr. Farley knows how to get around that. That is perfectly satisfactory to him, because it does not make a bit of difference to him whether the votes next November come from the Democratic Party or from the Republican Party, just so he gets them. So he takes on Republicans who are committed to the New Deal. That is not the kind of Republicans we care anything about; they have no place in the Republican Party. And they turn Democratic. So that we find all this W. P. A. money being administered by Democrats. I apologize to the Democrats, and I will phrase it this way: It is being administered by the New Deal, which is an entirely different thing from any Democrat I know anything about.

Mr. President, I wish to give the Senate a little evidence, though not all the evidence I have, because Senators are too anxious to adjourn the present session for me to take so much time. However, I wish to read a few extracts from certain evidence I have. I want to call attention in the first place to the charges repeatedly made in the Senate by the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], and, just as he has pointed out, you dare not try to find out whether those charges are true. He has made charges upon the floor of the Senate and produced affidavits in support of the truth of his charges, and you dare not investigate to show that the charges are not true.

The junior Senator from West Virginia however is not the only Senator who has made charges in this respect. I now read from the Indianapolis Star of April 24, 1936, with regard to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS]. I read this short story:

Federal funds are being used through the W. P. A. to elect delegates favorable to the nomination of Lt. Gov. M. Clifford Townsend for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Senator FREDERICK VAN NUYS charged last night after investigating numerous complaints he said he had received.

"This sort of thing must stop in Indiana and elsewhere", the Senator declared.

"I will take this to the floor of the United States Senate and to the high places", he said.

The Senator charged that his investigations during his first day in Indianapolis after returning from Washington showed that Democratic precinct committeemen are being employed as foremen or supervisors at a salary of $150 a month in order that they may control their local delegates.

"The practice is so extensive that it must have at least the tacit approval of those in charge", the Senator said.

The practice of using W. P. A. money to line up delegates has been going on for several months, VAN NUYS asserted.

"Investigations made by me here today proved to me that the charges are true. In every instance where I made an investigation it proved to be right", VAN NUYS declared.

Then, Mr. President, I desire to call attention to three articles which recently appeared in the Washington Post. The headlines are:

VOTES—AT ANY COST—THE AUTHENTIC STORY OF THE BUILDING OF A W. P. A. POLITICAL JUGGERNAUT IN WESTCHESTER COUNTY, N. Y., AT THE EXPENSE OF THE HUNGRY

By Agnes E. Meyer

Mrs. Meyer has been chairman of the Westchester County recreation commission for the past 13 years.

Mr. President, I desire to read the conclusion of those three articles. Those who read them must be convinced that there was real evidence to support every charge made. However, Mrs. Meyer, at the conclusion of the third article had this to say:

> And yet President Roosevelt, on pretext of the high production cost, opposes firmly the earmarking of moneys to Public Works Administration (P. W. A.), which in our county appears to be effective and honestly administered. It seems incredible that Members of Congress would turn over the entire billion and a half to President Roosevelt for W. P. A. if they knew conditions in Westchester County. Surely the facts and figures stated here are an unanswerable argument for turning work relief back to local authority even if Federal participation is provided. It would seem as if Congress were devoid not only of all feeling of responsibility to the American people, but of ordinary common sense if the W. P. A. is supplied with another fortune to squander without any check other than Mr. Hopkins' supervision.
> For what I have shown here is merely a hasty summary of what is actually going on in Westchester County, and therefore presumably throughout the country. Even my own material is more ample. What forms of skulduggery the large and extremely secretive forces of W. P. A. are able to conceal can only be surmised. An official investigation of W. P. A. would make my story book like Sunday reading for a neophyte.
> To sum up the case:
> I accuse W. P. A. of using large sums of public money intended for the alleviation of unemployment, to build a Democratic political machine.
> I accuse W. P. A. of discriminating between American citizens in a most despotic way for political purposes.
> I accuse W. P. A. of petty extortion from defenseless relief cases to finance local political organization.
> I accuse W. P. A. of waste, extravagance, and rank incompetence.
> I accuse W. P. A. of having so intimidated the people that its tyrannical power is a menace to a free Nation.
> And, finally, in the light of the facts presented in these articles, I accuse the present administration of seeking vast new appropriations from Congress for W. P. A., not in the interests of the Nation, but to insure its own continuation.

Mr. President, that is a serious charge made by a respectable and well-known woman in a highly valuable and well-known newspaper of Washington.

What has happened? Did Mr. Hopkins say anything in reply? No; he goes over to the House and hides behind the skirts of a woman Congressman who undertook to defend what had gone on in New York, and she showed conclusively by her efforts to defend that she knew practically nothing of what was going on in that county.

Mr. President, I wish to demonstrate one thing here today with respect to that fund. I wish to call attention to the State of Pennsylvania and to show to the Senate that Hopkins has stated publicly that Jones, the administrator, is one of the best administrators he has in the United States. It is that charge and with that information at hand, assuming that Hopkins was correct in saying that Administrator Jones was the best man that he had in the country, that caused me to make some inquiry with respect to the State of Pennsylvania. I have evidence here enough to last several hours in reading to the Senate. That is not the only reason I picked on Pennsylvania. I picked on Pennsylvania for another reason. In Pennsylvania the State legislature has adopted a resolution authorizing the investigation of W. P. A. in the State of Pennsylvania.

Before I get through I propose to show what this administration is doing to prevent that investigation from becoming effective. I have prepared a comparatively brief statement of the situation with respect to Jones in Pennsylvania. I propose to read it to the Senate and in this way put it in the RECORD, because I want the country to know the kind of a man who is administering this huge sum in the great State of Pennsylvania. I want to show that, like Hopkins, he has had practically no experience, and whatever experience he has had is of a shady character and one that would not warrant a careful man in selecting him for any particular and important job.

An examination of the files of the Construction Digest, published by the Digest Publishing Co., with offices in the Century Building, 130 to 134 Seventh Street, Pittsburgh, Pa., brings into existence an illustrated history which begins with an undersized four-page trade paper, and ends with the exhibit of an issue whose fat advertising columns should make it the envy of any publisher in the country.

The Construction Digest was founded by Edward Noel Jones, the present administrator of the Works Progress Administration in Pennsylvania, of whom Harry L. Hopkins has acclaimed to the country by medium of the press that Edward N. Jones is the best Works Progress administrator in the United States.

It is strange, indeed, that such a reputation should be so quickly won by a man who, during an extraordinary and comparatively brief business career, has launched many businesses on the sea of enterprise, all of which foundered and sank beneath the waves of feverish circumstances until their originator was swept by political winds into the haven of a prodigal and improvident Democratic administration.

I am reading the words of the man who made his own personal investigation, and I vouch for all that he said.

I should have said every single one of the many Jones enterprises has had "period" written after each experience; and even now the Construction Digest, the only one to continue in existence, does not bear his name at the masthead.

This trade paper, conceived as an aid and a possible requisite to contractors and builders, came into existence 7 years ago and probably owes its origin to the fact that Mr. Jones, while operating a ready-mixed cement company which he had organized, came in contact with many contractors. It may indeed go beyond that, for a few years previous, while acting as secretary to a former Pittsburgh mayor, Wm. Addison Magee, Jones' associates were contractors engaged in street and boulevard and bridge building. It makes no difference what contractor may have suggested or inspired the establishment of such a trade paper, the important fact is that Edward N. Jones worried through a period which is known to and may be shown to have been most precarious until, having made the lucky guess that the sun was to rise upon the Democratic Party, however brief it may shine, the editor enlarged his activities to include the publicizing of several Democratic campaigns. On the masthead of Construction Digest appears the name of Edward N. Jones, president, H. S. Yundt, treasurer. Then below, as is required by the Pennsylvania State law, appears the names of the editor, business manager, and advertising manager, who are Edward N. Jones, H. S. Yundt, and R. C. Muncaster. In the same position is printed the information that the Digest is published Wednesday and Saturday of each week; that it reports on all construction in Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, and tri-State territory, meaning the region including western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio, and northern West Virginia; that it also publishes all highway construction news from this territory, and, an important thing to keep in mind, that this little 4-page trade paper may be subscribed to at the rate of $20 per year. There also appears adjacent to the masthead a 3-inch block of official advertising of the United States Government for bids on a Federal Public Works construction job—just the one little ad, but a starter.

Referring to exhibit no. 2, which is issue 541, published February 2, 1935, we find that the Construction Digest is still published in the name of Edward N. Jones, president and editor; but exhibit no. 3, issue 542, published 4 days later, or on February 6, 1935, has a change in the masthead. The name of Edward N. Jones has been dropped; but coincident with this deletion, the name of Edward N. Jones appeared on the pay roll of the State of Pennsylvania in the capacity of secretary of labor and thereafter until the present day, during which interim there has been much advancement and much praise from Mr. Hopkins and much condemnation from various sources, including organized labor, for Mr. Jones. The Construction Digest also underwent a change. It waxed fat and obviously became profitable. A glance at exhibit no. 4, which is a photostat of pages 4 and 5 of issue 610, October 2, 1935, of this one-time 4-page publication, now expanding on occasions to 12 pages in a single issue, reveals what is technically known as a "double-truck spread", which means a full 2-page advertisement, inserted by a company manufacturing road-building machinery and construction power engines; and then exhibit no. 5 presents a photostat reproducing pages 2 and 3 of issue 625, published November 23, 1935, which shows the paper to be profitably heavy, and by that is meant "absolutely crowded", almost to the exclusion of news items, with official advertising on projects arranged by the Public Works Administration of the State of Pennsylvania.

These advertisements are accredited to various counties in the State of Pennsylvania, this particular page displaying official advertising of the Board of Public Education, city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County; Hampton Township, Allegheny County; city of Dubois, Pa.; township of McCandless, Allegheny County; Millerstown, Pa., and so forth. It is worth noting that this class of advertising is paid for in Allegheny County at the rate of $2.50 per inch, which may safely be assumed to be the rate for official advertising quoted generally, if quotations are ever necessary, to all municipalities in the State. As an instance of the value of official advertising of even one county, the following amounts which are officially recorded are quoted: In 1934 the Digest was paid $453.76 by Allegheny County for official advertising. In 1935, the year during which Jones was connected with the State Government and also W. P. A. administrator, Allegheny County paid to the Digest the sum of $1,491.25, and so far in the year 1936, for 3 months, the account already has reached $500 and promises to greatly exceed the figures for 1935 if the present rate continues.

There are 67 counties in the State of Pennsylvania, and P. W. A. work is proceeding in many of them. Also, with contracting work being given a stimulus, it is said the circulation of the Digest at $20 a year has increased by leaps and bounds and at present includes every contractor who either has or hopes to be connected with public work. This photostatic record presents more than a circumstantial indication of progress and profit incident to the political advancement and the assumption of political power by the founder of the Construction Digest, and it is not likely that anyone familiar with the sudden growth and experience of this journal will attribute its more recent prosperity to any sentimental interest on the part of its founder, who now finds himself so engrossed in arranging and supervising the expenditure of an important proportion of a billion dollars within the confines of Pennsylvania, to give the slightest attention to any of his business exploits prior to his happy landing in the Pennsylvania Democratic administration.

It has been definitely established that in some manner or other all of the business and political connections of Edward N. Jones have evolved from publications of one kind or another. His early association with the Honorable JOSEPH GUFFEY, a Member of the United States Senate, began back in 1914 at a time when Mr. Jones, after a brief and hurried apprenticeship as a cub reporter on Pittsburgh newspapers, began the publication of a periodical which he named the "Harpoon" and which name incidentally attached itself to the editor, who at that time became known as "Harpoon" Jones. It is still remarked in the city of Pittsburgh, especially by those who felt the point of the reckless-voiced Harpoon, that the publication was well named. It attained a reputation as a muckraking sheet on a limited but rather specific scale, and among the reforms it attempted was that of the Pittsburgh Railway Co.

This is not important, but it is incidental in that after reproducing a few reports of an investigation of the railway company made by Attorney C. K. Robinson, who then was a member of the law department of the city of Pittsburgh under Mayor William A. Magee, then serving his first term, and which greatly perturbed the company because it presented facts ordinarily considered beyond the possible discernment of a young muck-raking editor and discoverable only to the mature and trained attorney, these articles quickly ceased, and in their stead appeared full-page advertisements of the Philadelphia Co., the parent of the Pittsburgh Railways Co. The Harpoon had a brief existence, and its editor entered into businesses of different character, none of which was fortunate to live, until the World War and the appointment of JOSEPH GUFFEY to the post of director, bureau of sales, under the Alien Property Custodian, brought Mr. GUFFEY and Mr. Jones together, the latter in the capacity of a public relations and advertising man, but curiously enough without official "portfolio" or attachment. The experiences of Mr. Jones during this period of several years have no direct relation to the subject under discussion, but it is worth noting that Mr. Jones communicated with friends of the former Mayor William A. Magee, who by this time was a Republican candidate for the second time for chief executive of the Pittsburgh government, and arranged that he could return to Pittsburgh and when he did so his astuteness and energy recommended him to be included in the Magee publicity staff. Magee was elected and Edward N. Jones became his secretary. The head of the Magee publicity staff, Mr. L. H. Goshorn, was named treasurer of Pittsburgh. Everybody about City Hall knew that Mayor Magee was having trouble because of the vaulting ambition of his secretary, Jones, who, when there was a vacancy in his cabinet due to the death of his public safety director, insisted that he was entitled to the place. Magee thought otherwise and whether or not he knew of a feud developing within his administration, he took the action to at least mollify strong feelings which had developed between Jones and Mr. Goshorn by appointing the youthful-appearing Jones the superintendent of police of the great City of Pittsburgh. Those were feverish times in the history of Pittsburgh and its people. Because of its geographical situation and the relative location of great scores of bonded whisky, bootlegging became big business and fabulous sums of money changed hands every day. Pittsburgh became a wide-open town. Gambling houses flourished. High-power beer was escorted from freight yards to receiving stations by mounted police and soon the good people of the city knocked at the door of the city fathers with such vehemence and determination that this august body, reciting the rumors of lawlessness, open gambling, commercialized vice and generally disgraceful conditions, ordered an investigation.

Mr. President, I call your attention to this particular fact because I shall later show that Jones is not in favor of investigations when investigations are aimed at him. I shall now read a few headlines from Pittsburgh newspapers:

November 15, 1923, Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph: "Superintendent of Police Jones Resigns" (resignation effective immediately).

November 28, 1923, the Gazette Times: "Council Hearings in Police Probe Start Monday."

December 5, 1923, Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph: "Don't Know Why Jones Resigned—Rook" (director of public safety).

December 6, 1923, the Pittsburgh Press: "Lawless Protected Here, Says Zahniser" (first witness in council probe).

December 11, 1923, Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph: "Police Probers Issue Subpena for Jones."

The Pittsburgh Press: "Issue Subpena for Jones."

December 12, 1923, Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph: "Jones Does Not Respond to Subpena."

The Pittsburgh Press: "Give Jones One More Chance to Appear in Police Probe."

December 13, 1923, The Pittsburgh Press: "Quit for Personal Reasons—Jones."

December 15, 1923, the Gazette Times: "Council Seeks Writ to Make Jones Talk."

Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph: "Court Asked to Force Jones to Testify."

The Pittsburgh Press: "Court Issues Writ on Jones."

December 18, 1923, Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph: "Jones Denies Probers' Right to Subpena."

The Pittsburgh Press: "Judges to Confer on Probe's Big Issue."

January 2, 1924, the Pittsburgh Press: "Jones' Appeal Halts Police Probe."

I call attention, Mr. President, to these facts for the purpose of demonstrating that Jones still has the desire not to be investigated because he is at the present moment blocking the efforts of the legislative committee of the State of Pennsylvania.

However, let me continue this little history of Jones because if Hopkins says he is the best administrator he has had it is important that we find out how good the best really is.

At this juncture Edward N. Jones resigned as superintendent of police. There was a great journalistic outcry as to what lay behind this sudden resignation. Jones maintained absolute silence and for days in large black type spread across the pages of Pittsburgh newspapers appeared the query, "What happened to Jones?" Examination of the photostatic pages from the Municipal Record of Pittsburgh contains the entire history of that investigation.

I shall not refer to that because I do not want to take that much time.

The mayor of the city and the director of safety were invited by council to explain the mystery in connection with the Jones' resignation and it is recorded that both refused.

Mr. President, some people may not be greatly impressed with what I am putting in the RECORD; some people may not be greatly impressed that the fact that a man was some years ago forced to resign as superintendent of police has much to do with what he now does; but I call attention to the fact that we are spending millions of the people's money in the State of Pennsylvania and we are entitled to know the kind of a man who is spending it, and we are entitled to know how much effort Hopkins makes before making his selections.

Council accepted the explanation that Jones resigned because of the intolerable interference and intermeddling with his affairs by L. R. Goshorn, the official with whom he was at feud. This explanation had been ventured by a minister prominent in civic crusading, the Reverend Doctor Zanhiser, who declared he had the explanation from Mr. Jones, that he first was bound to secrecy but from which bond he was relieved at a later meeting of the investigating city council. The silence of all concerned was so successfully maintained as to wear out the patience of the newspapers and the oft-repeated "What happened to Jones?" finally disappeared from the first pages and in time disappeared altogether.

During his brief period as secretary to the mayor and as superintendent of police, E. N. Jones found time to found a weekly periodical—a rotogravure illustrated paper similar in appearance to that which is today flooding the State of Pennsylvania and which is entitled "We, the People", and which, also, is owned practically in its entirety by Edward N. Jones. In Pittsburgh it is generally remarked by those who know Mr. Jones that he has a rotogravure complex. He first used this style of printing in publicity for Mayor Magee. He established his weekly periodical in the same style; he injected a similar paper which was broadcast throughout Pennsylvania—and which was widely criticized for faked photographs of Pennsylvania politicians surrounding President Roosevelt in his office—during the Roosevelt campaign; also in the State and county campaigns succeeding; and completing the line with the present issuing rotogravure which is published in Harrisburg.

The detailed history of this man will be found to be very essential when other bricks in the structure are filled in.

Certain it is that up to date Director Harry L. Hopkins turns a deaf ear to all criticism of his Pennsylvania administrator; the frequent attempts to provide for a general investigation into the Jones' administration by the Senate have failed; charges and proofs that political coercion and political preference characterize the administration of works progress from one end of Pennsylvania to the other; and demands that this man Jones be removed, made upon the logical man to remove him, have fallen upon deaf ears. It would seem that a man selected by the Government of the United States to be placed in charge of public relief work for which the second largest allotment in the country has been made, and which originally was figured at one-quarter of a billion dollars, should have, instead of a chance enhancement by political achievement, both an experience and a character logically suggesting him for such an important position.

Those who have reviewed the career of Administrator Edward N. Jones cannot find a single incident of business success to recommend him, according to the common rules of business, to advancement such as has been his lot. All of his ventures have been short-lived. In the courthouse of Allegheny County there is a record in the prothonotary's office which, while indicating the constant series of business difficulties, at the same time is the construction of a foundation and background so spongy that it is nothing short of amazing that it should escape attention in the consideration of an individual for a place of such enormous trust.

This record is in the form of recorded judgments, and while the description of circumstances in connection with them in many instances indicate personal difficulties, yet the essentiality of bringing all possible light to bear upon the make-up of a man whose administration of one-quarter of a billion dollars' worth of public business is so great that it is considered in the interest of public policy to uncover these pages of the past. There are on record in the county of Allegheny courthouse, under dates extending from October 1924 to January 1935, the latter being almost the date of Edward N. Jones entering into the cabinet of Governor Earle of Pennsylvania, a series of 18 judgments recorded. It is timely to remark that for the most part these judgments are for nominal sums—$400, $300, $700, and so forth—and there are notations of returns to the effect that "no goods" could be discovered for the satisfaction of judgments.

The political history of Edward N. Jones is in keeping with his business record and just as insecure. During his early years as a reporter in Pittsburgh, like a chameleon, he took on the political aspect that harmonized with the policy of the paper employing him—the very first, the Pittsburgh Dispatch, Republican; the second, the Pittsburgh Post, Democratic; the Harpoon, radical; while with Mr. GUFFEY during his connection with the Alien Property Custodian, Wilson Democrat; while publicity man, secretary of chief of police for Mayor William A. Magee, Republican; when publicity man for Mayor William N. McNair, Senator Guffey, and Governor Earle, New Deal Democrat.

It is manifest from the records that the half dozen years preceding his connection with Democratic publicity and even afterward, up until his entry into Governor Earle's cabinet, were exceedingly lean ones for Administrator Jones. However, the last year has seen the blossoming and fattening of his brain child, the Construction Digest, for it feeds copiously in pastures of rich display and official advertising which cover the entire State of Pennsylvania, and all of this notwithstanding the fact that Jones' name was dropped from the masthead when he entered the Governor's cabinet. In keeping, however, with the complex for printing that has so generally been noted in Pittsburgh, Administrator Jones has found time and the means to establish another rotogravure paper which he calls "We, the people." It is true that his name does not appear on the masthead, nor does any other name for the matter of that, which is a direct violation of the State law of 1907 designated above, which requires that the name of the owner and managing editor shall appear on every issue or the publisher shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. It is true the law specifies "newspapers" and the Pennsylvania State charter, under which Mr. Jones publishes, gives him the right to publish, along with other printing rights, either "newspaper" or "news journal" and he may have the opinion that he is publishing the latter, therefore is not amenable to the law.

It is shown on the records in the Pennsylvania attorney general's office that of 500 shares of stock comprising the ownership of We, the People, Mr. Jones owns 498 and an employee whom he moved to Harrisburg from the Construction Digest, Mr. A. G. Mercer, owns 1 share, and the other 1 share is owned by Rowland I. Miller, who is listed as an attorney. It is to be remarked that the paid-in capital represented by shares held by these three incorporators was $500, a fact which is noted in the Pennsylvania Charter Book, volume 359, page 75. However, the resourceful Mr. Jones, applying an ingenious method of financing this new publication ventured and caused to be sent to State employees and to Democratic district chairmen throughout the State of Pennsylvania, books of 24 subscription blanks, each to be sold at $1 for a yearly subscription, and to put all the sales force possible behind it, he had the aid of the secretary of the Commonwealth and Democratic boss of Pennsylvania, Mr. David L. Lawrence, who sent a letter with these subscription blanks. This letter informed the recipient that an account had been opened in the headquarters of the Democractic Party of Pennsylvania in his name and would he kindly dispose of the 24 subscriptions at $1 each as quickly as possible. It is a known fact that this paper has been subscribed to by a great many W. P. A. employees. The total subscription to date and the amount of money raised in this manner can be estimated on the basis of books having been sent to all State employees and on January 15, 1936, there were 18,352 employees on the pay roll under Governor Earle. If each of these sold one book of subscriptions, the publishers of We, the People would have in addition to the $500 capital with which he began, the sum of $440,448 immediately available, providing Mr. Lawrence's request that haste be observed was fulfilled by the volunteer members of the greatest numerical circulation staff ever known to have been attached to a publication.

Mr. President, Mr. Jones has attracted the attention of magazine writers as well as of writers of newspapers. I invite attention to the American Mercury for the month of May 1936, in which there is an article by Mr. Duncan Aikman which is worth reading. I shall quote from it briefly:

Among those who received the revelation was an engaging political adventurer by the name of Edward Noel Jones. A plausible gentleman in his late forties, Mr. Jones is still famous in Pittsburgh newspaper circles for having imposed himself as an experienced copy reader on the town's most refined daily of 25 years ago, half an hour after its coarsest rival had dismissed him as lacking in the necessary qualifications of a trial cub on space assignments. But his true vocation developed a few months later when he entered the dim border country of publishing and public-relations activities that lies between journalism and practical politics. Still in his hot pre-war youth, Jones press-agented one William A. Magee into the mayor's office with a kind of local preview of Chicago's "Big Bill the Builder" campaigns, and was rewarded, first with the municipal first private secretaryship, then with the superintendency of police. Vice and gambling scandals charged against the department forced Eddie into a tactical resignation from the latter position; yet he was able to retire on his celebrity into a ready-mixed concrete enterprise, with a public-works director for a partner and a sand and gravel combine of local contractors and traction magnates as prospective and eventually lucrative purchasers. In between paving jobs, he improvised roto-gravure magazines as a feature of local campaign publicity, and published the Construction Digest, a $20-a-year periodical for contractors which carried all the official public works and highway department advertising. For a dozen years he lived high and handsomely off these pursuits, dining often in private rooms with the publishers of the Pittsburgh dailies, and developing, as the Allegheny County court records suggest, a relative immunity to judgments.

* * * * * * *

Eddie knew the arts of political ballyhoo from 25 years of expert practice; he had developed impressive recruiting and organizing gifts in himself, and he had the ear of the jobless. Therefore, in January 1935, when the Earle cabinet was formed, Eddie was a natural for the post of secretary of labor and industry. Later in the year, when the political possibilities of the W. P. A. set-up began to dawn on the little coterie of minority patronage experts and ex-Republican job traders who composed the political high command of the New Deal at Harrisburg, light on the problem of what "was necessary" in the joyous emergency shone clear and plain. Messrs. Earle and GUFFEY saw the proper personages in Washington. When the belching smoke of continuous press releases cleared slightly in Mr. Hopkins' office, Edward Noel Jones was W. P. A. administrator for Pennsylvania.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Jones replied with a 2-page circular letter "to all W. P. A. workers", calling on them in his best campaign ballyhoo style to enlist in war to the knife against President Roosevelt's partisan enemies. That the Post-Gazette was a typical example of a big, bad newspaper ganging up on a great-hearted, humanitarian President, was the theme bar of Eddie's bugle solo. With an adroit lameness he added:

"I don't know that anything can be done about it, but I do want you to know what this attack on the W. P. A. and on you means. * * * Big business wants to wreck the W. P. A. because big business is against President Roosevelt. Big business is for the law of the jungle—where the strong live off of the weak. Big business' idea of relief is soup kitchens. * * * President Roosevelt's idea of relief is work paid for with a security wage."

A few days later, however, John H. Laboon, a front-making Carnegie Tech ex-football player whom Eddie had appointed his Allegheny County administrator, made it clear that the W. P. A. strategists had very definite ideas of what "could be done about it." Mr. Laboon, at a special meeting of W. P. A. executives and subexecutives, emphasized, with a frankness considered excessive even in Pittsburgh politics, that New Deal political and economic orthodoxy were officially recognized as the sole tests of W. P. A. job eligibility. Said the young party lieutenant:

"I tell you right now that any W. P. A. worker not in sympathy with the W. P. A. program and the Roosevelt administration will be eliminated from the W. P. A. pay roll in this district at quickly as I can act."

Then, just to tip off the hands that a good deal of first-class political spying was expected of a loyal W. P. A. straw boss, he added: "I want you men to report such cases without delay."

That bears out the oft-repeated statement which is going around all over the country that W. P. A. men in charge of these poor people, who have no jobs at all, say to them this one sentence: "Register as a Democrat, or else—", and they never finish the sentence. But reasonable men know that it is not necessary to finish it. Practice proves that the "else" means that they lose their jobs.

Continuing, this article says:

The stench of practical politics hangs, nevertheless, over an impressive share of the W. P. A.'s overt activities. Foremen and supervisors—always with the proper ward-chairman endorsements—have been generally appointed with a strictly political disregard of their qualifying experience for the projects in hand.

Mr. President, this situation has become so bad in Pennsylvania that the legislature undertook to act. I have here an article which I clipped from the New York Herald Tribune a few days ago, written by a special correspondent who had been sent to Pennsylvania for that purpose. I wish to quote certain parts of it. The heading is:

W. P. A. fights Pennsylvania inquiry into vote farming. Guffey machine resists State senate's search into link between relief jobs and election race. Press kept in dark by official secrecy. Seventy-one million spent so far, being carefully placed in areas Republican since days of Civil War.

The article says:

(By Leland Stowe)

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—Pennsylvania today is warmed up for one of the hottest, hardest, and toughest electoral battles in its history next November. It is also the scene of a bitter attack upon its huge Works Progress Administration organization which is charged with being dominated by Senator JOSEPH F. GUFFEY'S Democratic machine and with "vote building" by scientific apportionment of W. P. A.'s vast relief-work funds.

Pennsylvania possesses an abnormally large block of 36 Presidential votes in the Electoral College. Since its program was started the W. P. A. has expended to date more than $71,000,000 in this State.

TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTY THOUSAND ON W. P. A. ROLLS

In 1932 Herbert Hoover carried Pennsylvania by a plurality of 157,000 and in 1934 Governor George H. Earle, a Democrat, defeated his Republican opponent by 60,000 votes. Three weeks ago Postmaster General James A. Farley confidently declared that the Democrats were certain to capture Pennsylvania in November, despite the fact that no Democratic nominee for the Presidency has carried this State since the Civil War.

Alongside Mr. Farley's statement and the narrow margin of Republican victory in 1932 political observers do not overlook the fact that Pennsylvania W. P. A. pay rolls now support no fewer than 260,000 citizens and voters.

Including dependents, wives, and older brothers and sisters, an absolute minimum of 400,000 Pennsylvania voters may be said to be sheltered cozily under W. P. A.'s beneficent roof. It requires no Einstein to figure out that one-quarter this number of votes, and perhaps a mere 50,000 of them, is very likely to decide whether Pennsylvania goes Democratic or Republican next autumn.

That is why the W. P. A. in Pennsylvania is completely clouded with political smoke of the most nauseous variety. Nobody knows just how much fire exists behind this barrage, but enough fire has been sighted to touch off the most bitter recriminations and to prompt an investigation by a special committee of the State senate. Tomorrow the senate committee, headed by State Senator G. Mason Owlett, will hold its first hearing in City Hall here. Even so, it will be a miracle if it gets very far, for the investigating committee's term of life is limited to that of the rapidly expiring special session of the State legislature, and W. P. A. officials appear to be obstructing and stalling all along the line.

INQUIRY IS RESISTED

It seems that a great many people would like to know the truth about W. P. A. in Pennsylvania, but no force has yet been found which is potent enough to get at it. According to the sad experience of Senator Owlett, even subpenas to an official State hearing are of dubious value. Summonses were issued yesterday for four ranking W. P. A. officials to appear at tomorrow's proceedings. These were for John H. Rankin, W. P. A. director for the Philadelphia district; for Henry T. Seibert, personnel director; and for

E. Keye Hunter and Edward R. Yarnell, who are Rankin's principal assistants.

When the senate's sergeant at arms tried to serve subpenas on these public servants they were again confounded by coincidence. Mr. Rankin was ill. Mr. Hunter was out and Mr. Seibert's secretary said he wasn't available, besides which he always had to know what his visitors wanted before he received them. Later Mr. Seibert, by telephone, informed Senator Owlett that Edward N. Jones, W. P. A. administrator for Pennsylvania and personal henchman of the Democratic boss, Senator GUFFEY, had issued strict orders that no information be given to the senate's investigating committee.

Administrator Jones is credited with being an expert on public relations, a profession which specializes in letting the public know what you want it to know. Actuated perhaps by his training as a publicity man, Jones has retained a lawyer to act as counsel for the four W. P. A. executives in Philadelphia who are being sought by the senate committee. Senator Owlett charges that Jones has adopted tactics to delay deliberately the investigation of W. P. A. in this State until the committee period of life has expired.

Following that, we find articles appearing in the Philadelphia Inquirer, one of them in particular calling attention to the fact that—

Rankin holds job without legal status.—Unconfirmed by Senators despite law; gets $6,000 pay, $1,000 more than set in Relief Act as needing approval of higher United States Chamber.—W. P. A. censorship fails to hide facts; "Jack" Kelly's brother receives pay just under $5,000 figure, but his exact status remains undetermined.

The law is quoted here to this effect:

Any State or regional administrator receiving a salary of $5,000 or more per annum from such appropriation (the vast $4,880,000,000 congressional relief appropriation), except persons now serving as such under other law, shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

I suppose it will be contended that this man is not a State or regional administrator; but, Mr. President, you and I know that the Senate intended and the Congress intended that any person receiving as much as $5,000 under this act should be confirmed by the Senate. It appears, however, that this one man is receiving at least $6,000 and has not been confirmed.

An article upon the same subject appeared in this morning's New York Herald Tribune. It is headed:

Affidavits show W. P. A. coercion in Pennsylvania. "Register and vote Democratic or lose job", is called slogan of bosses.

Here are the details of it, and I have in my office literally dozens of affidavits showing that this condition exists in Pennsylvania.

Let us see, now, what has happened and what is going on at this very moment. The newspapers have been filled with accounts of this situation in Pennsylvania. The legislature at Harrisburg passed a resolution and appointed a committee for the purpose of ascertaining what is being done with this money in Pennsylvania, the kind of a resolution that the Senate of the United States refused to pass; and what is the attitude of Mr. Jones and those under him? Are they rushing to that legislative body and giving them information? No; they are employing the district attorney's office to defend him in their determination not to give any facts in connection with it.

Mr. President, think of this administration doing that when we have seen in this very body itself Senators hunting to the very depths of the personal effects of individuals in order that they might find something pertaining to public matters. We have seen them condemned by the courts with respect to it, but this administration insists on doing it; and when the State of Pennsylvania, where this money is being used and where the State's own voters are being corrupted with the taxpayers' money, wishes to investigate the matter we find this administration sending its best lawyers before the courts, trying to prevent an investigation by a great legislature like that of the State of Pennsylvania.

Has anybody ever seen anything equal to that in America? Does anyone mean to say that a legislature may not inquire, merely because a man is spending Federal money, whether or not he is using that money to corrupt the voters of the State? The State of Pennsylvania provides the laws with respect to voting. The State of Pennsylvania provides the laws which undertake to punish persons for corrupting the voters. To say that a legislative body may not make inquiry with respect to any person it can find in Pennsylvania, it seems to me, shows that this administration is anxious now, as it always has been, to hide from the people of the country the real facts.

Mr. President, I started out to show how important it was that we guard against running the country into debt farther than that has been done. I called attention to the fact that we are spending $3,000,000,000 more this year than we were spending in 1933. This very year, the year after the New Deal "prosperity" has returned, we find the Federal Government spending $3,000,000,000 more than it spent the year after the New Deal came in! That being true, must we not do something about it?

I suggest in closing that perhaps the best thing we can do—although I think it would give to the President too much authority—would be to vote for the Vandenberg amendment, which is such a great improvement over what is being done that it would, in my judgment, arrest our onrush to destruction.

Whenever we can bring this country back to the place where we once thought it was, where it becomes necessary for the local communities to bear their share of the burden—whenever we can get it back there, we shall have hold of ourselves again, and we shall be in a position where we can once more go forward. But so long as we continue to let Hopkins improve the condition of those on relief by spending more of our money we are coming nearer to a dictatorship, we are coming nearer to the destruction of the United States; and when that time is reached nobody knows where he will want to go, because the United States may be as bad as Russia or some other European nation of which we are not particularly proud.

Mr. GUFFEY subsequently said: Mr. President, earlier in the afternoon, while I was absent from the Senate Chamber, the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] made an attack on Mr. Jones, the Works Progress Administrator for the State of Pennsylvania.

I think the Senator from Delaware has been misinformed, or if he had been properly informed he would have made his remarks differently. I now wish to add for his information a few figures.

Only a superficial perusal of the figures in reference to supervisory W. P. A. employment in Pennsylvania is necessary to enable one to realize how baseless are the charges of Democratic politics being prevalent in the Administration in that State.

The peak load of employment of the W. P. A. program was 290,000 persons; and under the 10-percent nonrelief provision this would have permitted the employment of 29,000 nonrelief supervisory personnel.

As a matter of fact, the peak nonrelief personnel was 17,765, or 6 percent of the peak load employment; but this does not mean that 17,765 nonrelief supervisors or foremen were named, because a large portion of the nonrelief total comprised mechanics and others not on relief who had to be requisitioned in order to complete the skilled force necessary to operate various projects. In addition to this, there were many cases where, because of budgetary deficiency in the family, social workers authorized a second placement, which had to be classified as nonrelief.

These deductions from the gross total of nonrelief personnel give a net nonrelief supervisory figure of 11,651, or 4 percent of the total peak load.

One factor which made possible this great reduction in authorized nonrelief personnel was the fact that more than 8,000 persons taken from the relief rolls were named to supervisory positions which the record showed them as being qualified to fill.

In Philadelphia there were named from the relief rolls to supervisory positions 1,496 persons, as against 1,992 designated from nonrelief.

The Nation-wide average of nonrelief supervisory personnel is 8.4 percent. The percentage for Pennsylvania, on the basis of our present quota, is 4.68 percent.

These figures certainly disprove any and all charges that the supervisory force of the W. P. A. in Pennsylvania has been selected on the basis of politics.

The best answer to all allegations that Edward N. Jones has operated the W. P. A. in Pennsylvania on a political basis may be found in these figures, which prove that if Jones had so desired he could have given to the Democratic organization some 13,000 supervisory positions; but, instead of doing so, he drew upon the relief rolls for almost 50 percent of his supervisory force.

The personal attack on Mr. Jones illustrates the lengths to which the Republican National Committee will go in an effort to besmirch anyone in an executive post in the W. P. A.

The Senator from Delaware charges that Jones profited from his connection with the Construction Digest. I challenge anyone to point to a single line of advertising in the Construction Digest which was not obtained in a legitimate and ethical manner.

In addition, when Mr. Jones was appointed secretary of labor and industry for the State of Pennsylvania, January 15, 1935, he severed all his connection with the Construction Digest.

The Senator from Delaware connects Mr. Jones with a publication called the Harpoon, which ceased publication 24 years ago.

The Senator charges that Jones attacked the utilities in the publication, but ceased his attacks when large advertisements were obtained from these utilities. I think, in all fairness to Mr. Jones, that the Senator from Delaware should file with the Senate copies of the publication containing these alleged advertisements. I am sure he will be unable to do so; and if this is the case, it seems to me that Mr. Jones is entitled to an apology.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, what were the names of the periodicals to which the Senator has referred?

Mr. GUFFEY. The Construction Digest and the Harpoon, which ceased publication 24 years ago.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, perhaps the Senator from Delaware was trying to revive the harpoon. [Laughter.]

Mr. GUFFEY. If the Senator from Delaware would like to get facts concerning Mr. Jones, I am sure if he would call on my colleague the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] he would get a fine statement from him as to Mr. Jones' character and integrity.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, do I understand the Senator from Pennsylvania to say that the senior Senator from Delaware was seeking facts? [Laughter.]

Mr. GUFFEY. Well, I thought if he was I wanted him to have them.

I do not wish to take up the time of the Senate this afternoon, when it is so busy on important proposed legislation; but I should like to have inserted in the RECORD, as part of my remarks, a speech delivered by Mr. Jones in Pittsburgh last winter. I think possibly that speech was the basis of the charge of the senior Senator from Delaware this afternoon. The speech was delivered when the seat of the former ownership of the Republican Party was in Pittsburgh. As it has now been transferred to Wilmington, Del., I think the senior Senator from Delaware should have a right to defend the present ownership.

I ask that the speech to which I refer be included in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The address is as follows:

ADDRESS BY EDWARD N. JONES, WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATOR FOR PENNSYLVANIA, BEFORE THE HUNGRY CLUB, PITTSBURGH, PA., DECEMBER 30, 1935

When I was asked to indicate a title for my talk here today, I had to think a while before answering.

Of course, the obvious reply would have been "My subject will be the Works Progress Administration in Pennsylvania." Because that is a subject which happens to be uppermost in my mind these days and from the amount of space given to it in the news and editorial columns, especially in some newspapers, it seems to be a subject which for the moment is of paramount interest to many.

And there is much that I could tell you about the Works Progress Administration in Pennsylvania that would be first-hand information, uncensored and undistorted by those who would have you believe that our undertaking is not the success we know it to be.

There is much that I could say about the work we are doing in this State that would be of interest to men and women in every walk of life, because W. P. A. touches the affairs of human beings occupied in all forms of endeavor.

No plan for aiding the victims of the present depression would have been adequate or complete that did not recognize the fact that this economic catastrophe took its toll and wreaked its havoc in every strata of society.

And therefore W. P. A. provides opportunities for employment for men and women of all classes—laborers and untrained girls, skilled mechanics, and executives; men and women in almost all of the professions—musicians, actors, writers, draftsmen, engineers, nurses, teachers, and housekeepers.

The 230,000 persons now on W. P. A. payrolls in this Commonwealth represent a true cross section of our society, and one could talk for hours about the useful work that is being done on the 4,000 projects that are now under way in this State.

But what I want to discuss here today is not what the Works Progress Administration has done, not what the Works Progress Administration is doing, but what the Works Progress Administration could do and might do in Pennsylvania, and particularly in Pittsburgh, if there were men in places of power in public life and in industry and in finance who had vision—and not only vision but courage as well—courage to speak out before their fellow men and reveal what they know in their hearts to be true, and, after they have revealed the truth, to take the initiative and act and lead in accordance with the truth—as they see it.

Therefore, the title of my subject today is not the W. P. A., but Men Without Vision.

Among my Christmas presents was a book I have not found the time to read. It is James Breasted's work entitled "The Dawn of Conscience."

However, I did read one paragraph from the foreword which I am going to quote:

"It has not become a sinister commonplace in the life of the post-war generation that man has never had any hesitation in applying his increasing mechanical power to the destruction of his own kind. The World War has demonstrated the appalling possibilities of man's mechanical power of destruction."

No one for a moment will challenge that statement. But Mr. Breasted's foreword only tells half the story—only cites war as proof of the fact that man has never had any hesitation in applying his increasing mechanical power to the destruction of his own kind. In my humble opinion, this readiness to destroy humanity has been and is being demonstrated just as effectively under world peace as under world war.

But, in considering the appalling consequences of man's seeming mania for the destruction of his fellow man through the medium of his mechanical powers, we must not forget that this new-found power is being utilized not only to deal out physical destruction to men, women, and children during war, but also to accomplish economic and social destruction of mankind during the period of so-called peace.

You can form your own opinion as to which is the more disastrous and more costly to our boasted civilization—physical destruction of mankind or economic destruction of potential wealth producers.

In my humble opinion, economic destruction is far the costlier, far the more disastrous. Physical destruction entails only burial expenses—sometimes not even that. Economic destruction of mankind creates a financial and social debt that, while it may be calculated in money, the real cost to the Nation in the destruction of morale, of self-respect, of discipline, of character, can never be calculated.

This process of economic and social destruction has been steadily and cumulatively taking place in the community and in the State during the past two decades.

And, so that I am not misunderstood, I want to make it clear that I for one am not opposed to the invention and installation of labor-saving machinery in our mills and mines and factories.

The men who plan these installations are undoubtedly men of vision—but I say they are men of limited vision if they think that there is no moral obligations upon them to consider the effect and consequences to society of a decision to throw thousands of men and women into a permanent army of the unemployed so that manufacturing costs can be reduced and dividends maintained.

During the past few months the two largest steel producers in the Pittsburgh district announced proposed expenditures of scores of millions of dollars for plant modernization.

To keep up with their competitors such improvements are vital and necessary, and the executives of these corporations are to be complimented upon their technical initiative.

When the announcements were made in the newspapers that the Carnegie Steel Corporation and the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation were to spend scores of millions of dollars in the Pittsburgh district, they were hailed with rejoicing in newspaper editorials.

The expenditure of these millions will, it was claimed, restore to Pittsburgh something of her old-time supremacy in the world of steel.

But, may we ask, What price supremacy?

Due to the installation of labor-saving devices in Pennsylvania's mills, mines, and factories, there are today some three or four hundred thousand victims of technological unemployment in this State—men and women who will never get jobs even when business conditions return to normal.

These men and women represent a direct economic loss of some $15,000,000 a month—$180,000,000 a year.

In the anthracite region of this State are thousands of miners who never can or will return to the mines. The work they did is now being done better and cheaper by electrical robots.

So, too, in our bituminous-coal fields; and so, too, in this community—once known as the workshop of the world.

And in the face of all this it is now proposed by important units in our key industries to install more labor-saving devices to cut down manufacturing costs by the simple process of reducing the number of persons on the pay roll.

As I said before, one cannot quarrel with such executives for seeking more modern and more efficient methods of production.

But where these executives are delinquent—where they exhibit symptoms of economic and social astigmatism—is that they and others like them who occupy high positions in our industrial world give no indication of interest in what becomes of these discarded human beings whose economic and social destruction they calmly and unhesitatingly plan and accomplish through the exercise of their mechanical genius.

Has there ever appeared a news item in our public press about these captains of industry seeking conferences with National, State, or local officials to discuss ways and means of providing for these human discards?

Is there anything in the record to evidence the slightest concern on the part of these industrial and financial magnates over what happens to the ever-increasing army of the permanently unemployed—other than the published list of contributions to the community-chest fund?

Today in this State are some 400,000 heads of families who must be given work relief, direct relief, or allowed to starve.

Most of these men and women represent the discards of modern industry—the economic and, too often, the physical wreckage of our mills, mines, and factories.

It's costing someone about a quarter of a billion dollars a year to sustain these victims of our superefficient civilization.

Now, if these captains of commerce and these high lords of finance were really "men with vision" they could say, "We've got to modernize our plants or go out of business. And so we modernize our plants. We've got to reduce our operating costs and the most effective way to reduce operating costs is to reduce labor costs. It's too bad that we've got to discharge hundreds and thousands of our employees, but in view of the fact that the Federal, State, and local governments are taking care of this surplus labor, we don't feel so badly about it. We pay our share of the taxes that produce the funds to keep these men and women on relief."

Of course they do. But the trouble is that they do it because they are compelled to—not because they realize and accept it as an obligation. If they could, most of these rugged individualists would eliminate all relief taxes tomorrow.

They might set up soup kitchens or they might establish bread lines, and with relief taxes eliminated they might even increase their contributions to the community-chest fund.

That they are "men without vision" is proven by their attitude toward President Roosevelt's direct-relief and works-relief program.

Mr. Roosevelt recognizes and accepts not only the moral but the legal obligations of government to those discarded by business and industry. When he established the "dole" big business criticized him for wasting Federal funds. When he substitutes work relief for the "dole", big business objects that it is too costly.

And with all the resources at its command, big business is seeking to discredit the Works Progress Administration, sneering at a sincere endeavor to give employment to the men and women big business replaced with its mechanical robots in order that dividends might not be interrupted.

Have you ever read of the presidents or chairmen of the boards of directors of any of Pittsburgh's great industrial or financial institutions tendering to any Governor of this Commonwealth the assistance of their high-salaried staffs to find an answer to the question: What shall we do with our unemployed?

Instead of sneering at political "brain trusters", wouldn't you think that these captains of industry would offer to turn loose their own "brain trusters" on this problem—those keen, mechanical geniuses with three-decker brains who spend their days and nights inventing machinery and processes to still further increase the number of human discards?

Why do not the heads of these two great steel corporations that are planning the expenditure of some $150,000,000 in this county for plant modernization—why don't they acknowledge the effect these improvements will have on unemployment in this country and in this State and, recognizing and acknowledging it, notify the Governor of this Commonwealth of their desire to join with him in seeking some plan for the rehabilitation of those they have already displaced and those they propose to displace with labor-saving machinery.

But how can you expect them to take such an unprecedented step when they are content to stand idly by while public officials, subject to their command, conspire to sabotage the Works Progress Administration in this community?

The Federal Government stands ready with an appropriation of $2,500,000 a month to provide work for some 30,000 Pittsburgh men and women, many of whom are former employees of these corporations who have been replaced by mechanical robots. We are unable to spend the money—turn it over to these destitute and jobless persons—just because the executives of these industries that discarded them are not sufficiently concerned over their fate to use their influence and omnipotent power to compel the public authorities of this city to provide worth-while projects.

The only captain of commerce in Pittsburgh that ever evinced the slightest interest in W. P. A. telephoned me last week. This man is the head of a great department store. Three days before Christmas he called to ask me to be sure that all W. P. A. workers got their pay before Christmas.

W. P. A. has been promised cooperation by the city authorities, but instead of cooperation all we get is studied sniping and secret scheming to make harder our task of placing some 30,000 unemployed citizens of Pittsburgh to work.

Mayor McNair and Director Johnson, assured that their tactics have the approval of the captains of finance and the overlords of industry, take advantage of every technicality to delay the program.

I wonder what the attitude toward a works-relief program in Pittsburgh would have been if the $2,500,000 a month needed for pay rolls had been tendered by Uncle Andy instead of Uncle Sam.

Well, I can tell you. First of all there would be a great splurge of publicity and editorial comments praising Mr. Mellon as a great humanitarian and philanthropist in place of the criticism that is continually being made of W. P. A. by the mouthpieces of big business.

And then someone of course would pause to point out the difference between Mellon's millions and Uncle Sam's millions. Someone would most certainly remark that Mellon would be giving away his own money, whereas Uncle Sam's contribution didn't represent his money at all, but our money, taken from us by confiscatory taxation.

But any thinking person would readily understand that Uncle Andy and Uncle Sam both get their millions from the same source. The only difference is that Mellon has already got his while Uncle Sam has his to get through future taxation.

I said earlier in this talk that what I wanted to talk about today was not what W. P. A. has done but what W. P. A. could do in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County if there were men in places of power in public life and industry and in finance who had vision and courage and initiative.

Our program in Pittsburgh today is far from being the kind of program we would like to carry on in the city.

It is that kind of a program because that's the only kind of a program we can undertake under existing handicaps.

Mayor McNair and his public-works director, despite their public protectations of cooperation, have forced us to adopt this kind of a program. They have done so because they believe they are acting in accordance with the wishes of the house of Mellon and its hundreds of subsidiary interests.

If they thought for a moment that the house of Mellon favored a worthwhile public-works program, they would break their respective necks producing projects, money to pay for materials, and real cooperation.

If Mr. Mellon and his financial and industrial lieutenants cared a continental about Pittsburgh's army of industrial discards, we would now be working on projects which when completed could be pointed to as worth-while municipal assets.

Instead of Pittsburgh workmen having to be transported several miles every day to work, W. P. A. employees could right now be at work on the construction of a real wharf system around the Golden Triangle.

And instead of having to resort to every strategy to make jobs for discards of Pittsburgh steel mills, if the men who operate those steel mills had shown the slightest interest in their former employees, a worth-while program of real public enterprise would have been under way by now.

Let's not have any false concepts of the fundamental truths that apply in this present situation.

Briefly, they are:

First. In this community are over 100,000 employable men and women who are denied the opportunity for gainful employment due, for the most part, to their displacement in our key industries by labor-saving machinery.

Second. Plans are now under way to create still more of this technological unemployment.

Third. Because industry now does not provide for these men and women whose mental and manual labor helped create and build up these great enterprises, the Federal Government has appropriated a sum, approximately $4,000,000 a month, to put these industrial discards to work.

Fourth. The Federal Government is being handicapped in caring for these wards of industry because public officials, subject to the command of these industrial executives, are of the opinion that industry doesn't want this works program to be effective.

Fifth. To date these industrial executives and their bosses, the overlords of finance, have not only refused to take any interest in the program of public works, conceived for the sole purpose of providing employment for these human discards, but are evidently opposed to the W. P. A. program on the theory that if it is successful President Roosevelt will get the credit—and they are against Roosevelt.

These are the men without vision who not only are unable to see the immediate result of their indifference, but who shut their eyes to the inevitable consequences of their contribution to the economic and social destruction of their fellow men.

Before concluding I would like to read to you a few paragraphs from a message written by Woodrow Wilson shortly before his death.

It is, I believe, equally applicable to the situation today as it was to conditions that were beginning to manifest themselves at the time it was written.

There are thoughtful and well-informed men all over the world who believe, with much apparently sound reason, that the abstract thing, the system, which we call capitalism, is indispensable to the industrial support and development of modern civilization. And yet everyone who has an intelligent knowledge of social forces must know that great and widespread reactions like that which is now unquestionably manifesting itself against capitalism do not occur without cause or provocation; and before we commit ourselves irreconcilably to an attitude of hostility to this movement of the time, we ought frankly to put to ourselves the question, "Is the capitalistic system unimpeachable?" Which is another way of saying, "Have capitalists generally used their power for the benefit of the countries in which their capital is employed and for the benefit of their fellow men?"

Is it not, on the contrary, too true that capitalists have often seemed to regard the men whom they used as mere instruments of profit whose physical and mental powers it was legitimate to exploit with as slight cost to themselves as possible, either of money or of sympathy? Have not many fine men who were actuated by the highest principles in every other relationship of life seemed to hold that generosity and humane feeling were not among the imperative mandates of conscience in the conduct of a banking business, or in the development of an industrial or commercial enterprise?

And, if these offenses against high morality and true citizenship have been frequently observable, are we to say that the blame for the present discontent and turbulence is wholly on the side of those who are in revolt against them? Ought we not, rather, to seek a way to remove such offenses and make life itself clean for those who will share honorably and cleanly in it?

Democracy has not yet made the world safe against irrational revolution. That supreme task, which is nothing less than the salvation of civilization, now faces democracy, insistent, imperative. There is no escaping it, unless everything we have built up is presently to fall in ruin about us; and the United States, as the greatest of democracies, must undertake it.

The road that leads away from revolution is clearly marked, for it is defined by the nature of men and of organized society. It therefore behooves us to study very carefully and very candidly the exact nature of the task and the means of its accomplishment.

The nature of men and of organized society dictates the maintenance in every field of action of the highest and purest standards of justice and of right dealing; and it is essential to efficacious thinking in this critical matter that we should not entertain a narrow or technical conception of justice. By justice the lawyer generally means the prompt, fair, and open application of impartial rules; but we call ours a Christian civilization, and a Christian conception of justice must be much higher. It must include sympathy and helpfulness and a willingness to forego self-interest in order to promote the welfare, happiness, and contentment of others and of the community as a whole. This is what our age is blindly feeling after in its reaction against what it deems the too great selfishness of the capitalistic system.

The sum of the whole matter is this, that our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually. It can be saved only by becoming permeated with the spirit of Christ and being made free and happy by the practices which spring out of that spirit. Only thus can discontent be driven out and all the shadows lifted from the road ahead.

Here is the final challenge to our churches, to our political organizations, and to our capitalists—to everyone who fears God or loves his country. Shall we not all earnestly cooperate to bring in the new day?

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, the Senator from Delaware has designated his speech his "swan song"; and we are reminded that the swan, dying, sings, and having sung, dies. I, for one, shall very much regret the day, not far hence, when the voice of the distinguished Senator from Delaware will be heard no more in this Chamber. No one represents more ably, more sincerely, and more loyally the constituency which sent him here than does the distinguished Senator from Delaware. And when he spoke here this afternoon with great vehemence and vigor against the program of the present administration, he spoke with that same sincerity and that same loyalty to the cause he serves that ever characterizes the distinguished Senator from Delaware.

I was not privileged to hear all the Senator had to say on this occasion, and that is my loss. As I sat here, however, and listened to him throughout the greater part of his speech, I was sure that he must have reminded the Senate in the beginning of the tremendous debt that is hanging over this Nation today; he must have reminded us that we have today a national debt of something like $31,000,000,000.

I remind my colleagues, and especially the Senator from Delaware, that of that $31,000,000,000 of debt which hangs over this Nation today, $16,000,000,000 of it is a carry-over from the war, money which we spent during the World War, in 1917 and 1918, day by day, by the hundreds of millions of dollars, when we unbalanced the Budget every day that the war was carried on. Yet the constituents which the Senator from Delaware represents waxed fat on the profits of that great war, prosecuted for 2 years, and every day of it the Budget of this country was unbalanced, but there was not a chirp from them about an unbalanced Budget or about excessive taxes which would have to be levied to pay for the war.

Only a few weeks ago, in this very Chamber, we appropriated better than $1,200,000,000 for the Army and the Navy of this country for 1 year; and where was the Senator from Delaware at that time? He was not even in the Chamber, he was not interested that we spend $1,200,000,000 in preparing to make war, because that would put the profits in the pockets of the people in Wilmington, Del., whom the Senator so ably represents.

Of course we are spending money today. After we had the war debt reduced to $16,000,000,000, we spent under Mr. Hoover about $6,000,000,000 more, and what did we get? We got the worst panic the country ever experienced.

We spend a few billion dollars more to feed the hungry and the poor and the distressed, the victims of this depression, a depression not of their own making, and what do we hear from the Senator from Delaware? That to feed these people is all wrong. If I understood him in his speech correctly, he said that if appropriations are authorized in order to feed the hungry and starving people in this country who are the victims of the depression, we might as well tear up the Constitution. "Silly expenditures", he says, as he condemns this administration, which reaches down its hand in pity to pick up the stricken victims of the depression and put them back on the road to health and happiness. "Silly," hisses the Senator from Delaware. "Tear up the Constitution if that is justified."

I say to my colleagues in the Senate that if we can spend thirty-five or thirty-six billion dollars and make a lot of millionaires in this country, and give us a lot of problems which we struggle to solve in this day and age, if we can spend thirty-five or thirty-six billion dollars to march away the flower of this Nation to stand before an enemy's guns, and fall in defense of their country and die for their country, if we can spend billions of dollars that the flower of the Nation shall die for their country, then, in the name of God, why may we not spend a few billion dollars that men, women, and children might live for this country?

Mr. President, I do not know much about the situation in West Virginia; I leave that to those who are better able to discuss the West Virginia situation. I do not know much about the Pennsylvania situation as it relates to the expenditure of this sum of money in the interest of the poor people of this country, but I do know that the investigation about which the Senator from Delaware has been talking, which will presently proceed in the State of Pennsylvania, is an investigation authorized by a legislature which is Republican.

I remember reading in the newspaper the other day that a Republican senate rejected the relief measures for the people of Pennsylvania; that the Republican Senate of the State of Pennsylvania refused to do its part by the people who are in distress there. Then the same Republican Senate of the State of Pennsylvania adopted a resolution to investigate the only agency which is bringing relief to the distressed people of the State of Pennsylvania. Only today, when they go into court and demand a subpena or a warrant to bring before them the people they desire to investigate, a Republican judge says they have not the power to carry on any such investigation.

Ah, God prosper the days to come of that investigation in Pennsylvania, because, in my humble opinion, it will reveal but one thing, that the Democratic Party fights on the side of the people today in distress, while the Republican Party, which brought on the depression under which we are living, which made the people the victims of the depression, continues to keep its heel on the necks of the downtrodden people of this country. I do not know much about Pennsylvania, but I do know this much about it—that the Democrats propose to give relief to the distressed while the Republicans refuse relief.

I know something about the situation in Indiana referred to in the course of his remarks by the Senator from Delaware. I know this about the situation in Indiana, that the W. P. A. in my State has done the finest job that has been done throughout the United States; and I bar none. The State of Indiana has met its obligations in carrying on the P. W. A. work, and only one State from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific coast has contributed more toward its relief load than has the State of Indiana.

I know that when the charges were made by my distinguished colleague [Mr. VAN NUYS] of certain irregularities in the State of Indiana, with commendable alacrity the Department here in Washington entered upon an investigation of the charges the Senator made, and gave him an investigation which met with his hearty approval. The charges were all aired in the open; each and every one of them was investigated to the last detail, and the investigation and the results thereof revealed that the Senator's informants for the most part were not sustained; but that any semblance at all of politics in the W. P. A. in Indiana was scotched in the very beginning by the administration not only of the State of Indiana but the Administration here in Washington, with the result that the W. P. A. today stands in the State of Indiana vindicated of any charges of politics, and with a record of administration second to none in this country.

Mr. President, because of the expenditure of these large sums of money all of us feel more or less distressed. No one in this body or elsewhere gets any pleasure out of the duty which devolves upon us of expending what seems to us to be necessary to expend in the interest of the distressed people of this country. Of course, to do so the Budget must remain unbalanced. I regret that as much as anybody, and I hope the day is not far distant when the Budget may be balanced. However, I venture to say here and now that we shall not balance the Budget on the anguish and tears and suffering of citizens of this country who are the victims of this depression.

The Senator from Delaware says that the present administration has spent $3,000,000,000 more than the Hoover administration spent in the last year of that administration. Undoubtedly that is true, but as I said in the beginning, in return for the expenditures under Hoover we got the worst panic ever seen in this country, whereas the expenditures and the wise policies adopted by this administration are gradually leading us out of the depression and to the dawn of a better day.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MOORE in the chair). Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. MINTON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. In that connection I am sure the Senator realizes that the Hoover administration was not compelled to take over local relief because of the collapse of State, county, and city governments. That administration had no works program which was designed to give employment to the unemployed in the United States. That program has been inaugurated within the last 3 years. I am not conceding that it is accurate to say that the present administration has spent $3,000,000,000 more than the Hoover administration spent, but, even if it be true, it certainly is offset by the fact that the present administration has been compelled to administer relief down into the smallest subdivisions of all the States, which was not required of the Hoover administration; and also that the present administration has worked out a works program which was designed to give employment to people, which was not true of the former administration.

Mr. MINTON. I thank the Senator for his remarks. The Hoover administration was not required to do the things which the Senator from Kentucky has pointed out. Even if that administration had been required to do so, it would not have it done because it indicated that it was not in sympathy with such a program. We all remember that when the State, county, and municipal governments broke down under the load of relief it was pointed out on the floor of the Senate that the administration should come to the relief of the people. I remember it. I heard of it down in the hills of southern Indiana as it was sounded here on the floor of the Senate by the distinguished junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the distinguished senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], and the distinguished senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], but they cried out as a voice in the wilderness to that administration to bring relief to the suffering people, and Mr. Hoover turned his back on them in the face of that calamity and said, "Go back to your own home people and let them take care of you", at a time when manifestly State agencies had broken down. So the present administration by force of circumstances was forced to take its place in defense of the citizens of the country who were in distress through no fault of their own, and, gradually, due to the expenditure of relief and works money and the adoption of the policy which the administration has consistently pursued, prosperity is returning to our Nation, so that whereas a short time ago we witnessed a wilderness of smokestacks grown cold, today there is a transformation and we see active, busy communities, the smokestacks of whose industries are belching forth smoke toward the heavens. At night the sky is red with the glare of the open furnaces. As one goes down the streets today he comes in contact with men in every community with the grime of toil upon their faces, and it looks good. All of these things have steadily progressed in the last few years under the Roosevelt administration.

As wonderful as all these material things are, they cannot compare with the spiritual things that have happened to this country. While we have been having material recovery we have been experiencing a spiritual revival in our country unparalleled in its history. A people who had lost faith in government, who had lost faith in their rulers, who had lost faith—yes—in everyone, have had their confidence and faith restored, and today, even now, we face the rainbow promise of a better day and we will not go back.

COAST GUARD NOMINATIONS: NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. COPELAND. As in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the President may be notified of the confirmation of nominations in the Coast Guard. It is important, as the young men are about to graduate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York? The Chair hears none, and the President will be notified.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the committee amendment on page 30, line 11.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I submit two perfecting amendments to that section which are offered on behalf of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first amendment to the committee amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 30, line 13, it is proposed to strike out "employed" and in lieu thereof to insert "appointed or employed in an administrative capacity."

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, inasmuch as the Senate has returned to the consideration of the bill I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Clark	King	Reynolds
Austin	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Bachman	Copeland	Lewis	Russell
Bailey	Couzens	Loftin	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Davis	Lonergan	Sheppard
Barkley	Dieterich	Long	Shipstead
Benson	Duffy	McAdoo	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	George	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gerry	Maloney	Townsend
Brown	Gibson	Minton	Truman
Bulkley	Glass	Moore	Tydings
Bulow	Guffey	Murphy	Vandenberg
Burke	Hale	Murray	Van Nuys
Byrd	Hastings	Neely	Wagner
Byrnes	Hatch	Norris	Walsh
Capper	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Caraway	Holt	Overton	White
Carey	Johnson	Pope
Chavez	Keyes	Radcliffe

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question is on the amendment to the committee amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, may the pending amendment be stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment, on page 30, line 13, it is proposed to strike out the word "employed" and insert in lieu thereof the words "appointed or employed in an administrative capacity."

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I understand this amendment to the committee amendment comes in on page 30, line 13. I wish to make an inquiry about the amendment. The committee amendment reads:

> No part of the funds carried in this appropriation shall be used to pay more than one-half of 1 percent of the total number of persons employed within any State who were nonresidents of the State at the time of the appointment or employment of such persons.

What would the amendment which the Senator from Colorado offers authorize?

Mr. ADAMS. The purpose of the amendment now offered is to change the effect of the committee amendment, which, as it appears in the printed bill, makes the percentage applicable to all those employed, so that it will apply only to those who were appointed and serve in an administrative capacity. It seemed to some of us that the amendment as drawn would apply to all those who were employed, for instance, on relief projects as individual applicants who may be now on the relief roll, and the amendment now offered would limit its application to the administrative staff. That is my understanding.

Mr. BORAH. Then, there would be no limitation as to the persons actually employed in other than administrative capacities.

Mr. ADAMS. That is correct. I will say that the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] offered the original amendment before the committee, and I imagine he can make a clearer statement of it than can I.

Mr. BORAH. I am very much interested in the amendment which was reported by the committee, and I should like therefore to know what the amendment is that the Senator from Colorado is offering to the committee amendment and what its effect is.

Mr. ADAMS. I should like to have the Senator from Georgia answer the Senator's question.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I was called off the floor a moment ago and have just returned. Has the perfecting amendment been offered by the Senator from Colorado?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, let me inquire if it is the intention of the Senator from Georgia and the Senator from Colorado to offer a similar amendment in line 19 on the same page?

Mr. ADAMS. I have sent the amendments to the desk and will ask the clerk to read them. There are two amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendments.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. The first amendment is, on page 30, line 13, to strike out the word "employed" and in lieu thereof to insert "appointed or employed in an administrative capacity."

And the same amendment is inserted on page 30, line 13, after the word "persons."

Mr. POPE. That covers all that I had in mind.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I think it would be most embarrassing if we were to place this limitation upon those who are employed, because if they cannot be so employed, they would have to be taken care of by somebody; they could not be shot at sunrise. I have no objection at all to the limitation upon those who administer the law, but it would be most embarrassing and inhumane, in my judgment, to have it apply to other persons.

Mr. RUSSELL. The intention of the amendment as originally drawn was to apply to those employed in administrative and supervisory capacities. As worded, it, perhaps, would have had the effect of disrupting certain projects which are now being carried on by workers from other States. It certainly would have a very adverse effect upon the transient camps and organizations of that kind. However, as modified by the amendment offered by those who have the bill in charge, it applies only to employees who are engaged in administrative and supervisory capacities.

I think the amendment is entirely proper. The idea of the Works Relief Administration is to afford employment to the unemployed and not to pay traveling expenses and cause any certain class to profit at the expense of those who are in need of funds. In my own State, which incidentally has the lowest wage scale I believe in the Nation, there have been times when the positions in the higher-salary brackets were practically all held by those imported from other States. The $19-a-month jobs were filled by native Georgians, while the positions paying $200 or $300 a month in supervisory capacities were filled by those who were residents of other States and were brought in to take over the supervisory jobs. The purpose of the amendment is to make certain that the people within the various States who need employment shall be supervised by those who understand conditions within the States and to prohibit and to prevent what we refer to in my section as "carpetbagging"—bringing people from outside the State and giving them the most desirable positions.

I think that every State of this Union has within its borders a sufficient number of people of skill, experience, and of integrity to fill the administrative positions without importing outsiders from the four corners of the earth, frequently at Government expense.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I quite agree with that proposition. The only thing I am anxious to know is whether any limitation is to be imposed in relation to the percentage as affecting those who may be employed, not those who may serve in administrative capacities.

Mr. RUSSELL. No such limitation will be imposed in view of the amendment that has been suggested by those having the bill in charge. There will be no limitation whatever as to those who are employed.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, may I ask my colleague if this provision is intended to apply to the $250,000,000 revolving fund reappropriated or released to the Works Progress Administration?

Mr. RUSSELL. The amendment was not drawn with that provision in mind; but, as the bill stands at present, I think the limitation would apply to all funds provided by the bill.

Mr. GEORGE. The reason I asked the question if it was intended to make it apply to that fund, to that appropriation, was, that fund is not an appropriation carried in the bill. That appropriation has already been made; it is in the relief appropriation.

Mr. RUSSELL. I may say to my colleague that I have not studied the provision that allocates funds to the Public Works Administration, but if the funds are appropriated by this bill I should think the limitation would apply. If the funds are not appropriated by this bill, of course, it would not apply, because the amendment applies only to funds that are appropriated by the pending measure.

Mr. GEORGE. Then I should like to ask another question with reference to the language in line 18, which is as follows:

Nor shall more than 1 percent of the total amount allocated out of this appropriation for expenditures for any purpose within any State be paid as salaries, wages, or other compensation to persons who were not bona-fide residents of such State at the time of appointment or employment.

Is that intended to apply to professional services such as engineering or legal services that may be performed by those who are nonresidents of the State?

Mr. RUSSELL. I should say not, in view of the fact that the amendment has been modified to apply only to administrative positions. I did not think it would apply to positions of the character mentioned by my colleague. There has been some question raised as to that, but, on account of the objections which have been voiced by several Senators, no attempt was made to apply it specifically to engineering and legal help. I am of the personal opinion that it should apply, but I do not think that the amendment, as drafted at present, will apply to engineering and legal positions.

Mr. GEORGE. The provision now is made applicable to persons appointed or employed in administrative capacities.

Mr. RUSSELL. In administrative capacities only.

Mr. GEORGE. I think my colleague is quite right in saying that professional services of any kind would not be included.

Mr. RUSSELL. I should not think it would apply to engineering and legal services.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President——

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. OVERTON. I gather from the explanation already made by the Senator that the amendment he has offered does not apply to what are designated as social workers who are employees.

Mr. RUSSELL. I should think it would apply to social workers in some of the cases I have in mind, because in many instances they occupy administrative positions. If a social worker or a lawyer or an engineer should occupy an administrative position, I should think the limitation would apply, but where an engineer was employed to design plans and specifications for the project I do not think it would apply, because he would not be acting in an administrative capacity.

Mr. OVERTON. Does it apply to that class of employees who are known as case workers?

Mr. RUSSELL. I should think that it would apply to them.

Mr. OVERTON. The reason I make the inquiry is that I understand there is need for the employment of persons of a certain amount of experience and qualified to perform that class of work, and for that reason it sometimes may be necessary to employ someone who is not a resident of the State.

Mr. RUSSELL. I know that argument has been raised, but I think things have come to a very poor pass when in any State in the Union a sufficient number of people who are natives of the State cannot be secured to carry on what is known as case work under the relief administration. In my judgment, those who live within a State are infinitely better prepared to do that work, because they are familiar with the local conditions, habits, and customs of the community in which they reside, and, of necessity, they know more about it than would one who was imported from a far-distant State and who had absolutely no conception of the living conditions, the customs, and practices within the section to which he was transferred.

Mr. OVERTON. I agree with the general principles announced by the Senator from Georgia and contained in the bill. I was simply seeking to obtain information in reference to the effect of the amendment if it were adopted.

Mr. RUSSELL. It is the intent of the committee that the limitation shall apply to the cases mentioned by the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from Georgia whether he would be willing to change one-half of 1 percent to 5?

Mr. RUSSELL. No; I would feel impelled to resist the amendment suggested by the Senator from Florida. I see no reason or occasion for such an amendment.

Mr. FLETCHER. Would the Senator be willing to strike out the word "were", in line 14, and insert "are"?

Mr. RUSSELL. I did not understand the Senator's question.

Mr. FLETCHER. Would the Senator be willing to strike out "were" and insert "are", so that it would read "are employed" instead of "were employed"?

Mr. RUSSELL. I see no necessity for such a change. I cannot see that it would improve or strengthen the provision.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. RUSSELL. I am glad to yield.

Mr. McADOO. I am in sympathy with the purpose of the amendment insofar as it is an effort to have residents of the State in which the work is being done employed in the administrative work which is necessary in order to conduct the operations; but I am very much in doubt as to the arbitrary formula which it is proposed to apply. As the amendment is now framed it would restrict the number of persons who may be employed in administrative work to 1 percent of the number to be employed. That would mean, if 100 people were required in the performance of the administrative work on a project—and I shall now discuss the project feature of it only—only one nonresident could be employed. I am inclined to think the restriction might work a very great injury to the service we are trying to perform.

Let us take the case of flood-control work. In a conversation with General Markham, Chief of Engineers, he told me that on some of the flood-control projects—and he mentioned a particular one in my State—where at least 100 technical people are required in the performance of the work, they are not available locally. If the amendment should be adopted, he said, it would seriously hamstring the operations.

When we provide that only 1 percent of the total amount allocated out of the appropriation shall be employed for expenditure for any purpose to be paid as salaries or other compensation, we impose another arbitrary limitation which might work a very grave injustice. I understand on many of these projects at least 2½ percent should be permitted to be employed for technical service, and that they cannot always be obtained in the localities where the work is being done.

I think the amendment, however much we may sympathize with the purpose in view, may offer a very serious handicap upon operations of the service, and, for my part, I would be in favor of striking it out altogether. If it is to be inserted in the bill, I wish to suggest an amendment to my friend from Georgia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Georgia on the amendment has expired.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I had overlooked the fact that limitation of debate applied. I shall reserve my time on the bill. I understand I have 15 minutes on the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. McADOO. I may say to the Senator from Georgia that to the extent I have invaded his time I am willing to surrender my own time to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That may not be done under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I suggest that there be added, at the end of line 20, page 30, after the word "employment", the words "Provided, That this shall not apply to any project administered by the War Department." That might take care of one of the difficulties which I believe is inherent in the amendment itself.

Mr. RUSSELL. I can see no objection to the amendment applying to the engineering force and supervisory engineers.

Mr. McADOO. I understand the Senator is willing to accept my amendment?

Mr. RUSSELL. I have no objection if it is satisfactory to those who have the bill in charge. Many good reasons occur to me why it might be well to incorporate those words.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I have no particular objection to the amendment, but I insist a technician is not necessarily an administrator. Of course, we have to employ technical service outside of the State.

Mr. RUSSELL. I agree the amendment is not at all necessary, but I cannot see that it would in anywise impair the efficacy of the provision, and therefore I am willing to accept it.

Mr. McADOO. I think an engineer is essentially a part of the administrative organization in work of this character.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I have quite serious doubts about the adoption of the amendment. It seems to me it could well be left to the discretion of those upon whom is enjoined the obligation of performing the work in a scientific way.

One year ago yesterday in the southern part of Nebraska, along the Republican River valley, occurred the greatest flood within the memory of the oldest inhabitant or of which there was any record in history. Into a section of the country which for 2 years had not been able to produce a crop on account of dry weather, except perhaps along this particular valley, came this flood which destroyed entirely either all the bridges for nearly 200 miles along the river or destroyed the approaches to the bridges.

In proportion to the amount of property and the number of inhabitants of the valley, there was greater destruction of human life and greater loss of property than was caused by the flood which occurred later in the eastern and northeastern part of the United States. The flood in that valley was so well described by Mr. Lawrence, of the Public Relations Council, that I am going to ask the clerk to read his description of the damage done. In two or three places in his description I have stricken out the names of two or three officials, including my own, who had something to do with bringing about the repair of the damages, in order that there may be no possible criticism of a partisan or political nature. I ask that this description may be read in my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

NEBRASKA WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION,
DIVISION OF INFORMATION.

From: W. H. Lawrence, public relations counsel.

One year ago today the usually docile Republican River went on a mad rampage.

Precipitated by two successive cloudbursts and two days of ceaseless rainfall of unheard-of intensity, the small stream went crazy—transformed into a swirling, monstrous flood terror that surged through the long valley, killing people, tearing at railroad tracks, obliterating farmsteads, wrecking bridges, drowning livestock, inundating hundreds of miles of grainland, sweeping houses and other buildings from their foundations and setting them afloat to whirl crazily downstream, some to topple over and crack up as the crest of the wild yellow torrent smashed eastward down the valley.

Power lines were broken. Communication lines were down, and electric-light plants were out of commission, adding the terrors of darkness and silence to a distraught region. Dams broke, unleashing more tidal fury and heightening the wall of water roaring and boiling downstream. A tornado zigzagged diagonally across the countryside to multiply the horror.

Railroad tracks were twisted like wire and long sections of railroad ties were up-ended to resemble a picket fence. Highways on the floor of the valley were either washed out of existence or were under water.

The Republican River, a stream that is normally a couple of hundred yards wide, speedily spread out to a swath 2 miles wide in some places as tributary creeks from north and south poured their tremendous overload into the Republican so suddenly as to bring about a wash of tidal-wave proportions.

So suddenly did the flood strike that most of the valley's residents were in it before they could be warned, and most of those who were warned discarded the cautioning as absurd.

In their wake the churning water left:

Ninety-four persons drowned (approximately 30 of these bodies have not been recovered).

Three dead from the tornado.

Damage approximating $2,000,000 done to property of the Burlington Railroad.

Other property damage totaling approximately $8,000,000.

Three hundred and forty-one miles of highways damaged.

One thousand and seven buildings lost.

Three hundred and seven bridges lost.

Six hundred and seventeen buildings damaged.

Fifty-four thousand four hundred and seventy-nine acres of cropland damaged.

Two hundred and ninety horses lost.

Four hundred and two milk cows lost.

Two thousand eight hundred and twenty-five other cattle lost.

Forty-six thousand five hundred and seven chickens lost.

Local, State, and Federal authorities acted quickly to alleviate suffering in the valley and to start the rehabilitation work.

The American Red Cross was in the field before the flood reached its peak, and Nebraska communities responded quickly and generously to its appeal for funds.

Officials quickly obtained an emergency flood allotment of funds from Federal authorities.

The Nebraska Emergency Relief Administration poured men and money into the valley and Rowland Haynes (then F. E. R. A. administrator, now president of Omaha Municipal University) was appointed coordinator of the flood work.

Nine emergency Civilian Conservation camps were established at McCook, Superior, Franklin, Trenton, Cambridge, Arapahoe, Alma, Benkelman, and Red Cloud to bury dead animals, search for bodies, salvage property, and generally improve sanitary conditions. These camps were maintained for a month.

The N. E. R. A. established work camps at Benkelman, Trenton, McCook, Cambridge, Oxford, and Alma and brought relief workers from eastern Nebraska to help rebuild the valley.

State highway department crews were rushed into the valley to repair the flood-swept highway system and construct bridges that had been torn from their foundations or repair damaged spans.

During the first 2 months most of the work that was done was of the emergency type. Homes had to be rebuilt or cleaned, homeless families had to be fed and sheltered, debris had to be removed from the streets, and emergency transportation and communication facilities had to be established.

When the Works Progress Administration was set up in July the Republican River Valley was the first section of the State to receive its attention. When the N. E. R. A. stopped its work division the W. P. A. took over its labor camps.

Most of the W. P. A.'s work in the valley has been flood-prevention and flood-control work.

Today—exactly 1 year after the flood started—R. L. Heskett, W. P. A. engineer in charge of the river work, estimates the job of rehabilitation is about one-half done and another full year will be required to complete the work.

The president of the McCook Chamber of Commerce believes there should be at least 200 men in the valley for 2 or 3 years' time cleaning up and protecting the improvements that have been made during the last year.

"The W. P. A. and other governmental agencies have done splendid work already", the president of McCook Chamber of Commerce said, "and have accomplished a great deal, considering the amount of money and labor expended."

Peak employment during the emergency period after the flood was about 1,480 relief workers and an average of 800 men were employed on W. P. A. flood-control work for approximately 8 months. This is reduced now by the seasonal demand of private employment and State highway work.

Biggest spender in the valley was the Burlington Railroad, which not only repaired its $2,000,000 worth of damage but added another $1,000,000 to raise its roadbed and take it farther from the river. The N. E. R. A. spent approximately $340,000 for immediate relief and flood-control work, while the W. P. A. has spent approximately $200,000 since it went into operation in the valley September 20. The Red Cross spent approximately $167,411 to aid the stricken area.

F. T. Darrow, assistant chief engineer of the Burlington Railroad, estimates it employed 2,500 men for 2½ months immediately after the flood and has provided several months' employment for more than 1,000 persons.

The State highway department, which spent about $750,000 repairing the damaged roads, estimates its work provided 6 months' employment for approximately 400 men. The Federal Government provided $276,000 emergency funds for road work, which was matched by a like amount of State funds. The highway department also drew $158,000 from its maintenance fund for repairs.

Heskett, W. P. A. engineer, lists these W. P. A. accomplishments in the valley since the flood:

Twenty-five thousand lineal feet of jetties have been installed. Jetties are built to stop the river from cutting into the bank and to divert water into the regular channel. When a jetty is constructed, it backfills and reclaims land.

Construction of slightly more than 2 miles of river and tributary bridges. A 348-foot span over the Arickaree 1 mile west and one-half mile north of Haigler is the largest of the 55 W. P. A. built bridges.

Channel changes totaling 1¼ miles have been forced.

Five miles of dikes have been constructed.

City-street work has been done in a number of towns.

Debris has been cleaned up in city streets and the flood-swept channel has been opened somewhat.

Trees that blocked the channel were cut up and much of the wood was turned over to the counties for fuel for relief clients.

Only two of the three "d's" that usually follow floods—death, destruction, and disease—came into Nebraska with last year's flood.

Very few communicable diseases were contracted by residents of the valley despite the piling up of debris and the flooding of wells. This probably was due to the vigilance of the N. E. R. A. nursing service, the Red Cross, and local physicians, which completely immunized 4,158 persons. Eighteen persons were vaccinated for smallpox after eight cases of this disease developed.

Nebraska National Guard men prevented the pilfering of property and aided in rescue work, as did experienced river workers detailed by the United States Army from Missouri river work.

Although much work has been done on public property, little has been accomplished on privately owned land. Most of the farmers, who had harvested no crops for 2 years before the flood, couldn't afford to spend much money reclaiming their damaged property.

The most arresting thing about the valley—to the casual visitor—is the miles upon miles of sand-covered land, most of which looks as though it will never be farmed again. A stretch about 3 miles wide down the length of the Republican River in Nebraska—about 250 miles—is covered with sand 3 and 4 feet deep and looks hopeless.

"What work should be done in the future?" was the question your correspondent asked throughout the valley.

Very few of the replies were the same. All agreed men should be kept at work cleaning the debris and doing the type of flood-control work now being done.

But no definite flood-control plan has been formulated for the valley. Only recently the Congress passed a measure providing for an Army survey to decide what work should be undertaken.

When this survey is completed, a definite program probably will be formulated, but until then—

The valley holds it breath, hoping another flood like last year's won't come along.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado if he will add the word "supervisory" to the amendment. I think that would clarify it somewhat.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator from Georgia would like to add to the amendment, where the word "administrative" appears, the word "supervisory", so as to read "administrative and supervisory"?

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. ADAMS. That will be agreeable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado modifies his amendment. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Colorado, as modified, to the amendment reported by the committee.

The modified amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The second amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado to the amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 30, line 18, after the word "persons", it is proposed to add the same words.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO] suggested an amendment at that point which I think would take the place of the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado. Will not the Senator from Colorado accept the amendment offered by the Senator from California in lieu of his amendment?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment comes afterward; and being in a separate place from the amendment just stated, the latter must be disposed of first. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO] to the amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 30, line 20, after the word "employment", it is proposed to insert:

Provided, That this shall not apply to any projects administered by the War Department.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, instead of the word "this", I suggest the use of the words "this paragraph", so that the amendment would read:

Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply to any projects administered by the War Department.

I think there might be some ambiguity about the use merely of the word "this."

Mr. MCADOO. I accept the suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California modifies his amendment in accordance with the suggestion of the Senator from Florida. The question is on agreeing to the modified amendment offered by the Senator from California to the amendment reported by the committee.

The modified amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, it is impossible for us to hear the proceedings on the other side of the Chamber; so I assume that we probably have reached the time when an amendment of which I spoke on Saturday last will be appropriate. If it be not appropriate I shall, of course, wait until the proper time shall arrive. It is an amendment to be made at the top of page 32.

Mr. ADAMS. We have not reached that point. Have we finally disposed of the second paragraph on page 30?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; the question now before the Senate is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, is the vote now to come on the amendment on page 30, beginning with line 11 and extending to line 20?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BORAH. I should like to have the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended. [Putting the question.] The noes seem to have it.

Mr. RUSSELL. I ask for a division.

On a division, the amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment of the committee, on page 6, line 18, was agreed to, be reconsidered, and I shall then ask for the present consideration of an amendment to the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator. The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered. The clerk will state the amendment to the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, on page 6, line 18, to insert the following after the words "Senate Office Building":

For repairing and painting 435 corridor doors, for painting all outside window frames, and painting 104 rooms, $44,180.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, if the Senators will give me their undivided attention they will adopt the pending amendment within 5 minutes.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I should like to hear what the proposed amendment is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will again state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 6, line 18, following the words "Senate Office Building", it is proposed to insert the words—

For repairing and painting 435 corridor doors, for painting all outside window frames, and painting 104 rooms, $44,180.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the object of the amendment is to provide funds with which to defray the cost of painting 435 corridor doors which were last painted more than 15 years ago. Seventy-eight rooms in the new part of the Senate Office Building need painting because of the fact that they were originally painted on an emergency basis, and consequently the work was not permanently done.

The Members of the Senate should understand that unless the amendment is adopted their rooms cannot be painted during the present year. If the amendment prevails, the offices of the following will be promptly painted: Senators Pittman, Black, Frazier, Shipstead, Overton, Bailey, Logan, Bulow, Connally, King, Clark, Maloney, Costigan, Glass, Byrnes, Bachman, Norbeck, Metcalf, Carey, the Vice President; and Senators Adams, La Follette, Barbour, Murphy, Sheppard, Fletcher, Tydings, Byrd, Copeland, McNary, Nye, and Schwellenbach.

Mr. President, if the investment of millions of dollars which the Government has in this building is to be fully protected the amendment should prevail.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I think it should be stated that the Committee on Appropriations had before it this request. It called upon the Architect of the Capitol, Mr. Lynn, and after having heard his explanation we felt that the painting covered by this amendment was not necessary at this time.

I should say that we understood from Mr. Lynn that the particular painting called for was largely to be done in the new wing. It occurred to some of us that the new wing, which has been occupied only some 3 years, did not need repainting.

I am making this explanation so that the Senate may understand why the item was not included by the committee. We had no explanation from the chairman of the Committee on Rules, and I am sure that had he come before us and made a statement in his persuasive way, we would have recommended the item.

Mr. NEELY. The chairman of the Committee on Rules was not present when the item was considered by the Committee on Appropriations or the matter would have been submitted to the committee at the proper time. The responsibility is that of the Senate; it is not mine. It does not make any difference to me personally whether the amendment is adopted or rejected. But if it is rejected I do not want Senators to ask me to have their rooms painted during the next year, because there will be no funds with which to employ painters or to buy paint.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I merely desire to say in addition to what has been stated by the Senator having the bill in charge, that the legislative appropriation bill carries appropriations of this character for the maintenance and upkeep of the Senate Office Building. A considerable sum, as I recall, was appropriated for such purposes, to be available during the next fiscal year.

The pending item is offered on a deficiency bill. When it was presented to the committee we concluded that it had no place in a deficiency bill. If the amount is necessary to be spent for the upkeep of the Senate Office Building, it should have been presented for the consideration of the proper committee in connection with the legislative appropriation bill. It was not presented when that bill was under consideration. As I recall, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], the chairman of the subcommittee having that bill in charge, gave hearings to the officials having charge of the Senate Office Building in order to determine what amount should be spent. Now, in the closing days of the session, it is sought to add an amount on a deficiency bill. The only thing we could do when the matter was presented to us was to call upon the Architect of the Capitol, and he disagreed entirely from the Superintendent of the Senate Office Building, and stated that he believed this expenditure was not necessary.

I know that the Senator from West Virginia is absolutely convinced of the importance of this work, but I do not believe the Senate Office Building will be destroyed in the next 6 months, and I think we could very well tell the officials in charge of it that items of this kind should be presented to the committee having the legislative appropriation bill in charge, instead of presenting them as deficiency items, when they are not deficiencies.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I concur in the statement of the Senator from South Carolina to the effect that this item should have been included in the legislative appropriation bill; but it was inadvertently omitted, and the Government's property should not be permitted to deteriorate because some one failed to perform his duty on time. But fortunately, in this matter, the error of the past can be corrected by adopting the amendment which is now before the Senate.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the chairman of the Committee on Rules spoke of some of my rooms. I do not care whether or not they are painted. But I desire to say, for the benefit of those in charge of the pending bill, without undertaking to be critical of either group, that it is a fact which anyone who has been chairman of the Committee on Rules, as I have been, will understand, that there is not always cooperation and absolute harmony between the administration of the Senate Office Building and the Architect's Office. I am not saying this to be critical or disagreeable, but simply to state the fact.

It is the business of the chairman of the Committee on Rules to see to it that needed improvements are made in the Senate Office Building. I dare say the present chairman of the committee was not aware of the fact that this matter was pending. But it is not the business of the Architect of the Capitol to say what shall be done in the Senate Office Building, and a prudent business man seeking to keep his property in good condition, certainly is going to paint it when it needs to be painted.

I am aware of the conditions in the Senate Office Building, and I endorse everything the chairman of the Committee on Rules has said. I think the Senate should, without hesitation, give the chairman of the Committee on Rules the opportunity to have this item placed in some appropriation bill, though it is one which might more appropriately have gone into the legislative appropriation bill. In the absence of such opportunity to have it placed on that bill, I hope the amendment will be agreed to, and that the item will go into the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, on page 30, line 24, to strike out the words "Works Progress Administrator" and to insert in lieu thereof "President", so as to make the paragraph read:

> The rates of pay for persons engaged upon projects under the foregoing appropriation shall be not less than the prevailing rates of pay for work of a similar nature as determined by the President.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 31, line 1, to strike out the words "Works Progress Administrator" and to insert in lieu thereof "President"; on page 31, line 5, to strike out the words "Works Progress Administration projects"; on the same page, line 6, after the word "need", to strike out "of such employment"; and on the same page, line 9, after the colon, to insert a proviso, so as to make the paragraph read as follows:

> The President is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purpose of the foregoing appropriation: Provided, however, That in the employment of persons, applicants in actual need whose names have not heretofore been placed on relief rolls shall be given the same eligibility for employment as applicants whose names have heretofore appeared on such rolls: Provided further, That the fact that a person is entitled to or has received either adjusted-service bonds or a Treasury check in payment of an adjusted-compensation certificate shall not be considered in determining actual need of such employment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, on page 31, line 5, after the word "persons", I move to insert a comma, so that the language will be:

> That in the employment of persons, applicants in actual need whose names have not heretofore been placed on relief rolls shall be given the same eligibility for employment as applicants whose names have heretofore appeared on such rolls:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I offer another amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 31, line 13, after the word "employment", it is proposed to insert the following as a new paragraph:

> In carrying out the purpose of the foregoing appropriation the President is authorized to utilize agencies within the Government and to empower such agencies to prescribe rules and regulations to carry out the functions delegated to such agencies by the President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I should like to ask a question of the Senator from Colorado. The committee amendment, as I understand, makes available $250,000,000 for the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works, and an amount not exceeding 30 percent may be granted on projects in excess of $100,000, and 45 percent on projects below $100,000. What loss does the Senator estimate will occur with respect to those loans?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, there is one correction in the statement of the Senator from Virginia. This amount was altered by an amendment adopted Saturday, so that the amount stated herein is now $300,000,000, not $250,000,000. That is, an amendment was adopted as a substitute for lines 14 to 24 on page 31, and for the date in line 1, page 32. The other portion of the Senator's inquiry deals with the limitations sought to be imposed upon the grants that may be made.

My own view is that it was the desire of those who participated in drafting the amendment to have the money provided for as grants used as far as possible to construct as many projects and employ as many people as possible, and yet to conclude the work substantially within a year. We felt that the year's limitation would in part accomplish that. As to the larger projects, we felt that if the Government contributed only 30 percent we should have more projects.

If the 30 percent applied all the way through, this would be the result: By making 30-percent grants, and consuming the entire $300,000,000, there could be construction in the amount of $1,000,000,000. If 45-percent grants were made all the way through projects could be constructed in the aggregate of only $666,000,000. Necessarily, with a billion dollars' worth of projects we shall employ more people than with $666,000,000 worth. We felt that if the Government should donate 30 percent it would be doing its share.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. That would be true provided the communities could put up the 70 percent. The amendment would tend to limit the ability of smaller and poorer communities to match the 30 percent put up by the Government, and in all probability would deny them the opportunity to have these projects. This would work in the interest of the larger and richer communities which could put up 70 percent instead of 55 percent.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to ask the Senator from Colorado a question. I do not understand the committee amendment. Is it intended to apply to projects that are now under consideration?

Mr. ADAMS. I think not. Entirely new money is provided here. The amendment does not apply to existing appropriations. It applies to the use of the $300,000,000 that will be made available by this appropriation to the Secretary of the Interior for public works.

Mr. NORRIS. And would it apply to the case where a larger project had been commenced and partially completed, and on which allotments had been made? Would the rules under which that project was first started be changed by the amendment?

Mr. ADAMS. My understanding is that under the Public Works Administration, money has been set aside in each instance to complete the project.

Mr. NORRIS. That is not my understanding. I may be wrong, of course. My understanding is that allotments on a great many projects have been made to complete only part of the work; that it was understood and known that it could not be completed, for instance, in the first year. I think further allotments will have to be made as time goes on.

Let us assume that a project is commenced and partially finished. The local people went into it on the theory that there was going to be a grant by the Government of 45 percent. Has that been changed now, so that there will be a grant of only 30 percent, or so that the project must be completed in a year, when it is known from the very nature of things that it cannot be completed within that length of time?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I do not understand the situation to be as the Senator from Nebraska states it. We had before us the representatives of the Public Works Administration, and I understand that every project which they have authorized has now had set aside to it the full amount of money necessary to complete it. If they made a 45-percent grant, the 45 percent is set aside and is obligated. In other words, the amendment does not apply to any project now under process of construction. It is limited exclusively to projects which are not now under construction.

The Secretary of the Interior said to us, "If this money is given to me, I shall be able to construct so many projects." He said, "I have a list of approved projects which have not been started, but they are ready to start"; and he expects to operate upon the list of approved projects, none of which are now under construction.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Virginia yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Even though the Senator's statement is correct that where projects have been started, and money has been allocated sufficiently to complete them——

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, suppose there has not been allocated enough money to complete them; what then?

Mr. BARKLEY. If there has not been allocated enough money, and it would be necessary to allocate more out of this appropriation, the amendment would apply; there is no doubt about it.

Mr. NORRIS. That is the way it seems to me; and that seems to me manifestly unjust and unfair.

Mr. BARKLEY. We all know that projects were sent forth by the Public Works Administration amounting to over $2,000,000,000. It happened that many of them could not be approved or started because of lack of funds. All those that were started on a 45- and 55-percent basis. Out of this fund, the very same type of project which is to be begun in the future, but which would have been begun in the past if there had been enough money, must be limited to a 30- and 70-percent division. It seems to me the amendment is really putting the projects that are now under construction under the Public Works Administration on a basis that discriminates against those that could not get in because of a lack of funds on the part of the Public Works Administration.

Mr. ADAMS. Let me suggest to the Senator from Kentucky that next year, when the money is consumed and the local communities have to put up 100 percent, they will come back and say, "That is not fair. You are now making us build our own projects, and the Federal Government is paying nothing toward them."

Mr. BARKLEY. If, next year, all the communities will have to put up 100 percent, there will be no public-works bill before us.

Mr. ADAMS. Originally, under the law, there was no 30-percent proviso. For a year we have been giving larger grants than before, and now we are trying to assume a more modest Santa Claus policy.

Mr. BARKLEY. The reason why that policy was changed was because many of the smaller communities could not put up 70 percent. Many cities have already issued bonds on the basis of 45 percent and 55 percent in the hope that Congress will make more money available out of which they may build their projects. If we make the proportion 30 and 70 percent, those cities will have to have further elections and vote on whether or not to issue more bonds.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I shall continue to yield to the Senator from Kentucky if he will have the time he consumes charged to himself.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not wish to have anything more charged to me than is necessary, because I am guilty of enough as it is. I had forgotten the limitation on time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 5 more minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON. There was an amendment which I stated that I desired to offer, which will bring this question to a head. Perhaps the Senator from Virginia has a like amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, before the Senator from California submits his amendment, I should like to have the attention of the Senator from Colorado. I should like to know how this is going to affect the Treasury of the United States, there being a 45-percent grant on all projects under $100,000 and a 30-percent grant on all projects over $100,000. Has the Senator estimated what the cost of such grants or gifts will be to the Treasury of the United States, and, if so, is the appropriation carried elsewhere in the bill?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, this title of the bill contains two major items. One is an appropriation of $1,425,000,000, which goes to the President to be distributed in accordance with his discretion under certain classifications. The second item is the one which has been under discussion.

Mr. BYRD. What part of this item comes out of the Treasury?

Mr. ADAMS. The $1,425,000,000 is a direct appropriation. The Treasury, however, is affected by the $300,000,000 in this way. The $300,000,000 comes out of the securities that are now on hand. Under the existing law the Secretary cannot make grants from that fund, and so necessarily in the course of time the securities or their proceeds would go into the Treasury.

Mr. BYRD. Does the grant under this section come from the $1,425,000,000?

Mr. ADAMS. It does not.

Mr. BYRD. Where does it come from?

Mr. ADAMS. Out of the securities now in the hands of the Public Works Administrator.

Mr. BYRD. How much will this amendment actually cost the Federal Treasury in the event $300,000,000 is used?

Mr. ADAMS. It will cost $300,000,000; that is the amount that can be granted; and it does not make any difference to the Treasury whether it is in 30-percent grants or 45-percent grants, because I have no doubt it will all go out.

Mr. BYRD. In other words, then, it is equivalent to a direct appropriation of $300,000,000 in the event it is all used?

Mr. ADAMS. That will be the ultimate result, but it will not increase the appropriation at this time. It applies to money which is now on hand, but which is not available for expenditure, and makes it available for expenditure.

Mr. BYRD. To that extent then it diminishes the securities in the United States Treasury?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BYRD. Therefore, we are appropriating $300,000,000 in addition to $1,425,000,000?

Mr. ADAMS. I think that is the substantial result.

Mr. BYRD. And, in addition to that, there will be loans of 35 percent made to communities, and some loss may result from such loans.

Mr. ADAMS. The loan funds will be quite limited. There is only $150,000,000 left in the loan fund.

Mr. BYRD. All I want to make clear is that we are adding $300,000,000 to this relief bill for the purpose of constructing public works.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWELLENBACH in the chair). The Senator will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have been watching this amendment and I understood that it had not been acted upon. I understood we had reached line 14, on page 31. I desire to ask the Chair whether the amendment, beginning on line 14, page 31, and ending on line 11, page 32, has been acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The parliamentary situation is this: On Saturday last an amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado was adopted to the committee amendment, commencing in line 14, page 31. The committee amendment has not as yet been adopted as it was amended.

Mr. BARKLEY. I desire to offer an amendment to strike out the proviso beginning in line 1, page 32, and ending with the word "percentum" in line 4.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment, on page 32, beginning in line 1, it is proposed to strike out the following proviso:

Provided, That not more than 30 percent shall be granted on any such project the cost of which is more than $100,000, and in no case shall the grant exceed 45 percent.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will modify the amendment to this extent, to strike out the proviso down to and including the word "and" in line 3, and insert a period there and begin the word "In" with a capital "I"; so that 45 percent, the limitation, would remain as there provided.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, let me inquire again what does he propose to do?

Mr. BARKLEY. I propose to strike out the proviso on page 32, beginning in line 1 down as far as the word "and" in line 3, which places the 30-percent limitation on the grants.

Mr. COPELAND. If the Senator will permit me, I think I would favor that proposal, and I should like to say just a word.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, we are operating under a limitation of time; and, if the Senator will speak in his own time, I will appreciate it.

Mr. COPELAND. Very well; I will speak in my own time. I think all I need to say is that I favor what the Senator is proposing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Would the Senator from Kentucky accept the suggestion of the Chair that the words "Provided, That" remain, so that it would read "Provided, That", and so forth?

Mr. BARKLEY. I accept that suggestion, and thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I hope the Senate will agree to this amendment, because otherwise the committee provision will operate as a very severe discrimination among communities of equal merit. We all know that out of the $4,800,000,000 which was appropriated at the last session of Congress there was a small amount, comparatively speaking, allocated out of those funds to the Public Works Administration. All over the country counties and towns, and in some cases States, filed projects with the State director of the Public Works Administration. Those projects were investigated by the engineers and other investigators. They went through the mill, just as every other project went through the mill, in order to be approved by the State director, and reach Washington. More than $2,000,000,000 worth of such projects, which were not forced on the local communities by anybody in Washington but which were originated in the communities themselves, were approved, and sent to the Secretary of the Interior as Director or Administrator of the Public Works Administration.

They had less than half a billion dollars with which to do $2,000,000,000 worth of work. I do not know exactly the amount that was at the disposal of the Public Works Administration at that time, but it was not more than a half billion dollars. So, with over $2,000,000,000 worth of projects on file and approved by the State administrators, it is necessary to go through them, comb them out, and exercise some arbitrary authority in determining which of these projects could be begun and money allocated for their completion.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. FLETCHER. Corroborating what the Senator has said, I have a telegram from the mayor of Tallahassee from which it appears that that city submitted an application which has been approved for a year and a half, but for the project there are no available funds. What condition will that city be in?

Mr. BARKLEY. It will be in the position of having to comply with the 70–30 percent provision if it is to get any consideration at all. It may have to readjust its whole local financial situation.

Mr. FLETCHER. Precisely.

Mr. BARKLEY. Many of these cities, as I said a little while ago, are acting on the belief that they will get a grant or loan or both, as the case may be, upon a 45–55-percent basis, issued bonds, and those bonds are ready for sale as soon as they can get word that the Federal Government is going to comply with what they understood at the time. If we impose this limitation, requiring all these communities to put up 70 percent instead of 55 percent, it means that they will not get the opportunity to improve their condition or they will have to readjust their financial situation, and in many cases they cannot do so.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that the information I have from the cities in my State is exactly that expressed by the Senator from Kentucky. It seems to me that a great hardship would be worked unless the matter be arranged.

In this connection I ask to have printed in the RECORD the telegram which I send to the desk.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
Senate Office Building:

City of Memphis using all funds available to carry out public-works program in this city and to pay city's share. Feel a reduction of P. W. A. grant from 45 to 30 percent would seriously curtail needed public improvements here and make it difficult to give employment to the large number of unemployed.

WATKINS OVERTON, Mayor.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. BULKLEY. What chance would these communities have to readjust their financial situation in order to get the work done this year?

Mr. BARKLEY. They would have no chance. The answer to the question is perfectly obvious. The money made available to the Public Works Administration through the agency of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and through securities already held does not mean that any new projects are going to originate in any community. It does not afford enough money to complete the projects already approved in the office of the Secretary of the Interior. The result will be that it will be necessary again to go through the list of approved projects and comb out those which it is felt are the most meritorious among those already on file.

I think it is unfair to communities, which have put in their applications on the basis of 55–45 and would have been granted the loan of money on that basis if we had appropriated for the Secretary of the Interior, now to require them to pay 70 percent when their neighbors get in for 55 because the Secretary of the Interior or the Public Works Administration felt that for some reason one community was more deserving than another in the matter of the appropriations which were to be used.

Mr. ADAMS. May I say for the information of the Senator that there is not an approved project in Kentucky which runs over the $100,000 mark.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, Mr. President, I am not so provincial that I speak only for Kentucky.

Mr. ADAMS. But the Senator is very uneasy about Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am speaking for the smaller communities all over the United States. I have a letter from the mayor of Louisville telling me if this amendment is incorporated in the bill it will affect two projects in the city of Louisville. I think he probably knows what he is talking about, although I do not doubt the sincerity of my friend from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. I am speaking from the record.

Mr. BARKLEY. If there were no projects in my State affected by the proposal, I would still think it unfair, because it completely changes the basis of relationship between the Federal Government and the States without any warning to the States and in spite of the fact that they have placed their applications on the 55–45-percent basis.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McADOO. May I ask the Senator from Kentucky if it is not a fact that in many of the cities and communities special elections have been held upon the theory that the 45-percent grant was going to be made, and the electors of such communities have voted bonds on the basis of the understanding that such grants would be made? If we change that basis now, will not all of those elections go for naught?

Mr. BARKLEY. It amounts to a denial of opportunity to those communities. I said a while ago that many of the communities had issued bonds. I did not say, which is the truth and I thank the Senator for reminding me of it, that in order to issue the bonds they had to call special elections. They have called them in many instances and voted bonds on this basis. It is not fair to cut the ground from under those communities in this way.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I agree with everything the Senator has said and that the effect of the amendment would be to nullify the public-works program under which we are now able to put so many people to work. My own State would be affected in the same way.

Many communities in the State have held elections and have adjusted their finances so as to be able to meet the 55-percent requirement. The adoption of this amendment would mean they would not be able to qualify and they would have no public-works program.

I suggest to the Senator that I think it would still further improve his amendment if he would extend the time within which the projects are to be completed. It is now provided that the time limit shall be June 30, 1937. I think that is rather a drastic limitation and may eliminate some of the most desirable projects. One of our objectives is to select the more desirable projects. I think the time ought to be extended to 1938.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am willing to accept the suggestion by inserting "1938" at the beginning of line 1, page 32, instead of "1937." Time has been running against many of these projects because the money was not available and there was not the same basis for completion of the work as those projects which are now under consideration.

Mr. WAGNER. In many cases the most desirable projects are involved.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. This fund is allocated to projects which have already been selected by the Secretary of the Interior. No election has been held in consequence of this limitation. No election has been held which this limitation would affect in the slightest degree. It simply applies to projects which have already been designated by the Secretary of the Interior. The $300,000,000 does not involve the appropriation of another dollar of new money.

Moreover, Senators are simply emphasizing the wretched delusion that the Federal Government is granting these cities something, making them a gift. They will have to pay back every dollar whether it be called a loan or a gift, and Senators are simply fooling the people by calling it a grant or a gift, because it is nothing of the kind.

Mr. BARKLEY. In reply to the Senator from Virginia, the cities which will be benefited by the additional appropriation are on the same basis so far as applications are concerned as are the cities which were lucky enough to get any of the money already available. It is true that many of the cities in order to comply with the requirement of putting up 55 percent, had to issue bonds in order to do it, and had to call elections and have called elections. It is true that many cities which would be denied the money if the amendment were adopted as reported by the committee had gone through all the necessary steps in order to obtain the money which they had to have from other sources in order that they might comply with the 45–55 percent ratio requirement.

Mr. GLASS. Eventually their position will not be different from that of any other city, because all of them will have to pay it back.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me suggest to the Senator from Kentucky, when he modifies his amendment by inserting "1938" instead of "1937", that many of the projects are now held up by injunctions which are pending. As to some of them the injunctions will not be disposed of in time to enable them to avail themselves of the grant.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have in mind a city whose council called an election to vote bonds to comply with the requirements of the Government in order to build a waterworks plant. An injunction was obtained against the election, and the election has not as yet been held because the case has not been decided. Certainly another year is not too much to ask in behalf of the community restricted in such a way.

Mr. NORRIS. I have in mind the case of Jacksonville, Ill. Bonds were voted after full discussion of the matter before the people, but in that case it was a question of constructing a municipal electric-light plant. The power interests obtained an injunction after the bonds had been voted.

Mr. GLASS. Has the Secretary of the Treasury allocated out of the $4,800,000,000 the funds for the project?

Mr. NORRIS. I do not know what the facts are, but I know the city itself has been enjoined from issuing the bonds.

Mr. GLASS. Let us know what the facts are before we proceed. The chairman of the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee has already said to the Senator from Nebraska that this particular fund does not relate to any work which is now under contract or which has been authorized.

Mr. BARKLEY. It would relate to it if a sufficient amount of money has not been allocated to complete the work, but if it took $500,000 out of this fund to complete any such work, then it would not become available because the 30–70 percent ratio would not apply to it.

Mr. NORRIS. May I also call the Senator's attention to a project in my own State where the work has been commenced, where only a part of the allotment was made, and an injunction is now pending in the local courts in the city of Washington?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, the information before the Appropriations Committee, which came from the Secretary of the Interior, was that all projects which had been started had had allocated to them sufficient money to complete them.

Mr. BARKLEY. Even assuming that to be true, I would still be opposed to the amendment, because it requires other cities with projects just as meritorious to obtain the money on an entirely different basis from that which would be applied to the projects now under construction.

Mr. GLASS. Yes; it is just a hopeless case. We are going to keep on deluding the people of the country with the suggestion that they can get something for nothing, when, in reality, they cannot do it.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I desire to take the floor in my own right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I agree with the contention made by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], and I am in thorough accord with the amendment he has suggested.

I wish to comment for a moment on the amendment suggested by the Senator from New York and reinforced by the approval of the Senator from Nebraska; namely, the amendment advancing the date on which a project may be completed from June 30, 1937, to June 30, 1938.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I have incorporated that in my amendment.

Mr. OVERTON. Yes; but I wish to make a further suggestion. I do not see the necessity for any limitation at all. As the Senator from Nebraska has pointed out, some of these projects may be met, as they have been met, with injunctions, and it will take some time to complete them. There are other projects which are very meritorious which cannot be completed by June 30, 1938. Let us take, for instance, a levee project for flood control. The project itself may require 3 or 4 or 5 or 6 or 7 years for completion. It is a meritorious project, and allocations would be made not to complete the entire project, but to assist in the construction of the project.

For instance, we have in our State a project which we have had in mind for some time, the Charity Hospital of New Orleans. That project has been knocking at the doors of the Public Works Administration from the very beginning. Unfortunately, it has not yet been recognized, and will not be recognized until certain laws enacted in Louisiana have been repealed.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, not a dollar of this fund will be available to it.

Mr. OVERTON. Why should it not be available?

Mr. GLASS. The Secretary of the Interior will tell the Senator that.

Mr. OVERTON. I cannot see the reason why it should not be available.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President——

Mr. OVERTON. Does the Senator from Colorado state that none of the funds in this particular provision of the bill would be available for a project of that character?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Louisiana to the fact that the New Orleans hospital project has been approved, and its application was on a 30–70-percent basis. It has asked for only 30 percent. That is the amount requested in the application. It has been approved for $8,000,000, of which a third is to be a grant.

Mr. OVERTON. I am not now talking about the 30–70 application. I am talking about the time within which it can be substantially completed. In all probability it cannot be substantially completed within a year. It may not be substantially completed within 2 years; and yet the effect of this amendment would be to deny a project of that kind any consideration whatsoever.

I mention that merely as an illustration. Let me give another illustration.

We desire to build across the Mississippi River, at Baton Rouge, a combination highway and railway bridge. It will be a great artery of transcontinental transportation. It will be another great bridge spanning the lower Mississippi River; and yet under this provision, in all probability, that project will receive no consideration, because it cannot be substantially completed within the time limit. I think there ought not to be any time limit at all, but that the matter should be left to the discretion of the Administrator.

Mr. President, I desire to direct the attention of the Senator from Kentucky to the amendment he has offered and to ask him whether he would be willing to modify it by striking out of the committee amendment beginning on line 23 of page 31 with the word "capable" on down to the numerals "1937" in line 1, page 32. That would remove the time limitation that is included in the bill, and which I do not think ought to be there.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, replying to the Senator's suggestion, I will say that I appreciate the force of his argument; but the whole theory upon which the Works Progress and Public Works Administrations were organized was that an emergency existed in the way of employment which ought to be looked after, and that that employment ought to be brought about as speedily as possible, and that there ought to be some limitation upon the time within which these allocations might be made, in order that the immediate and emergent situations might be taken care of in the way of unemployment. I do not agree with the Senator to the extent of thinking that all time limits ought to be eliminated from the bill. I think there ought to be a reasonable limitation. The amendment I have offered provides for a limit of 2 years and 1 month from the present time.

Mr. OVERTON. Let me say to the Senator from Kentucky that a project requiring more than 2 years to complete is a project that is susceptible of putting men to work just as rapidly and as quickly and as effectively as a project that would take 6 months to complete.

Mr. BARKLEY. I realize that; but these projects are now all ready to begin. I see no reason why there should be an indefinite postponement of the beginning of the work, because the theory of all of it is that the men should be put to work at once; and for that reason I think there ought to be a limitation.

Mr. OVERTON. There would be no objection to a limitation on the time within which the project should be authorized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires to direct the attention of the Senator from Kentucky, the Senator from Colorado, and the Senator from Louisiana to the parliamentary situation.

On Saturday the Senate adopted the amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], which was a substitute for the language beginning on line 14 of page 31 and going to and including the figures "1937" on line 1, page 32. That was an amendment in the second degree, being an amendment to the committee amendment. In order to make in order the amendment which the Senator from Kentucky suggests, it would first be necessary to reconsider the amendment of the Senator from Colorado, and then it would be necessary for the Senator from Colorado to modify his amendment so that the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky would become a part of the amendment of the Senator from Colorado. Otherwise the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky would be an amendment in the third degree, and, under the rule, would not be in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, that does not apply to the remainder of my amendment on page 32. It applies only to the date "1937."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It applies only to the date "1937." Is the Senator from Colorado willing to modify his amendment adopted on Saturday and to let it be reconsidered for that purpose?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, before the vote is taken I should like to remind Senators of something which they seem to have forgotten, and that is that the Supreme Court has decided the municipal bankruptcy law unconstitutional; and these towns which are going to run head over heels in debt cannot repudiate the debt. They will have it to pay.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, let me add that the life of the Public Works Administration was extended until June 30, 1937; and unless Congress extends the life of the parent organization I do not quite see how we can authorize it to do work beyond that time. The second reason the committee had for limiting this appropriation to June 30, 1937, was that the appropriations made for the Works Progress Administration under this title have a like limitation. They are available for the fiscal year and for the fiscal year only.

When Congress reconvenes next year, if it wants to extend the life of the Public Works Administration, or wants to extend the life of these appropriations or make future appropriations, it can properly be done.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I do not think the Senator from Arizona catches the exact purport of the language contained in the committee amendment. It refers to projects capable of being substantially completed by a certain time. Therefore, if a project is one which is not capable of being completed by June 1, 1937, it could not be considered at all.

Mr. HAYDEN. That is the point exactly. There must be a finding on the part of the Public Works Administrator, when he approves a project and allots money to it, that it is capable of being completed within the year.

Mr. OVERTON. That has nothing to do with the life of the Public Works Administration, because the Public Works Administration during its life may make an allocation for a project, work on which will extend beyond the life of the Public Works Administration.

Mr. HAYDEN. It can make a contract which will be binding beyond the date; everyone understands that; but it is incumbent upon the Public Works Administrator to find that in all probability, and within reason, the project can be completed within the year. He has a very wide choice of projects, and, speaking on behalf of the committee, our object was to get as many of them as possible completed within the year and give employment to the largest possible number of persons. So it seemed to me when the amendment was inserted that the reasoning behind it was sound.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. In view of the parliamentary situation regarding the first part of the amendment, containing the date, I think it would be desirable to vote on the other part separately, and dispose of that. Then, if it is desirable, we could reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was adopted on Saturday, in order to change the date, and that can either be done by unanimous consent or on motion. So, for the time being, I desire to modify the amendment by withdrawing the part of it changing the date, and we may have a vote on the other part.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Colorado has no objection to considering the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky, including the change of the date.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I prefer to have the amendments treated separately.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, may I have the floor now? The Senator from Kentucky would not yield to me a while ago.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I did yield for the Senator to say that he was in favor of my amendment, and I thanked him.

Mr. COPELAND. I find myself out of sympathy with very much of what is proposed to be done. I agree fully with the Senator from Virginia that at some time these bills must be paid. But, having said that for myself, I wish to speak now for two or three mayors and presidents of school boards in my State.

I noticed that the Senator from Colorado rebuked the Senator from Kentucky because there were not any $100,000 projects in his State.

Mr. ADAMS. No; I referred to projects that had been approved, and that is quite a different thing.

Mr. COPELAND. Will the Senator permit me to say that there are quite a number of projects in New York State, however, which exceed $100,000?

Mr. ADAMS. I have no doubt of that.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I hold in my hand a telegram from the mayor of Troy, a considerable city in our State, in which he states:

I have been advised of the possibility of P. W. A. funds being made available, but that the Federal grant may be refused for more than 45 percent. Will you use every effort possible to maintain present ratio of loans to grants, 45-percent grant and 55-percent loan? Most urgent P. W. A. project for a high school approved and awaiting funds. Troy is in the same position as most New York State cities. We find it most difficult, if not impossible, to finance an additional 15-percent burden if grant is refused.

Likewise the president of the board of education of Mount Vernon, N. Y., telegraphs me:

Two projects already approved by the P. W. A. and already presented to citizens on the basis of a 45-percent grant will have to be thrown into the discard if grant is only 30 percent.

(At this point a visitor in the gallery created a slight disturbance. The Presiding Officer (Mr. SCHWELLENBACH in the chair) rapped with his gavel.)

Mr. COPELAND. I am not surprised at this man attempting to interrupt me. The feeling which probably actuates him I myself have had when listening to speeches of my colleagues. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the Senator advise us what his interruptor said?

Mr. COPELAND. I do not know what he said, but whatever it was it was appropriate, I have no doubt.

Mr. WHEELER. I think he merely asked the Senator if he would yield to him.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator did yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I have no doubt that what he said was more important than what I am about to say.

To continue my discussion at the point where I was interrupted by one who is probably one of my constituents, I should like to say further that I saw in the press this morning an article to the effect that the mayor of my home city, Mr. LaGuardia, stated that there were $77,000,000 of projects in New York City which could not be proceeded with if the proposed change is made from 40 percent to 30 percent.

Regardless of how I feel personally about the pending bill and about the policy, I think it is quite unfair to communities now in process of perfecting their plans for loans and grants to be interrupted in their programs. One case which strongly attracted my attention was the application of my own native town, where a grant and loan were made. I know that in some communities great good has been done by this program, and I believe, too, that the plan has done much to enable progress with the development of the heavy-machinery industry and the purchase of building materials, and in many ways it has contributed to the restoration of prosperity.

I think I may say again to the Senator from Kentucky—forgiving him, of course, for his failure to permit me to interrupt him, and overlooking entirely his slight—that I still believe he is right, and I sincerely hope his motion may prevail.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, it seems to me that the difference of opinion over 30 percent and 45 percent is a very minor matter compared with the foundation which underlies the argument. The argument which is made in support of the increased rate of grant and for the extension of the term seems all based on the fact that what we are seeking is to do something for cities, that we are attempting to do something for communities. We thought we were passing a relief bill. We thought there were people in need of food, of clothes, of shelter, and that we proposed to provide work for them upon useful projects, so that from the proceeds of their wages they could purchase their food, their clothes, and their shelter. If we follow the argument that is made here that these great projects cannot be completed within a year, and that we must extend the time beyond that, it means that less men will be fed and less will be clothed during this time of distress.

We are talking about a fund of $300,000,000. It was put in the bill because the members of the committee thought it would be needed in the bill to provide relief for the unemployed. If we propose to spread the $300,000,000 over 2 years instead of 1 year, we shall provide less relief for those whom we pretend we are looking after.

We have provided in the bill $1,425,000,000 to go into the direct channels of relief under the direction of the President. That was all that the House put in the bill. The $300,000,000 we are now discussing was not in the House bill. We put it in in the subcommittee in order to provide a measure of public works somewhat different in type, in order to continue what we regarded as a commendable, praiseworthy relief effort through that administration. We did not put it in the bill in order that a project might be completed for the benefit of some city, to save the taxpayers of some city. We did not think the discussion would be founded upon a claim that the United States Government was obligated to make gifts to the cities and to the counties and to the States. The argument is now being made that cities are being discriminated against in their receipt of benefits, of gifts, of donations from the Federal Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Administrator of the Public Works Administration in all these matters, in deciding which cities would be approved and would have money allocated, took into consideration the unemployment condition in every one of them, and will continue to do so under this additional fund.

Mr. ADAMS. I say, Mr. President, that when we raise the percentage of the grant we lessen the number of persons employed this year.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. BULKLEY. I have before me a telegram from Hon. Edward J. Kelly, mayor of Chicago, who says:

Thirty-percent grants would decrease amount of work we could do.

The argument is that the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky increases the ability of communities to give employment to their people.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I do not wish to be presumptuous, but I venture to disagree even with Mayor Kelly upon the relief matter. It seems to me the 30-percent grant provides an opportunity for $1,000,000,000 of construction; 45-percent grants will offer opportunity for $666,000,000 of construction. If my mathematics is not greatly in error, we can give more work through the expenditure of $1,000,000,000 than we can give through the expenditure of $666,000,000.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. What the Senator says may be true, provided the projects can be inaugurated; but I have received communications not only from the mayor of New York but from most of the mayors of cities of my State, and they all agree that the 30-percent limitation, because of the appropriations they have already made, with the projects that have already been approved, will practically nullify the inauguration of these projects. Therefore the optimistic view which the Senator from Colorado takes I think is unjustified in view of the evidence, which is overwhelming and persuasive.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I am relying upon the testimony of representatives of the Public Works Administration before the committee.

I recognize the fact that the conference of mayors has met, and the conference of mayors has sent telegrams to all of us. The mayors are interested in getting money for their cities as corporate entities. I am interested in getting relief for those who are in need of food, clothes, and shelter. As for the claim that there are not enough projects, the Secretary of the Interior, as Public Works Administrator, says he can start, within 2 weeks, $772,000,000 of the small type of projects which can be concluded within a year.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator has repeatedly stated that this amendment was put in the bill in view of the testimony of representatives of the Public Works Administration. It is not the contention of the Senator that the Secretary of the Interior, as Public Works Administrator, favors this 30-percent limitation, is it?

Mr. ADAMS. I am not expressing an opinion as to that. I am telling the Senate that the Secretary of the Interior said what he could do as to the number of minor projects which were approved, upon which he could go to work practically at once and which would give employment. I have no doubt that the Secretary of the Interior would like to have larger sums and be able to make larger grants. That is the normal attitude of mind of every man in public office.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, he does not get any more money whether the percentage is 30 percent or 45 percent; but, knowing the situation which exists with reference to projects, I think I am at liberty to say that if the Senator will consult the Secretary of the Interior, he will ascertain that in the Secretary's judgment this amendment is unwise.

Mr. ADAMS. I venture to say that that is rather immaterial to me.

Mr. President, just one other observation. I am among those who are very deeply concerned with regard to the financial future of the country. I think its political welfare and its social welfare are bound up in its financial welfare. I think we have proceeded along the road of great expenditures and great indebtedness to a point that approaches the danger point. If we shall proceed along the course indicated by the arguments made here that the Federal Government is obligated to furnish the money for every worthy project which every city and every State wants, I say to the Senate that the day of financial catastrophe will not be far off.

Mr. President, I am more fearful of the consequences of the attitude of mind which I see in this Chamber than I am of what is said outside. When Senators take the position that cities and counties and States have a right to come to the Congress of the United States and demand gifts, we are approaching a point of disaster. I am uneasy, I am fearful, I am afraid with that view abroad the result is inevitable, and that we ought to deal courageously with the problem as soon as possible.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I have listened to the argument of the Senator from Colorado, and I cannot find myself in agreement with him at all.

When the Senator says that States and cities and counties and local subdivisions are now taking the attitude that they are asking gifts from the Government, he may be correct in the present attitude; but whence came the original invitation to communities, to cities, and to States to present projects? It came from the Government of the United States. The Federal Government extended its invitation to every community in the United States to present projects, on the theory that thereby the depression might be relieved, and unemployment might be banished from the land. So if there is an error in the situation that the Senator finds today—a psychological result and reflex—that error was committed by us and the Federal Government in its original invitations.

What happened? The invitations were accepted. The inviations were given and made, with specific rules covering them, to the cities of this country. In accordance with the rules and regulations of the Department and of the Government, projects were submitted in every aspect as the Government regulations directed. These projects were presented and were approved. The projects were presented after the communities had held their elections in the various cities of the land. Those elections provided for the issuance of bonds in order that the particular communities might pay their share under the Government invitation and the Government regulations.

After that has been done, after the invitation has been accepted, after the rules and regulations have been met in every aspect, after the cities have gone to the expense of holding elections, after the electors have approved the projects, and after the communities have presented the projects at the invitation of the Government, it is said that the rules of the game will be changed, and changing those rules will relate to something that is different entirely from the original invitation.

I invite the attention of my friends who are in favor of the amendment to another thought. I have been in favor of the amendment since the discussion started. Possibly we are not accomplishing the result which we seek to accomplish. I take it the amendment is designed for the purpose of eliminating any idea of 30 percent of the grant that may be given to any project, and designed as well that projects shall be paid for in the fashion that projects were invited originally and in the fashion that those projects were voted upon by the people of the various communities.

I invite particularly the attention of the Senator from Kentucky to the fact that the amendment now reads as follows:

Provided, That in no case shall the grant exceed 45 percent.

What does that mean? All good lawyers upon the other side, those who deal with the Constitution and those who deal with lesser subjects, will, I believe, agree that there is an absolute discretion left by the amendment in the authorities who have charge of the projects to give such grants as they see fit up to 45 percent.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. As my amendment was originally offered it struck out that language entirely, but I was persuaded by Members who were in sympathy with the amendment to modify it and accordingly did so. Of course, there is a discretion with the Administrator to grant less than 45 percent. I do not think there would be any harm done, however, by that discretion because I do not think he would go above 45 percent anyway.

Mr. JOHNSON. Quite so; but I suppose that the officials who would have this matter in charge—and we know not only their ability, their transcendent ability, but we listen to their eloquence, eloquence that has been unstinted during the past few months—may possibly change their view, considering the discretion they may exercise under a measure of this kind. If they change their view, they might say that the grants would be 20 percent or 25 percent or even 30 percent, or they might reach 45 percent.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is entirely possible that there may be some communities which would not want the entire 45-percent grant. If we fix the language so as to make it compulsory on the Secretary of the Interior to grant 45 percent, he might be compelled to grant more than the community desired. What I had in mind was to remove the limitation of 35 percent. What they have been doing has been to grant on the 45–55 percent basis. I do not want to embarrass the administration in determining that matter. I think it is probably true that they will all probably predicate upon the 45–55 basis.

Mr. JOHNSON. May I ask the Senator, who doubtless is more familiar with the subject matter than am I, if the rule has not been uniform upon the 45–55 basis, that being the division on the projects which were accepted by the Government?

Mr. BARKLEY. It has been uniform, with the possible exception that in some communities which did not need or desire the entire 45 percent and were willing to get along on less, it was the desire of the Administrator to accommodate them to that extent. That of course would make more money available for other communities. Wherever the community desired the full 45 percent it has been uniform practice to grant it on that basis.

Mr. JOHNSON. I am not finding fault with the Senator from Kentucky because I had this in mind last Saturday in exactly the fashion in which the Senator from Kentucky has presented it. But is it not true that what we do now is not to preserve the 45–55 percent basis, but simply to give the discretion to the official to do as he sees fit up to 45 percent?

Mr. BARKLEY. Undoubtedly the Senator is correct. It does leave it in his discretion, but he has had that discretion all the time and has exercised it by fixing the 45–55 basis.

Mr. JOHNSON. But it is the exercise of the discretion that has become now, by virtue of its exercise in like fashion for some years, a rule of action with him, and we are proposing to change that—and it is this particularly to which I call the attention of the Senator—by the amendment which we would make to the bill. We are not in reality accomplishing the purpose which is in the minds of all of us.

Mr. BARKLEY. Even if we strike out that language it would still leave the whole matter in his discretion.

Mr. JOHNSON. The Senator is entirely correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no way by which we can remove the discretion in the administrative officer except to compel him to make a loan or grant of the 45 percent. We do not want to do that.

Mr. JOHNSON. I do not know whether or not the Senator is correct in that respect. We do want to provide that he shall not make the rule 30 percent in cases which are indicated in the amendment. That is quite true. What is it that we seek, therefore? What we seek is the rule which has been the rule in vogue, 45 percent of grants and 55 percent of community contribution.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator will yield further, I think that regardless of any language of limitation it will continue to be 45–55 except in such cases as the community itself may not desire that much.

Mr. JOHNSON. If that be so, then the Senator would make the whole situation dependent upon the sweet will of the administrative officer in the future.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is where it has been all along.

Mr. JOHNSON. But the rule has been made now and sought to be changed in this bill, and we do not change it, so far as the small amount of grants is concerned, by the language which we now use.

Mr. BARKLEY. The rule has been 45–55. The committee amendment seeks to change that rule by making it 30–70. We are seeking to eliminate the 30–70 provision, which would restore the rule which has been in vogue all along, namely, 45–55.

Mr. JOHNSON. If the Senator says there is an absolute rule and there is discretion that exists, yes; but the language of the bill would leave it wholly discretionary with the administrative officers.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator from California yield?

Mr. JOHNSON. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. The discretionary power undoubtedly does exist with the Public Works Administrator to make a grant up to 45 percent; but we have heard no complaint, and no one has heard of any abuse of that discretion. There has been no discrimination against any particular community. I think the Senator may safely rely upon a continuation of that policy.

Mr. JOHNSON. If there is no complaint about an absolute discretion to the administrative officer, of course, what I say is of no consequence at all; but I scarcely agree with what the Senator says in that regard. If we are passing a law giving the discretion to do as he pleases to the administrative officer, let us leave it in that fashion. If we are passing a law to see that the rule we have had heretofore shall be observed in the future, we should say that 45 and 55 percent, respectively, shall be the admeasurement of what shall be done on the one hand by the Government, and on the other hand by the community.

Mr. WAGNER. I may say to the Senator from California that originally, when we incorporated in the act this discretionary power, it was thought that there ought to be a little flexibility in administration, so that if there are communities which are in a position to contribute more than 55 percent, they ought to be required to do so; but so far the rule has been uniform, and I have not heard of a single community in the country which has complained about the abuse of that discretionary power. I think it could be safely lodged there.

Mr. JOHNSON. The Senator may be entirely right, but that does not alter the fact of the construction of what we now write.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from California has expired.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I desire to make an inquiry of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY].

In view of the argument the Senator has made, which seems to be based upon the fact that many communities have held elections and voted bonds, would the Senator be willing simply to write in the provision an exception, leaving the 30-percent grant except in the case of projects already approved by the Public Works Administrator, and for which bonds have been heretofore voted on the basis of a higher percentage?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. No, Mr. President; I will say to the Senator that I could not accept such an amendment, because the argument I made emphasized the reason for not having this discrimination at all; but I do not think it ought to be held against cities which have not had elections, but which may wish to take advantage of this appropriation, and deny them because they have had no elections. I did not say that all the cities involved here had held elections. I said that many of them had; but even those which have not, and which are in a position to qualify, ought to be allowed to do so on the same terms as the others.

Mr. WAGNER. And are there not some communities which are not required to have an election, but which, nevertheless, have adjusted their financial structures to this requirement?

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, yes; the elections have been held only where the law requires the cities to hold elections. In other cases they do not have to hold elections, but they may issue bonds by ordinance of the city council, or through other machinery.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, in case the language which is now in the bill should remain—that is to say, the 45-percent provision—I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] if he believes, or to ask the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] if he believes, that the average city or community would seek less than 45 percent by way of a grant?

In asking the question, I wish to say to the Senators to whom I have referred that I just cannot imagine the average community seeking less than a 45-percent grant. Perhaps I am in error in that; but the average American community is generally pressed with debts. The communities are perfectly human about it. I know that the average community in my State would naturally seek a 45-percent grant, and I cannot understand why the flexible language is in the bill. I think we might just as well give them the 45 percent and be done with it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator from Colorado will permit me, I have just glanced over a list of the projects in the State of Idaho where the loan was even less than 30 percent in some cases. There are some communities which are able to carry on their projects with the 70-percent local allocation out of their own taxes, and where they can do that they do not desire to borrow any more than they have to borrow.

There are projects all over the country—probably they are not in a majority, they may be in a very decided minority, but there are such projects—where the community has been not only willing but entirely satisfied to receive less than 45 percent, in some cases even below 30 percent. Where there is such a community, I do not think it ought to be denied the right to put up as much cash as it is able to furnish and borrow the rest from the Government, not to exceed 45 percent.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I quite agree with the Senator, but that, of course, is an appeal to the pride of the community, not to seek any more in the way of a grant than is absolutely necessary. Again I say that the average community is pretty hard hit in these days, and I know the average community in my State would much prefer a 45-percent grant.

Mr. BARKLEY. What I am seeking to do is to allow them to have a 45-percent grant if they need it. As the bill is drawn, without my amendment, they cannot get more than 30 percent, and I am seeking to enlarge it so that they can receive 45 percent.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, the Senator from Washington has just made the remark that he cannot see that the average community would ever ask for less than 45 percent. Of course, I think the communities in Idaho are above the average, but I hold in my hand a statement of the applications received under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, and as I glance down the list I find that in about one-third of the cases where funds which have been furnished to cities, or where it has been agreed they will be furnished, covering the entire cost of the projects, the amounts are loans entirely, and no grants at all have been made. They are straight loans. In other cases, I find by a hasty calculation, a 10-percent grant has been made in some cases, and in other cases 25 percent. They vary all the way from straight loans up to 45-percent grants. So that I think the provision under discussion has certainly been applied in the past, and the contracts, with the amounts which it is understood will be received from the Government, have been made on that basis.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I know how the Senator feels about the communities in Idaho, but I am wondering how they exercise so much self-restraint.

Mr. POPE. I think that is due to the character of the people of Idaho. They do exercise self-restraint and do not borrow more than they need.

Mr. BONE. That is not the point. They do not borrow more than they need, but the point is that, according to the Senator's statement, they are waiving a right to take nearly 50 percent of the total amount as a gift, and that is a forbearance which is a little difficult to understand.

Mr. POPE. I will go further and say that they do not request a grant or loan of more than they need.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD about 50 telegrams from mayors of cities in support of the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AKRON, OHIO, May 30, 1936.

Senator ROBERT J. BULKLEY,
Washington, D. C.:

Senate bill P. W. A. project only allowing 30-percent grant inadequate in order for city to avail of any grant. It should be 45 percent. Appreciate your cooperation.

LEE D. SCHROY, Mayor.

CANTON, OHIO, May 30, 1936.

Senator ROBERT J. BULKLEY,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

Many P. W. A. projects in Stark County already approved awaiting available funds. Thirty-percent grant inadequate. Stark County urges the full 45-percent grant.

CAREY, OHIO, June 1, 1936.

Senator ROBERT J. BULKLEY,
Washington, D. C.:

Please oppose measure reducing P. W. A. grants as it would work a hardship on this village.

C. E. HUNTER, Mayor.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Reduction of grant from 45 to 30 would hurt P. W. A. in Ohio. There are scores of projects which are bound to fall if such change is made.

C. A. DYKSTRA,
City Manager, Cincinnati.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Any reduction from 45 percent on Public Works Administration projects will in our opinion make it impossible for city of Akron to participate in pending or future projects. Please urge continuation of 45-percent grant.

LEE D. SCHROY,
Mayor, City of Akron, Ohio.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Relating to 15-percent grants reduction for P. W. A. projects, impossible for municipalities to raise funds account legal limitation. If percentage of grants is reduced, P. W. A. is through.

A. I. KAUFFMAN,
Mayor, Lakewood, Ohio.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Validity our proposed bonds very questionable if grant reduced.

ARTHUR H. WEDGE,
City Manager, Bedford, Ohio.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Strongly urge 45-percent grant P. W. A. projects be continued. To reduce grants on approved projects will generally result in failure to build. Toledo has one large water project not yet approved but submitted on basis 45-percent grant.

JOHN N. EDY,
City Manager, Toledo, Ohio.

MAY 30, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Thirty-percent grant would decrease amount of work we could do.

EDWARD J. KELLY,
Mayor of Chicago.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Reduction in grant to 30 percent for P. W. A. projects would invalidate bonds voted by city of Fort Worth for participation Federal program in construction of city-county hospital, library, and city hall and jail. Would necessitate resubmission of bonds to voters, thus making it impossible to come within limit fixed in bill, namely, June 30, 1937.

G. D. FAIRTRACE,
City Manager, Fort Worth, Tex.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Entire Duluth group of projects now before P. W. A. based upon 45-percent grant and will be impossible on 30-percent basis. Street paving and utility projects are based upon petitions of property owners, which petitions will be invalid if grant is reduced. Duluth civic center development project will be impossible as bond issue authorized by last legislature is based upon 45-percent Federal grant. Considerable city expenditure already incurred for engineering and architectural services will be total loss if projects are killed. City council deeply concerned.

S. F. SNIVELY,
Mayor, Duluth, Minn.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

McKeesport has project of a million dollars for which we have requested a 45-percent grant. If this is reduced to 30 percent, McKeesport will be unable to carry out our important improvement program. Legal limitation prevent debt increase of 15 percent.

GEORGE H. LYSLES,
Mayor of McKeesport.

JULY 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Docket Oklahoma 1022 Ardmore city-hall bonds were voted and sold on basis of 45-percent grant. Any reduction would mean loss of project.

V. R. SHORT,
City Manager, Ardmore, Okla.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Charlotte's Public Works Administration paving application based on agreement with property owners Government contribution would be 45 percent. If grant reduced, application must necessarily be withdrawn.

BEN E. DOUGLAS,
Mayor, Charlotte, N. C.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

If grant reduced, Lawrence unable to undertake any projects and must discontinue those pending and approved.

WALTER A. GRIFFIN,
Mayor, Lawrence, Mass.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Fifteen reduction P. W. A. grants in this city will mean that many projects will have to be eliminated and that a large number will be added to our welfare rolls.

WALTER J. COOKSON,
Mayor of Worcester, Mass.

MAY 30, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. BETTERS: I have been advised of the possibility of P. W. A. funds being made available but that the Federal grant may be reduced below 45 percent. Will you use every effort possible to maintain the present ratio of loan and grant? Forty-five-percent grant and 55-percent loan. We most urgently need P. W. A. project for new Troy high school, approved and awaiting funds. Troy is in the same position as most New York State cities; we will find it most difficult if not impossible to finance an additional 15-percent burden if grant is reduced.

CHESTER J. ATKINSON,
Mayor of Troy.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Decreasing P. W. A. grant from 45 to 30 percent would compel withdrawal of applications by this city. My opinion, such reduction would jeopardize great majority projects now approved and render P. W. A. practically worthless.

W. C. TORRENCE,
City Manager, Waco, Tex.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Absolute impossibility Lowell participating 70–30 basis legally financially practically.

DEWEY G. ARCHAMBAULT,
Mayor of Lowell, Mass.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Lansing has completed plans for a sewage-disposal works—a very necessary health measure. Our plan of finance is based on 45-percent grant; we will be unable to proceed on 30-percent grant.

MAX A. TEMPLETON,
Mayor, Lansing, Mich.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Thirty-percent grant will make further P. W. A. program virtually inoperative. Referenda impossible to carry; cost prohibitive; present legal limitations will not permit sufficient revenue from local funds if Federal grant reduced to 30 percent.

H. G. BARRETT,
Mayor, Topeka, Kans.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Reduction of P. W. A. grant from 45 to 30 percent will cause city of Tuscaloosa to abandon projects. Our financial arrangements have been made on a basis of the 45-percent grant, and a 15-percent reduction would cause insurmountable difficulties and make the project undesirable.

JOHN C. PEARSON,
Commission of Public Affairs, Tuscaloosa, Ala.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

A reduction of grant from 45 to 30 percent for P. W. A. projects will seriously curtail our public-works program and make it impossible for us to complete our program of needed public improvements. We have used every dollar available to cooperate in Public Works program, and feel a reduction of grant would have serious results.

WATKINS OVERTON,
Mayor, Memphis, Tenn.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Reduction from 45 to 30 percent P. W. A. grant will make it absolutely impossible for Irvington to participate.

PERCY A. MILLER, JR.,
Mayor of Irvington, N. J.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Reducing Public Works grant to 30 percent on projects over $100,000 will mean abandonment in most cases, because of financial difficulties. Should be uniform 45 percent to be effective.

P. N. MCMILLAN,
Executive Secretary, League of Wisconsin Municipalities.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

City Manager Brower out of city. Because of effect on funded debt of city, I would not recommend to council prosection of proposed P. W. A. projects under a reduced Federal grant.

WALTER J. BRENNAN,
Director of Finance, New Rochelle, N. Y.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

Of project filed by Flint, we are most interested in water-softening docket, Michigan, 1260. We have funds to finance city share, and reduction in grant to 30 percent would not make it impossible to proceed. Plans and specifications prepared and work can start immediately providing reduction in grant does not require filing new application. Any delay in project would be account P. W. A. changing procedure.

J. M. BARRINGER,
City Manager, Flint, Mich.

JUNE 1, 1936.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

My opinion, reduction of grant from 45 percent to 30 percent will practically kill city's participation as it is extremely difficult to raise the necessary 55 percent as now stands. Legal limitations and financing plan on projects will also hurt possibility of financing present and new projects.

Mayor, Augusta, Ga.

Mr. PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors,
Washington, D. C.:

One hundred thousand dollars acquired through bond issue, 1935, in contemplated approval of P. W. A. project for city of Scranton now held in Washington. Scranton now bonded to legal limit. Impossible to acquire additional funds in the event grants of P. W. A. are reduced to 30 percent. Six hundred thousand dollars paving projects are at stake; citizens of our city were sold on idea of a 45-percent grant and 55-percent municipal cost; impossible to carry out P. W. A. paving project in our city if grants are reduced; very anxious for retention of 45-percent grants.

Faithfully,

Board of Education, Mount Vernon, N. Y., has one school project, and public library under jurisdiction of board of education has a library project. Both of these have been approved by P. W. A. but are pending allocation of funds. Both projects have been presented to the citizens of Mount Vernon on basis of a 45-percent grant, and I believe it would be utterly impossible to go ahead with these projects on a 30-percent grant basis.

Executive Director, United States Conference of Mayors, Washington, D. C.:

Have today wired both North Carolina Senators urging their strenuous opposition to reduction in amount of grant from 45 to 30 percent for P. W. A. projects as provided in Senate bill being considered today. Advising that effect of such reduction on municipal applications makes petitions of cities difficult if not impossible. Our application for street project signed by many property owners on 45 and 55 basis and well nigh impossible to change street petitions. Such reduction necessitating attempted change of petitions would antagonize property owners and cause much dissatisfaction with administration.

Mr. BULKLEY. I have another telegram, dated today, reading as follows:

This city would be unable to proceed with any W. P. A. work if proposed reduction in amount of grant from 45 to 30 percent was made on municipal applications. Please use your influence against such action.

H. L. KELLEY,
Mayor, East Liverpool, Ohio.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, the city of Scranton, Pa., has issued bonds for and has authorized the appropriation of $600,000 based upon a 45-percent grant from the Government. One hundred thousand dollars is already available, and plans have been approved upon that basis. If the committee amendment is adopted and the Government grant is not made on the 45-percent basis, the improvements will not be made.

A similar situation confronts the city of McKeesport, Pa. That city, too, will not be able to carry out its program as the city is already bonded to its legal limit.

I ask unanimous consent to have inserted two telegrams, one from the mayor of Scranton, Pa., and the other from the mayor of the city of McKeesport, Pa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MCKEESPORT, PA., June 1, 1936.

Senator JAMES J. DAVIS,
Washington, D. C.:

McKeesport has project of a million dollars for which we have requested a 45-percent grant. If this is reduced to 30 percent McKeesport will be unable to carry out our important improvement program. Legal limitation prevents debt increase of 15 percent.

GEO. H. LYSLE, Mayor.

SCRANTON, PA., May 30, 1936.

Senator JAMES J. DAVIS,
Senate Chambers or Residence:

Information received Senate contemplated change in grants of P. W. A. from 45 percent to 30 percent. City of Scranton has approved and submitted $600,000 street-paving project based on 45-percent grant; submission made 1 year ago. If grant is changed all legislation passed to date null city of Scranton, through bond issue, for this purpose. Has sufficient funds in bank waiting for Federal approval on these projects. We urge retention of 45 percent grant in pending legislation.

Mayor STANLEY J. DAVIS.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I have a telegram bearing on this subject from the mayor of Tallahassee, Fla., which I should like to have printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TALLAHASSEE, FLA., June 1, 1936.

Hon. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,
United States Senator:

Understand bill before United States Senate today reducing percentage of grant in P. W. A. application from 45 to 30 percent. We wish to urge strongly that original 45-percent grant be provided. Tallahassee has been patiently waiting for available funds for its approved applications for loan and grant with P. W. A. for about 1½ years. Our citizens are urging that sewers and paving program begin.

H. J. YAEGER,
Mayor, City of Tallahassee, Fla.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky to the committee amendment, to strike out, on page 32, line 1, the words "not more than 30 percent shall be granted on any such project the cost of which is more than $100,000, and."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado on behalf of the committee, on page 31, line 14, was agreed to on Saturday, in order that I may offer an amendment on page 32, line 1, changing the date from 1937 to 1938.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote by which the amendment offered on behalf of the committee was agreed to is reconsidered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, on page 32, line 1, I offer an amendment to strike out "1937" and insert in lieu thereof "1938."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado accept the modification of his amendment?

Mr. ADAMS. I am perfectly willing to adjust the parliamentary situation so that that may be done.

Mr. BARKLEY. The parliamentary situation has already been adjusted by a reconsideration of the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. I did not know that had been done. Personally, I do not think the date should be extended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] to substitute "1938" for "1937" in the committee amendment, on line 1, page 32.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Mr. President, immediately after the date "1938", I propose to insert the following:

Provided, That this limitation shall not apply to any project that has been enjoined in any Federal or State court.

The reason for offering this limitation is that many injunctions have already been granted, and it would be unfair and unjust to deprive the particular communities where that has been done from receiving this relief.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee offers an amendment to come at the end of the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert the following after the amendment to the amendment just agreed to:

Provided, That this limitation shall not apply to any project that has been enjoined in any Federal or State court.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, what is the effect of the amendment?

Mr. MCKELLAR. I will give an illustration. The city of Knoxville, Tenn., applied for a loan and a grant to build an electric light plant, and they were enjoined by a private company. If the limitation as carried in the bill shall continue in force—and it will be in force, of course, unless the injunction is dissolved in time enough to permit them to build the plant—they cannot build the plant at all. It might be held up on appeal, so that Knoxville would be deprived entirely of the relief.

Mr. GLASS. Has the plant been let to contract?

Mr. McKELLAR. No, the plant has not been let to contract; before that could be done, the injunction was issued. There are a number of such cases, and it seems to be manifestly fair and just that the limitation should not apply to cases of that kind.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the amendment simply limits the expiration of the time?

Mr. McKELLAR. That is all. I ask for a vote on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed on page 31, line 15, after the comma following the word "works", to insert the following:

Projects of the kind and character for which he has heretofore made loans or grants pursuant to title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act or the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the object of the amendment is to provide a standard by which the P. W. A. shall be guided in making loans under the act.

Mr. HAYDEN. From what the Senator says, I judge it can be in no way construed that the terms and conditions of the act shall be extended.

Mr. BYRNES. Oh, no!

Mr. HAYDEN. In other words, the projects shall be of the "kind and character" designated, but not governed by the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

Mr. BYRNES. Oh, no!

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment again be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be restated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 31, line 15, after the comma following the word "works", it is proposed to insert the following:

Projects of the kind and character for which he has heretofore made loans or grants pursuant to title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act or the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, has title II, as amended, been adopted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has not.

Mr. ADAMS. There are first one or two technical amendments to be presented.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I wish to offer on page 35.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There may be further amendments to the committee amendment starting on page 31 and ending in line 11 on page 32.

The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado, as amended, to the committee amendment.

The amendment, as amended, to the committee amendment, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended.

The committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, does that complete the committee amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; there are a few more committee amendments. The clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, on page 32, line 20, after the word "boycott", to insert "or discrimination on account of race, religion, or political affiliations", so as to make the paragraph read:

Any person who knowingly and with intent to defraud the United States makes any false statement in connection with any application for any project, employment, or relief aid under the foregoing appropriation, or diverts, or attempts to divert, or assists in diverting for the benefit of any person or persons not entitled thereto, any portion of the foregoing appropriation, or any services or real or personal property acquired thereunder, or who knowingly, by means of any fraud, force, threat, intimidation, or boycott, or discrimination on account of race, religion, or political affiliations, deprives any person of any of the benefits to which he may be entitled under the foregoing appropriation, or attempts so to do, or assists in so doing, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, line 5, after the word "persons", to insert "(except administrative employees qualifying as civil employees of the United States)", so as to make the paragraph read:

The provisions of the act of February 15, 1934 (48 Stat. 351), relating to disability or death compensation and benefits shall apply to persons (except administrative employees qualifying as civil employees of the United States) receiving compensation from the foregoing appropriation for services rendered as employees of the United States, and to persons receiving assistance in the form of payments from the United States for services rendered under the National Youth Administration, created by Executive order of June 26, 1935: Provided, That so much of the foregoing appropriation as the United States Employees' Compensation Commission, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, estimates and certifies to the Secretary of the Treasury will be necessary for the payment of such compensation and administrative expenses shall be set aside in a special fund to be administered by the Commission for such purposes; and after June 30, 1937, such special fund shall be available for such purposes annually in such amounts as may be specified therefor in the annual appropriation acts: Provided further, That this paragraph shall also apply to persons employed and paid by the United States in those States in which the Federal Relief Administrator assumed control under section 3 (b) of the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933, but such compensation shall be limited to fatal cases and permanent partial and permanent total disability cases where claim is filed within 1 year from the date of enactment of this act: Provided further, That this paragraph shall not apply in any case coming within the purview of the workmen's compensation law of any State or Territory, or in which the claimant has received or is entitled to receive similar benefits for injury or death.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 34, line 16, after the words "allotted by the", to strike out "Works Progress Administrator" and insert "President", so as to make the paragraph read:

So much of the foregoing appropriation as may be determined by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to be necessary for administrative expenses of any department, establishment, or agency of the United States for additional work incident to carrying out of the purposes of the foregoing appropriation shall be allotted by the President and shall remain available to such agencies until June 30, 1938; the funds so allotted shall be available for expenditure for the same purposes for which funds have been allotted for administrative expenses under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, after line 15, to insert the following:

The Federal Emergency Relief Administrator is hereby authorized to liquidate and wind up the affairs of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration under the act of May 12, 1933, as amended, and funds available to it shall be available for expenditure until June 30, 1937.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, after line 20, to insert the following:

No part of the funds herein appropriated shall be loaned, granted, or otherwise made available to any State or any of its political subdivisions or agencies, for the purpose of carrying out any program or project with respect to replanning and reorganizing existing prison industries systems and allied prison activities.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I trust that portion of the committee amendment will not be agreed to.

I have conferred with the members of the Committee on Appropriations, including the Senator from Arizona [Mr.

HAYDEN], who offered this amendment in the committee; and it is entirely agreeable to him and to the committee members, as I understand, that that amendment should be eliminated.

The amendment or amendments along those lines are sponsored by the American Federation of Labor. The subcommittee and the full committee did not insert the amendment as it was suggested by the officials of the American Federation of Labor. The way the language is now, it would prevent any State from obtaining any of these funds for rebuilding a prison or any of the penal or charitable institutions of the State, because it might be held to involve rebuilding places in which the prisoners were expected or required to work on the inside of the prison or other penal institution.

I called this matter to the attention of the officers of the American Federation of Labor who were interested in it, and they have authorized me to say that so far as they are concerned they would prefer that this language go out rather than let it remain as it is. Therefore, I hope the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I offered the amendment in committee, and now, realizing all of its implications, I believe it is best that the bill be silent upon the subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 35, beginning in line 21.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment.

The next amendment was, on page 36, line 4, after the word "submitted", to strike out "by the Administrator to the President for transmission", so as to make the paragraph read:

A report of the operations under the foregoing appropriation shall be submitted to Congress before the 10th day of January in each of the next two regular sessions of Congress, which report shall include a statement of the expenditures made and obligations incurred, by classes and amounts.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 28, line 3, in the committee amendment heretofore agreed to, after the word "President", it is proposed to strike out down to and including "1935" on the same page, line 7, and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

Together with such unexpended balances of funds appropriated and made available by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 as the President may determine, which are hereby reappropriated and made available for the purposes of this title.

Mr. BYRNES. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate reconsider the vote by which the section beginning on page 27, line 19, and ending on page 29, line 15, was adopted, in order that the amendment I have just offered may be considered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina give an estimate of what will be expended under his amendment?

Mr. BYRNES. I endeavored to ascertain the amount that would be available under this particular item, and was not very successful in ascertaining any particular figure. It was said, as to the items under this language, that a sum of certainly more than $50,000,000 might be estimated as having been allotted to certain projects, and might become available. The language in the committee text was offered at the time the bill proposed to confer the power solely on the Works Progress Administration, and it should result in making the funds available only for the purposes set forth in the act of 1934, or really for the purposes in that act which are earmarked, and include more projects than are included in the earmarking in this bill. I cannot state to the Senator the definite amount. Under this provision it would be available for the purposes set forth in the pending bill, instead of for the purposes set forth in the old act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from South Carolina that the vote by which the language referred to was adopted shall be reconsidered? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina to the committee amendment on page 28, line 3.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended.

Mr. BYRNES. I have another amendment, which I send to the desk, to the committee amendment. I ask that action on the committee amendment be not taken until the amendment I now send to the desk shall be acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 28, line 24, after "$85,550,000", it is proposed to insert the following proviso:

Provided further, That the amount specified for any of the foregoing classes may be increased proportionately in accordance with the amount of such unexpended balances of funds as the President may transfer from the funds appropriated and made available by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, for the purpose of this title;

Mr. BYRNES. The purpose of that amendment is that if the unexpended balances affected by the previous amendment are made available, then that amount, whatever it may be—$50,000,000 or $60,000,000—would, under the amendment now offered, be proportionately divided among the items set forth in the text of the bill as it has been reported by the committee.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I understand the Senator's amendment would not affect the other balances which go over?

Mr. BYRNES. No. It would only provide that whatever balances go over shall be proportionately distributed among those items.

Mr. HALE. Of course, great balances will go over from the legislation already enacted. Such balances amount to nearly $2,000,000,000, according to the Director of the Budget. Does the Senator include all those balances?

Mr. BYRNES. No. The amendment applies only to the language on page 28, lines 2 to 8.

Mr. HALE. That specifically applies only to $50,000,000?

Mr. BYRNES. I have already stated to the Senator from Virginia that I do not know the amount, but whatever the amount is, when it is brought forward it would decrease the total of $1,425,000,000 and therefore should be apportioned among these projects in accordance with the intent of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 29, line 1, after the word "classes", it is proposed to insert the following:

Including such adjustments as may be made in the amounts specified by reason of transfers of unexpended balances from funds appropriated and made available by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I submit an amendment, though it is not to title II.

Mr. ROBINSON. Has title II been agreed to as amended?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on agreeing to title II, as amended, beginning on page 27.

Title II, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. GLASS. I ask that my amendment be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 77, after line 11, it is proposed to insert the following:

Naval air station, Norfolk, Va.: to replace assembly and repair-shop facilities destroyed by fire, including building and accessories, $150,000.

Mr. GLASS. The machine shop and other buildings at the naval station at Norfolk, Va., were completely destroyed by fire on the 15th of last month, throwing 350 workmen out of employment. The amount carried by the amendment has been estimated by the Budget and sent to us with the approval of the President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GLASS. I send to the desk another amendment, which I ask may be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 8, after line 18, after the amendment heretofore agreed to, it is proposed to insert the following:

CELEBRATION OF THE BICENTENNIAL OF THE BIRTH OF PATRICK HENRY

For carrying out the provisions of the act entitled "An act to aid in defraying the expenses for the celebration of the bicentennial of the birth of Patrick Henry to be held at Hanover Courthouse, Va., July 15, 16, and 17, 1936", approved ————, 1936, fiscal year 1936, $10,000, to remain available until June 30, 1937.

Mr. GLASS. That is in pursuance of a measure which has passed both Houses of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I think will be acceptable to the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 53, after line 2, it is proposed to insert the following:

Bureau of Fisheries: For the acquisition by the Bureau of Fisheries of a site for a fish hatchery at Jessup's Mill, near Glacier National Park in the State of Montana, $10,000, which shall be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER. I send to the desk another amendment relating to a school in the State of Washington and also a public school in Montana. These are authorizations which have already been made by the Congress and were sent here by the Director of the Budget with the approval of the President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 59, after line 7, it is proposed to insert a new paragraph, as follows:

Construction, enlargement, or improvement of public-school buildings: For cooperation with Wellpinit School District, No. 49, Stevens County, Wash., for the construction and equipment of a public-school building in the vicinity of Wellpinit, Wash., as authorized by the act of May 15, 1936 (Public, No. 586, 74th Cong.), $75,000, and for cooperation with the Hays Public School District, Hays, Mont., for construction and improvement of grade- and high-school buildings, as authorized by the act of May 15, 1936 (Public, No. 588, 74th Cong.), $50,000, in all, fiscal year 1937, $125,000: Provided, That plans and specifications for construction, enlargement, or improvement of structures shall be furnished by local or State authorities, without cost to the United States, and upon approval thereof by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, actual work shall proceed under the direction of such local or State officials. Payment for work in place shall be made monthly, on vouchers properly certified by local officials of the Indian Service: Provided further, That any amount expended on any project hereunder shall be recouped by the United States within a period of 30 years, commencing with the date of occupancy of the project, through reducing the annual Federal tuition payments for the education of Indian pupils enrolled in public or high schools of the district involved, or by the acceptance of Indian pupils in such schools without cost to the United States; and in computing the amount of recoupment for each project, interest at 3 percent per annum shall be included on unrecouped balances.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The second amendment of the Senator from Montana will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert after the amendment just adopted the following:

Construction, enlargement, or improvement of public-school buildings, 1936: Of the appropriation of $100,000 contained in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, for cooperation with public-school districts in Glacier County, Mont., as authorized by the act of June 7, 1935, not to exceed $40,000 is hereby made available for improvement and extension of elementary school buildings in district no. 9, as well as other public-school districts within said county, subject to the terms and conditions prescribed under this head in said second deficiency appropriation act.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 60, after line 20, it is proposed to insert the following:

For continuation of the following projects in not to exceed the following amounts, respectively, to be expended in the same manner and for the same objects of expenditure as specified for projects included in the Interior Department Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1937 under the caption "Bureau of Reclamation", and to be reimbursable under the reclamation law.

Gila project, Arizona, $2,500,000;
Salt River project, Arizona, $2,300,000;
Central Valley project, California, $16,000,000;
Grand Valley project, Colorado, $200,000;
Boise project, Idaho, Payette division, $1,800,000;
Boise project, Idaho, drainage, $160,000;
Carlsbad project, New Mexico, $900,000;
Deschutes project, Oregon, $450,000;
Owyhee project, Oregon, $400,000;
Grand Coulee Dam project, Washington, $20,000,000;
Columbia Basin project, Washington, economic surveys and investigations, $250,000;
Yakima project, Washington, Roza division, $2,500,000;
Provo River project, Utah, $1,750,000;
Casper-Alcova project, Wyoming, $4,000,000;
Riverton project, Wyoming, $900,000;
Shoshone project, Wyoming, Heart Mountain division, $1,000,000;

For administrative expenses on account of the above projects, including personal services and other expenses in the District of Columbia and in the field, $2,500,000; in all, $57,610,000, to be immediately available: Provided, That this appropriation shall be available for the employment of personal services without regard to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided further, That of this amount not to exceed $160,000 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the text of the amendment just read is identical, word for word, with amendment numbered 54, as adopted by the Senate to the Interior Department appropriation bill on March 2, 1935. The same reclamation projects are named, and the sums of money to be appropriated to continue their construction are in exactly the same amounts.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What is the total amount carried in the amendment?

Mr. HAYDEN. The total amount carried in the amendment is $57,610,000. The Budget estimates for the same reclamation projects are for $64,710,000. After the Interior Department appropriation bill had passed the Senate and was under consideration in the House of Representatives, a statement was made in that body to the effect that it had been planned to have the Budget estimates upon which this amendment is based considered by the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives for action in the first deficiency appropriation bill rather than in the Interior Department appropriation bill.

I have conferred with the Senators from the 14 States where United States reclamation projects are located, and we all agree that prompt and proper consideration of the Budget estimates for reclamation projects is not merely highly desirable but is imperative.

The interested Senators are much more concerned about the final results attained than they are with respect to which bill or bills are used to bring the two branches of the Congress into accord. I therefore hope that this amendment may be accepted by the Senator in charge of the bill, so that it may be taken to conference.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I suppose it will be understood that if this item happens to pass in both appropriation bills the Senator from Arizona will consent to its being stricken out of one of them.

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly. If the subject matter is cared for in this bill, it will not be included in the Interior Department appropriation bill.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I voted for the items in the Interior Department appropriation bill. I think that is where the items belong. This is an appropriation of money to be expended by the Reclamation Service under the Interior Department. It is not a deficiency appropriation. It is not an emergency matter. It qualifies, I suppose by having Budget estimates underlying it; but it does seem to me contrary to sound legislative practice for the Senate to attach to a second bill $60,000,000 of items which are now pending upon a bill recently passed and which is now in conference. It seems to me we put ourselves in the position of making a double appropriation of the same amount for the same item, so far as our action goes. Therefore it seems to me the item ought not to go in this bill.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. Is the Senator from Arizona serious in his statement that the Senators from all 14 States are unanimously in favor of the amendment he has offered? [Laughter.]

Mr. HAYDEN. There is no question about it. The situation is that the House of Representatives has indicated a desire to consider this matter on a deficiency bill. Of course, if these reclamation projects are cared for in this deficiency bill, they will be eliminated from the Interior Department appropriation bill. If carried in the Interior Department bill, they will be eliminated from this bill.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. This amount has already been provided for in the Interior Department appropriation bill, has it not?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is correct.

Mr. BORAH. The House seems to object to disposing of it in that way and desires it to come here?

Mr. HAYDEN. The proceedings in that body so indicate. For that reason I offer the amendment.

Mr. BORAH. I do not see what objection there is to placing the appropriation here, in view of the fact that it has already been provided for. It is not adding an amount to that which we have already provided.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I understand the appropriation will not be in both bills in any event.

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from New York will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 81, after line 6, it is proposed to add:

Foreign mail transportation: For an additional amount for transportation of foreign mail by aircraft from and to points in Alaska, fiscal year 1937, $200,000, to be expended under a contract or contracts which will not create annual obligations for the fiscal year 1938 in excess of $200,000.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this matter came to me through the Second Assistant Postmaster General, Mr. Branch, he having attached to his communication a letter from the Director of the Budget. It is to take care of a star-route mail service between Juneau, Alaska, and Fairbanks, across the corner of Canada. The reason why it is an emergency matter is because at present there is an arrangement with Canada covering the service, and lighting arrangements and radio beams have been put in at the expense of American capital; and unless the appropriation is made that service will lapse, which will bring about the necessity of going around the coast of Alaska to reach into the interior, thereby adding materially to the dangers involved.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. Did not the Senate committee add an appropriation of some $240,000 to cover this very item, and has it not been included?

Mr. COPELAND. No; not this item. The item that was added was for ground facilities in America. This item is for the star route across Canada, and the money is to come out of a different appropriation, which the Budget Director says is proper.

Mr. ADAMS. Is there a new Budget estimate?

Mr. COPELAND. There is a new Budget estimate. The Budget Director refers to the estimate of $242,755.

Mr. ADAMS. That is the one that has been put in. It was cut down, was it not?

Mr. COPELAND. Oh, no; it is a new item. It is an entirely different estimate. This has to do with foreign mail, while the other had to do with navigation features in America. I am entirely correct in that.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I merely desire to understand this matter correctly. We put in the bill, on page 32, an additional amount for the establishment and maintenance of aids to air navigation. It was my understanding that that amount covered this particular item; and it was put in after a very eloquent and persuasive speech by the senior Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. If the Senator will remember, I appeared before the committee, and at the same time Mr. Branch appeared, making the plea for the other arrangement, but for some reason the committee did not act on Mr. Branch's suggestion. It is a matter of a great deal of concern, however. The only interest I have in it is that in the safety-in-the-air subcommittee we have had testimony on this matter, and the two items are entirely separate.

Mr. ADAMS. What is the Budget estimate upon which this item rests?

Mr. COPELAND. This Budget estimate is in connection with the post-office bill.

Mr. ADAMS. What is the amount of the Budget estimate?

Mr. COPELAND. Two hundred and forty-two thousand seven hundred and fifty-five dollars, and I am asking for $200,000 of it.

Mr. ADAMS. Is it a separate item?

Mr. COPELAND. This is to come out of the post-office appropriation, while the other is to come out of the commerce appropriation.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, all I can say is that I assume the Senator from New York is correct; but I think he will agree that we may recheck this matter in conference.

Mr. COPELAND. Certainly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I ask that the papers which I have in my hand, which relate to the amendment just agreed to, may be included in the RECORD at this point, so that the committee may be fully informed regarding the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

SECOND ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, May 29, 1936.

Hon. ROYAL S. COPELAND,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In accordance with your request I wrote Director Bell, of the Bureau of the Budget, inquiring if the Bureau would object to an appropriation of $200,000 for foreign air-mail service in Alaska. I have just received Director Bell's reply, which I am enclosing for your information.

Sincerely yours,

HARLLEE BRANCH,
Second Assistant Postmaster General.

MAY 29, 1936.

The honorable the POSTMASTER GENERAL.

MY DEAR MR. POSTMASTER GENERAL: I have the letter of the Second Assistant Postmaster General of May 28, 1936, concerning the estimate of $242,755 for the Post Office Department, included in the Budget for 1937 under the appropriation "Star-route service, Alaska", to provide for the expansion of Alaska star-route air-mail service."

It seems to me that this estimate can be considered as still before Congress for whatever action it cares to take on it. If Congress should decide to provide for this service in some other manner, this office would offer no objection so long as the amount is within the estimate contained in the Budget.

Very truly yours,

D. W. BELL, Acting Director.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., May 26, 1936.

Hon. ALVA B. ADAMS,
Chairman, Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR ADAMS: Reference is made to the amendment offered by Senator COPELAND to the first deficiency appropriation bill, H. R. 12624, as follows:

"Foreign-mail transportation: For an additional amount for transportation of foreign mail by aircraft from and to points in Alaska, fiscal year 1937, $200,000, to be expended under a contract or contracts which will not create annual obligations for the fiscal year 1937 in excess of $200,000."

and to the statements recently made by Senator SCHWELLENBACH and me in support of the amendment before the subcommittee of which you are chairman.

You may recall that at the conclusion of our statements, one or more of the members of the subcommittee suggested that it might be well to have a special Budget estimate for the item desired.

Yesterday I discussed the subject with Mr. Bell, Acting Director of the Budget, and with Mr. Wiseman, one of the Budget officials, and requested a Budget estimate for the item mentioned.

Mr. Bell declined to recommend to the President another Budget estimate to cover the amount presented by Senator COPELAND's proposed amendment. Mr. Bell called my attention to the fact that the approved Budget estimate for the fiscal year 1937 contained an item of $450,000 for star-route service in Alaska; that the Post Office Department appropriation bill as reported out of committee and as passed by the House reduced this item to $207,245; that the amount was increased in the Senate to the Budget estimate of $450,000, but in conference between the two Houses the sum of $207,245 as fixed by the House was restored, which is $242,755 less than the Budget estimate. Mr. Bell added that the original Budget estimate is still before Congress and that no other Budget estimate to cover the amount proposed to be expended by the Copeland amendment is proper. In answer to a question, Mr. Bell further stated that the original Budget estimate, unless expressly withdrawn, will remain before Congress until the close of the current session.

The justification of the Post Office Department for the Budget estimate provided, in part, for service of mail by airplane carrier between Juneau, Alaska, White Horse, Dominion of Canada, and Fairbanks, Alaska, which is identical with the mail-service route or routes contemplated by the Copeland amendment. Since the whole includes each part, it is to my mind clear beyond question that the original Budget estimate embraces the service which will be given if the Copeland amendment is adopted. Nothing has been brought to my attention by anyone which in any manner negatives this conclusion.

As pointed out by Senator SCHWELLENBACH and myself in our statements to the committee, the service proposed by the Copeland amendment is more advantageous to the Government than that proposed under the original Budget estimate, since a surcharge will be made upon mail carried under the foreign air-mail provisions of the Copeland amendment, whereas no such surcharge could be made, without additional legislation, under the star-route service originally specified by the Post Office Department justification and approved by the Budget.

Sincerely yours,

ANTHONY J. DIMOND, Delegate.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I have one more amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert, at the proper place in the bill, the following:

That the five retired officers of the Regular Army assigned to active duty at the United States Soldiers' Home and who, while so serving, are entitled to the pay and allowances of officers of the same rank and length of service on the active list of the Army, shall have the difference between active-duty pay and allowances and retired pay of such officers paid from funds appropriated for the maintenance and operation of the Soldiers' Home.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this involves a matter of $7,800 which is to be paid out of the Soldiers' Home fund. For 35 years the retired officers at the Soldiers' Home have been paid, in addition to their retired pay, $125 a month. General Coleman, who has just gone there to be governor, might as well go home, if he has a home somewhere, because at the moment he gets nothing, except a house, in addition to his retired pay, which he would have anyway. The house is a big and rambling house, and two servants are necessary. This involves the expenditure of $125 a month, paid for each of the five retired officers, and is to be taken out of the regular appropriation for the Soldiers' Home. The money for that comes from the contributions of those who have served in the Regular Army as privates.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, it seems to me that during the call of the calendar today a bill containing the identical provision in this amendment was passed by the Senate. This is legislation; it is not an appropriation, and a bill presented by the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] passed this morning almost identical in character.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado make that point?

Mr. ADAMS. It seems to me the amendment is unnecessary. It is legislation which has already been passed.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not raise the question because if this item is left in the bill it is provided for and justified by the fact that the Senate has today passed the bill to which the Senator has referred, but it is essential that these five officers should have the $125 a month, which they will not get if we wait at this late period of the session to pass the bill through the House.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I am merely saying to the Senator that this is not an appropriation; that it is legislation and is covered by the same bill that was passed this morning. We have been doubling up on legislation recently, and if it is desired that we pass everything twice, I shall not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 32, line 24, after the word "doing", to insert the words "or who solicits or receives any political contributions from persons for whom any portion of the foregoing appropriation for relief or work relief is intended."

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is obvious. There is universal criticism throughout the country of the mingling of relief funds and political funds, and I am sure no one would defend the mingling of the two. When I called Mr. Hopkins' attention to a certain situation in Pennsylvania, where there was a direct political solicitation from relief clients, his answer was that he totally disapproved of any such mingling of the two functions, and that he would do everything he could to stop it; to quote him literally in his classic language, he said he had no control over the "dumb politicians."

He was probably correct in his statement, and it occurs to me that the least we could do would be to provide some sort of a weapon in his arsenal of defense if he wants to have a defense.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. The language of the amendment has been called to my attention just now for the first time, and I desire to ask the Senator one or two questions about it. The amendment contains the words "or who solicits or receives any political contributions from persons for whom any portion of the foregoing appropriation for relief or work relief is intended."

If an appropriation is made for the construction of a bridge, and the contractor receives a contract for the building of a structural bridge, he is the individual for whom a part of the appropriation is intended, and if that contractor sees fit to contribute a hundred dollars to the Republican National Committee, should the treasurer of the Republican National Committee be subject to imprisonment and fine for receiving the contribution from the contractor, for whom, in the construction of the bridge, a part of this fund is intended?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think there should be utterly no mingling of the two functions and the two funds. My answer would be "yes" to the Senator.

Mr. BYRNES. If the contractor makes a contribution to the treasurer of the committee, the committee should be subject to fine and imprisonment?

Mr. VANDENBERG. In the discretion of the court; yes.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator says, "in the discretion of the court." He means as to the amount of the fine, or the term of imprisonment?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Exactly.

Mr. BYRNES. That the treasurer who accepts the contribution from a man who perchance has had a contract, and out of which contract he has made some money, should be imprisoned and fined, and likewise, if a man who is on relief sends in a dollar to the treasurer of the Republican National Committee and signs his name, "John Smith", the treasurer of that committee should be fined and imprisoned for accepting it?

Mr. VANDENBERG. If it falls within the prohibitions of the amendment.

Mr. BYRNES. Would it fall within the prohibitions of this amendment?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Under the statement of the Senator, it would.

Mr. BYRNES. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 58, after line 14, to insert a new paragraph, as follows:

Payment to Confederated Bands of Ute Indians: For payment to the Conferated Bands of Ute Indians in full compensation as to claim for the principal sum for 64,560 acres of land in western Colorado set aside as a naval oil reserve by Executive orders dated December 6, 1916, and September 27, 1924, fiscal year 1937, $161,400, which amount is hereby appropriated pursuant to the act of May 15, 1936 (Public, No. 584, 74th Cong.), and shall be disposed of in accordance with said act.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I offer this amendment at the request of the Bureau of the Budget. It has already been provided for by law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I offer another amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert, beginning on page 60, after the period at the end of the sentence in line 14, the following:

For pay of general counsel, Confederated Bands of Ute Indians in the Uintah and Ouray Agency, Utah (tribal funds): The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to expend the sum of $3,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary, from the tribal funds of the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians in the Uintah and Ouray Agency, Utah, in the Treasury of the United States, upon proper vouchers approved by him, for services rendered by general counsel under a contract approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, this amendment is offered at the request of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I suggest that the statement I send to the desk be printed in the RECORD as a justification for the amendments just agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

These Ute Indians live about a hundred miles from any railroad. They seldom visit the city of Washington on tribal business. They number about 1,200, most of whom are fullblood Indian. They own 10,000 acres of forest reserve. They own about 5,000,000 acres of land in Colorado which the Government has agreed to sell for them at not less than $1.25 per acre. The potential wealth of these Indians is probably greater than any other group of Indians of equal number.

Recently they voted to accept the provisions of the Indian Reorganization Act. Accordingly, they must now prepare a constitution and bylaws to meet their peculiar needs. They propose to organize stockmen's associations and other business organizations. In all of this they require the services of some capable person to help them draw up the proper papers and documents that will protect them and their property against unnecessary losses.

The chairman of their tribal business committee wrote Mr. Collier a letter, as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, asking that this amount be appropriated from their tribal funds for the said purpose. They have over a hundred thousand dollars in the Treasury of the United States. They have a perpetual income of about $25,000 per annum from the Federal Government.

This appropriation has the approval of Mr. Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Department. It will come out of the funds which already belong to these Indians.

PAYMENT TO CONFEDERATED UTES

This estimate is submitted pursuant to the act of May —, 1936 (Public, No. —, 74th Cong.), reading as follows:

"That the sum of $161,400 be, and the same is hereby, authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for payment to the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians in full compensation as to claim for principal sum for 64,560 acres of land in western Colorado, taken from the said Indians by the United States and set aside as a naval oil reserve by Executive orders, dated December 6, 1916, and September 27, 1935; said sum to be placed on the books of the Treasury Department to the credit of the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians in the proportions specified by the act of June 15, 1880 (21 Stat. L. 199), and to bear interest at 4 percent per annum and from the date of passage of this act.

"SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to pay, out of said appropriation when made, such fees and expenses as the Secretary of the Interior may deem reasonable, on a quantum meruit basis, for services rendered by attorneys or agents having approved or heretofore approved contracts with said Indians, or approved assignments thereof, not to exceed, however, a total of 10 percent of the amount appropriated hereunder as follows:

"(1) A contract with Southern Ute Band and the Ute Mountain Band approved July 7, 1928, a partial assignment of which was approved on May 28, 1929.

"(2) A contract with the Uintah and White River Bands, approved on October 8, 1932, an assignment of which was approved on February 13, 1935.

"(3) A contract with the Uncompahgre Band approved October 8, 1932, an assignment of which was approved on February 13, 1935."

By the agreement approved on June 15, 1880 (21 Stat. L. 199), these Indians ceded approximately 12,000,000 acres of land in western Colorado, which should be "held and deemed to be public lands of the United States", subject to disposal as other lands of like character, with the proviso that "none of the said land, whether mineral or otherwise, shall be liable to entry and settlement under the provisions of the homstead law, but shall be subject to cash entry only in accordance with existing law", the proceeds to go to the Indians, less expenditures to carry out the act.

On May 23, 1910 (45 C. Cls. 440), under the jurisdiction of the act of March 3, 1908 (35 Stat. L. 788), the Court of Claims awarded the Confederated Band of Ute Indians the sum of $3,999,072.50, for 3,199,258 acres of ceded lands (at $1.25 an acre) taken by the United States after the agreement of 1880 for forest reserves and other public uses. In addition, the act of May 22, 1928 (45 Stat. L. 711), authorized the inclusion of approximately 19,000 acres of such lands in the Montezuma National Forest, payment therefor to be made at $1.25 an acre; and the amount due therefor had been transferred to the credit of the Indians on the books of the Treasury.

By Executive order of December 6, 1916, 45,440 acres were set aside from the ceded lands as a naval oil reserve, of which 3,880 acres were later restored to their former status. Then, by Executive order of September 27, 1924, about 23,000 acres more were added to the reserve, making a total of 64,560 acres of the ceded lands taken by the United States and reserved for oil purposes. These lands are in townships 5, 6, and 7 south, ranges 93 to 96 west, sixth principal meridian, Colorado, and no compensation has ever been paid the Indians therefor. Under the law the lands were subject to disposal at $2.50 an acre, including the minerals. Accordingly, the Indians should be paid for same at this rate, making a total of $161,400.

The land involved here was part of that ceded by the agreement approved on June 15, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 199), which provided, in effect, that the money accruing to the Indians thereunder should be divided one-third to the Southern Utes, one half to the Uncompahgre Utes, and one-sixth to the White River Utes. The authorization act recognizes this division. Therefore the appropriation would be divided as follows:

Southern Utes, Colorado (one-third)	$53,800
Uncompahgre Utes, Utah (one-half)	80,700
White River Utes, Utah (one-sixth)	26,900
	161,400

The act authorizing the appropriation makes provision for the payment on a quantum-meruit basis of fees to attorneys employed under certain definitely identified contracts. There are three such contracts, one between William Marshall Justis, Jr., and the Southern Ute Band, a half interest in which was assigned to Marion Butler, which contract, however, has expired; another between Raymond T. Bonnin and the Uintah and White River Bands; and a third between Mr. Bonnin and the Uncompahgre Band, both of which latter contracts have been assigned to Hughes, Schurman & Dwight. Not more than $16,140 may be expended for fees and expenses of attorneys.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 52, after line 11, it is proposed to insert the following:

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

General Committee of the Accident Prevention Conference: For salaries and expenses of the General Committee of the Accident Prevention Conference, authorized in the act entitled "An act to advance a program of national safety and accident prevention", approved May 28, 1936, including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, printing and binding, and all other expenditures authorized in said act, fiscal year 1937, $50,000.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, this appropriation was authorized by an act which became a law a few days ago. It is to provide the expenses of a conference of which the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE] is the chairman. There has been transmitted with the amendment a supplementary estimate by the Director of the Budget.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I call up the amendment which I sent to the desk last week to be inserted on page 10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 10, after line 9, it is proposed to add the following proviso:

Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to affect the status under the civil-service laws of any positions created under and by virtue of the act of April 27, 1935, or brought under the civil-service laws by Executive order heretofore or hereafter issued.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, in accordance with the notice which I gave earlier in the day, I move that the Senate reconsider the vote of Saturday by which authority was given to investigate the Florida canal.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? I have a minor amendment to offer.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, there are a great number of minor amendments to be considered. I move to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. MCNARY. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BILBO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON], which I transfer to the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF], and will vote. I vote "nay." I am advised that the Senator from Rhode Island, if present, would vote "nay."

Mr. MCGILL (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST]. If he were present, he would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay." I withhold my vote.

Mr. MCNARY. On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], who is unavoidably absent from the Senate. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK], and will vote. I vote "nay." If the Senator from South Dakota were present, he also would vote "nay", and if present the Senator from Mississippi would vote "yea."

Mr. FRAZIER (when Mr. NYE's name was called). On this question my colleague [Mr. NYE] is paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "nay", and I understand that the Senator from Texas, if present, would vote "yea" on this question.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH]. I am informed that if present he would vote "yea." If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay." I withhold my vote.

Mr. TYDINGS (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN]. If he were present, he would vote "yea", and if I were permitted to vote I should vote "nay."

Mr. VAN NUYS (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. If he were present, he would vote "yea", and if I were permitted to vote I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HAYDEN. I announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] because of the death of his brother. If present, my colleague would vote "yea."

Mr. BARKLEY. I announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] on important official business.

Mr. DUFFY. On this question I am paired with the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL]. If he were present, he would vote "yea." If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained from the Senate on account of illness.

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are detained on official business.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr.

GORE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] are unavoidably detained.

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 32, as follows:

YEAS—35

So Mr. ROBINSON's motion to lay on the table Mr. HASTING's motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, to which I ask the attention of the Senator from Colorado.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 6, after line 3, it is proposed to insert the following:

UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

For carrying out the provisions of the public resolution entitled "Joint resolution to enable the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission to carry out and give effect to certain approved plans, and for other purposes", approved June 1, 1936, $200,000, to remain available until expended.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I have offered the amendment at the instance of the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], who is unavoidably absent because of the death of a member of his family. The amendment carries out the provisions of a measure which has been passed during the present Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I again ask the attention of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] to an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated. The amendment is to carry out the provisions of a bill which has not as yet passed the House of Representatives, but which has passed the Senate. I will state that if the bill does not pass the House of Representatives the amendment may be eliminated in conference.

It is necessary to offer the amendment because of the fact that otherwise it will be necessary to pass a separate joint resolution, and there may not be time afforded to consider such a separate measure. The amendment is intended to carry out the provisions of a bill providing for a contribution on the part of the United States to the proceedings commemorating the admission of the State of Arkansas into the Union.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 5, after line 7, it is proposed to insert the following:

To carry out the provisions of Senate Joint Resolution 229, providing for the contribution of the United States to the commemoration of the admission of the State of Arkansas to the Federal Union, $150,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I have another amendment which is in the same status as the amendment just adopted. This amendment is intended to carry out the provisions of Senate Joint Resolution 229, authorizing the Marine Band to visit Dallas, Tex., Shreveport, La., and Little Rock, Ark., in attendance upon certain assemblies there. The joint resolution has been favorably reported by a House committee, and is pending on the calendar in that body. It has already passed the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 62, after line 16, it is proposed to insert the following:

To carry out the provisions of Senate bill 4354, to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the Arkansas Centennial Celebration, $11,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I invite the attention of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] to the amendment, which I send to the desk. It has received the approval of the Bureau of the Budget. It does not involve an additional appropriation but merely continues an appropriation already made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 93, after line 9, it is proposed to insert the following:

Commission to study the subject of Hernando De Soto's expedition: The unexpended balance of the appropriation "Commission to study the subject of Hernando De Soto's expedition, Department of State, 1936", is continued available for the same purposes until June 30, 1939, to enable the Commission to make its report to Congress as provided by the act entitled "An act extending the time for making the report of the Commission to study the subject of Hernando De Soto's Expedition", approved May 27, 1936.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I wish to recur to the amendment which I discussed with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] a few moments ago. In order to partially cure his objection, although I am sure I could not cure his fundamental objection, I am going to offer the amendment with the word "knowingly" inserted in front of the word "receives", so that the amendment would read:

Or who solicits or knowingly receives any political contribution from persons for whom any portion of the foregoing appropriation for relief or work relief is intended.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, after the Treasurer receives a dollar from any person, he knows he has received the dollar.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Oh, Mr. President, the Senator is quibbling.

Mr. BYRNES. If that is quibbling, it is the interpretation which any sensible person would put upon the language.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think the Senator is so sensible that he knows what he is doing.

Mr. BYRNES. I cannot say that for the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, perhaps the Senator would get a few votes on this side of the Chamber if he would strike out the words "or knowingly receives."

Mr. VANDENBERG. I modify my amendment according to the suggestion of the Senator from Maryland, and ask for the yeas and nays.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment as modified will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 32, in line 24, after the word "doing", it is proposed to insert the following:

Or who solicits any political contributions from persons for whom any portion of the foregoing appropriation for relief or work relief is intended.

So as to make the paragraph read:

Any person who knowingly and with intent to defraud the United States makes any false statement in connection with any application for any project, employment, or relief aid under the foregoing appropriation, or diverts, or attempts to divert, or assists in diverting for the benefit of any person or persons not entitled thereto, any portion of the foregoing appropriation, or any services or real or personal property acquired thereunder, or who knowingly, by means of any fraud, force, threat, intimidation, or boycott, or discrimination on account of race, religion, or political affiliations, deprives any person of any of the benefits to which he may be entitled under the foregoing appropriation, or attempts so to do, or assists in so doing, or who solicits any political contribution from persons for whom any portion of the foregoing appropriation for relief or work relief is intended, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, with the modification of the amendment as suggested by the Senator from Maryland, so far as I am concerned I have no objection.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should think the Senator from South Carolina and all other Senators would be in favor of the proposition.

Mr. BYRNES. I have said I have no objection.

Mr. BORAH. In my opinion, it is ineffective as it is now proposed. If we strike out of the amendment the words "knowingly receives for political purposes", in my opinion, we have emasculated the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan as modified.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its enrolling clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 11418. An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 12027. An act to authorize the execution of plans for a permanent memorial to Thomas Jefferson.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. It is based on a supplemental Budget estimate.

THE VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment offered by the Senator from Texas will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 53, after line 20, it is proposed to insert:

Special projects: For establishing and improving aids to navigation and other works, including the construction, or purchase, and equipment of a lighthouse tender at a cost not to exceed $125,000, as may be specifically approved by the Secretary of Commerce, $402,000, to continue available until June 30, 1938.

Mr. SHEPPARD. As I have said, Mr. President, this amendment is based on a supplemental Budget estimate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 94, line 20, after the word "fund" and before the period, it is proposed to insert a colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That this fund shall also be available to the Secretary of the Treasury to pay each Federal land bank such amount as the Land Bank Commissioner certifies to the Secretary of the Treasury is equal to the amount by which interest payments on mortgages held by such bank have been reduced during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1936, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph "Twelfth" of section 12 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended.

Mr. BRYNES. Mr. President, in explanation of the amendment I will say that the Senate today passed a House bill, the enactment of which will make necessary a change in the language on page 94 in order to make the fund available for the purposes intended.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk, and call it to the attention of the Senator from Colorado in charge of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 59, after line 12, it is proposed to insert a new paragraph, reading as follows:

Support of Indians and administration of Indian property (tribal funds): Appropriations from tribal funds of the Menominee Indians of Wisconsin, fiscal years 1935, 1936, and 1937, for general support of Indians and administration of Indian property (Keshena Agency), are hereby made available for hospitalization of Indians under contracts for such service for such fiscal years, and the Comptroller General of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of disbursing agents of the United States for payments heretofore made on this account.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, for the benefit of the Senator from Colorado I will say that this amendment is to take care of a situation caused by a ruling of the Comptroller General on May 4, 1936, disallowing a contract for the lease to the Bureau of Catholic Indian Missions of the hospital building, nurses' home, physician's cottage, and other buildings of the Keshena Indian Agency, Keshena, Wis. The plan for the care and hospitalization of the Indians was laid before the committee when the 1936 appropriation bill was under consideration. However, this ruling of the Comptroller General upsets the estimates; and unless this contract shall be authorized, the amount available will be short about $40,000. I therefore hope the amendment will be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 128, after line 11, it is proposed to insert a new section, to be known as section 7 (c), as follows:

(c) Not more than $2,000,000 of the sums appropriated by section 2 of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1937, for carrying out sections 7 to 17, inclusive, of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act shall be available to the Department of Agriculture for the purposes of carrying out such act with respect to land devoted to growing trees for the production of gum turpentine and gum rosin.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, let me say merely that this amendment does not add any new appropriation. It is both a restriction and a recognition of the right and power of the Secretary of Agriculture to utilize, for the purposes stated in the amendment, a portion of the appropriation heretofore made for the administration of the Soil Erosion Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 33, after line 2, it is proposed to insert the following paragraph:

No part of the funds or moneys appropriated under this title no. 2 shall be used to pay the salaries or expenses of any person who is a candidate for any State, district, county, or municipal office (such office requiring full time of such person or to which office a salary attaches) in any primary, general or special election, or is serving as a campaign manager or assistant thereto for any such candidate, or is a member of any campaign committee organized to promote the political interest of any candidate for such office, or holds, either by appointment or election, any public office, and such persons shall not be employed or continued in employment on administration's staffs of any agency administering any of the funds herein appropriated: Provided further, That this prohibition or ineligibility shall apply to any person employed or seeking employment on nonrelief supervisory personnel on such agency projects, as well as on State, district, and field representative staffs thereof.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, this is an amendment which I am sure no good Democrat would vote against, and which every loyal Republican ought to vote for.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to be inserted on page 36. I send it to the desk and ask to have it stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 36, after line 8, it is proposed to insert the following:

The appropriation of $1,425,000,000, and all sums making up this total, contained in title II of this act, are hereby reduced by 20 percent.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Senate has added $300,000,000 to this bill for work relief by making available $300,000,000 of securities to the Federal Emergency Administrator for Public Works. The purpose of my amendment is to reduce proportionately the amounts carried in the bill under the item of $1,425,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration by approximately the amount which has been appropriated for the Public Works Administration.

At this late hour I do not wish to take the time of the Senate, except to call attention to the fact that if the bill shall be passed in its present form the Government will spend, for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1937, $1,000,000,000 more than for the fiscal year we are now in for the ordinary expenses of government and for recovery and relief, excluding the bonus payments.

I think the people of the country have the right to expect that when conditions improve the expenditures of the Government shall be reduced; and, as I have said, if the bill shall be passed in its present form, we shall spend next year $1,000,000,000 more than this year, and we shall spend three and a half billion dollars more than for 1933.

I hope the Senate may reduce the amount carried by this appropriation bill to the point recommended by the President, because we have added $300,000,000 more than the President recommended and more than was included in the bill as it was passed by the House of Representatives.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, if I may. The conferees are in full agreement regarding the items in the omnibus flood-control bill. That bill makes provision for an expenditure this year of $50,000,000. In the Overton bill, relating to the lower Mississippi flood work, there are certain transfers made to carry on the work under that measure so that it will not be necessary, probably, to make any new appropriation, but it will be necessary if we are to have the flood-control activities carried out this year to ask for $50,000,000. The question I am addressing to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations is whether we should ask now that the $50,000,000 be added to the pending deficiency bill, or whether we should wait until action has been completed on the proposed legislation and ask for a supplementary estimate and an appropriation?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I do not think we contemplate any other deficiency bill at this session of the Congress.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, we have no Budget estimate for this item. We have the legislation, but the matter has not been submitted to the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. GLASS. It might be taken care of by a joint resolution.

Mr. COPELAND. What is the advice of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and, perhaps, of the chairman of the subcommittee? What should we do about the matter?

Mr. GLASS. I should think the Senator would better endeavor to attend to it by a joint resolution of the two Houses. The advice of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations is never to include anything in an appropriation bill which has not been before the Bureau of the Budget for an ordinary estimate.

Mr. COPELAND. May I ask the chairman of the subcommittee what is his feeling about the matter?

Mr. ADAMS. I am in entire accord with the chairman of the committee.

Mr. COPELAND. Very well. Then I want Senators to be on notice that there are 40 States interested in this bill, and sometime before final adjournment it will be necessary to ask for an appropriation to carry on the flood-control work.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia (Mr. BYRD).

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, on the 26th of May the President sent to the Senate a number of supplemental estimates. There are three of these which pertain to the Indian Service, and because of that fact, I presume, they have been placed in my hands for presentation to the Senate.

One of the amendments provides for support of the Indians and administration of Indian property, calling for an appropriation of $11,500. I ask permission, after the several amendments have been acted upon, to insert the justifications for them in the RECORD.

Another amendment is in pursuance of an act passed by the Congress on April 10, 1936, Private Act No. 448. It carries an appropriation of $504.41, and it is in the nature of a private claim for Mrs. Earl H. Smith.

The third item is for $10,000, to replace a dairy barn, a hay shed, and milk house at the Jones Academy in Oklahoma.

I offer the three amendments, and ask that the justifications be printed following the action on each amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the first amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 60, after line 14, to insert a new paragraph, as follows:

Payment to Mrs. Earl H. Smith: For payment to Mrs. Earl H. Smith, administratrix of the estate of Earl H. Smith, as authorized by the act of April 10, 1936 (Private 448, 74th Cong.), fiscal year 1937, $504.41.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Committee on Appropriations was created, I have always assumed, to carry out certain definite functions. We have always tried to get information in reference to items which have been brought before us. I am merely using the pending amendment as a reason for making the statement I desire to submit, because the Senator from Oklahoma commented on the fact that the amendment came in late.

These estimates, along with a number of others, came to the committee after the subcommittee had ceased its hearings, and just as the committee as a whole were adjourning. We have had no chance to consider these items. There are a number of other amendments offered from the floor in the same situation, and I feel that if the Senate Committee on Appropriations, and particularly the subcommittee, are to be of any service to the Senate, Budget estimates and various amendments ought to be submitted to those committees in time to have hearings and to obtain some information.

We go to conference on these matters, and we are very promptly asked by the conferees from the House, "Did you have any hearing on these matters?" They ask us what we know about them. The House has made a rather uniform practice of holding hearings upon their items. They come to conferences better prepared than we are, and we are given no chance; we are expected to go into a conference representing the views of the Senate; yet we have no information as to these items, and amendment after amendment and appropriation after appropriation is flooded out across the floor and the conferees are then expected to make a defense and a support of such amendments.

I am not directing my remarks to this particular amendment, but discussing a general situation which embarrasses the conferees.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I recognize the full force of the statement made by the Senator from Colorado, but the Indians are the wards of the Government, and they are not responsible for public officials not sending in their estimates. Of all persons in the Nation, these wards should not be taken advantage of, and I submit that these small items, only nominal, should be included in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has asked unanimous consent that the justification for the amendment be printed in the RECORD at this point. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PAYMENT TO MRS. EARL H. SMITH

This item is submitted pursuant to the act of April 10, 1936, reading as follows:

"That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $504.41 to Mrs. Earl H. Smith, administratrix of the estate of Earl H. Smith, for labor performed by the said Earl H. Smith in full settlement in the construction of the Indian hospital at Tomah, Wis."

This legislation grew out of a claim by Earl H. Smith for compensation for labor performed in connection with the construction of an Indian Service hospital at Tomah, Wis., in 1932. The original claim, amounting to $519, was based on the following:

200 hours of employment, June 1932, at $1.50	$300
180 hours of employment, July 1932, at $0.75	135
112 hours of employment, August 1932, at $0.75	84
Total	519

The difference of $14.59 represents an overpayment made to Mr. Smith while he was employed, which overpayment was never collected.

The period covered by the claim represents the time when the construction job was closed down because of uncertainty as to whether or not the appropriation was sufficient to complete the job. While responsibility for construction work rested with the superintendent of construction for the northwest area, the superintendent of the Tomah School ordered the work to cease until he had an opportunity to establish definitely that available funds were sufficient to complete the work. Notwithstanding the order of the local superintendent the construction supervisor directed Mr. Smith to remain on the job, inasmuch as the building had recently been plastered and it was necessary that appropriate steps be taken to see that the plaster was properly cured. Mr. Smith of course expected to receive compensation for his services. The superintendent of construction was a comparatively new employee and had not yet become thoroughly conversant with the various regulations of the Indian Service. He was unaware of the fact that he had no authority to obligate the funds for this project.

The Comptroller General had given consideration to a similar case and issued a ruling thereon under date of September 30, 1931 (A-38364). The Comptroller said in part: "As * * * his employment was temporarily suspended * * * and as there was no authority in the superintendent (of construction) to arrange or contract with him for payment of compensation when no services were being performed and no construction being done, he could not be paid for the period in question even if the superintendent (of construction) did advise him that he would be "paid in full."

He further held that "it is apparent that if the former superintendent (of construction) did ask the claimant to remain he exceeded his authority and that the United States is not bound by his action. All persons dealing with officers of the Government are chargeable with knowledge of the limited authority they may have of binding the Government."

It has been determined that Mr. Smith did render service during the time claimed. It will be noted from the tabulation above that the rate of pay for the months of July and August is only one-half of the amount claimed per hour for the month of June. The local superintendent contended that Mr. Smith could not perform any work in connection with the project because the building was padlocked. He further stated that the foreman of a gang doing repair and improvement work on the school plant attended to the airing of the building during a portion of the period when work was suspended. When Mr. Smith presented his claim to the Indian Office it was held that he was not entitled to pay from June 1 to August 17. The basis for that action was twofold—(a) that the job was closed down and (b) the rulings of the Comptroller General prohibited the payment in question.

It appears from the record, however, that there was considerable misunderstanding, particularly on the part of the superintendent of construction. He was acting in good faith and Mr. Smith was relying upon the directions issued by the superintendent of construction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS].

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed on page 59, after line 19, to insert the following:

Indian boarding schools (Jones Academy, Oklahoma): For dairy barn, hay shed, and milk house, Jones Academy, Oklahoma, fiscal year 1937, $10,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has asked unanimous consent to have the justification for the amendment printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INDIAN BOARDING SCHOOLS

The amount here requested is to restore facilities recently destroyed by fire. Jones Academy, located near Hartshorne, Okla., accommodates approximately 175 boys, mostly members of the Choctaw Tribe. The school maintains a dairy herd, both for the production of milk for the school, and instruction purposes for the older boys. Plans and estimates have been prepared covering the facilities to be replaced. The dairy herd at present consists of 22 animals, but there are no facilities for caring for the herd or the milk produced by it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 59, after line 12, it is proposed to insert the following:

SUPPORT OF INDIANS AND ADMINISTRATION OF INDIAN PROPERTY

For an additional amount for general support of Indians and administration of Indian property, including pay of employees authorized by continuing or permanent treaty provisions, fiscal year 1937, $11,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to have the justification for the amendment printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUPPORT OF INDIANS AND ADMINISTRATION OF INDIAN PROPERTY

This additional amount is needed to finance the added burdens placed upon the Indian Service by reason of the enactment of the act of February 11, 1936 (Public, No. 441, 74th Cong.), reading as follows:

"That from and after 30 days from the date of approval of this act the restricted lands belonging to Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes in Oklahoma of one-half or more Indian blood, enrolled or unenrolled, may be leased for periods of not to exceed 5 years for farming and grazing purposes, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe and not otherwise. Such leases shall be made by the owner or owners of such lands, if adults, subject to approval by the superintendent or other official in charge of the Five Civilized Tribes Agency, and by such superintendent or other official in charge of said agency in cases of minors and of Indians who are non compos mentis."

The purpose of this legislation is outlined in a letter dated March 2, 1935, addressed to the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate, by the Secretary of the Interior. The following quotations are from this letter:

"Since the passage of the act of May 10, 1928 (45 Stat. 495), section 2 of the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 312), which was designed to give the greatest measure of protection to the Indians in the leasing of their homestead allotments, fails to give the protection necessary best to serve and protect the welfare of the Indians. By reference to section 2 of the act of May 27, 1908, it will be noted that lands allotted as surplus allotments may be leased by the Indians for 5 years without approval, while homestead allotments were protected against leases for more than 1 year without approval of this Department. (The special estate for after-born children created by sec. 9 of the act of May 27, 1908, expired Apr. 26, 1931.) But the original homestead allotment is not always the actual homestead of the Indian, because in many instances the lands designated as tax-exempt under section 4 of the act of May 10, 1928, are not homestead allotments. The tax-exempt selections are mostly tracts which include the best lands or the lands on which the Indians have established their permanent homes. They may be from either the original homestead or the original surplus allotment; and we desire that the Indians be afforded ample protection in the future leasing of such lands. The tax-exempt acreage in many cases is all that the Indians have remaining, and experience has shown that through the making of long-term leases the Indians in many instances will practically lease themselves out of a home.

"The enclosed draft of bill makes no distinction in the leasing of homestead, surplus, or tax-exempt lands. I can see no logical basis for any distinction as the remaining restricted Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes are those in most need of supervision and their land holdings in most cases are considerably less than when their allotments were originally made. But few, if any, heirs among them who would come under the provisions of the bill, have inherited and retained as much as an entire allotment."

Under this recent enactment no agricultural leases can now be made by a member of the Five Civilized Tribes of one-half or more Indian blood, enrolled or unenrolled, without approval of the superintendent. It has been estimated that not more than 5 percent of the leases for farming and grazing purposes in the Five Tribes are departmental. The Five Tribes area covers 40 counties, or 30,000 square miles. From figures obtainable at present it appears there are about 12,000 living restricted enrolled Five Tribes Indians. To this should be added approximately 16,000 unenrolled in the restricted class, making a total of 28,000 restricted Indians. Our records show there are 1,511,769 acres of land held by restricted Indians as tax exempt. Probably 75 percent of the restricted Indians will have some land which they desire to lease for farming and grazing purposes. These figures give some idea as to the magnitude of the work to be done in handling leases under the new act.

The following tabulation shows the approximate division of the estimate:

5 land appraisers at $1,800 each	$9,000
5 automobiles at $650 each	3,250
Traveling expenses, $600 per man per year	3,000
2 clerks, headquarters' office, at $1,620	3,240
Office equipment, supplies, and miscellaneous	1,460
	19,950
Less savings due to delays in filling positions	8,450
Total estimate	11,500

This represents our minimum requirement for the coming fiscal year. No other funds are available to meet this added expenses.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I rise to make an inquiry of the Senator from Colorado. I have just had handed to me a telegram from the mayor of Lexington, Ky., calling attention to the fact that there is a rumor that the pending bill contains a limitation as to the time during which or prior to which applications for allotments under the P. W. A. appropriation must be made, fixing March 31 as the date on which he says they must have been in. I have examined the bill, and I find no such limitation in the bill.

Mr. ADAMS. The only approach to a limitation is the provision as to the year 1938.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is the time when the projects must be completed. Of course, an application has to be made before work can begin.

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 30, line 5, after the word "sums", to insert the words "not exceeding $50,000,000."

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment as amended, commencing on page 29, line 24, was adopted, be reconsidered, in order that my proposed amendment to the amendment may be considered.

I desire to say to the Senate that when this committee amendment was agreed to, the committee was informed that the amount involved was not in excess of $50,000,000. Upon investigation I find that the unexpended balances exceed that sum, and I want the bill specifically to provide that not exceeding $50,000,000 shall be available for the purpose named.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the amendment, as amended, beginning in line 24, page 29, was agreed to. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote by which the amendment, as amended, was agreed to is reconsidered.

The question now is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 61, after line 18, it is proposed to insert the following:

Studies of sub-bituminous and lignite coal: For studies, investigations, and experiments with respect to sub-bituminous and lignite coal, as authorized by the Act of May 15, 1936 (Public, No. 591, 74th Cong.), for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, $40,000.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, this amendment simply carries out an authorization in the bill that was approved by the President on May 20. The item was sent to the committee on the last day the bill was being considered—one of those late reports—and the committee did not have time to consider it on the day they reported out the bill. The amendment simply provides for an investigation to be made by the Bureau of Mines. The bill was approved by the Bureau of Mines and the Secretary of the Interior, and also by the Bureau of the Budget. The Secretary of the Interior states that it will work in with the investigations they are making in fuel tests under the regular appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 83, after line 12, it is proposed to insert:

To carry out the provisions of Senate bill no. 267, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, entitled "An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States, who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal nature", to remain available during the fiscal year 1937, $20,647.25.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, the amendment is to carry out the provisions of a bill which has been passed by both Houses of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I now desire to offer a substitute for title II. I am going to accommodate the Senate's mood by making it possible to have a vote upon the proposed substitute in 3 or 4 minutes.

I discussed this matter completely 2 weeks ago, and so did the able Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] upon the other side, and the able Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], with his usual correspondence from the Budget Director.

I think perhaps I can save time if, instead of having the substitute read, I briefly indicate its contents, because I have no illusions as to what is about to happen to it. [Laughter.] I simply wish to make the record, because the record may be important.

Mr. President, those of us who have labored upon the substitute are proceeding on the theory that relief cannot be reduced to a reasonable basis of cost, and waste and extravagance and political exploitation eliminated, except as we return those responsibilities to the States. The substitute returns to the States the responsibility for relief decisions and the responsibility for relief administration.

It is the theory of those who have worked upon the substitute that when the Federal Government provides the grants-in-aid, and those grants-in-aid are matched on the basis of 35 to 65 by the States, the net result will be an inevitable re-creation of home responsibility, which will produce the essential economies which the situation in which the country finds itself desperately cries out for. It is the further theory of those who present the substitute that those who are on relief will be infinitely better off under the theory and purpose of the substitute, because when the funds are returned to local responsibility they are returned to those who intimately know the needs and necessities of those who are on relief; and under the terms and purpose of the substitute, relief will be administered on a basis of equity instead of on a basis of politics in any aspect.

Mr. President, the mathematics of the substitute is simply this, and then I am done: Precisely the same grand total of $1,425,000,000 is provided in the substitute that is provided in the pending bill itself; but only $1,000,000,000 is provided for regular allocation, and the other $425,000,000 is set aside for allocation for emergencies at the discretion of the President if he finds that $1,000,000,000 will not pay the bill.

It is the belief and conviction of those who have prepared the substitute that under this different method of administration and decision and responsibility, $1,000,000,000 will do everything that $1,425,000,000 would do under the present and existing system, and that $1,000,000,000 will buy more actual relief for those who are suffering and in need of relief.

Therefore, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to suspend the reading of the amendment. I ask for the yeas and nays upon the general proposition which I have briefly outlined, and with which, I know, the Senate is completely familiar in detail. I ask that the substitute amendment be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan asks that the reading of the substitute amendment which he offers be dispensed with. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The substitute amendment will be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The amendment, in the nature of a substitute, is as follows:

As a substitute for title II, as amended, it is proposed to insert:

"To provide adequate home relief and/or work relief, including the cost of administration thereof, in the United States and its Territories and possessions, in cooperation with these subdivisions and on the basis of their administrative responsibility and pursuant to their decisions respecting the character of relief within their jurisdictions, $1,425,000,000, to remain available until June 30, 1937, subject to the following terms and conditions:

"(a) This appropriation shall be available for payment of grants-in-aid to the States, Territories, and possessions in the following classifications: (1) $425,000,000 for emergencies and (2) $1,000,000,000 for regular allocations.

"(b) The sum designated for emergencies shall be available for grants-in-aid by order of the President to meet any extraordinary or unforeseen contingencies, according to the discretion of the President, and without regard to any other requirements in this section: Provided, That this sum also shall include the expense of Federal administration of the entire relief appropriation.

"(c) The sum designated for allocations shall be allocated by the President at his discretion with due and equitable regard for all of the following factors: (1) Relative population; (2) relative unemployment; (3) relative living costs, including seasonal and climatic conditions; and (4) relative financial resources.

"(d) The sums allocated under subsection (c) shall be paid on a quarterly basis by order of the President to the States, Territories, and possessions when (1) the governor of each subdivision or the District Commissioners, in the case of the District of Columbia, shall have certified to the President that he has appointed a bi-partisan board of relief trustees, who shall become custodians for the receipt and disbursement of the Federal grants-in-aid; and when (2) each such board of relief trustees shall have certified to the President that its subdivision or any unit thereof has provided, or is prepared to provide, not less than 35 percent of the cost, either in money, materials, services, equipment, or other contributions, of the relief programs, including cost of administration, which each such board of relief trustees shall designate to receive the Federal grants-in-aid.

"(e) Each subdivision shall decide through its own duly constituted authorities, with the approval of its board of relief trustees, what type of relief shall be undertaken, and each subdivision shall assume full administrative authority therefor: Provided, That any such relief shall be distributed without discrimination on account of race, religion, or political affiliations. Any person who knowingly violates this proviso in connection with the allocation or administration of any such grant, or who knowingly makes any false statement in connection with any applications or reports that may be required by this section, or who solicits or receives political contributions from any other person on relief or connected with the administration thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

"(f) Each board of relief trustees shall furnish such reports from time to time as may be required by the President, and shall account for the expenditures of all Federal funds disbursed by it, and such reports shall include comprehensive information respecting all phases of relief needs that may be required hereafter in determining future grants-in-aid."

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Michigan has called for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BORAH. I desire to say a word before the yeas and nays are ordered. Something like 18 months ago I made some investigation as to what was considered waste and extravagance in administering this relief fund. I was advised on numerous occasions by Mr. Hopkins or his representatives that by reason of the fact that this fund was being administered largely by local authorities, to whom he had granted the fund, he was unable to keep control and unable to enforce his ideas of economies in regard to it. I came to the conclusion that Mr. Hopkins was correct in his view. I cannot believe that it is in the interest of economy or in the interest of better administration of the fund for one sovereignty to contribute the fund and for another to administer it?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I should like to give the Senator just one exhibit which was submitted to the committee to demonstrate what happens by way of stupendously increased burden under the existing system. The president of the Borough of Queens in New York testified that under local control 11,000 cases were handled with 275 administrators, while under the new system 16,000 cases required 2,056 administrators; and I submit to the Senator that the elimination of that character of duplication and overlapping and multiplication is the thing which would permit economy, in my humble judgment.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not know what the situation is or what the facts are with reference to that particular matter, but I do know that politics do not stop at State lines. I do know that political administration will be just the same whether it is under the control of the State authorities or whether it is under the control of the national authorities, just because of the proposition that the people at home who are administering the fund are administering a fund from the National Government. They are not administering a fund from the State government except in a limited degree. They are administering the fund from the National Government. This tends to dissipate a sense of responsibility.

It is calculated to bring about a less sense of responsibility when they are administering a fund under those conditions than if they were administering a fund at home. If the entire fund were to be raised by the States and the people at home were conscious of the fact that in accordance with the way in which they spent it they should be taxed, that would be one thing. But we know that while it is true that the taxpayer is the same under the National Government and the State government, nevertheless when we are actually raising the fund by one sovereignty and turning it over to another, we leave an interim where the looseness of administration takes place.

I made a rather extended investigation of that matter in connection with Mr. Hopkins and came to the conclusion that we ought to fix responsibility somewhere and that the responsibility ought to be fixed upon the agents of that sovereignty which contributes the larger portion of the fund.

Let us suppose that we send this money into certain States; what will be the difference after it gets there in the administration now and the administration then? The same condition will exist with reference to the administration of it. The same agencies, the same authorities, with reference to distribution, will exist in the States then as they do at the present time. But there will be this additional fact, which is calculated to make them less economical and less responsible, and that is that they are distributing another sovereign's money. I do not believe that is calculated to bring about economy or bring about any better administration. On the other hand, I think it is calculated to bring about the reverse.

Of course, I know there is waste in administering such a large fund. I know there is extravagance in administering it. I say frankly I do not know of any way to prevent it except through the sense of responsibility of those who administer it. I think that sense of responsibility is much greater if it is administered by those who are responsible for the fund. If, in other words, the national administration goes before the country responsible for these continued increases in the amount of money which is to be distributed, it seems to me the sense of responsibility is very much greater than if they go before the country having provided the funds but saying they turn them over to the States to administer and are not responsible for what the States do. I do not want to wipe out that sense of responsibility. Someone will have to be held responsible for it sometime. Let those be responsible for it who are administering funds of their own and not administering somebody else's funds. I believe in holding those who ask for the money of taxpayers responsible for its economical disbursement. I do not believe in this divided responsibility. It of itself begets waste and extravagance.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I have a feeling that the proposal presented by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] should not pass without some challenge from this side of the Chamber. Owing to the lateness of the hour, I shall proceed but briefly.

I think so long as we have heard from distinguished members of the opposition party, many of whom are prominently mentioned as possible candidates for the Presidency, we should also hear from another of those prominently mention for nomination as the Republican candidate for the Presidency. I refer to the Governor of Kansas, Alfred M. Landon, and desire to point out a few of the statements made by the honorable Governor of Kansas prior to the time he was recognized by the newspapers as one of the outstanding candidates for the Republican nomination.

Last November, speaking to the unemployed of the State of Kansas, he said:

I am confident the President and the W. P. A. are doing all in their power to get the people to work.

In a radio broadcast August 4, 1934, Governor Landon of Kansas said:

In working out this plan, the Federal Government will be offering Kansas not only temporary relief, but something of great permanent value.

In a radio address delivered at Topeka, August 4, 1934, Governor Landon said:

Relief authorities are now launching a huge water-conservation program that will be of immeasurable aid to stricken farmers now requiring aid, as well as tremendous value in the future.

Speaking again on July 24, 1934, Governor Landon said:

The Government of the United States is making available refunds and loans to assist us through this emergency.

On May 21, 1934, Governor Landon of Kansas said:

It would be good business in my opinion for Kansas to borrow every dollar it can get under the P. W. A.

May 13, 1934, Governor Landon said:

We will take all the money we can get from the Federal Government.

April 17, 1934, in a letter to President Roosevelt, Governor Landon said:

This civil-works program is one of the soundest, most constructive policies of your administration, and I cannot urge too strongly its continuance.

In an interview with the Associated Press, April 9, 1934, Governor Landon said:

There were no payless days for work-relief applicants.

In a wire to Harry Hopkins July 16, 1933, Governor Landon said:

I earnestly urge that your plans make provision for relief on the basis of not only the physical needs of families, but also of the educational requirements of the next generation.

Speaking in Topeka, March 26, 1933, Governor Landon said:

I also desire to acknowledge in a tangible way the appreciation of the people of my State of the courage with which President Roosevelt has attacked the depression.

So long as we are to have testimony from a possible Republican candidate for the Presidency, I think we should have the testimony of one who, unfortunately, so far as those of us who have a very great respect for the Members on the other side of the aisle are concerned, the newspapers seem to think is the leading candidate. Until the time of Mr. Hearst's visit to the capital of Kansas, Governor Landon was repeatedly and insistently praising the administration for its relief work.

I have very sincere respect for the intellectual honesty and ability of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG]. He feels if we can bring the administration of relief back to the States, if we can bring it back so that those in contact with the people are able to administer it, we will get more efficiency, we will get more for our money, and there will be less politics and less possibility of graft. If the Senator from Michigan were correct in that contention, then it would be reasonable that history would have taught us in this country that the most efficient governments, those most directly in touch with the people, would be the city and the county governments. Yet it is a well-recognized fact that we have had more inefficiency, more dishonesty, more graft, more politics connected with our county and city governments, which are right there directly connected with the people, than we have had in our State and National Governments.

Let me read from another gentleman mentioned at times in reference to public affairs, Charles Taft. In a book entitled "City Management", having reference to the "Cincinnati experiment", also quoted in American Commonwealth by James Bryce, it was said:

There is no denying that the government of cities is the one conspicuous failure of the United States. The deficiencies of the National Government tell but little for evil on the welfare of the people. The faults of the State governments are insignificant compared with the extravagance, corruption, and mismanagement which mark the administrations of most of the great cities. For these evils are not confined to one or two cities. * * *

Let me read from a book entitled "American State Government", by John Mabry Matthews, of the University of Illinois:

* * * Graft in county government is just as old-fashioned as county government itself, just as much behind the times, just as lacking in modern refinement. When you enter county politics, you step back into the days of Tweed. If you protest at things you find, you get the same answer, "What are you going to do about it?" and there isn't much you can do.

Let me read briefly from Essentials of American Government, written by Dr. Frederick A. Ogg, of the University of Wisconsin, and Dr. P. Orman Ray, of the University of California, as follows:

"Inefficiency and needlessly expensive methods prevail widely in the transaction of county business in general, and particularly in the handling of county finances and the management of county jails and charitable or welfare institutions. In the more populous counties one often finds an excessive number of employees on the county pay roll owing to spoils considerations. All too frequently there is nothing worthy of the name of county budget; illegal expenditures, made either in disregard or in ignorance of the law, are not at all uncommon. Often there is lacking anything that an ordinary businessman would recognize as an accounting system; and when there is something of the kind it is seldom uniform for all of the county offices. So crude has been county bookkeeping at times that a newly elected county board has been unable to ascertain the bonded indebtedness of the county, the amount of outstanding obligations, and the volume of uncollected taxes, or to secure other essential information. Waste and extravagance often characterize the granting of salaries or other forms of compensation by county boards, the purchase of supplies, and the incurring of indebtedness."

These are the institutions of government which are closest to our people. It has been proved in this country that we have more graft, more corruption, more inefficiency in those governments than in the Federal or the State governments. Therefore the argument which the Senator from Michigan presents—that if we will simply take the administration of relief away from the Federal Government and give it back to the governments which are closer to the people we shall have more efficiency—has no basis and no foundation in the governmental history of our country.

I desire further to present for the RECORD a schedule which I have had prepared in reference to the participation by the various States in the various Federal agencies.

The disparity between the position of one State and that of another must of necessity be based upon one of three things: Either constitutional limitations within the State, or a feeling of antagonism upon the part of the State administration, or a feeling of antagonism upon the part of the people of the State itself.

I have selected first among these activities the one in which the Senator from Michigan has always been most interested, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. We find that there are five States in this country where State banks participated to the extent of 100 percent. There are two where the State banks participated to the extent of 99 percent. The percentage goes down until in the case of the State of Kansas the participation was 48.7 percent; in New Hampshire, 25 percent; and in Rhode Island, 22.2 percent.

I do not know why the State banks in these three States have refused to participate in this function of the Federal Government, which the Senator from Michigan has repeatedly told us is the outstanding accomplishment of this administration. It does not make very much difference why they have refused to participate, whether it is because of constitutional limitations or a feeling of antagonism upon the part of those in charge of the State governments; but if there is a range from 22 percent, on the one side, to 100 percent, on the other side, in a very desirable activity such as this, what sort of participation are we going to have in these relief activities when we call upon the people of the States to participate and to give their portion of the money?

I have had prepared a chart showing all the States and their participation in P. W. A., W. P. A., relief, State highway funds, old-age pensions, payments for dependent children, and payments for the blind. For example, we find the State of Arizona first on participation in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and forty-third in the amount contributed to P. W. A. We find the State of Utah third on participation in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, twenty-second in its contribution to P. W. A., and thirty-seventh in its State highway contribution. There is no way in which we can now tell the extent to which States can participate in this program.

When the Senator from Michigan spoke 2 or 3 weeks ago I propounded to him a question. He has certain standards by which Federal funds are to be given to the States, based upon population, the wealth of the States, the needs of the people of the States, and so forth. I propounded this question: "How long would it take us to conduct a survey which would enable us to know how much money the Federal Government should give to each one of the States?"

The Senator was unable to answer the question. I do not blame him for not answering it. The figures are not available. It does not do us any good, however, simply to bewail the fact that the figures are not available. If we should accept the proposal of the Senator from Michigan, I believe it would be a year before we should have the figures necessary in order to carry out his proposal; and I do not think the Senator from Michigan will challenge my statement that it would take from 6 months to a year to make a survey and a census of the country which would enable us to put one dollar to work under the program he proposes. Yet he expects us to attach his program to this bill, and the bill will become effective and the money will be needed at the end of this fiscal year.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD at this point the summary which I have had prepared, showing the participation by the various States in the various Federal programs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The summary is as follows:

States	Percent of State banks (not member of Federal Reserve System) insured in Federal Deposit Insurance Dec. 31, 1935		Federal Emergency Relief Administration obligations, 1933–35				Public Works Administration percent of State and local funds through Feb. 29, 1936		Agricultural Extension, percent of local funds through June 30, 1936		State highways 1932, percent of local funds

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point, in connection with the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan, a very careful analysis of that amendment, upon which I do not care to take the time to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the analysis will be printed in the RECORD.

The analysis is as follows:

As stated by Senator VANDENBERG, the essence of his entire proposal is to place in State and local hands "the complete power of decision relative to the type of relief and complete responsibility for subsequent administration." The Senator's proposal raises no question of Federal responsibility for the destitute. Furthermore, the Senator's proposal does not seek to change materially the sum appropriated for relief. The main question raised by the amendment is one of administration. The Senator apparently sees no reason to raise the State-rights issue merely because Federal funds are being made available for relief. Curiously enough, his solicitude for States' rights arises only when the Federal Government seeks to control in some measure the disposition of its own funds. The main questions, then, may be stated as follows: Does Federal administrative control over the spending of Federal funds for relief invade States' rights? Does not sound administrative practice require that the public body providing the funds have some measure of control over the disposition of its own funds?

In discussing his proposed amendment to the section of the House appropriation bill dealing with relief, Senator VANDENBERG made the admirable assertion that "States' rights are inevitably matched by State duties." While one may agree with this statement, it is particularly relevant to point out that Federal rights are also inevitably matched by Federal duties. In short, it seems perfectly obvious that when the Federal Government is called upon to provide funds for relief, it has the unquestioned right to set up sufficient safeguards to ensure the proper use of Federal funds. This principle has never been denied and has been an integral part of all Federal grants since the Federal grant-in-aid system was started in 1862.

As stated by Orth and Cushman in their standard treatise on American National Government in connection with grants-in-aid in general from the Federal Government: "By this threatened loss of Federal funds, States were impelled to comply with Federal requirements, and Congress has used this desire continuously in later Federal-aid legislation to enforce Federal standards and control."

An analysis of the proposed amendment by the Senator from Michigan makes clear that he merely proposes to return to the relief system of 1933–35, with this one major difference: Federal funds are to be granted to the States, but, unlike the situation at the time of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, his plan makes no provision to insure that Federal funds will be spent properly or in accordance with the wishes of the body making the funds available. The proposed amendment, therefore, if adopted, would not blaze new trails. It would merely restore the old system of Federal grants to the States for all types of relief, without providing the necessary Federal mechanism to carry out the plan properly.

It should be understood that this line of reasoning does not constitute an attack upon the system of Federal-relief grants as administered by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in the period from May 1933 through December 1935. Created in an emergency, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration met the relief problem honestly, effectively, and adequately. Because local and State credit had been strained to the limit, employables and unemployables were all lumped together and Federal funds, supplemented by State and local funds, were given to all the destitute who needed Government aid. This aid was granted through local relief agencies. The Federal Emergency Relief Administration did not administer relief in the States but merely exerted general supervisory control over State administrations to insure the proper use of Federal funds. Since that time of stress, however, a more logical division of responsibility between the States and their subdivisions and the Federal Government has been worked out. Direct relief has been returned to the care of the States and localities (aided by grants under the social-security program), and the Federal Government has assumed the burden of providing a large work program for employables. There is no reason for abandoning this reasonable division of responsibility for a return to a direct Federal subsidy for all types of relief, with no provision for supervision or control of the Federal funds.

It is true that the proposal of the Senator from Michigan provides for reports to the President from the States on all Federal funds disbursed by the States and including "comprehensive information respecting all phases of relief needs that may be required hereafter in determining future grants in aid." The President is also lightly advised that he is to determine all relief allocations and to give due regard to (1) relative population, (2) relative unemployment, (3) relative living costs, including seasonal and climatic conditions, and (4) relative financial resources. These are sound criteria and were in fact all used by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in making grants. It may be asked, however, whether the Senator from Michigan has given due consideration to the difficulty of assembling and interpreting the relative financial resources of the 48 States? Furthermore, has the Senator stopped to consider the difficulties inherent in an attempt to analyze the relative living costs (including seasonal and climatic conditions) of the 48 States? Once the President has these factors under control there still remains the problem of determining relative unemployment and correlating these factors with his findings on relative population. Is it not obvious to any thinking student of the problem, however, that these matters cannot be determined by any single individual, even if he were entirely free to devote his entire time and energy to coping with them? These factors alone explain why it was necessary during the period of direct Federal grants for relief to have such an organization as the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in operation.

It may be asked, however, why, if the Federal Emergency Relief Administration met the relief problem adequately, honestly, and effectively, it was nevertheless considered advisable to shift from this system to the one now in operation? The reasons for the change to the present system were clearly set forth in President Roosevelt's message to the joint session of Congress on January 4, 1935. At that time the President explained in the following words his reasons for requesting a Federal-works program and the discontinuance of Federal direct relief.

"The lessons of history, confirmed by the evidence immediately before me, show conclusively that continued dependence upon relief induces a spiritual and moral disintegration fundamentally destructive to the national fiber. To dole out relief in this way is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit. It is inimical to the dictates of sound policy. It is in violation of the traditions of America. Work must be found for able-bodied but destitute workers."

Having thus stated the reasons for substituting employment for direct relief, the President proceeded to classify the cases on relief (November 1934 data) and to differentiate the problems and responsibilities involved. The 5,000,000 cases were divided into two general categories, those cases in whose families there is no employable person and those in whose families one or more members are capable of self-sustaining effort. Of these groups he said:

"About one million and a half of these belong to the group which in the past was dependent upon local welfare efforts. Most of them are unable for one reason or another to maintain themselves independently—for the most part, through no fault of their own. Such people, in the days before the great depression, were cared for by local efforts—by States, by counties, by towns, by cities, by churches, and by private welfare agencies. It is my thought that in the future they must be cared for as they were before. I stand ready through my own personal efforts, and through the public influence of the office that I hold, to help these local agencies to get the means necessary to assume this burden.

"The security legislation which I shall propose to the Congress will, I am confident, be of assistance to local effort in the care of this type of cases. Local responsibility can and will be resumed, for after all, common sense tells us that the wealth necessary for this task existed and still exists in the local community, and the dictates of sound administration require that this responsibility be in the first instance a local one.

"There are, however, an additional 3,500,000 employable people who are on relief. With them the problem is different and the responsibility is different. This group was the victim of a Nation-wide depression caused by conditions which were not local but national. The Federal Government is the only governmental agency with sufficient power and credit to meet this situation. We have assumed this task and we shall not shrink from it in the future. It is a duty dictated by every intelligent consideration of national policy to ask you to make it possible for the United States to give employment to all of these 3,500,000 employable people now on relief, pending their absorption in a rising tide of private employment."

The President's message to Congress thus emphasized clearly the particular responsibility of the Federal Government and stressed the division of responsibility as between the Federal Government and the State and local governments. The divided responsibility places the burden of direct relief to unemployables upon the States and localities, while upon the Federal Government rests the responsibility for providing, not direct relief, but work to the employable persons on the relief rolls.

Local financial responsibility for the unemployables is premised upon the local character of this aspect of the relief problem. The Federal Emergency Relief Administration encouraged the localities to continue the burden of local responsibility for this group. In every State, public-welfare agencies, either State or local, have traditionally made provision for this group, and it is right that this responsibility should be assumed by them.

On the other hand, the relief problem created by the unemployment crisis is not a local, but rather primarily a national problem. This national responsibility is best met by a work program. The policy of providing useful employment rather than direct relief is predicated on the assumption, clearly borne out by several years of experience with relief, that direct relief is an unsatisfactory means of assisting unemployed persons. This conviction was, in part, responsible for the widespread development of work-relief programs by municipal governments in the early years of the depression. When the Federal Emergency Relief Administration was established in 1933, local work-relief programs were in wide use. Federal funds were made available to the States by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, and general rules governing work relief were promulgated. However, the early work-relief programs were not satisfactory. Projects were often of questionable social value, earnings were low, and the work was frequently little more than a work test.

Recognition of the shortcomings of this early work relief was partly responsible for the creation of the Civil Works Administration in November 1933. The civil-works program was designed to afford employment at regular wages on socially useful projects and marked a major step in the policy of providing work rather than relief to the unemployed. With the close of this program in March 1934, a new work-relief program, the emergency-work program (the emergency-work program, or the "work program" as it has been widely termed, is to be distinguished from the works program financed by funds appropriated by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935. The emergency-work program is work relief with earnings determined by the budgetary deficiency whereas works-programs earnings are not determined by the budgetary deficiency) of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, was inaugurated. This program represented a vast improvement in organization, types of projects, and conditions of work over the early work-relief efforts.

Recognition of the desirability of providing work to employable persons then on the emergency-work program or receiving direct relief led to the passage of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935. In accordance with the provisions of this Act the present works program was instituted and the care of unemployables returned to the Senates. Senator Vandenberg now asks that this logical system be destroyed and that Congress return to a system of Federal grants for both employables and unemployables, without the previous safeguard for supervision of Federal funds. He asks for Federal funds for unemployables, but denies Federal supervision because they are a local responsibility. He asks for Federal funds for employables, intimates that they too are a local responsibility, and therefore bars Federal supervision. His proposed system, and not the present one in operation, seems to be lacking in logic and sound administrative principles.

The present Congress is in favor of work relief for employables. If it were to provide funds to the States for employables as desired by Senator VANDENBERG it would have no guaranty that employables would not receive a dole rather than work. Is it possible that Senator VANDENBERG has this in mind in making his present proposal? Does he favor a dole for employables?

Senator VANDENBERG complains against the pending House bill on nine broad grounds. Points numbers 1 and 2 are as follows:

(1) It involves degenerating Federal dictation to the States in affairs which both by tradition and logic belong in the intimate jurisdiction of State decision and State responsibility. Abandonment of the latter emasculates the former.

(2) It invites the dangerous and ultimately fatal habit of quitting local self-reliance even as it destroys local autonomy. It progressively encourages the process of central subsidies which have ruined every nation in history that has surrendered to their insidious and paralyzing influence. Thus it destroys morale and creates more problems than it solves.

It is obvious, however, that it is the Senator's amendment, and not the pending House bill, which would tend to cause the evil consequences he mentions. The pending bill recognizes that unemployables are a local responsibility and leaves their control entirely in local hands. It is the Senator's amendment which calls for a "demoralizing" central subsidy to finance a local responsibility. Further, the pending bill properly recognizes the national responsibility for employables, provides funds for that purpose, and calls for suitable administrative control. How can the Senator justify his position that localities are responsible for unemployment and the destitution arising therefrom? It is the pending bill which places responsibilities where they belong, calls for the responsible agency to meet the responsibility, and follows sound administrative practice in allowing the agency providing the funds to supervise the spending.

Points 3 and 4 in Senator VANDENBERG's attack were gleaned from the House hearings. He attacks administrative costs of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration generally, and the wide variation in administrative costs from State to State. It should be pointed out that these administrative costs were State costs and in no sense attributable to Federal bureaucracy. In any event, no matter which agency administers relief, there will be certain administrative costs. Since VANDENBERG studiously avoids mentioning the reasons advanced in the House hearings for administrative costs and variation in costs from State to State, it may be advisable to give again the explanation made before the House committee considering the pending bill.

The term "administrative cost", as used by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, covered much more than is usually understood by the word "administration", inasmuch as it included not only the salaries of the executive personnel but also the salaries and expenses of all social workers, investigators, clerks, stenographers, and general supervisory personnel having direction of the vast emergency work-relief program carried on in every locality of the country. Also included were the salaries and expenses of persons engaged in supervising the educational, transient, and rural rehabilitation programs as well as the cost of distributing surplus commodities to relief recipients. Necessary travel, equipment, supplies, rent, heat, and printing were also included. Including all these factors, administrative costs of the State and local emergency relief administrations over the 3-year period averaged 10.7 percent of the total obligations incurred.

In no State did the administrative costs fall below 5.4 percent of the total relief expenditures. Sound administrative practices required that the eligibility of each applicant for relief be carefully investigated. Frequent and extensive reinvestigation was required in order to make certain that relief was not being given to persons who were able to support themselves. This phase of the administration of relief was costly. A special report received from all States for the month of October 1934 indicated that 47 percent of administrative personnel and 45 percent of wages and salaries paid during that month were chargeable to persons engaged in receiving applications for relief, establishing eligibility, administering direct relief, and certifying persons for work relief. Since true economy dictated that these tasks be carefully performed, it follows that the real efficiency of State relief administrations cannot be measured by the respective percentages spent for administration. Furthermore, as the relief program was expanded and differentiated to meet the special problems presented by various types of relief clients, administrative costs increased at the time but resulted in a smaller ultimate cost. For example, such activities as rural rehabilitation involved a relatively high cost for administration but were justified by the ultimate savings resulting when needy persons were finally placed in a position where they could support themselves.

It will be noted that the percentages of funds spent for administration varied somewhat from State to State. These variations were due to a combination of many factors—geographical differences, density of populations, the thoroughness and frequency of investigations, the extent of special programs, the standards of relief, etc., in addition to the factor of administrative efficiency. The geographical features of a State naturally affected the number of offices required. Salaries, an important part of administrative costs, naturally varied with living standards and cost of living in the different parts of the United States. The residence of large numbers of relief clients in a small area tended to lower the percentage of administrative costs by enabling social workers to investigate and care for more cases. Another factor affecting State figures is the standard of relief in a community. Thus it costs about as much to investigate the financial affairs of a family in the South as in the North, but because of the much smaller amount of relief granted per family in the South administrative costs, expressed as a percentage of total cost, would tend to be higher.

The fifth point of attack on the present system made by VANDENBERG is as follows:

"It wastes vast sums upon experiments which are no part of our immediate problem. Thus, it prodigally speculates in the thinning resources of the Republic at a moment when conservation should be the watchword of the hour."

This argument can be rebutted by pointing out that the Senator's amendment does not propose a reduction in the amount to be appropriated. It should further be rebutted by a statement on numbers employed, value of projects, etc.

Point no. 6 of VANDENBERG follows: "The existing system invites inequities as between the States which are * * * inevitable when an enormous Federal bureaucracy * * * attempts to apply common standards * * * across 3,000 miles of continental empire."

This point is rebutted by the fact that common standards have not been applied by Works Progress Administration when to do so would have been to work injustice. Wage scales were varied to meet varying standards of living throughout the country. The zone system of wages likewise took into account varying living costs in different sections of the United States. Furthermore, the work projects were not imposed uniformly all over the country. Local officials sponsored projects which were genuinely needed in their respective localities, and innumerable letters from local officials testify to the fact that the project instituted had their full approval.

Point 7, advanced by VANDENBERG, concerns the eradication of politics from the relief situation. There is no reason to suppose that Federal grants to the States, with no provision for Federal check over these funds, would eradicate politics. Every layer of American Government has had to contend with politics, and States, counties, and municipalities have always suffered as much or more than the Federal Government from partisan politics. It is significant that all the charges of misfeasance concerning relief under Federal Emergency Relief Administration related to misconduct on the part of State and local authorities. No charges were ever made of corruption in the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in Washington. It is a valid assumption that more, rather than less, corruption would have resulted had not the Federal Emergency Relief Administration at Washington exerted a restraining hand over local administrations. Occasional instances of misfeasance have been noted in local Works Progress Administration organizations. There is no reason to suppose, however, that these cases have been more numerous than might be expected in any undertaking of the size of the Works Progress Administration. Indeed, it is a reasonable assumption that more serious complications would result if complete and unsupervised control over work relief were turned over to localities.

Point 8 of Senator VANDENBERG follows:

"The existing system is inadequate to meet the complete relief necessity, because it acknowledges a Federal interest solely in employables who are transferred from relief to work relief, entirely abandoning to doubtful local resources the care of employables who have not been on relief, plus all unemployables. Thus it produces class favorites among the hungry themselves."

This statement completely overlooks the aid to States available under the Social Security Act. This act provides for Federal financial assistance for such unemployable groups as the aged, blind, and mothers with dependent children. The Federal Government, therefore, has not abandoned unemployables to the sole care of States and localities. Unemployables have traditionally been the primary responsibility of localities, however, and now, with improved local finances, it is reasonable to ask them to carry most of this burden.

Point number 9, raised by VANDENBERG, concerns the following question: Why are relief rolls failing to drop as prosperity returns? A number of reasons may be advanced in explanation of this seeming paradox.

1. The fact must be faced that recent technological improvements permit a great increase in production without a corresponding increase in employment. Thus, production and profits have risen but there has been no corresponding increase in employment.

2. Relief employables have had to compete with nonrelief unemployed in obtaining the jobs which have been opening up in private industry. Because the unemployed not on relief usually have better and more recent contacts with industry and are in general better equipped and in better physical condition, they are more likely to gain new jobs than the employables now on relief.

3. In many cases employers have been able to increase production by merely stepping up part-time employees to the status of full-time employees. This naturally has not resulted in a reduction in relief rolls.

These facts rebut the conclusion expressed by VANDENBERG that the present relief system is bad because it has failed to react to increasing business prosperity.

In short, the present relief system places responsibility for relief where it belongs. States and localities are asked to assume their responsibility for unemployables and to meet this responsibility with State and local resources. Federal aid is given through the Social Security Act, but, unlike VANDENBERG's proposal, proper Federal control is provided. The national responsibility for employables, on the other hand, is placed where it belongs, on the Federal Government. Because Federal funds are being used, the Federal Government is given sufficient control to insure the proper use of Federal funds. Localities are not disregarded, however, since they sponsor the projects which are to be put into operation. The practically unanimous approval expressed by local officials most closely affiliated with the Works Progress Administration is ample proof that they do not resent this system and that they recognize the genuine value of the projects being carried on by the Works Progress Administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] in the nature of a substitute for title II, as amended.

Mr. ROBINSON. I call for the yeas and nays on the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. I understand that, if present, he would vote "nay" on this question. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea." I withhold my vote.

Mr. BARKLEY. I announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague [Mr. LOGAN] on official business. If present, he would vote "nay" on this question.

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). Again announcing my pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], who, if present, would vote "nay." I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. TYDINGS (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF], who is unavoidably absent. If he were present, he would vote "yea", and if I were permitted to vote I should vote "nay".

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BILBO. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON]. Not knowing how he would vote, I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] and vote "nay".

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] has a general pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE].

I also announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained on account of illness.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Florida [Mr. LOFTIN], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are unavoidably detained from the Senate.

The junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] is paired with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN]. If the Senators from Nevada were present and voting, the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] would vote "yea", and the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] would vote "nay".

The result was announced—yeas 14, nays 57, as follows:

So Mr. VANDENBERG's amendment, in the nature of a substitute for title II, as amended, was rejected.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, it may be remembered that I had charge of the bill to repeal certain permanent appropriation acts, among them an appropriation for certain irrigation projects. It was not intended that when the act was passed the repeal of those appropriations as of July 1, 1935, would not make prior appropriations available for obligations incurred prior to that date. I have had submitted to me from the Bureau of the Budget two amendments covering appropriations of that kind, amounting in all to about $75,000, and I ask for their adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the first amendment proposed by the Senator from Arizona.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 58, after line 25, to insert a new paragraph, as follows.

Construction, operation, and maintenance Indian irrigation systems. The unexpended balances of such appropriations for construction, operation, and maintenance (including power revenues) of irrigation projects on Indian reservations as were repealed by section 4 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934, are hereby made available for obligations incurred against such appropriations prior to July 1, 1935, and any remaining unobligated balances of such repealed appropriations shall be added to and become a part of the receipts accruing from each project during the fiscal year 1936.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and my colleague [Mr. CHAVEZ] I desire to offer an amendment, and before offering it I desire to make a brief explanation of it.

At the last session of the Congress a bill authorizing the construction of an all-American dam at the point of diversion, at a point near El Paso, Tex., was passed and signed by the President. No appropriation was made because another bill was needed to complete the project. Only recently a Senate bill has passed the Senate and the House of Representatives, but has not as yet been signed by the President.

I think the appropriation which I shall ask would have been included in the estimate of the Budget Director if the bill had been signed by the President. I know it is approved by the Department of the Interior and the Department of State. It involves really an international matter in connection with waters of the Rio Grande and our sister Republic, Mexico.

I have spoken to the chairman of the subcommittee, and I have requested that the amendment be agreed to and taken to conference in order that he may investigate the situation and ascertain whether or not it is necessary to make the appropriation at this time, as I think it is. I had thought that the money had been made available, but it has not been.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, what was the dam mentioned by the Senator?

Mr. HATCH. The All-American Dam at the point of diversion at El Paso.

Mr. COPELAND. It was not a project included in the flood-control bill just passed?

Mr. HATCH. No; it was passed and approved by the Congress at the last session. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add at the proper place the following:

For the construction, operation, and maintenance of a diversion dam in the Rio Grande at a point near El Paso, Tex., but situate entirely within the United States territory, the sum of $1,000,000, which was authorized to be appropriated under the act of August 29, 1935.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, and ask to have a justification for it printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. It relates to the emergency appropriation to take care of contaminated water supply at the Cherokee, (N. C.), Indian School and the Southern Ute Agency in Colorado. There is a Budget estimate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 57, before line 17, to insert the following:

Indian agency buildings: For an additional amount for lease, purchase, repair, and improvement of agency buildings, exclusive of hospital buildings, including the purchase of necessary lands and the installation, repair, and improvement of heating, lighting, power, and sewerage and water systems in connection therewith, fiscal year 1937, $85,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. I ask to have the justification for the amendment printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the justification was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INDIAN AGENCY BUILDINGS

This estimate is to provide funds for two emergency needs (1) at Cherokee, N. C., and (2) at the Consolidated Ute Agency, Ignacio, Colo.

Cherokee, N. C., $50,000: The water supply at this jurisdiction has been under observation for a considerable period of time and studies have been in progress looking to the solution for improving the present system. In addition to the agency office a combination day and boarding school, accommodating about 400 children, and a hospital of 25-bed capacity, are operated. A small Indian village is immediately adjacent to the agency and school reserve. Something over 600 individuals are dependent upon the water supply here to be developed. A year ago in the spring all employees at Cherokee were inoculated against typhoid. The supply for the school and agency has been contaminated from time to time. The water is so heavily chlorinated that it is unpalatable for drinking or cooking.

On May 1 of this year the superintendent of the agency wrote as follows:

"Right now the matter has come to a head, as the water supply in the village has been condemned by the North Carolina State Board of Health. As I have stated before, the little village has to depend solely on a small spring at the base of the mountain within a few yards of the village proper. The supply, in spite of the abundant rains we have had, is practically exhausted, and, although the spring is cemented and kept from contamination at its outlet, it becomes contaminated from time to time through seepage in the upper mountains where several families live. Last summer it dried up entirely and the shopkeepers and restaurant managers were obliged to carry water from the river and boil it before it was used. I have tried to get the State to delay action in the matter, but it looks as though something will have to be done immediately.

"There is no other water supply available within reasonable distance on the side where the village lies, which is on the opposite side of the river from the school and agency."

The park authorities have given their approval to the tapping of Mingus Creek within the park borders, if funds could be provided for setting up a complete water system for the school, agency, and village. The water in that stream is always abundant and absolutely free from contamination, as there are no homes on the watershed drained by this stream. It would also give an adequate water pressure for fire protection, both at the school and the village.

The estimate of cost for this project is as follows:

26,000 feet 6-inch cast-iron pipe line	$30,000
2,000 feet 4-inch cast-iron pipe line	1,700
25 6-inch fittings	500
12 6-inch gate valves	360
4 6-inch hydrants	300
6 4-inch fittings	50
2 4-inch hydrants	150
2 4-inch gate valves	50
Concrete intake	1,000
Concrete sediment tanks	4,000
1 head-reducing manhole	100
Labor	11,790
	50,000

Unless a specific appropriation is made for this purpose there is little hope of remedying the unsatisfactory situation. The project will not qualify under relief because of the large amount necessary for the purchase of materials.

Consolidated Ute, $35,000: A similar situation prevails at this jurisdiction. Studies of underground sources of supply have been made in the hope that a system involving only a small outlay could be installed. The studies proved disappointing and it therefore becomes necessary to pipe water a distance of nearly 4 miles. The estimate for this project consists of the following:

20,000 feet 6-inch pipe at 90 cents foot	$18,000
Trenching and backfill averaging 4 feet 6 inches in depth, 7,300 cubic yards, at $1.50 cubic yard	10,950
Sump	2,500
Fittings	250
Equipment	200
Supervision	1,600
Contingencies	1,500
	35,000

The superintendent of the agency, on March 7, stated: "Muddy water again renders chlorination imperative." On April 11 a sample of the water drawn from the system was submitted to the office. This sample maintains a cloudy brown color, notwithstanding efforts made at the agency to carry the supply through a settling basin.

The health of more than 200 school children, and employees and their families, as well as patients in the hospital, require a safe and satisfactory water supply at all times.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BILBO (when his name was called). I make the same announcement as on the last vote and vote "yea."

Mr. HAYDEN (when Mr. ASHURST's name was called). I announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] is absent because of the death of his brother. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. I understand that if present he would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BULKLEY (when Mr. DONAHEY's name was called). My colleague [Mr. DONAHEY] is unavoidably detained from the city. If present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. BARKLEY (when Mr. LOGAN's name was called). I announce the unavoidable absence from the city, of my colleague [Mr. LOGAN]. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], who is absent. I am advised that if he were present he would vote as I am about to vote on this question. I vote "yea."

Mr. TYDINGS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and will vote. I vote "nay." I am advised that if present the Senator from Nevada would vote "yea", and the Senator from Rhode Island would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. FRAZIER. My colleague [Mr. NYE] is absent from the Senate. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained on account of illness.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are unavoidably detained.

I am advised that if present and voting the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] would vote "yea."

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the unavoidable absence from the Senate of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF]. If present, both Senators would vote "nay" on this question.

The result was announced—yeas 62, nays 14, as follows:

So the bill was passed.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I desire to state for the record that I have been consistently opposed to lump-sum appropriations; but I voted for the bill because it was reported from my committee and because there are 500 or 600 other items in the bill, and I am not going to vote against the bill and undertake to explain whether I voted against this, that, or the other item. I am always opposed to lump-sum appropriations.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I should like to say, in explanation of my vote on this bill, that I agree 100 percent with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] as to the viciousness of the practice of making lump-sum appropriations.

In the form in which this bill came into the Senate it was impossible to vote against it without voting to cut off relief which was absolutely necessary for the people of the country; but I say, in all candor, that it seems to me while possibly at the height of the emergency in 1933 there may have been justification for a lump-sum appropriation, after 3 years it should be possible to make these expenditures on the ordinary budget basis, as all other expenditures of the Government should be made.

I therefore voted for the bill today with great reluctance. So far as I am concerned, I hope it may never again be necessary to vote for a bill which, after all, amounts to the signing of a blank check by Congress.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, ask for a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. ADAMS, Mr. GLASS, Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. HALE, and Mr. KEYES conferees on the part of the Senate.

LOW-COST HOUSING

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to present and have printed in the RECORD a letter containing a resolution transmitted to the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. LOFTIN] by the City Council of Jacksonville, Fla., favoring the enactment of the pending housing bill, and also several other letters or resolutions of the same character. I ask that these papers be appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the letters and resolutions were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CITY OF JACKSONVILLE,
Jacksonville, Fla., May 27, 1936.

Hon. SCOTT M. LOFTIN,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The City Council of the City of Jacksonville, in regular session May 26, 1936, went on record as endorsing the Wagner-Ellenbogen United States housing bill, now before Congress, and ordered that you be apprised of this action.

Yours very truly,

W. C. ALMAND, Recorder.

NEW YORK TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION, No. 6,
May 28, 1936.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: The executive committee of New York Typographical Union, No. 6, has instructed me to inform you as Chief Executive of the United States of its wholehearted support of the United States housing bill (S. 4424 in the Senate; H. R. 12164 in the House) now pending before the present session of Congress.

The enactment of this bill as written will constitute the necessary first step in the realization of an adequate and permanent housing program. Employment in the building industry will be permanently increased and the living conditions of wage earners and their families will be improved, a situation Your Excellency has courageously endeavored, through various acts of Congress, to secure in the past.

Knowing your deep interest in legislation looking toward making for better living conditions among the citizens of your country, the executive committee of Typographical Union, No. 6, hereby endorses the housing bill and urges Your Excellency's cooperation in making law the Wagner-Ellenbogen bill dealing with a major social problem which, in the past 4 years, has no doubt been closely akin to Your Excellency's earnest endeavors along similar lines.

Respectfully yours,

JAMES A. MCCANN,
Secretary, Executive Committee.

A resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact the United States Housing Act, being S. 4424 by Wagner, and H. R. 12164 by Ellenbogen

Whereas the availability of decent sanitary and safe housing for all of the people is now recognized as a proper concern of Government; and

Whereas persons of low income can be housed adequately only by a degree of Government aid; and

Whereas the low-income group is of necessity occupying cast-off housing in what are known as our slum and blighted areas; and

Whereas the continued maintenance of our slums is socially undesirable and an economic waste; and

Whereas the city of Schenectady has embarked upon a low-cost housing and slum clearance program with the aid of the housing division of the Emergency Administration of Public Works; and

Whereas no funds are available to carry on this work without additional appropriations; and

Whereas it is desirable to preserve the benefits of the emergency housing experiences by providing for a permanent housing agency in the Federal Government; and

Whereas the building trades are still in need of stimulation in order to bring back a greater degree of employment: Now be it

Resolved by the Council of the City of Schenectady:

SECTION 1. That the United States Senate be, and it is hereby, requested to enact at the earliest date possible the United States Housing Act of 1936, being Senate bill no. 4424 introduced by Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER, and that the House of Representatives enact the identical measure introduced in said House by Congressman HENRY ELLENBOGEN, of Pennsylvania, and being H. R. 12164.

SEC. 2. That a copy of this resolution be sent to the President and to the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and to Senators ROBERT F. WAGNER and ROYAL S. COPELAND, and the following Representatives: Hon FRANK W. CROWTHER, Hon. BERTRAND SNELL, Hon. JAMES W. WADSWORTH, Hon. PARKER CORNING and Hon. HAMILTON FISH.

SEC. 3. This resolution shall take effect immediately.

THE YOUNG DEMOCRATIC CLUB OF JACKSON COUNTY,
Jackson, Mich., May 27, 1936.

Senator WAGNER,
The Capitol, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. WAGNER: The following resolution was adopted by the Young Democratic Club of Jackson County on May 25, 1936:

"Resolution endorsing the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill

"Whereas the bad, obsolete, and inadequate dwellings in which the majority of workers in Jackson, Mich., are forced to live constitute a mockery of this country's vast resources of land, labor, materials, and technical skill; and

"Whereas an absolute shortage of all kinds of dwellings is rapidly approaching, both here and throughout the country, and is forcing rents to exploitive heights and forcing families to 'double up'; and

"Whereas continued severe unemployment in the building industry is inexcusable in view of the great and urgent need for new dwellings; and

"Whereas ordinary private enterprise is not able, and never has been able, to meet the housing needs of average American workers; and

"Whereas only a long-term program of Federal aid, combined with local initiative, will meet this situation adequately; and

"Whereas labor has a double interest in the construction of low-rent dwellings, as the representative both of the unemployed building and material workers and of low-income families in need of better housing; and

"Whereas labor's housing program is substantially embodied in the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill; and

"Whereas this administration must keep its oft-repeated promises to the American people to improve housing conditions and increase employment in the building trades, which promises can be fulfilled only by the immediate enactment of the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill, preferably with larger appropriations and bond issues; and

"Whereas the provision of low-rent housing on a nonprofit basis should be a great nonpartisan movement, and this bill should be supported by all Republicans and Democrats alike who truly represents the interests of the people; be it therefore

"Resolved, That the Young Democratic Club of Jackson hereby actively endorses and supports the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill and urges both the President and every Member of Congress to do likewise, and to make this bill into law at this session; and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the President and to the Senators and Representatives in Congress of this State."

In closing, we are thanking you for your kind consideration of this bill and commending your action in introducing this important legislation. We assure you that you shall have our support in securing its passage.

JACKSON COUNTY YOUNG DEMOCRATIC CLUB,
DEXTER BABCOCK,
Resolutions Committee.

ESTABLISHMENT OF VETERANS' CEMETERY IN RICHMOND COUNTY, N. Y.

Mr. WAGNER also presented resolutions of the Richmond County organization of the American Legion, Department of New York, which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas available plots in the National Cemetery located in the city of New York are about exhausted; and

Whereas the Government has voted an appropriation of $250,000 for the immediate purchase of additional cemetery grounds in the vicinity of New York City; and

Whereas the location of this new cemetery is of vital importance to every veteran in and near the city of New York: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Richmond County organization of the American Legion, Department of New York, in meeting duly assembled this 15th day of May 1936, go on record as follows:

Resolved, That we favor the establishment of a new veterans' cemetery within New York, and particularly within the county of Richmond, where a suitable cemetery site is available; that a cemetery so located will be readily accessible to all boroughs of the city and also to adjoining Jersey territory, including Newark, Bayonne, Jersey City, Elizabeth, and Perth Amboy;

Resolved, That a cemetery so located is of vital importance to the veterans, in that, its accessibility permits of inexpensive funerals and convenient family visits, and likewise renders the cemetery easily accessible to the many thousands of veterans for military observances and honors; and

Resolved, That this affords the United States Government an opportunity to establish a cemetery similar to Arlington in this, the greatest city of our country, which will not only honor the city itself but serve as a befitting memorial to the veterans of New York and vicinity; surely this is their just due; and

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be transmitted to the county commanders of the first and second districts with a request that they adopt similar resolutions.

ADDITIONAL BILL INTRODUCED

Mr. SHEPPARD introduced a bill (S. 4734) to provide for hurricane patrol in the Gulf of Mexico and environs during the hurricane season, which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

SENATOR THOMAS P. GORE

Mrs. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Mrs. Atwood Risner at Durant, Okla., May 19, 1936, introducing the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE]; a letter from Mrs. J. Hale Edwards, of Lawton, Okla., addressed to Senator GORE; an article by Mrs. Walter Ferguson, entitled "A Woman's Viewpoint: Patriotism and War", referring to Senator GORE and others; and an address delivered by Senator GORE at Durant, Okla., May 19, 1936.

There being no objection, the addresses, letter, and article were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SPEECH OF MRS. ATWOOD RISNER INTRODUCING SENATOR T. P. GORE AT DURANT, OKLA., MAY 19, 1936

Mr. Chairman and friends of Bryan County, I appreciate being invited here to speak to you today and pay tribute to a worthy public servant.

I have never enjoyed a personal acquaintance with Senator GORE, but I have enjoyed, and do now appreciate, the service he has rendered to the State of Oklahoma and the Nation. I remember with what anxiety we watched the returns in that memorable election when for a week the result seemed to hang in the balance, and finally the news came that California had gone over to Wilson and we had elected that great man to the Presidency of the United States. I remembered then, and I remember now, that credit was given Senator GORE for the efforts he made in California to carry that State for President Wilson.

I also remember when Senator GORE in the United States Senate stood for that which is near and dear to every mother's and father's heart—the life of their boys. He was crucified on the cross of public opinion. I see now a nation which has adopted the views expressed by Senator GORE at that time. I want to remind you that Senator GORE has not changed his position, but it has taken 20 years for the people of the United States to fully realize and appreciate the correctness of his views at that time. When a little more than a year ago he made the following statement:

"I will never vote to draft American boys and ship them across the seas to fight and bleed and die in anybody's battles but our own. * * * I would not sacrifice the life of one American boy, I would not break the heart of one American mother, to guard the boundaries or to maintain the territory of all the faith-breaking and debt-defaulting nations on this globe"—

we knew that he meant it. He faced the fire without flinching.

A great many of you remember that boy who was like a son to me, and who was raised in my home, the last from Bryan County to give up his life on the bloody fields of France. Had this Nation seen with the clear vision that Senator GORE saw with, that boy and thousands of others need not have made that sacrifice.

I am going to cast my vote and use my influence to, in part, repay this servant for duty well performed and in order that we may receive the benefit of his ability in the future.

LAWTON, OKLA., May 17, 1936.

Hon. THOMAS P. GORE,

United States Senator, Oklahoma City, Okla.

MY DEAR SENATOR GORE: Enclosed is a poem which expresses my sentiments about sending our sons to war even better than I can. My three sons, all of vulnerable age, mean more to me than all other issues now before our people.

I have just heard over the radio that the Governor of this State has said that no man should offer himself as a guard at the penitentiary unless he is willing to sacrifice his life to keep the criminals inside the penitentiary, thus protecting the lives of innocent citizens.

This is well taken, of course, but to me it is much more important that no man should offer himself as a candidate for Congress unless he is willing to sacrifice his seat to keep our sons inside this country and out of war, thus protecting the lives of not a few innocent citizens but of thousands, which always include the choicest of American manhood.

Mothers are by nature conservatists as well as humanitarians. We feel and know that our Government should preserve and encourage the finest and the best of our citizens if it is to endure.

This applies not only to peace and war but to our economic problems as well. The interests of the great middle class must be protected. To apply these principles requires sane and courageous judgment. It is that quality that is most admirable in you—particularly your consistency in always opposing war.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. J. HALE EDWARDS.

[From the Oklahoma News of Apr. 17, 1936]

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT—PATRIOTISM AND WAR

By Mrs. Walter Ferguson

At last we give honor where honor is due. For the first time in our history, statesmen who opposed war have been crowned with laurel wreaths. Four of them still serve us in Washington—NORRIS, of Nebraska; LUNDEEN and KNUTSON, of Minnesota; and GORE, of Oklahoma.

In 1917 these men knew what it was to be called slackers and Reds. They were charged with traitorous conduct. Those whose memory runs back to the hysterical days can recall the vituperations hurled at them when thousands of pigmy patriots were for hanging them in effigy.

Now, 19 years later, we pay them a belated tribute. Our weakness bows at last to their strength, and our folly acknowledges their wisdom. For make no mistake about it: The man who keeps his country out of war is the true patriot of the twentieth century.

Now, let's look at the picture etched upon national annals in 1917 when a handful of men and one woman, Jeannette Rankin, voted against our entry into the World War. As time passes, its significance will grow clearer, for several in so doing voted themselves out of Congress.

How many of our present Representatives, I wonder, will show the same courage when the test comes—and it seems to be coming. The United States is getting ready for war in such a sweeping fashion as to frighten the most optimistic. We now have the largest peacetime war budget that any country has or ever has had in the whole history of the world. Read that sentence again. Let it sink into your consciousness, for you are helping to pay the bill.

And what does such a bill mean? It means war. Peace is not preserved in any such belligerent fashion. The throttling fingers of militarism are about our very throats ready to choke democracy to death. Do not be fooled; there is no such thing as a free republic once war is declared. Military rule takes precedence over everything.

Surely the ghosts of the boys who died "to make the world safe for democracy" must walk restlessly by night in this "peace-loving America."

THE PIONEER WOMAN—ADDRESS DELIVERED BY HON. T. P. GORE

We have met this evening to pay the tribute of our respect to the pioneer women of America. Such a meeting with such a mission is more than unusual; it is unprecedented.

It is not unusual for us to meet to commemorate the deeds of the mighty "dead but sceptered sovereigns, whose spirits still rule us from their sacred urns." But yesterday we were celebrating the birth of Washington and Lincoln—twin stars of the first magnitude in the firmament of American statesmanship. But Washington and Lincoln in their own day could read their glory as well as "their history in a nation's eyes."

I have seen the representatives of all the nations of the earth meet with "the pomp and circumstance of war" at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier but the Unknown Soldier died in the shock of battle; he fell, as we may say, upon the field of martial glory, "and fame was there to tell who bleeds and honor's eye on daring deeds."

It is not unusual for us to meet and render the tribute of our respect to those who occupy the seats of the mighty—to those who are possessed of power and prestige, to those who have favors to grant or to withhold.

It is easy to say "long live the queen." It is easy to render homage to the 60,000,000 American women of this generation.

They are sceptered sovereigns—vested with the vote, they have the power to lift up and to cast down. It is easy to say now that we want the women to have everything on earth that they want—and more, too, if they want it!

It is unusual to meet to render homage to the inconspicuous—to the nameless dead—to those who left no bloody trophies to perpetuate their renown—who left no visible "Footprints upon the sands of time"—to those who lived only to labor and to love, who lived only to suffer and serve and then to pass on, not, indeed, unwept, but unhonored and unsung.

The purpose of this meeting is to do honor—not so much to do honor as to do justice to the pioneer woman of America. The memory of her whom fame forgot shall live like "a soul imprisoned in stone", shall live while the sculptured marble lasts. Her memory like her merits shall now take its appointed place among the "timeless things."

In order to appreciate any subject you must take into account and understand the background. The prototype of the pioneer woman of America is to be found in the pioneer race itself. We must appreciate the important part she played during the long ages, during the long states of savagery and barbarism en route to civilization.

Our modern civilization, with all its splendor, with all its diversified arts and industries, began with the principle and was builded upon the principle of "the division of labor." The first division of labor was founded upon sex; it began, the scientists say, with the discovery and use of fire. The women tended the fire while the men forayed, foraged, and fought.

The primitive woman was the pioneer inventor; she invented all the arts of peace. The pioneer woman was the first weaver and invented the primitive spindle and loom; she was the first tanner and invented her rude appliances; she was the first potter and advanced that art a long way toward its present perfection.

The primitive woman, to use the language of those who write of primitive culture, was the first "beast of burden"; she held that post for ages before the domestication of the horse and the camel. The invidious say that woman herself domesticated the cat; but, if so, she did so to guard the granaries she had built.

For ages woman's back bore the burdens of the race; she was the first packhorse, the first freight, the first passenger, the first accommodation train. The papoose frame was the first passenger car, the first palace coach invented by primitive woman, and not by Mr. Pullman—to whom letters patent were issued.

Let me repeat here the table of contents of a work entitled "Woman's Share in Primitive Culture"—the food bringer, the weaver, the skin dresser, the potter, the beast of burden, the Jack-at-all-trades, the artist, the linguist, the founder of society, and the patron of religion.

Did you ever reflect that the mother's love for her offspring is the beginning of all morality? It is the source and origin of ethics, it was widened to include the tribe, it was widened to include the race. Without this consecrated instinct, without this spark of divinity in the mother's breast, the race could not have endured. If I may change the metaphor, it is the taproot out of which has grown and flowered and fruited our civilization itself. It is the selfsame sentiment which inspired the dying words of Miss Edith Cavell when she said—with the light of another world breaking in her face—"patriotism is not enough."

We have heard a great deal about the rights of man—but very little about the rights of women; but of the long and tragic struggle on the part of woman, not for equal rights but for human rights, I shall not speak. It is easy now for chivalry to indulge in fine rhetoric about the uncrowned queen, but from the condition of slavery, from the status of property, woman has trod along the thorny and weary way.

When Columbus discovered America, when he lifted these two continents from out the sea, when he created the Western Hemisphere and rounded out the globe, when he raised the curtain and exhibited the new world unto the old as the theater where the great drama of the future was to be enacted, this discovery was followed up by two distinct types of civilization.

The Spaniard came, clad in a coat of mail—booted and spurred; he waded through slaughter in quest of gold; he burned the Incas in his rage for gold; someone has said that he fell first upon his knees and then upon the aborigines. He did not bring his mother, his sister, or his wife to the New World; he murdered the men and married the women of the wilderness, or, rather, he mated with them. Out of this union came the civilization of Latin America with its distinctive characteristics.

When our fathers came they came in search of liberty and not of gold; they brought with them the institution of the family and the home. They brought with them their helpmates, their wives, their sweethearts. Out of their union grew up the civilization of the Colonies, and out of that has grown the civilization of the United States of America. The distinctive character, the distinguishing characteristics of this civilization, are to be sought in the character and the influence of the pioneer women of America.

Of course, we have heard a good deal about the bonnie brides who were brought over and bartered for tobacco, and I suppose it is in retribution for this that her daughters of the present day have made conquest of the cigarette.

We have heard a great deal, both from history and tradition, about Capt. John Smith and Nathaniel Bacon down in Virginia, about the Wesleys and Oglethorpes of Georgia, about the Calverts and Carrolls of Maryland, about the Penns of Pennsylvania, about the Stiversons and Schuylers of New York. We have heard a great deal, a very great deal, about the Pilgrim Fathers in re the Mayflower. We have heard very little about the Pilgrim Mothers, but if truth be told, notwithstanding the silence of historians, they have no alibi.

We hear very little about Mary Chilton, although she was the first to step forth from the Mayflower and set foot upon the historic rock at Plymouth.

We hear a great deal about the Boones and the Crocketts and the Carsons far out upon the far-flung border; we hear very little about the widow Sutton, who slew a dozen of her savage captors while they slept and made good her escape.

We hear a great deal in story and in song about the midnight ride of Paul Revere, but we hear very little about the midnight ride of Mrs. Lydia Darrah. She overheard the British officers when they were planning a surprise attack upon Washington and Valley Forge. She obtained a passport through the British lines under the pretense of getting an order of meal. She walked 5 miles during the night to notify Washington of the threatened attack. She walked back after her patriotic mission was accomplished. When the British marched out in pursuance of the plan to attack Washington they found him prepared for this "surprise attack."

The people of Oklahoma are the last pioneers. They assembled in that section from every other State in the Union—I might almost say from every quarter of the globe. There they encountered the hardships of the border. They conquered the obstacles of the frontier. Brave men and brave women underwent all the privations of a new country, inspired by the sacred desire to acquire a home. They developed there the virtues of the pioneer—fortitude, self-denial, self-reliance, self-respect—virtues which have made this country great in the past, virtues which alone can keep us great in the future.

In our country the pioneers lived in sod houses. They lived in dugouts. That country was settled by brave men, by men who dallied with danger as the she tiger fondles her young. They made Oklahoma in their own image. They asked only a chance. Give them a chance and they will rebuild their fallen fortunes. Give them a chance and they will conquer their own destiny. That is my faith. That is my hope.

THE NEW DEAL AND ITS CRITICS—ADDRESS BY HON. JAMES A. FARLEY

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address by Hon. James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, at the Democratic State convention, Grand Rapids, Mich., May 20, 1936.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Some of my Republican friends tell me Michigan is a doubtful State. In 1932 they did not admit that much. Right up to election day they claimed this Commonwealth as doomed and destined to be in the Hoover column. You know and I know what happened then. The people of this State marched up to the polls and registered their faith in Franklin D. Roosevelt. When the votes were counted the Democratic candidate had a majority of more than 180,000.

I am not so blind a partisan as to insist that all who voted in this State 4 years ago were enrolled in my party. No; here, as elsewhere, Republicans and Independents and Progressives, who had only the slightest tie with either of the great parties, joined forces—not because our candidate was a Democrat, but because they saw in him the only hope there was to get away from a regime that had demonstrated its utter incompetence to deal with the terrific problems incident to a depression.

The opposition party had been in power for 12 years, during nearly all of which time they had not only the Chief Executive but both Houses of Congress. They could have put through any sort of legislation they wished. They could have done all the things that Franklin D. Roosevelt has done if their President had the courage, the desire for service to the general public, and the ability to perceive what was bound to come.

I think you must agree with me when I say that it would have been a very much easier job to have prevented the Hoover panic than it was to check it and turn the tide after that great disaster was upon us in full force.

Take a single simple instance: Does anybody believe that if the former President had grappled with the banking situation as firmly and as intelligently as the present President did, the economic disaster would have been as acute as it was? The stock market crash that inaugurated the panic was in the fall of 1929. That shook the banks. Tempted by the opportunities, hundreds of banks had rushed their depositors' money to Wall Street, to be loaned to brokers carrying stocks on margin. It should not have taken two and a half years to learn that many of the banks were in a desperate state. As a matter of fact it did not. Failure after failure heralded the gruesome intelligence. They toppled and fell at the rate of 30 to 40 a week. At the end of June 1932, one huge institution, presided over by an ex-president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, sent its midnight demand to Washington for a $90,000,000 loan.

I remember the date because the Democratic national convention was then in progress and the streets of Chicago were blocked by the multitude that was making the run on that and other banks. We are still trying to collect that loan, incidentally.

There was nothing to prevent President Hoover from taking the steps that President Roosevelt took on the very day of his inauguration.

But, reasoned the administration then in power, including Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, to shut up the banks, while the good were separated from the bad, would have precipitated the panic. Suppose that to be true? Letting bankrupt banks remain open only deferred the inevitable day, and practically every 24 hours saw one or more of the depositories folding up, and taking to destruction business firms and individuals whose funds were in their keeping.

Would it not have been infinitely better to have faced the situation at any time during these 2½ years, with courage, resolution, and care for the interests of the depositors, than to have permitted things to drift while some of our great financiers, themselves perfectly cognizant of what was bound to happen, looked out for themselves while the people who trusted them were ruined?

So far from precipitating disaster, the bank holiday checked the panic, and restored confidence, because the people saw that there was an administration in power that had their interests in mind. The bank holiday was the first step upward that this country had seen in 2½ distressing years.

And what have we now? Ex-President Hoover tells us in his speeches that he had the depression stopped at the very period of the Chicago banking incident to which I have referred. Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, with his own particular air of authority, warns the country that unless we go back to the system and the political control that marked the period of hideous economic failure, that chaos is just around the corner—the same corner, I presume, we heard so much about 4 or 5 years ago—the corner around which prosperity coyly lurked, according to this same regime.

Michigan a doubtful State! I can tell you one thing, at least, about which it has no doubts, and that is the difference between things as they are and things as they were under the previous administration.

Nor do I question where Michigan stands this year on the great political issue. That issue is just what it was 4 years ago. Shall you have a government in Washington that has demonstrated its ability and willingness to face every situation calmly and with the single purpose in mind of making and keeping this country one in which the ordinary average man and woman can live comfortably and make his or her own way according to the abilities of the individual, or shall we go back to the system that meant great fortunes for those who had the Government's favor and penury for the great mass of our population?

You are being asked to believe—in this progressive section of the country, at least—that the Republican Party is purging itself of the old predatory spirit and that it means hereafter under new leaders to go forward in the path of advancement and care for the plain people.

Do you believe that fairy story?

You know how the Republican Party is being financed during the present campaign. Does it seem likely to you—a hard-headed practical people—that the Du Pont Liberty League, that collection of multimillionaires, and their satellite lawyers and paid propagandists, is going to back any program that would run counter to their own interests, habits, and special privileges?

This group that has turned every emergency that had to be faced by our country into an opportunity to pile up enormous fortunes is paying the bills of any and practically every real or pretended organization that announces it is against President Roosevelt. They do not even inquire what some of the fly-by-night outfits are based on. This was evidenced the other day, when President Sloan, of the General Motors Corporation—in which the Du Ponts have the largest holdings—had to explain how has name came to appear among the contributors to the sentinels of something or other, which had for its cardinal principle the incitement of religious prejudice against a large element of our population. He said he had not known that this was an anti-Jewish vehicle and promised not to give it any more money. He chipped in there simply because the sentinels said they were anti-Roosevelt. The other conspicuous figures of the League, whose names turned up on the lists of this and other propaganda rackets that were too raw to be fathered by the regular Republican organization, probably took no more pains to investigate the class and caliber of the beneficiaries of their subscriptions than did Mr. Sloan.

You know how great and how sincere would be the support that a real opponent of the principle of the greatest good for the richest combinations would get from that group. What could he expect from that element of our population which in turn fought against the enactment of the antitrust laws, the income tax, the Federal Reserve banks, and every other enactment having for its purpose the curbing of exploitation and monopoly?

We do not yet know just what Republican figure will be put up to oppose Franklin D. Roosevelt next November. From present indications it appears probable it will be a gentleman of whom none of you had even heard a little more than a year ago.

Talk about reckless experiments in Government, which is one of our critics' favorite charges against the administration! Could there be a more perilous experiment than putting the complex and highly delicate control of our Government into the hands of a man destitute of experience and devoid of practice in national, still less in international, matters?

You knew Roosevelt. He had been in public life from early manhood as a member of the New York Legislature. He had been part of the Woodrow Wilson administration. He had twice been an eminently successful Governor of the most populous State in the Union. Responsibility was nothing new to him. The problems of administration he had encountered in almost every form.

What do you know about the individual who now appears as the most probable candidate of the minority party?

True, he is being exalted by the antiadministration press. If we accept this version, we have been entertaining in obscurity a genius in government; another Lincoln, with dashes of Coolidge in his composition. I think all of us who have any familiarity with politics are cognizant of the process of building up the commonplace into the remarkable. This gentleman may be all his boosters present him as being, but he is nearly 50 years old, and it would be something new if he possessed all the magnificent qualities of administration, all the knowledge of public questions, all the nobie attributes with which his champions endow him, without his fame getting beyond the borders of his own State. I believe he made a moderate fortune in the oil business, though his biographers say he was educated as a lawyer, but success in oil is not generally regarded as particularly fitting a man for the Presidency.

I am not, of course, in possession of exact knowledge of why the Republican Party chooses to put him on a pedestal, but if I were permitted to guess, I would be inclined to believe it was because he was elected Governor of a typical prairie State, that has usually been Republican, and that the Du Pont Liberty League crowd is less afraid of him than it is of more widely known, and more experienced statesmen who have been mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination.

It is assuming that he is to be the candidate against Mr. Roosevelt that impels me to smile at the thought of Michigan as a doubtful State. I do not think that even Kansas is a doubtful State if the competition is to be as I have surmised.

The real question to be decided next November is simply if the Roosevelt administration has given the majority of the people of this country a better chance for the good things of life than they had when it came into power. Whether the President has been reasonably successful in meeting the stupendous problems that confronted him. I do not mean that he has foreseen everything, or that he may not have made some mistakes. What I do mean is that he tackled his job courageously, sincerely, and industriously, and because of him the country is in a vastly better condition than it was.

I have no time to deal with such absurdities as that he has assumed despotic power or sought to be a dictator; that he is bent on making this a Socialist or Communist or Fascist government; that he seeks to take the profit motive out of business. These things are merely campaign tommyrot. Perhaps the greatest success he has made is in improving business. Indeed one of the criticisms of his enemies is that, while restoring the ledger balances of business to the black after they had been so long in the red, he has failed to completely wipe out unemployment and do away with the relief rolls. In other words, they would imply that he has been more tender and helpful to business than to the mass of the people. That, of course, is as ridiculous as the other.

Let me support what I say by quoting from one of your own town newspapers. The Grand Rapids Herald does not like us any more, but 3 years ago, before the virus of a political campaign got to working, it had this to say editorially:

"Complaint is made that the Democrats propose to make Roosevelt a dictator but we refuse to be alarmed. Congress had its chance and failed. A dictator whose powers are absolutely only in the field of economy can do no harm and may do much good."

This was just before Mr. Roosevelt took office. This same paper at that time bristled with head-lines such as "Live Stock Values Reach Low Mark", and "Business in Arms for Bank Relief" and similar expressions of dismay at the economic condition of the country.

Let us jump a year in the pages of this same newspaper—to March 6, 1934 to be exact—and we read an editorial:

"One year ago the country was suffering an acute attack of nerves. Today confidence has been, in a large measure, restored. * * * Looking back the President has reason for pride. He has steadied the nerves of the country and has imparted to its people some part of the confidence which seems never to desert him."

Of course, this was 2 years before a campaign year. This newspaper's editorials do not sound that way now, even though the paper itself shows the return of prosperity. When the first editorial quoted was printed the Herald was running a meager 10 pages ordinarily and 30 pages on Sunday. Today, thanks to plenty of advertising, it runs 14 pages on week days and 50 pages on Sunday. I'm glad it is doing so well, for a paying newspaper means a prosperous community.

This paper no longer cheers the President editorially but it is unable to get away from the effect of what the President has accomplished on its business pages. Likewise the Grand Rapids Press headlined at the beginning of this year: "New era for furniture." Editorially it said early this year (1936): "Prospects for increased business in the furniture industry have been bright for months. * * * Employment prospects at the factories are the brightest since the outset of the depression."

Throughout the State your newspapers tell the same story. From the Lansing Journal we learn that "State bank deposits gain $105,000,000 in past year."

The Detroit News tells us "business expansion indicated by figures."

The Flint Journal tells us "Buick sales best in years."

The Detroit Free Press publishes that "power sales, auto output, and employment figures register good increases."

And incidentally the good people of Michigan were able to buy 203,000 new automobiles in 1935 whereas they bought only 66,000 in 1932.

I was very happy to read in the newspapers this morning the announcement that my very good friend, Walter P. Chrysler, a great American and a great industrialist, had made the announcement of an increase of from five to six million dollars in the yearly wages of all his employees. This is just another evidence of increasing prosperity brought about through the efforts of President Roosevelt's administration. It is my belief that this is the forerunner of other announcements of a like character in many fields of business activity.

What do you suppose brought all this about? According to the income-tax figures your people paid $40,000,000 more this year than in 1933. That translated means that their incomes are up about $800,000,000.

Your farmers' incomes are up about $20,000,000. Your pay rolls show nearly twice as many people at work in Michigan as there were in 1933. How did it all happen?

Did the circumstance that the Government sent about $957,000,000 into this State have anything to do with starting business to going again? Not that this much was dispensed in Federal charity. Seven hundred millions came to you as loans, insured by the security of your properties. Incidentally, 30,000 or 40,000 farms were saved from mortgage foreclosure; and twice as many homes. That money will all come back to the Treasury, a fact worth keeping in mind when you read those alarmist stories about the vastness of the national debt and the Treasury deficit.

Was the expenditure of forty-odd millions of dollars in the C. C. C. camps, without its effect on bringing Michigan back in the direction of prosperity? Did the keeping of thousands of your boys out of the ranks of the workless by putting them to cleaning up your woods, decreasing the forest-fire peril, guarding your rivers from floods, and preserving your farms from having the soil washed away, play any part in helping this great State? Or were these things mere boondoggling, waste of public funds, and wanton extravagance?

You know the answers to these questions. You know that no modern President has done a big job more bravely, efficiently, and honestly, than Franklin D. Roosevelt has performed the stupendous task to which you set him.

You know that the job is by no means finished, and that if prosperity is to be made stable and anywhere near complete, he is the man to do it, and there must be no interruption to the great work.

Michigan a doubtful State? Well, I guess not!

FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION—STATEMENT BY STEWART M'DONALD

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a statement by Stewart McDonald, Administrator, on the achievements of the Federal Housing Administration.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The Federal Housing Administration launched the Modernization Credit Insurance Plan, a temporary recovery measure, in August 1934. The Mutual Mortgage Insurance Plan, a permanent measure, was placed in active operation during the spring of 1935, when the States had paved the way with necessary amendments to their laws. Today, within less than 2 years of operation under the National Housing Act, the total business transacted under the two plans, representing more than 1,125,000 individual loans, amounts to $828,000,000, and during next August should pass the billion mark.

It should be borne in mind that the money advanced under the Federal Housing Administration program is all private capital. The Administration makes no loans—it merely reinforces the tie between the borrower and the lender by providing credit insurance for loans meeting certain required conditions. Thus far, the confidence of the Government in the willingness and capacity of its citizens to meet such obligations has been fully justified, as the claims for losses under the insurance plans have been very small.

MODERNIZATION CREDIT INSURANCE PLAN

The modernization credit insurance plan gave new heart to the whole recovery movement by unlocking sources of credit in practically every city, town, and county. At the time the National Housing Act was passed less than 1 percent of the banks were either organized or prepared to make personal loans based on character and income of the type necessary to make the act function properly. Now banks that have made insured modernization loans represent over 85 percent of the total banking resources of the country. In all more than 6,000 banks, building-and-loan associations, finance companies, and other institutions have participated actively in making loans under the plan.

More than 3,000 local better-housing committees and other voluntary agencies were stirred into action because of the credit that was made available, and have generated total modernization work estimated at $1,500,000,000. As a result of these activities millions of our people are now living in improved homes and thousands of wage earners in the durable-goods industries—which were the hardest hit by the depression—have received jobs or have had steadier work and bigger pay checks.

The progress of the modernization credit insurance plan is shown by the following tables:

MUTUAL MORTGAGE INSURANCE

Mutual mortgage insurance is now firmly tied into the financial fabric of the Nation through the amended laws of 47 States and through the amendments that have been made to the National Banking Act and other Federal laws. Financial institutions are finding that mortgage insurance, through the means which it provides for distributing the burden of losses that may arise from time to time, has substantially broadened the scope of conservative home-mortgage lending, just as fire insurance had already done in times past.

Improved techniques of appraisal and of analyzing mortgage risks have been developed as an inherent part of the mutual mortgage insurance system. These methods are applied by the thoroughly trained professional underwriting staff of the Federal Housing Administration, and provide a primary protection to both borrowers and lenders as well as the Administration itself. The protection afforded lenders and borrowers is thus enhanced beyond the direct benefits provided by the presence of the mutual mortgage insurance fund.

Within less than a year's operation of the plan, home-mortgage credit, which had been frozen almost solid for several years, was made generally available to home owners on the most attractive terms in the history of the Nation.

Fomerly home owners, in order to obtain as much as 80 percent of the value, were often obliged to seek junior loans and were thus at the mercy of second-mortgage sharks. Now, however, one insured loan up to 80 percent of the appraised value may be obtained, and for a term up to 20 years, at a lower interest rate than formerly prevailed in many States for highly restricted short-term loans.

Mutual mortgage insurance provides for a free flow of mortgage funds from centers of supply into communities where funds are normally scarce. It has effected a reduction in mortgage financing charges for large sections of the country, due to the uniform interest rate established by the Administration. Thus in several States where home-mortgage interest rates averaged about 8 percent, or even higher, the Administration has insured loans amounting to many millions of dollars at an interest rate of 5 percent, plus one-half of 1 percent service charge and the mortgage-insurance premium.

There can be no dispute as to the need for improvement in the mortgage lending system of the country, nor of the timeliness of the mutual mortgage insurance plan as a response to that need. The shortcomings of the old system need no recital. It financed extensive overselling of houses at inflated values, to borrowers unable to pay for them; further, first-mortgage lenders who apparently operated conservatively, frequently acted as parties to home-financing transactions in which the second mortgages involved exorbitant charges. There were, of course, many institutions that made fully amortized mortgages, usually ranging from 7 to 12 years in duration, and for amounts up to 60 to 75 percent of the appraised value. However, in many areas such amortized mortgages involved substantially as high charges and as onerous terms in other respects as a combination of a first and a second mortgage. A large proportion of mortgages were for relatively short terms and were not amortized; hence the coming of the depression led to wholesale embarrassment on the part of numerous lending institutions, for their could not, or would not, because of shrinking values, renew the old mortgages and borrowers were not in a position to make lump-sum curtailments. Hence, many institutions found home mortgages a frozen asset.

Now, on the other hand, the insured home mortgage is being constantly amortized, it is readily salable, under ordinary conditions, and it is also discountable at Federal home-loan banks, as well as being in part usable as collateral for advances at Federal Reserve banks.

The old system again failed to function properly during the period of deflation when a temporary wave of overcaution resulted in making reasonable credit unobtainable for many prudent prospective home owners whose support would have meant much to the home real-estate market.

The load placed upon the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to take over approximately $3,000,000,000 worth of home mortgages, representing a million properties, testified to the magnitude of the break-down.

Increases in population and in the number of families, together with the present deficit in housing, are bound to result in a large revival in home-building activity during the next few years. It is of incalculable importance to the Nation that the major mistakes of the past be avoided in financing this program. The mutual mortgage insurance system is exerting a powerful influence in the right direction. It is helping to raise home-building standards, including the proper lay-out and financing of new subdivisions, site planning, intelligent design, adequate standards for materials, and good workmanship throughout. It helps to bring the conservative buyer into the market by giving him adequate credit at reasonable terms. It discourages financing of borrowers who attempt to buy beyond their means, and the exorbitant financing charges that frequently went with such transactions. It encourages each home owner to make a sound purchase within his means.

The progress of the mutual mortgage insurance plan is shown in the following tables of mortgages accepted for insurance each month; i. e., the mortgages which the administration commits itself to insure. In the case of new construction, the actual insurance is not in effect until the building operations are complete, and the home owner begins payment of the insurance premium.

The application of the mutual mortgage insurance plan to large-scale housing projects is a most promising phase of the program, for the financing of apartments and other rental quarters often has been of an unsound character. There has been a reluctance of responsible lenders to make high-percentage loans, particularly for large projects where the amounts tied up are considerable; most of the largest rental projects in the past were for families of high incomes, and many of them were financed through misleading appeals to small investors. Through its power to insure mortgages on large-scale housing developments for persons of small income where the owner is a limited dividend corporation, the Federal Housing Administration is encouraging private capital to enter the field. Particular emphasis is given to the matter of sound planning and financing, and to responsible, efficient management.

To date 21 projects involving a total cost of nearly $42,000,000 and mortgages amounting to $33,000,000 have been approved and commitments to insure mortgages have been issued. In addition, proposals are under consideration for insurance of underlying mortgages amounting to $104,000,000 on 52 projects, all of which have undergone preliminary examination. They range in amount from mortgages of around $100,000 up to $10,000,000, the limit allowed by the law, with the average around $2,000,000. Additional applications indicate the possibility of construction running into several hundred million dollars per year.

ENDORSEMENTS OF PROGRAM

The activities of the Federal Housing Administration have received the most whole-hearted endorsement from groups having widely varying interests. For example, a report approved by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at its latest annual meeting stated:

"The elimination of the second mortgage by the mutual insurance of first mortgages up to 80 percent of the value of the property is an experiment which is worthy of further trial. Accompanied as it is with the assumption of a contingent liability on the part of the Government, there are reasons to believe that this experiment will become an increasingly important factor in the next 2 years in the recovery of small-house construction. The plan definitely reduces the costs of home ownership to the consumer or purchaser who is not in a position to make a down payment of more than 20 percent; that is, to the buyer who ordinarily would need a second mortgage in order to acquire a home. Since second-mortgage financing facilities are not at present generally available, the plan provides an immediate means of obtaining such funds as a part of a single mortgage."

Again, the president of the American Bankers' Association, Mr. Robert V. Fleming, stated to a group of bankers:

"I desire to call your attention to first-mortgage amortized loans on real estate which can be made under the provisions of title II of the National Housing Act. This type of loan is particularly desirable, as there is no industry which can do more to stimulate employment and help in the stability of the country than the construction of homes. Furthermore, title II loans assist in making unimproved real estate liquid, thus supplying an additional purchasing power. I believe the campaign of education which is being carried on in connection with the provisions of the National Housing Act as to the principles of amortization and standardization of appraisals will be most helpful."

A prominent building and loan association official stated:

"The Federal Housing Administration loan is really the 1935 model of the building and loan mortgage. * * * Our association is well satisfied with the reception of the Federal Housing Administration insured mortgage plan by the prospective borrowers. We intend to take just as many loans on this plan as our funds will permit. Our association is quite willing to make loans on the 20-year plan backed up by the Federal insurance giving further protection to the investments of its savings shareholders."

Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a message addressed "to the men and women of labor" has stated:

"The American Federation of Labor, ever anxious to provide employment for the workers and to improve the conditions under which they and their dependents live and labor, unequivocally endorsed the program of the Federal Housing Administration in its recent convention in San Francisco.

"The Federal Housing Administration has now made effective those provisions of the National Housing Act under which loans for new construction and the purchase of existing homes may be insured, thereby making possible the freeing of billions of money so long withheld from the building industry on terms fair to the borrower and safe to the lender, and opening the door of employment to millions long idle.

"In conformity with the action of the San Francisco convention, I now urge all of our people to get squarely behind the Federal Housing Administration and the building trades in their efforts to revive building and to provide better and healthier housing under these provisions of the National Housing Act.

"The ramifications of the better-housing program are almost infinite. Directly the millions employed in building and in the production and transportation of building materials will benefit. Indirectly those normally engaged in the production and sale of all types of goods and in services will benefit.

"The building dollar is a busy dollar. It is not 'hidden in a bush' or buried in a vault. From the pay envelope it speedily finds its way into the purchase of clothing, of food, of the 1,001 things and services we all require or wish in our daily lives. In turn it makes it possible for those producing, transporting, and selling these goods and services to satisfy their own wants and needs and give employment to others."

Such comments have their parallel in many hundreds of commendatory editorials coming from practically all sections of the daily and periodical press.

CONCLUSION

The rise in residential building which has been so marked during the past 12 months could not have proceeded as it has without the constructive help of the mutual mortgage insurance plan. There was an increase of 172 percent in the dollar amount of residential building permits in 1935 over 1934, and a further increase of 142 percent during the first 4 months of 1936 over the same months in 1935.

Reports of shortages in skilled building-trades labor have been received from many points in different regions of the country. In one city after another housing has come out of reverse and once again is moving forward toward better living standards.

In concrete terms, hundreds of thousands of families are buying or building homes this year, or are refinancing their present homes at lower cost, because they can obtain credit safely and on more reasonable terms than ever before. They are achieving their aspirations for better homes in which to live and to raise their children, and they are able to do it because of the insured mortgage system.

The resulting home building is furnishing a powerful stimulus to recovery in business and employment, and is rightly regarded as holding unique possibilities as a force for continued prosperity in the future. The good work must be pressed vigorously on. The present housing deficit means that there is lost ground to be made up, and demands for new housing, including rental projects, will crowd in faster than we realize with each further step in the recovery of employment. There must be no let-up, no relaxation of effort in the movement to establish home financing and the financing of large-scale rental projects on a thoroughly sound basis. It is unthinkable that the Nation should fall behind when the groundwork for advance has been laid so ably through the far-seeing action of Congress in creating the Federal Housing Administration.

INTERNAL REVENUE TAXATION

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 12395, the revenue bill, there being, of course, no purpose to press for consideration of the bill tonight.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, is that the revenue bill?

Mr. GEORGE. The revenue bill.

Mr. McNARY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 12395) to provide revenue, equalize taxation, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with amendments.

MINORITY VIEWS ON TAX BILL—SUPREME COURT OPINION IN CASE OF KOSHLAND AGAINST HELVERING

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire to file, for the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and myself, from the Committee on Finance, the views of the minority on the tax bill, being the bill (H. R. 12395) to provide revenue, equalize taxation, and for other purposes. I desire to ask, if it is necessary to do so, that the views of the minority be printed with the majority report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I desire to make a similar request on my own account. I ask leave to file minority views, and ask that they be published with the report of the majority.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask that there be printed in the RECORD the minority views submitted by the Senator from Alabama and myself on the tax bill; and, following that, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the RECORD the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Koshland against Helvering, delivered May 18, 1936, which I think will be of interest in connection with this whole tax discussion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The minority views and decision of the Supreme Court are as follows:

MINORITY REPORT ON H. R. 12395

Although we voted to report H. R. 12395 to the Senate, we did so for the purpose of bringing it before this body for discussion and action. We are opposed to the measure in its present form and herewith submit some of our reasons for this opposition.

The President's message asking for additional revenue suggested that the additional amount he deemed necessary at this time might be raised by enacting the proper legislation to prevent tax avoidance, and that this object could be accomplished by imposing a tax on undistributed corporation profits. A tax on undistributed corporation profits must be considered in the light of the fact that it presents a double aspect as to prospective effects.

(a) If corporate profits should be retained by the corporation, the corporate tax would be increased, thereby bringing additional revenue to the Government.

(b) If the imposition of the tax caused a larger distribution of corporate profits, this would increase the amount of income received by individual stockholders. Since all plans contemplate imposing the normal tax on dividends received by individuals, an additional distribution of corporate profits would increase the aggregate amount received by the Government from individual income-tax payers in the higher income-tax brackets.

Let us consider now the effect of the present corporate tax system, the proposal submitted by a part of the Finance Committee, and the principle of taxing undistributed corporate profits as advocated by the President.

Under our present tax system we lay an income tax of 12½ to 15 percent upon the annual profits of corporations. We also impose a graduated income tax upon individuals ranging from 4 to 75 percent. The major portion of America's trade, commerce, and finance is transacted through the medium of corporations. The tax system, therefore, as it relates to corporate profits and individual profits, can function in such manner as to work a gross injustice to a major proportion of individual corporate stockholders and the public and at the same time bestow an unwarranted privilege upon another group of stockholders. This can be readily seen when it is remembered that the individual income-tax rate of those in the higher income-tax brackets may be six times as much as the rate of tax on corporation profits. It is also true that the corporation tax rate may be as much as four times the rate of tax on a stockholder of the corporation who is in the lower individual income-tax bracket.

From this simple statement it is clear that it is decidedly to the interest of individual corporate stockholders in the high income-tax brackets not to receive their share of annual corporate profits into their individual income. They prefer that the corporations should pay a flat corporate rate, whether that rate be 15 or 18 percent, and retain the profit in the corporate treasury rather than to have the profits distributed to these individuals, where they would be compelled to pay an individual tax rate of from 50 to 75 percent of the profits. Thus we find the high income-tax individuals prompted by the most powerful self-interest to have corporate profits remain in the corporate treasury and thus save themselves a large amount of taxes.

Evidence before the Senate Finance Committee showed that approximately 90 percent of all corporate business in the United States is done by 10 percent of the corporations. This 10 percent of the corporations constitutes the smallest number, but their far-flung interests extend into every corner of our country. It is well known that these large corporations doing 90 percent of the corporate business of the Nation are actually controlled by a very small group of stockholders. While there are thousands of small stockholders in these vast corporate enterprises, it is common knowledge that these small stockholders vote by proxy, if they vote at all. They have nothing whatever to do with shaping the policies of these large corporations, either with reference to dividends or anything else. Perhaps not once in 10,000 times do these small stockholders even know the names of the controlling groups manipulating the corporate profits. As the corporate system actually works in this country, these small stockholders, who are chiefly in the lower income-tax brackets, most frequently have their rights to dividends passed on by these stockholders who are in the higher income-tax brackets, who have working control of the corporation, and who are prompted by the strongest motives to manipulate these corporate profits so that they will not have to pay individual income taxes on them.

By this simple device of retaining corporate profits unnecessarily there has evolved the most stupendous tax avoidance in our history. It is proper to state, however, that it is practically impossible to prove that this retention was not within the law. According to the report of the Treasury Department, made after careful study, the United States Government will lose more than $600,000,000 during the taxable year of 1937 if Congress permits this unfair and unjust system to continue.

In other words, by amending the law in such way as to require men in the higher income-tax brackets to pay their taxes on the same square and honest basis as men who do not draw profits from corporations, these particularly favored persons will be required to pay $600,000,000 in additional taxes on individual income.

EFFECT OF COMMITTEE BILL

Since the majority report recommends an increase of a flat tax of 3 percent on corporations it is proper to consider the effect it will have on this situation. The committee bill providing for an increased flat corporate rate does not lessen the unjust result of this evil practice. On the contrary, it exaggerates the injustice. It strikes a wholly unnecessary and deadly blow at many of the 90 percent of small corporate structures now struggling to compete with the larger corporations so well financed with funds often selfishly withheld from their small stockholders. This increased flat corporate rate of the committee bill adds to the actual tax laid upon the corporate profits and thus is an additional tax burden of 3 percent on the gains of the hundreds of thousands of small corporation stockholders in the lower individual brackets. Thus we find the small stockholders, who are in the 4-percent income-tax bracket, whose corporate profits are taxed 18 percent by the committee bill instead of 15 percent, as under the present existing law. We are opposed to adding this heavy tax burden to more than 200,000 small corporations, and thus, also, increasing the burden of tax upon thousands of individuals, small stockholders, and taxpayers, in general, until we first attempt by legislation to collect the more than $600,000,000 of individual income taxes which those in the higher individual income-tax brackets now escape.

We believe that the small income taxpayers and the small corporations, are unjustly treated by the present tax law and would be more unjustly treated by the committee proposal. Recent history has shown that many who enjoy the largest incomes and who make the most profits, do not, in many instances, pay the most income taxes, because they are able to avoid them under our present corporate tax system.

This was illustrated recently when the country was astonished to know that one of its wealthiest citizens had not paid a dollar of income tax in a year. The corporate device so frequently used for tax avoidance, which we have heretofore outlined, aided materially in bringing about this indefensible situation. The committee's bill, which would increase the flat corporate rate 3 percent upon all corporations and which would impose a 7-percent flat rate upon undistributed profits and 4-percent increase upon dividends received by stockholders, will result in unnecessarily accentuating and aggravating existing tax injustices. A graphic picture of the law as it operates under the present method, as it would operate under the committee's bill, and as it would operate if corporate profits were distributed in line with the President's suggestion, is shown below. In this illustration it is assumed that two individuals own stock in the same corporation, and that their part of the corporate earnings for the year is $1,000 each. The individual numbered (1) falls in the 4-percent individual income-tax bracket, and no. (2) in each instance falls in the 75-percent income-tax bracket. These illustrations would produce a similar result, if other figures had been selected, although the differences would not be so great.

UNDER EXISTING LAW

Corporate profit of individual	Corporate tax on this profit at present rate if undistributed and tax paid by the corporation	Income tax for individual if dividends distributed and tax paid by the individual
(1) $1,000	$150.00	$40.00
(2) $1,000	$150.00	$750.00

UNDER SENATE COMMITTEE'S BILL

(1) $1,000	$237.40	$40.00
(2) $1,000	$237.40	$750.00

It will be observed from the above illustration that under the Senate committee's bill the stockholder in the individual 4-percent-tax bracket has an additional tax placed upon his part of the retained corporate earnings of $87.40 on each $1,000 of corporate profits. It is also noted that under the committee's bill the stockholder in the 75-percent income-tax bracket would still avoid the payment of more than $500 of individual income taxes, if his $1,000 profit should be retained in the corporate treasury instead of being distributed to him in dividends. It is clearly seen from this illustration that the committee's bill would aggravate the existing injustice to the small stockholders and small taxpayers.

As a matter of fact, we believe that the Treasury experts are correct in their conclusion that the committee's bill will not provide any effective incentive for the reasonable distribution of dividends. While the corporation would be subjected to an increased tax of 7 percent on undistributed profits, it is also true that the committee's bill adds 4 percent on the normal tax of the individual where these dividends are distributed to the individual stockholders. This means that if all the corporate profits should be distributed the corporation would not pay the 7-percent penalty, but the individual would pay a 4-percent tax on the dividends. The net incentive, therefore, is a 3-percent tax on undistributed profits. Such a penalty will not cause the controlling group in the higher income-tax brackets to declare dividends, because it is too much to expect that men will deliberately take action that increases their own individual income tax up as much as 500 percent. As a matter of fact, the net result of the passage of the committee's bill will be an ostensible increase of tax upon corporations, but in reality it amounts to an indefensible increase in the tax on thousands of small corporations and small corporate stockholders, while at the same time the committee's bill perpetuates the evils of a tax system under which the largest income beneficiaries in America avoid their fair proportion of tax.

OUR PROPOSAL

We are in full accord with the objective of the House bill to stop the tax avoidance through the corporate device. We believe, however, that the rate schedules provided in the House bill are too complex and too complicated. We suggest, therefore, as a substitute for the House rates on undistributed profits, and as a substitute for the proposal of the Senate Committee, a simple and easily understandable schedule of corporate tax rates. Since we believe there is no justification at the present time for an arbitrary flat increase of 3 percent on corporation taxes when such an increase will fall heavily on thousands of small struggling corporations, we propose to retain the present flat graduated corporation rates of 12½ percent to 15 percent. We propose a plan in line with the President's suggestion, which, according to Treasury estimates, will obtain substantially the same revenue as the increased flat corporation rate proposed by the committee with its 7-percent surplus tax. While our proposal, according to Treasury estimates, will raise $502,000,000; while the corporate tax plan of the committee, according to Treasury estimates, will raise $522,000,000, our proposal will not, as does the committee bill, fall with crushing force upon the small corporations and the small taxpayers. It will place a fairer burden of taxes upon the higher income group who have been heretofore escaping from their just burden, and who will continue to escape if the bill reported by the committee is adopted. Our proposal is as follows:

1. Exempt the first $15,000 of adjusted net income from the undistributed profits tax. Our proposal will therefore permit 90 percent of all of the corporations of the country making $15,000 or less, to retain all of their profits free from the undistributed profits tax.

2. In addition to the present corporation tax, impose no additional tax upon the first 20 percent of corporate adjusted net income.

3. Impose 20 percent tax on that part of the undistributed adjusted net income in excess of 20 percent and less than 40 percent of such income.

4. Impose 30 percent tax on the remainder of the undistributed net income.

5. Enact the same provision as appears in the House bill for permitting the corporation to comply with outstanding written agreements which prevent a distribution of dividends.

6. Specifically provide that there shall be no undistributed profits tax on stock dividends which are taxable income for the individual recipient because the stock "gives the stockholder an interest different from that which his former stockholdings represented."

Under the opinion of the Supreme Court in Koshland v. Helvering, decided May 18, 1936, the Supreme Court decided that stock dividends represented taxable income where they give "the stockholder an interest different from that which his former stockholdings represented." It is, therefore, beyond any question of doubt, that under our proposal, corporations would be able to retain all money profits needed for carrying on their business without any additional corporate tax. If the exemption of the first 20 percent of profits, and the exemption as to outstanding dividend contracts, were not sufficient to protect the interest of the corporation, it could declare stock dividends of such a nature as to be taxable income in the hands of the individual stockholders without paying additional corporate tax. It cannot be argued that under our proposal corporations would be unable to discharge their obligations or meet business conditions and requirements for expansion.

Under our proposal the Government of the United States would be able to collect a large part of the more than $600,000,000 in taxes which the most prosperous financial group in the Nation will inevitably escape and avoid if the corporate tax law remains unchanged or if the Senate committee's bill becomes the law. Our proposal therefore would simply require this group so greatly favored at present to bear their proper proportion of taxes as a result of benefits accruing to them from their share of corporate profits. Our proposal would advance toward the goal of equalizing tax burdens and of requiring an individual to pay a similar rate of tax upon profits accrued from corporation investments as other individuals are now compelled to pay on profits accrued from noncorporate investments.

We do not here consider at any length the uses to which the higher income groups who control large corporate surpluses have employed these surpluses for their own advantage and to the distinct disadvantage of the small stockholders and the public in general. It is well known that these closely controlled surpluses have been availed of for stock-market manipulation to the advantage of the same group that avoided individual taxes by withholding dividends. It is common knowledge that at the height of the stock-market boom the gambling funds of the Street were replenished from these closely controlled corporate surpluses.

It is clear that if we will tax the income, in the form of corporate profits, of this higher income-tax group which is now avoiding the higher individual-income taxes, we need not impose further burdens in this bill on small corporations and upon individuals who are now paying their just share of taxes. We cannot follow the recommendations of the majority, which imposes additional tax burdens on those individuals now paying their fair share of taxes, until we first make a conscientious effort to place a just tax burden on those who today are escaping their share of taxes by retaining more than $600,000,000 annually which in all equity they owe to the Government in taxes.

Just one example of many possible illustrations will show the enormity and injustice of this tax avoidance. A certain corporation made more than $6,000,000 net income in one year. This corporation paid Federal taxes that were approximately $700,000. If the profits had been declared out in dividends, so as to be taxable in the hands of stockholders, one stockholder of this corporation would have paid the Government more than three and a half million dollars in additional individual income taxes. In other words, the graduated individual income-tax brackets for this individual and numerous others are but "paper brackets", and unless and until these "paper brackets" for the favored few become real brackets we consider it unjustifiable to raise the individual income taxes of those who now pay their full share of taxes.

Instances like this could be multiplied. It is typical of the tax avoidances of those who are the most prosperous. The corporate device is now being used to a large extent as nothing more or less than a scheme through which the higher individual income-tax brackets are avoided. The committee bill would permit many persons to continue to escape the payment of just taxes as did the individual in the above case. Evidence before the committee shows that other individuals will escape taxes in this manner at a cost to the Government and an enrichment to themselves of more than $600,000,000. We cannot recommend a bill which provides for legalized continuation of such an unjust system. The existing law and the committee bill are unfair to the small corporations and to the men and women who now pay their fair share of income taxes without the benefit of this device which brings about such widespread and wholesale avoidance of higher individual taxes. Our proposal, if adopted, would collect the $600,000,000 of taxes now being avoided by this privileged group.

Supreme Court of the United States. No. 774. October term, 1935. Corinne S. Koshland, petitioner, v. Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue. On writ of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. May 18, 1936

Mr. Justice Roberts delivered the opinion of the Court.

The writ of certiorari was granted in this case to resolve a conflict between the decision below[1] and one by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.[2]

The question is whether, under the Revenue Acts of 1926 and 1928, a taxpayer who purchases cumulative nonvoting preferred shares of a corporation upon which a dividend is subsequently paid in common voting shares, must, upon a sale or other disposition of the preferred shares, apportion their cost between preferred and common for the purpose of determining gain or loss.

The petitioner, in 1924 and 1926, purchased preferred stock of Columbia Steel Corporation. The company's articles of incorporation provided that holders of preferred stock should receive annual dividends of $7 a share in cash or, at the company's option, one share of common stock for each share of preferred. Dividends on the preferred were to be paid in full before any could be paid on the common; the common had voting rights, the preferred none. The preferred was redeemable at $105 per share, plus accrued dividends; and upon dissolution or liquidation was entitled to preferential payment of $100 per share, plus accrued dividends, and no more. The common alone was entitled in such event to the assets of the corporation remaining after payment of the preferred.

In each of the years 1925 to 1928, inclusive, the company had a surplus sufficient to pay the preferred dividends in cash, but elected to pay them in common stock. The petitioner received, in each of those years, shares of common stock as dividends on her preferred. In 1930 the corporation redeemed its preferred stock at $105 per share. In computing the profit realized by the petitioner the Commissioner allocated to the common stock so received, in each instance, a proportionate amount of the cost of the preferred stock. He thereby decreased the resulting cost basis per share and increased the gain. The Board of Tax Appeals reversed holding that the dividends were taxable income, were not stock dividends within the meaning of the Revenue Acts,[3] and their receipt did not reduce the cost basis of the preferred stock. The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the Board and approved the Commissioner's action.

The petitioner contends, first, that the dividends she received were not stock dividends exempted from taxation by the revenue acts; and, secondly, if exempted, they were none the less income and cannot be treated as returns of capital in computing capital gain or loss. The respondent answers that the distributions were stock dividends because made in the capital stock of the corporation and come within the plain meaning of the provisions exempting stock dividends from income tax; accordingly, the Treasury regulations have consistently and continuously treated them as returns of capital and required the original cost to be apportioned between the shares originally acquired and those distributed as dividends to obtain the cost basis for the calculation of gain or loss. We hold that the dividends were income and may not be treated as returns of capital.

The Revenue Act of 1913 imposed an income tax on dividends.[4] In Towne v. Eisner (245 U. S. 418), it was held that where a corporation declared a dividend on its common stock, in the form of common stock, the dividend was not income within the intendment of the act. The Revenue Act of 1916 provided that a stock dividend should be considered income to the amount of its cash value.[5] In Eisener v. Macomber (252 U. S. 189), it was decided that a dividend in the corporation's common stock paid to the then common-stock holders, was not income within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment, and therefore the effort to tax such dividends exceeded the power granted by the amendment. It was said that such a dividend was not income because, by its payment, no severance of corporate assets was accomplished and the preexisting proportionate interests of the stockholders remained unaltered. After the decision the Treasury revoked regulations to the effect that a dividend paid in the corporation's stock is income and issued amended regulations, broadly phrased, to exempt all income in the form of stock dividends, whether the dividend shares be of the same class as those theretofore held by the stockholder or of a different class, and prescribing the method of allocating the original cost as between the old and the new stock for purposes of calculating gain or loss upon realization. Subsequently Congress adopted the Revenue Act of 1921 which provided, in section 201 (d): "A stock dividend shall not be subject to tax * * *."[6] The reason for the exemption was the decision in Eisner v. Macomber, supra. The reports of both the House and the Senate committees dealing with the bill state that the act "modifies the definition of dividends in existing law by exempting stock dividends from the income tax as required by the decision of the Supreme Court in Eisner v. Macomber (252 U. S. 189)."[7]

Although Eisner against Macomber affected only the taxation of dividends declared in the same stock as that presently held by the taxpayer, the Treasury gave the decision a broader interpretation which Congress followed in the act of 1921. Soon after the passage of that act, this Court pointed out the distinction between a stock dividend which worked no change in the corporate entity, the same interest in the same corporation being represented after the distribution by more shares of precisely the same character, and such a dividend where there had either been changes of corporate identity or a change in the nature of the shares issued as dividends whereby the proportional interest of the stockholder after the distribution was essentially different from his former interest.[8] Nevertheless, the successive statutes and Treasury regulations respecting taxation of stock dividends remained unaltered.[9] We give great weight to an administrative interpretation long and consistently followed, particularly when the Congress, presumably with that construction in mind, has reenacted the statute without change.[10] The question here, however, is not merely of our adopting the administrative construction but whether it should be adopted if in effect it converts an income tax into a capital levy.

We are dealing solely with an income-tax act. Under our decisions the payment of a dividend of new common shares, conferring no different rights or interests than did the old—the new certificates, plus the old, representing the same proportionate interest in the net assets of the corporation as did the old—does not constitute the receipt of income by the stockholder. On the other hand, where a stock dividend gives the stockholder an interest different from that which his former stock holdings represented he receives income. The latter type of dividend is taxable as income under the sixteenth amendment. Whether Congress has taxed it as of the time of its receipt, is immaterial for present purposes.

The relevant capital gains provisions of the Revenue Act of 1928 are section 111 (a):

"* * * the gain from the sale or other disposition of property shall be the excess of the amount realized therefrom over the basis provided in section 113" * * *.[11] and section 113:

"The basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property acquired after February 28, 1913, shall be the cost of such property;" * * * (with exceptions having no relevancy here).[12]

The property disposed of was the petitioner's preferred stock. In plain terms the statute directs the subtraction of its cost from the proceeds of its redemption, if the latter sum be the greater. But we are told that Treasury Regulations[13] long in force require an allocation of the original cost between the preferred stock purchased and the common stock received as dividend. And it is said that while no provision of the statute authorizes a specific regulation respecting this matter, the general power conferred by the law to make appropriate regulations comprehends the subject. Where the act uses ambiguous terms, or is of doubtful construction, a clarifying regulation or one indicating the method of its application to specific cases not only is permissible but is to be given great weight by the courts. And the same principle governs where the statute merely expresses a general rule and invests the Secretary of the Treasury with authority to promulgate regulations appropriate to its enforcement. But where, as in this case, the provisions of the act are unambiguous, and its directions specific, there is no power to amend it by regulation.[14] Congress having clearly and specifically declared that in taxing income arising from capital gain the cost of the asset disposed of shall be the measure of the income, the Secretary of the Treasury is without power by regulatory amendment to add a provision that income derived from the capital assets shall be used to reduce cost.

The judgment is reversed.

Mr. Justice Stone and Mr. Justice Cardozo are of the opinion that the judgment should be affirmed.

The meaning of the act of Congress exempting stock dividends from taxation as income at the time of distribution has had a practical construction through administrative action and legislative acquiescence. Even though the meaning may have been uncertain in the beginning, it has now become fixed in accordance with long-continued practice. (Morrissey v. Commissioner, 296 U. S. 344, 355; Helvering v. Minnesota Tea Co. (296 U. S. 378, 384). This is not denied in the opinion of the Court. Congress did not intend, however, when it refused to tax the newly acquired shares as income in praesenti to exclude them from taxation in futuro if disposed of at a profit. A tax upon a gainful use either of capital or of income, when the gain is fully realized, is a true tax upon income and not a capital levy. The question is merely one as to how the profit shall be computed. Following the analogy of Miles v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore (259 U. S. 247, 253), the cost of all the shares is properly distributed between the investment and its accretions, between the old shares and the new. The regulations so provide. EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting several nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the first nomination in order on the calendar.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of A. Miles Pratt, of New Orleans, to be collector of customs, customs collection district no. 20, with headquarters at New Orleans, La.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Justin W. Macklin, of Ohio, to be First Assistant Commissioner of Patents.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Henry Van Arsdale, of New York, to be Assistant Commissioner of Patents.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Floyd J. Porter, of New York, to be Examiner in Chief, United States Patent Office.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that nominations of postmasters on the calendar be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the calendar.

RECESS

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 7 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Tuesday, June 2, 1936, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 1, 1936

FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION

Claude L. Draper, of Wyoming, to be a member of the Federal Power Commission for the term expiring June 22, 1941. (Reappointment.)

BOARD OF TAX APPEALS

Arthur J. Mellott, of Kansas, to be a member of the Board of Tax Appeals for a term of 12 years from June 2, 1936. (Reappointment.)

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE

Mrs. Belle D. Byrne of Bismarck, N. Dak., to be register of the land office at Bismarck, vice Chris Bertsch, resigned.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The following-named persons to be passed assistant sanitary engineers in the United States Public Health Service, to take effect from dates of oath:

John J. Bloomfield
Judson L. Roberston, Jr.
Charles T. Wright

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 1, 1936

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1936

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

God be merciful unto us and bless us, and cause His face to shine upon us; that Thy way may be known upon earth, Thy saving health among all nations. Let the people praise Thee, O God; let all the people praise Thee. O let the nations be glad and sing for joy; for Thou shalt judge the people righteously and govern the nations upon earth. Let the people praise Thee, O God; let all the people praise Thee; then shall the earth yield her increase, and God, even our own God, shall bless us. God shall bless us, and all the ends of the earth shall fear him. We pray in the name of our Savior. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, May 29, 1936, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 6772. An act to amend the Grain Futures Act to prevent and remove obstructions and burdens upon interstate commerce in grains and other commodities by regulating transactions therein on commodity futures exchanges, to limit or abolish short selling, to curb manipulation, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11418) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes", nos. 85 and 86.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 4622. An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the Alabama State Bridge Corporation to construct, maintain, and operate bridges across the Tennessee, Tombigbee, Warrior, Alabama, and Coosa Rivers, within the State of Alabama", approved May 26, 1928.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 267) entitled "An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal property by reason of catastrophes of nature."

The message also announced that the Senate had appointed Mr. CLARK and Mr. LA FOLLETTE additional members of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9185) entitled "An act to insure the collection of the revenue on intoxicating liquor, to provide for the more efficient and economical administration and enforcement of the laws relating to the taxation of intoxicating liquor, and for other purposes."

WILLIAM WALLER RUCKER

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, it is with real sorrow that I announce the death of William Waller Rucker, at his home in Keytesville, Chariton County, Mo., on Saturday, May 30. Judge Rucker was for 24 consecutive years an honored and influential Member of the National House of Representatives, representing the Second Missouri Congressional District, which I now have the privilege of representing. Mr. Rucker was born February 1, 1855.

Following his retirement at the end of the Sixty-seventh Congress, Judge Rucker returned to his home, where he had extensive farming interests, and to which he had since devoted his time. No district has ever had in Congress a more faithful representative than was Mr. Rucker. He was true to every trust. Popular with his colleagues, he had a wide influence in legislative matters. His judgment was excellent and friends consulted him with confidence. His popularity in Congress was exceeded only by that among his constituents, to whom he gave his very best. No commission was too small for him to attend to with the greatest care, and none too big for him to undertake and carry through to a successful conclusion. The old Second Missouri District was fortunate in being represented for many years by one so capable, conscientious, and courteous as was Mr. Rucker.

Only 2 weeks ago it was my privilege to visit for an hour with this grand old man at his home. I was saddened, though, as we sat there and faced the sunset, by the realization that he was rapidly approaching the sunset of his long and useful life; that soon, in all human probability, he would be called upon to travel, as each of us must, alone down the long lane that leads to the Father's house. The journey came, though, sooner than I had anticipated. I shall always count it a pleasure and a privilege to have had this last talk with one to whom I am so greatly indebted, to one who left his impress deep on the State of his adoption, and whose death has brought genuine sorrow to so many.

MEMORIAL DAY ADDRESS

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise my remarks and to include therein a short Memorial Day address I delivered to Spanish-American War veterans on Memorial Day.

The SPEAKER. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address which I delivered on Memorial Day, at Cedar Hill Cemetery, Washington, D. C., 1936:

It is springtime. The fragrance and beauty of flowers fill the land. The flag is at half mast. The loom is hushed, and the wheels of industry stand still. It is Memorial Day; a day on which to rekindle the fires of patriotism and love for the land we call home. It is a day of memories.

With heads bowed reverently and respectfully, Americans gather today on the hillsides, in the valleys, and on the plains to honor the Nation's dead. A grateful people pause to perpetuate the memory and recall the unselfish devotion and sacrifice of those who died that the Nation might live.

Yonder across the river on the inspiring dome of the Nation's Capitol, kissed by the sun of day and watched by the stars at night, floats the unconquered flag of the country they preserved for us.

When Jefferson penned the Declaration of Independence he included in that sacred document the thought that men were endowed with certain inalienable rights. Those rights were not granted by man. We do not inherit them from our ancestors; neither can we pass them on to our posterity. We are endowed with them at birth by the Great Creator. They come down to us from Heaven. They belong to us and die with us. Those rights are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. They are interwoven in the fabric of our Government.

The American ideals which we have inherited are lofty ones. They mean courage in the face of difficulty, loyalty to truth, sympathy, and courtesy, industry, and reverence to God and to our fellow men. These have been American ideals since the Mayflower crossed the sea.

The principles for which the embattled farmers left their plows on an April morning in the long ago, when reduced to a single thought can be couched in one sentence: "They fought and died to lift the weights from the shoulders of men."

Your fathers in offering all they could give in the great War between the States were ready to yield life freely in order that those principles might be preserved. We who now live in this day and generation, who have inherited the country which our ancestors nobly won and gave to us, may not fully appreciate the sacred heritage which we have received. There is a tendency today on the part of some of the people to forget that which was so nobly achieved and preserved for us and take up the "isms", the imagined glories and benefits of some foreign notions of government.

I, for one, hope this Republic will never grow old enough to forget the sacrifices and devotion of the men who wore the uniform of the American soldier in preserving intact every human principle of right and justice included in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. If that time should ever come in this land when we can no longer remember what the men who followed the flag did for us, then the Republic no longer deserves to remain. Our form of government may not be perfect, but with all its faults, it stands out as the last and best hope of man—freedom to rule himself.

The Government, through Congress, makes laws to rule the people; but the people made the Constitution of the United States to rule their Government. Therefore, any assault on the fundamental law of the land is a direct attack on the rights of the people themselves—rights which were born in death and baptized in the blood of the Nation's soldiers.

To those who would destroy this Government by force and bloodshed from within, let us, the living, join in the silent appeal of the dead, and declare that America needs none but those who appreciate her institutions and cherish the rights and liberties they enjoy under them.

To all others we invite attention to the fact that all ports of departure are open, and if there be any who are dissatisfied with life beneath the Stars and Stripes, the most beautiful flag ever to float beneath an azure sky, then let them return to the land whence they came and no longer remain here to desecrate the soil purchased by the blood of free men.

These dead, in memory of whom we are gathered, are sacred to us. They will remain sacred as long as the generations honor the supreme virtures of manhood.

These honored dead were patriots. Though dead we are inspired and ennobled by the memory of their deeds. Their dust remains an inspiration to their countrymen.

Patriotism consists of doing one's utmost to make one's own country strong, glorious, and honorable among the nations of the world in order that it may thereby best benefit all humanity and serve the race.

Under our form of government every citizen is a sovereign, and no one cares to wear a crown. We are what we are because we have accomplished. Without these honored dead it would not be so. America is not a creed, not a dream, but a breathing actuality with a magnificent past and we hope with a great future still unborn.

Who is an American? He who looks with pride upon the history which his fathers have written by their heroic deeds, who accepts with gratitude the inheritance which they have bequeathed to him, and who highly resolves to preserve that inheritance unimpaired and pass it on to his descendants, enlarged and enriched, is a true American, be his birth or parentage what it may.

War under any flag means destruction. If these noble dead could stand among us this morning their prayer would be one of peace and good will among men as taught by the white-souled Man of Galilee 2,000 years ago. They died to bring peace to their fellowmen. All the progress of the world has not solved the heinous crime of war. Happy that day, my fellow countrymen:

"When the war drums throb no longer
And the battle flags are furled,
In the parliament of man,
The federation of the world."

A government like ours is the best example in the world as a force for peace and justice. We have no greater security against war than the Constitution of the United States and we will act wisely in this country if we move slowly before we malign the Magna Charta of our liberties. The underlying idea of our Government does not need change, for truth is always unchanging and eternal. What was so when the morning stars sang together will be so when time shall be no more.

St. Paul said, "I am a citizen of no mean country." The Romans challenged the world with the slogan, "I am a Roman." Let no prouder boast fall from our lips than for us to say "I am an American." No man has a right to demand a better government than that toward which he is willing to contribute.

The fathers who founded this Government understood so clearly the full meaning of our great triumph of independence and knew so well the long struggle of those who had fought for liberty that they were unwilling to commit the full measure of their blood-bought rights unto the keeping of any man. So when they formed the Union, before they entrusted any power to any man, they first set down in a written constitution, beyond the profane touch of any official hand, those fundamental rights which neither Congress nor the President could alter or abridge; and for further assurance they established the judicial power to lay the restraining hand upon Congress and to nullify and to make of no effect any act which ran counter to the Constitution. Thus was the light of liberty set upon a hill and so far their blessed rays have spread over the earth since that day that the oppressed of all the world have sought our shores.

When our majestic Capitol was built in Washington, it was proposed to put a liberty cap upon the figure which was to surmount the dome. Jefferson Davis, then Secretary of War, objected because the liberty cap worn by the Liberati in Rome had a significance too narrow to measure our conception of liberty. The classic sculptures of the ancients were studied to find an appropriate suggestion.

At last the goddess of the classics was agreed upon, but with a headdress borrowed from the American Indian in commemoration of his courage in his losing fight for his happy hunting grounds, rather than the ferocious quality of his warriors. Then there was placed in her hands a sword and a new character was given to the goddess of the old Celestials and they called her "Armed Liberty." Whether she is to remain there depends upon us. The soldiers of the Republic have always done their duty to keep her there. May the people be inspired by their example to do likewise.

When the struggle to preserve for our children the constitutional system under which we have so long prospered comes, may the historian of the future who records the part we play in that contest be able to set down opposite our names, "They also kept the faith."

"God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle line;
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine;
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget."

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The Chair may state that there are pending a number of special orders which will take about 70 minutes, as well as a matter of unfinished business, the vote on the Jefferson Memorial bill. Except for corrections of the RECORD we will take up matters that have priority.

THOMAS JEFFERSON MEMORIAL

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill (H. R. 12027), to authorize the execution of plans for a permanent memorial to Thomas Jefferson.

The question was taken; and there were on a division (demanded by Mr. SNELL)—ayes 73, noes 18.

So the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, following the address of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. NELSON], I may address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday next immediately after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. DALY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that following the address of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY], I may address the House for 3 minutes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, last week special orders were passed which will take up 70 minutes, and this morning about 15 additional minutes' time has been added by way of further special orders. This is the regular Consent Calendar day and many Members on the floor have bills on this calendar they are anxious to dispose of. I shall be compelled to object to any further requests for time this morning.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALY], asks unanimous consent to address the House for 3 minutes following the address of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE PROMISED LAND

Mr. LARRABEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech delivered by Hon. Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. LARRABEE. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address delivered before the United Palestine Appeal, at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on May 24, by Hon. Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior:

In man's struggle to civilize himself his inveterate and implacable foe has been ignorance—ignorance which from its noisome cave spawns cruelties, injustice, oppressions, prejudices, and intolerances, myriad in number and of infinite variety and form. Ignorance shackled the timid feet of prehistoric man as he ventured the first faltering step along the road toward enlightenment. Ignorance has forced us back time and again, even after we had firmly set out upon the path that, in our lucid moments, we sought to tread. Ignorance will continue to dog our footsteps to the end of time and will outpatience patience itself in waiting watchfully for opportunities to stir our latent prejudices, our corroding fears, and our all-too-easily stimulated hates.

Most frequently and quickly can this be done against those whom we regard as outlanders merely because they have differently colored skins or speak languages that we do not understand or worship according to beliefs that are alien to us. Although, intellectually, we know all too well the subtly sinister methods resorted to by ignorance to bring about discord, disunion, and disharmony; although from bitter experience we have learned that ignorance, more than all other physical and spiritual forces together, has been responsible for the injustices, the cruelties, and the savageries of mankind, nevertheless, we have so far failed to face it with that courage and will, without which we will continue to be its victims. Instead of letting in the light, we have opposed ignorance with ignorance, thus closing our eyes to the fact that when ignorance meets ignorance, ignorance cannot fail to win.

More than any other race of men that has ever lived, so far as history records or archeological researches have disclosed, has the Jew been the victim of an ignorance that has expressed itself in prejudice, persecution, intolerance, and hate. A race less generously endowed with courage would long ago have perished if called upon to endure half of the miseries that the Jew has stoically and philosophically withstood. Nor has the Jew been lacking in physical stamina of such a high order that he has been able to withstand hunger and thirst, the burning suns of the desert, and the freezing winds of the Arctic. Yet physical stamina he might have had in that measure which has not yet been vouchsafed to men of any other race, and still he would not have been able to survive the forces that throughout the ages have been unleashed to his destruction.

Above all else it has been the spiritual qualities of the Jew that have made it possible for him to survive trials and tribulations to which even the strongest body and the stoutest heart, lacking such spiritual qualities, would long since have succumbed. Time after time recurring tempests of bitter human passions have smashed and torn and battered until only the hardiest were able to survive. Looking back over the boundless sea of tossing, mountainous waves, upon the crests and in the troughs of which the peoples of the world from time to time have been thrown about or have floundered, one beholds the miracle of a single people savagely flung about whenever there was a storm, and time after time, apparently drowning, yet always in the end emerging with unimpaired vigor, ready and eager once more to resume the road leading to the promised land of the spirit.

How many nations have been born, have flowered, and then have died, the wisest historian would scarcely venture to answer. But throughout the colorful story of submerging and emerging peoples, one thread has been intricately interwoven, but never severed. Sometimes it was snarled; sometimes it was twisted and frayed almost beyond seeming in the hands of cruel and malevolent men, who sought to destroy the wonderful pattern which life was determined to save from them. Merged with other strands, at times it almost became lost. Yet, lost it never has been, and in the light of its sturdy survival who would be so bold as to predict that, come what may, it ever can be destroyed.

This strand, whose origin lies deeply hidden beyond the far horizon whence recorded history finally emerged, in these latter days stands out once again sharp and clear in the design of our slowly developing civilization. It is not important whether those early shepherds, who later were brought together by their common needs and their common aspirations, had a common origin or not. We do know that they regarded themselves as the descendants of a line of patriarchs who were half shepherd kings and half shepherd prophets. We know that in course of time a tribal organization came into being. There followed the selling of Joseph into Egypt and his spectacular rise into the foremost statesman of his age just in time to save from starvation, not only the momentarily grateful Egyptians, but his own kith and kin as well.

Then evil days befell during which the Jews continued to persevere in the development of those qualities of patience, of steadfast endeavor, and of adherence to their belief in one God, which distinguished them from all other peoples of their time, and which, above all else, was the granitic binder that held them together, steadfast in the faith that enabled them to endure and to conquer, to be submerged and to rise again, during the cruel centuries that lay ahead of them. At last throwing off the bondage of Egypt, during 40 years of wandering in the desert in search of the promised land, they had further tragic opportunity to develop to a still higher degree their great qualities of heart and spirit. Then in the promised land, having at last attained it after great travail, they built and maintained the outstanding civilization in the known world, a civilization that has profoundly influenced all succeeding ones and will continue to furnish the woof for the warp of the civilizations that are to come.

But, once again, just when it seemed that they had attained heights upon which they might dwell securely forever, they were brought face to face with the greatest tragedy in their history as a nation. As the result of schisms from within and of the pressure of covetous foes from without, Jerusalem fell and Palestine became for centuries merely a cherished memory to the Jews scattered in all parts of the civilized world.

Always have the Jews been a people of spiritual vision. It is their prophets and their holy men that they have revered throughout the ages—not warriors, not conquerors of foreign lands, not merchants nor bankers nor lawyers. They ever have had leaders of courageous vision to sustain their hopes when the road was the roughest and the night the darkest. The body of the Jew might be making bricks without straw for his oppressive taskmasters in Egypt, but his spirit was always projected toward the promised land. From the day when he was driven from Jerusalem, during all of those ages which, while murky even for those newer civilizations newly emerging from the barbarism of the great forests of Europe, were Stygian in their blackness for the friendless and the outcast Jew, was there mixed with his longing for the promised land that had been won and lost to him the unquenchable hope that it was still the promised land of the Jew of some future generation.

And just as the Jew, escaping finally from Egypt, after long years found his way to the promised land, so latterly the far-off descendants of this same people once again have retraced their steps to that same promised land. Here, indeed, is the fulfillment of the destiny of a people that has no parallel in history. And it is this destiny, this conquering of what seemed to be fate itself, which has brought us here tonight to acclaim what has already been accomplished toward the rehabilitation of the homeland of the Jew, while giving our encouragement and support to a movement which must not be permitted to fail.

With all of their vision the Jews would have failed to take even the farthest outpost of their objective if the social idealism which inspired him had not been supported by practical ability of a high order. It is inspiring to think of a people, scattered and comparatively few in numbers, undertaking a task that is without comparison in the history of the human race. It is even more inspiring to contemplate what has already been accomplished in Palestine and what is now taking place there. Despite what seemed to be insurmountable difficulties, notwithstanding misconceptions and misunderstandings that have developed from unforeseen circumstances or that have been deliberately created for the confusion of a great people intent upon doing a tremendous task, wonderful progress has been made. Despite a financial catastrophe that seemed to threaten the very foundations of our civilization, there is apparent no other disposition than to keep the hand to the plow until the soil has been turned clean and true to the very end of the furrow.

The purpose underlying the repossession of Palestine by the Jews was, of course, to provide a homeland for a people who, by stress of circumstances, had become nomads against their will; a people in whose hearts the hope had never become extinguished, however dim it grew at times, that a wandering and persecuted people would again, sometime or other, return home. Those who, with praiseworthy patience and vision, have made themselves responsible for the success of this unique and significant undertaking have encountered tremendous discouragements.

Men of lesser spirit would long ago have abandoned an enterprise that on many occasions must have seemed impossible of attainment. Yet always they have persevered, just as they will continue to persevere. They have been beset with problems of diplomacy, with problems of internal adjustments, with problems involving the most efficient development of Palestine, with problems of finance. Yet, despite all of these and other seemingly insuperable obstacles notwithstanding the fact that at times there has been far from unanimity even among Jews themselves, leaders who had the vision have persevered, with results that are no less heartening for the future than they are significant of the past.

I was amazed to learn that of the 300,000 Jews who have migrated from various countries, particularly in Europe, during the last 8 years, 162,000 have been admitted to Palestine. It was enlightening to me to learn that more than 60,000 were admitted there during the past year and that, given normal opportunities, another half million will knock on the doors during the next decade.

Those who are creating a home in Palestine are not only helping themselves; they are helping civilization. The world is so closely knit together now that we cannot say that that which is happening in one section will be without influence and effect in another. When we contemplate that the third of a million Jews who now inhabit that famous area have built more than 300 schools, that their hospitals are giving aid to all who apply, that the application of scientific methods to soil reclamation and to agriculture is producing marvelous results, that scholarship is being given a tremendous impetus by virtue of the establishment of that magnificent institution of higher learning on Mount Scopus, we cannot but believe that the effect of a liberal, advanced civilization in the new Palestine will react to the benefit of the whole world. I may say parenthetically that the members of the Department of the Interior are proud of the fact that it was our distinguished reclamation expert, the late Dr. Elwood Mead, who was head of a commission which made a report upon which the program of reclamation in Palestine has been based.

Like any other person of broad interest I have been fascinated to watch this activity in Palestine. From my office in the Interior Building in Washington I have frequently noted the construction of the new Department building. From a large hole in the ground there has risen a skeleton of steel around which the mortar and brick and stone are now being placed which will give character and graceful shape to the building. In a broad way I see in this Interior Building construction an analogy to the building of Palestine. For our project we were concerned with starting with a good and firm foundation. We selected the best steel, we were careful of our cement, we choose as workmen those who were competent to give the best results. And you, in building Palestine, are doing likewise. The foundation upon which you are now engaged must be well and firmly set and the framework upon which the completed homeland ultimately will rise must be solidly constructed by artisans who are both loyal and capable.

In this work, American Jewry has taken a leading part. That is as it should be. It seems to me that there is a form of self-taxation which every understanding and fair-minded person imposes upon himself in behalf of a good cause. Palestine is such a cause. Although the Jews in the United States are comparatively small in numbers, nevertheless they represent a much larger proportion of the wealth of the Nation. And by wealth I do not mean money alone. I refer rather to the important elements of education, industry, loyalty, integrity, and vision.

Certainly no cause confronting the Jews of the world is deserving of more sympathetic consideration than that of the reestablishment of the homeland. There is no inconsistency between that true Americanism which is bred of real understanding and patriotism and participation in the upbuilding of a Jewish homeland. Jews of America are giving their less fortunate brothers a new deal in Palestine, just as we Americans have been endeavoring in the last 3 years to give ourselves a new deal.

It seems to me that those who are devoting their energies to the reestablishment of Palestine must perceive a parallel between what they are trying to do and one of the efforts of our own administration. In the Jewish homeland you are seeking to provide a sanctuary where many of your race who might otherwise be engulfed in the struggle for existence may work and dwell in economic security. In our own land the Government in seeking, through Rural Resettlement and the housing division of the Public Works Administration, to establish social and economic cases where some of those who are having great difficulty in maintaining their economic footing may be given a new start on the road to success.

In rebuilding a Jewish civilization in the land where a great Jewish civilization ages ago held aloft the torch of learning and philosophy and religion, the hope may be voiced that you will construct it around a cornerstone of enduring granite hewed from the mine of true political freedom. Let not your spirit become embittered because for so long a time you have been the outstanding victims of intolerance, of the lust of the ignorant mob to offer up living sacrifices to its own ignorance, the objects of persecution and of religious bigotry.

I beg of you ever to have in mind that one of the curious phenomena of human nature is the disposition of the oppressed themselves, after they have achieved power in their turn, to use the instrumentalities of even greater oppression. Remember also that not only does a liberal government promise the greatest possible happiness and welfare for those who follow the majority in its thoughts and opinions, it is equally true that only under liberal government can minority groups prosper and thrive. The Jew knows well enough from his own story that only where there is enlightenment can there be peace and freedom.

We Americans pride ourselves on our freedom of press and speech, of assembly and of religion. We must never forget that not one of these can stand alone. If we encroach on one, we soon will limit or altogether destroy the others. There are active and malignant forces in our own Nation now which, while demanding liberty of one sort for themselves, ruthlessly would abridge a constitutional right that is precious to another. This must not be. Always in times of economic upheaval and social stress there is an accelerated tendency in some quarters to insist upon a limitation of the freedom of thought and expression on the part of others. The exponents of one idea would bind and crush those who cherish another. To permit that would be to undermine and ultimately destroy that which is most vital to our national unity and to the orderly progress of our civilization.

The Bill of Rights in our Constitution is for the protection of minorities. A majority needs no protection. Except when subjected to restraint, it is all powerful. It is the minority which requires to be safeguarded from the ruthlessness that sometimes possesses the majority and which is all too likely to possess it in that degree in which it is an overwhelming majority. All too frequently we have seen in this country the stirring up of a mob to wreak vengence on a helpless individual or a forlorn minority group. Even more dangerous, because more insidious and more persistent, is the more refined mob spirit that binds together witch hunting, character assassinating, atavistic superpatriots, whose congenital ignorance calls for all the tolerance and pity that we can muster. Because a man's race, his political beliefs, or his religion are unintelligible or displeasing to us we lynch him physically or spiritually, in total disregard of his natural or political rights or of our own obligations and responsibilities as citizens under the Constitution.

The history of America contains all too many disgraceful instances of suppressions and oppression; of tyrannies by the mob; of ruthless disregard of the rights of individuals and of minority groups, sometimes under the lash of a hydrophobic yellow press, oftentimes with the acquiescence, if not at the secret instigation of constituted authorities, such as to bring the blush of shame to the cheek of every true American who believes in the civil liberties that were written into our Constitution. But be it said to our credit that the record of our Nation is studded with incidents in which we, as a liberty-loving and tolerant people, have expressed our sympathy in behalf of oppressed minorities in other lands.

President Roosevelt was a true spokesman for the America that we love, when, in discussing our foreign policy in his message to Congress last January 3, he said:

"It is idle for us or for others to preach that the masses of the people who constitute those nations which are dominated by the twin spirits of autocracy and aggression are out of sympathy with their rulers, that they are allowed no opportunity to express themselves, that they would change things if they could.

"That, unfortunately, is not so clear. It might be true that the masses of the people in those nations would change the policies of their governments if they could be allowed full freedom, full access to the processes of democratic government as we understand them. But they do not have that access; lacking it, they follow blindly and fervently the lead of those who seek autocratic power. * * *

"They have therefore impatiently reverted to the old belief in the law of the sword or to the fantastic conception that they, and they alone, are chosen to fulfill a mission and that all the others among the billion and a half of human beings in the world must and shall learn from and be subject to them. * * *

"We have sought by every legitimate means to exert our moral influence against repression, against discrimination, against intolerance and autocracy, and in favor of freedom of expression, equality before the law, religious tolerance, and popular rule." * * *

It is my privilege to bring to you tonight a greeting from the President of the United States, expressing his interest in what you are trying to do. He has charged me to say to you who are an integral and valued element in the Nation, that he is distressed and disturbed by the reversion in certain parts of the world to days and deeds of an era which all enlightened people had long hoped would never return. It is his conviction that so long as minorities of the nations of the world are deprived of liberty of thought and religion, and the right to lead a normal, civilized life, there can be no true and permanent understanding between nations.

The President expresses through me to you, the representatives of a great and virile race, the hope that calmer and more dispassionate judgments will prevail, and asserts the belief that the Government of the United States, in carrying out the will of the people, will ever give watchful care to the minorities within its borders, and will maintain inviolate those vital rights that are guaranteed by the Constitution even to the most humble of our citizens.

CENTRAL VALLEY WATER PROJECT

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD at this point a letter from Mr. Edward Hyatt, State engineer of the State of California, answering certain assertions made on the floor by the gentleman from New York 2 or 3 days ago which pertained to the Central Valley water project.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I must object to that part of the gentleman's request to insert at this point in the RECORD. I think it is a bad practice. I must object to this part of the request.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection for just a moment?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; I shall insist upon my objection to that part of the gentleman's request to insert it at this point in the RECORD.

Mr. GEARHART. Then, Mr. Speaker, I modify my request to that extent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted by the unanimous consent of the House, I am including in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a letter which I today received from the Honorable Edward Hyatt, State engineer of the State of California, which relates to certain phases of the great Central Valley project in California.

My purpose in soliciting this letter from Mr. Hyatt and for asking its incorporation in the RECORD is to dispel certain doubt in respect to the attitude and professional opinions of this eminent engineer, doubt which has arisen as a consequence of certain assertions, astonishing to those Californians who heard them, that were made upon the floor of this House some few days ago by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

It seems quite unnecessary to comment upon Mr. Hyatt's professional standing or the esteem in which he is held throughout the West. Let it suffice to say that, among all of those who have down through the fastly multiplying years labored for the realization of this great project, no one is held in warmer affection nor are the professional opinions of anyone held in higher regard.

The letter follows:

WATER PROJECT AUTHORITY OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
Sacramento, Calif., June 1, 1936.

Hon. B. W. GEARHART,
Member of Congress, Ninth California District,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN GEARHART: In compliance with your request for a statement concerning the accuracy of statements attributed to the State engineer of California in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORDS of May 20 and May 29, in connection with Central Valley project of California, the following is submitted.

The CONGRESSIONAL RECORDS of May 20 and 29 have been examined. In the RECORD of May 20, on page 7639, the following statement occurs:

"Mr. TABER. Let us take the Central Valley project in California, the first item. That project is said by reclamation people to be subject to a cost of $170,000,000. I have in my hand a document issued by the State engineer of California, and on page 37 it is shown that the project will cost $683,000,000 before being completed."

This statement is clearly incorrect. The $683,000,000 figure quoted relates to the State water plan of California and not to the Central Valley project, two separate things. The Central Valley project is known and definite; it has been specifically described by a statute of the State of California, which was upheld at a referendum election; therefore, there can be no mistaking what the words "Central Valley project" mean. This act also limits the expense in connection with the project to $170,000,000, which is somewhat in excess of the engineering-cost estimates.

On pages 8325 and 8326 of the RECORD of May 29, Mr. GEARHEART made the statement that no definite plan had been offered for the saving of the parching lands of the upper San Joaquin other than through the utilization of some, if not all, of the units of the Central Valley project. Quotations follow:

"Mr. TABER. Does the gentleman recognize the State engineer of California as an authority? He has studied the project and has demonstrated it clearly in his report?"

"Mr. TABER. And he has said that what the gentleman has asked is not necessary."

This statement is likewise erroneous. Units of the Central Valley project are the only solution found for the saving of the lands suffering from water shortage in the upper San Joaquin Valley, since the necessary water is not available locally. This has been clearly stated in the reports of the State engineer dealing with the subject, and has been concurred in by Federal agencies who have investigated the problem. Friant Dam on the San Joaquin River and the Madera and Kern Canals are integral parts of the Central Valley project, as are the San Joaquin pumping system and the Kennett Reservoir in Sacramento Basin, all of these units are necessary to remedy the water-shortage conditions in the upper San Joaquin Valley.

With assurances of highest official and personal regard, I remain,

EDWARD HYATT,
State Engineer of California.

THE PROPOSED NEW TAX BILL

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address which I delivered over the National Broadcasting System from the National Capital at Washington, on May 29, 1936:

For the past few months the business world has been in a state of uncertainty as to what Congress would do with reference to the passage of a new tax bill. This uncertainty has been caused principally by the uncertainty which prevails in Congress itself. Will there be a tax bill and what will be its provisions is still uncertain. The morning papers indicate a bitter strife between the President, who is demanding the limit in taxation, and the members of his own party on the Senate Finance Committee, who are refusing to follow the dictates of the administration. A showdown came today when the Senate Finance Committee decided to disregard the orders of the President and to exercise their own judgment—in part, at least.

Early last January the President in his message to Congress assured the Nation that he saw no probable need for increased taxation, yet 2 months later he insisted that Congress should proceed immediately to the passage of a tax bill that would net the Government $1,137,000,000 in additional revenues. This was an urgent message, and the Ways and Means Committee of the House proceeded immediately to the task of bringing forth a bill in obedience to the orders of the President. The President demanded a new form of taxation by a levy upon the undivided profits of corporations. There was a wide division in the Ways and Means Committee, especially among the Democratic members themselves, as to how to meet this demand. For 6 weeks they wrestled with the problem. Troubled by doubts as to the wisdom of any tax bill at this time, and recognizing the impossibility of preparing a fair and scientific bill in a limited time and under pressure of administration spendthrifts, the House committee voted out a hodgepodge bill which was satisfactory to no one. The bill was opposed by the solid Republican membership on the committee. But under the lash of the administration this half-baked bill was forced through the House in short order and with little ceremony.

The Senate, although usually tractable and very responsive to the wishes of the administration, gagged at the unsound and unwise provisions of this bill and proceeded to rewrite it. According to the morning papers, the Finance Committee of the Senate, either from sheer exhaustion by reason of their long and tedious efforts or in abject surrender, were about ready to give up the ghost and to report out some sort of a bill that is certain to be unscientific, ill-prepared, and consequently unfair.

I should probably not be too harsh with these legislative committees, because their trouble is due solely to the fact that the administration had no tax program which would meet the test of consistency with any recognized taxation theories. The sole aim of the administration is to get its hands on great sums of money, without regard to the disastrous consequences to business, and for the sole purpose of carrying on its extravagant orgy of spending at least until the November election.

The levying of taxes in a great country such as ours is now almost a science. There is such correlation between all business that an unreasonable burden placed hurriedly upon any one branch may throw out of joint the whole business structure, with the result that the loss in other directions will be much greater than the tax collected.

There is no denying the fact that sooner or later we must embark upon a program that will provide for large additional tax levies. But I maintain that it is unwise to do so before and until the administration has shown a determination to curb the wasteful extravagant course it is now pursuing. At present our Federal Government is running behind at the rate of $15,000,000 every working day. Forty years ago the total cost of government was approximately $1,000,000 per day. The interest on the public debt now greatly exceeds the total cost of government 25 years ago.

This administration has increased taxes four times and the expenditures of the Government within that time have increased as follows:

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932, the cost of Government was $3,062,000,000.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, the cost of Government was $3,574,000,000.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, the cost of Government was $5,187,000,000.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, the cost of Government was $6,536,000,000.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, the cost of Government was $7,025,000,000.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, the cost of Government is estimated to be $8,612,000,000.

As long as the administration shows no inclination to keep its expenditures within receipts it will be unwise for the tax committees of Congress to assume the impossible burden of taking from disorganized and frightened businessmen and property owners the money necessary to match the easy and carefree expenditures of the National Government, whose mind is centered only on spending.

The bill today recommended by the Senate Finance Committee provides for an increase in the present corporation-tax rate of 12½ to 15 percent to 15½ to 18 percent, or an increase of 3 percent. Also a new tax of 7 percent on the undivided profits of corporations. Also a 1-percent increase in the surtaxes on individual incomes between $6,000 and $50,000. Also for the continuance without change of the present excess-profits and capital-stock taxes which the House bill would have repealed.

Instead of yielding a billion dollars per year as the President urged, it is likely that the new bill will not carry more than an increase of $500,000,000 per year. While this is a colossal sum, yet it is only enough to run the Government about 3 weeks at its present rate of spending.

This extravagance unless curbed is bound to lead to national bankruptcy. It is to lead to destructive inflation or to ruthless repudiation. A course of inflation will burst as every bubble must burst, and a course of deflation through repudiation will drag everybody and every business to destruction.

As I see it the only sensible course to pursue is to halt extravagant expenditure, and to do this in such a positive way as that it will carry conviction to the people of the country.

The President has deviated so far from his campaign promises and has changed his mind so conveniently since he has been in office that he can blame no one but himself if the people now are distrustful of his pledges.

I repeat that the only course out is a positive halting of expenditures so that the people of the country may definitely believe that a new course has been determined upon. When this is done business will revive to such an extent that the people will be more ready to assume the burden of paying the colossal debt under which the Government is now staggering.

Being a Republican I naturally think that this much-desired situation will not come about until a Republican administration is established in Washington. In 1920 our Government was then staggering under the greatest burden of debt that it had ever accumulated up to that time. The Republican administration assumed that debt courageously and inspired confidence in the American people, with the result that for 10 years the debt was reduced at the astounding rate of a billion dollars a year.

And during that time the rate of taxation was reduced several times, but the volume of taxes was increased with each reduction, because the business of the country increased and the confidence of the people in their Government was complete.

Let us restore confidence to the American people. To do this, those responsible for the operation of the Government must carry on so that the people will have confidence in them.

Let us end this reckless joyride of New Deal squandering.

Let us again recognize that thrift is a virtue.

THOMAS JEFFERSON MEMORIAL

Mr. MAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAIN. Mr. Speaker, on last Friday afternoon, when the majority leader made some remarks concerning the authorization for the construction of a memorial to Thomas Jefferson, to be erected in the city of Washington, his persuasive eloquence overcame the reservations and doubts which I then entertained as to the wisdom of such legislation at this particular juncture in our Nation's history.

I have been charmed and impressed by the diction and logic of the gentleman from Alabama on other occasions, but when he referred to his own father, the plans for the Lincoln Memorial and the participation of the Democratic Party in the consummation of those plans for the magnificent structure on the banks of the Potomac dedicated to Abraham Lincoln, I was carried along with the surge of patriotic pride that irresistibly rises in my breast a response to patriotic appeals clothed in choice language and framed in well-turned phrases. The gentleman from Alabama has added one more bit of sparkling oratory to the collection of literary gems with which he has adorned the RECORD during this session of Congress.

But, Mr. Speaker, during the period which has elapsed since the House adjourned on Friday, I have viewed the site upon which I am told the Commission expects to locate the proposed memorial. In my humble opinion the site is entirely unworthy of such a distinction.

In fact, sir, it is my opinion that a memorial costing $3,000,000 could not be effectively located or adequately landscaped on any vacant parcel of land in the vicinity of the Capitol without detracting from the beauty and effectiveness of public buildings and monuments already in existence. It would be most unfortunate, sir, if any part of the Archives Building should be put into eclipse by any building or monument in its immediate vicinity. The new super-super greasing palace of the Standard Oil Co. and the other glorified filling stations nearby have effectively precluded the possibility of any thoroughgoing beautification of Constitution Avenue. In fact, Mr. Speaker, on more mature thought, why should another expensive memorial be added to the very impressive group of monuments already existing in our Nation's Capital? Without attempting to detract one iota from the significance of the towering shaft erected in honor of Washington, nevertheless, I do not hesitate to assert that the simple, classic beauty of Mount Vernon is enshrined in the hearts of the American people in a manner that can never be approximated by any shaft of granite, no matter how stately or unique that structure may be.

The city of Washington was not the scene of the most notable of Jefferson's achievements. In fact, sir, as sometimes happens, in these latter days, so in the case of Jefferson, his accession to the Presidency did not bring the glow of satisfaction; but on the contrary there were the bruises of disillusionment. Thomas Jefferson was more influential in theory than he was impressive in practice. As President he did only that which any other good Republican of his day would have done. As a leader in thought and a shaper of political progress he stands unique and supreme in American history. His stature in Philadelphia, Richmond, or Charlottesville is infinitely greater than in Washington. His memorial should be erected where his figure bulks largest in his service to his country.

When Jefferson became President he no longer wielded the trenchant pen of a political crusader. The responsibilities and exigencies of the office cramped his style and thwarted his ideals. Let this monument, sir, be constructed in some spot already dedicated to the memory of Thomas Jefferson. In this city nothing can escape the benevolent but omnipresent shadow of General Washington. With the advantage of an exceptional location and because of surpassing beauty, the memorial to Lincoln has achieved distinction and acclaim. But I venture the assertion that the proposed memorial to Jefferson cannot attain a fair degree of attention or respect in this city already overadorned with monuments and statues that are obscured and rendered commonplace by their surroundings.

Moreover, Mr. Speaker, I cannot forget that the morning papers announce a new all-time peak for the national debt. Even though this is not the appropriation measure, nevertheless, an authorization of a project to cost $3,000,000 implies and assumes an ultimate expenditure of that amount, or more. And $3,000,000 is too much money to put into a project at this time that does not contribute in some recurring and continuous manner to the well-being and improvement of social and economic conditions.

Three million dollars, Mr. Speaker, would build and equip 10 school buildings designed for special education of youth comparable to the Ann J. Kellogg School, dedicated to the problems of special education in my home city of Battle Creek. Three million dollars would richly endow a school of government in connection with the university which Thomas Jefferson founded. When $3,000,000 are expended to honor the name of Thomas Jefferson, it is my opinion that those millions should be devoted to keeping the idealism of Jefferson a living, vital force throughout the length and breadth of our land. Carving on a marble surface in the city of Washington will not inscribe his name more deeply in the minds of the school children of the Nation.

Casting his figure in bronze, set on a pedestal in the District of Columbia, will not lengthen the shadow of Thomas Jefferson as it betokens the principles of religious liberty in America. Mr. Speaker, I submit that at this time we can do greater honor to the name and memory of Thomas Jefferson by observing and honoring the Constitution itself, rather than by planning to spend borrowed millions to add another ornament to the avenue in the city of Washington named after the Constitution. In the name of the principles established by Jefferson, let us beware of any procedure that may, in years to come, make the name of that avenue but a hollow mockery.

VETERANS, WORLD WAR, EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION ACT

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have until noon tomorrow to file minority views upon the bill (H. R. 12869) to liberalize the provisions of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, to effect uniform provisions in laws administered by the Veterans' Administration, to extend the Employees' Compensation Act with limitations to certain World War Veterans and other persons, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD a resolution passed by the Senate of the State of California on May 26, 1936, which relates to legislation pending before the Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. GEARHART]?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the ordinary practice is to file these resolutions and have them referred to in the RECORD, rather than set the resolution out in full. During the last session of Congress we had hundreds of these resolutions inserted in the RECORD. All Members get memorials from their respective legislatures. They are filed at the desk and referred to under the head of "Memorials" in the RECORD. For this reason I am compelled to object.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, this is a resolution to the Congress of the United States and the gentleman from California has a right to have it inserted in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] objected.

Under the special order for today the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH] for 15 minutes.

MONETARY LEGISLATION PASSED DURING THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I am not at this time going into an extended analysis of the monetary accomplishments of the present administration in the interest of the people. I do at this time, however, have in mind placing in concrete form the specific legislative acts passed during the administration which are in the public interest.

Each of these acts tends to withdraw the control of the people's money from private interests and place that control in the hands of Government agencies which represent all of the people.

For the convenience of the people of the United States, I have undertaken to list this legislation in concrete form and hope that this attempt will meet with the approval of the Congress and of the country.

The legislation to which I am calling your attention is as follows:

(1) All coins and currencies made legal tender: All coins and currencies of the United States including Federal Reserve notes heretofore or hereafter coined or issued have been made legal tender for all purposes, public and private. (Sec. 43 (b) (1) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act; Emergency Banking Act, sec. 2 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, sec. 462).)

(2) Circulating notes of national-bank associations abolished: By the expiration of the circulation privilege of United States bonds under section 29 of the act of July 2, 1932, and by the calling for redemption of 2-percent consols and Panama bonds, there are no bonds eligible for deposit as security for such circulating notes.

(3) Gold removed from domestic circulation: The Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to require the delivery to the Treasurer of the United States of all gold coin, bullion, and certificates, in return for other lawful money, by the Emergency Banking Act of 1933 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 248 (n)), Gold Reserve Act of 1934 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, sec. 443).

(4) Gold held in the Treasury in the form of bullion: No gold may be coined, and no gold coin may be paid out or delivered by the United States, and all gold coin withdrawn from circulation shall be formed into bars. (Gold Reserve Act of 1934, secs. 5 and 6 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, secs. 15b and 408a).)

(5) Contracts called for payment in gold weight prohibited: Provisions purporting to give the right to require payment in gold or a particular kind of coin or currency declared to be against public policy by the act of June 5, 1933 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, sec. 463).

(6) All contracts calling for payment in gold by weight were made dischargeable by payment in any coin or currency which is legal tender. (Act of June 5, 1933 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, sec. 463).)

(7) Sale of gold for industrial uses and for settlement of international balances: The Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, is authorized to prescribe conditions under which gold may be acquired and held or used for industrial purposes and for the settlement of international balances, and he is authorized to sell gold at home and abroad by sections 3 and 9 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, secs. 442 and 733).

(8) Expansion of the currency by issuance of silver certificates: The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue silver certificates by section 43 (b) (2) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, section 12 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, and section 5 of the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, sec. 821b (2) and sec. 405a).

(9) Expansion of the silver base for money: The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase silver so long as the proportion of silver stocks of the United States is less than one-fourth of the monetary value of the gold stock, by section 3 of the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, sec. 734a).

(10) Bank deposits guaranty: A system of bank deposits guaranty under the management of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was established by the Banking Act of 1933 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 264).

(11) Regulation of securities and exchange transactions: Substantial laws to regulate the sale of securities, transactions on the securities markets, and to prevent wild speculation arising from inflated credit, in the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, the Banking Act of 1933, and the Banking Act of 1935. Limitations on the extent of loans secured by stock and bond collateral in relation to capital and surplus of member banks of the Federal Reserve System, and limitations on loans secured by stocks or bonds of affiliates in relation to the capital and surplus, have been prescribed in such banking acts (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 248 (m) and sec. 371c).

(12) Banks prohibited from having security-selling affiliates: By section 20 of the Banking Act of 1933, as amended by the Banking Act of 1935, member banks of the Federal Reserve System were prohibited from being affiliated with any company engaged in the issuance, underwriting, or sale of stocks, bonds, or other securities (U. S. C., 1934, ed., title 12, sec. 377).

(13) Strengthening the Federal Reserve System: Title II of the Banking Act of 1935 provided for the reorganization of the executive control of the Federal Reserve System, establishing the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, with seven members.

(14) Increased control over Federal Reserve banks: Section 201 of the Banking Act of 1935 gave the Board of Governors the power to veto the election of the president of any Federal Reserve bank (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 341).

(15) Regulation of interest and discount rate of Federal Reserve banks: The Board of Governors has been given control of the interest and discount rates by sections 206 (b), 208, and 324 of the Banking Act of 1935. The Board of Governors is authorized to define the various kinds of deposits, payment of interest on demand deposits by member banks is prohibited, and the Board of Governors is authorized to limit by regulation the rate of interest payable by member banks on time and savings deposits (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, secs. 461 and 371). The discount rate of Federal Reserve banks is made subject to review and determination by the Board of Governors every 14 days, or oftener if deemed necessary by the board (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 357).

(16) Control of reserves to meet credit expansion: The Board of Governors may change the requirements as to reserves against deposits, with the power to raise the requirement up to not more than twice the requirement in force prior to the Banking Act of 1935, by section 207 of the Banking Act of 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 426b).

(17) Control of open-market operations and policies: Section 205 of the Banking Act of 1935 places the open-market operations of Federal Reserve banks under the control of the Board of Governors through the Federal Open Market Committee created by such section (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 263).

(18) Bank loans on real estate: The power of banks to make loans on improved real estate was expanded by sections 208 and 328 of the Banking Act of 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 371).

(19) Expansion of discount facilities of Federal Reserve banks: Section 9 of the Banking Act of 1933 and section 204 of the Banking Act of 1935 expanded the discount facilities of Reserve banks for the benefit of member banks (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 12, sec. 347 and sec. 347b).

(20) Use of public credit to relieve from effects of depression: Numerous acts enabling greater use of Government credit and numerous acts appropriating funds for relief of depression, unemployment, and distress. The amendment to the Second Liberty Bond Act of February 4, 1935, increased the limits of indebtedness which may be incurred by the issuance of bonds, Treasury notes, and other Government securities. The Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933; the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933; the Farm Credit Act of 1933; title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act, relating to public works, of June 16, 1933; the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933, passed May 12, 1933; the Emergency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, approved June 19, 1934; the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, approved April 8, 1935; and the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1936, are some of the acts involving the larger appropriations and expansions of Government credit.

I have an abiding conviction that if the present administration is continued in power by the action of the American people at the coming election in November, there will be undertaken directly the solution of the problem of "poverty in the midst of plenty." In other words, legislation will, in my opinion, be passed looking to the distribution of all the wanted goods and services which can be produced by all the people. If this legislation is successful it will result in the people of the United States getting in the neighborhood of $80,000,000,000 more in wanted goods and services than they are now receiving, with greater prosperity for every class and without taking from one to give to another.

MY DOG

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include the following address delivered by me before the Tenneva Field Trial Banquet, held at Hotel Bristol, Bristol, Va., on the night of April 27, 1936.

Inquire about the ownership of many things, and although the owner may be present, silence reigns. But inquire about the ownership of any dog, even the measliest, God-forsaken cur to be found, and although the owner may be as forsaken looking as his cur, he will straighten his shoulders, look you in the eye, and answer with pride in his voice, "He is my dog."

And so I am thinking today about "my dog" of the yesterdays of long ago.

They called him a cur, and by all man-made standards I reckon he properly fell in that class, and yet to me he was a thoroughbred to the manner born. I know that the blood of the great generals and war lords of dogdom coursed through his veins, because he was brave and courageous. I know that the blood of the stately matrons and royal ladies of dogdom was his heritage, because he was kind-hearted, tender, and compassionate. No; he wasn't a cur, but the legitimate heir to all the noble traits of all the good and brave dogs of the ages.

There were those who seemed to take a delight in commenting upon his personal appearance because he was in color what is known as a brindle, and his legs were not exactly straight, and his hair was more or less woolly, and his carriage was not what you would term regal, but they only saw a portion of Old Ned. He was white, clean white, inside.

And there were those who even found fault with his conduct and manners, because he would chase the cats through the house without stopping at the door to wipe his feet, scratch fleas in the presence of company, and purloin this, that, and the other when left alone with the cupboard, but you know Old Ned was only human. And, I pray, what red-blooded boy ever took time to wipe his feet when in a hurry to find his ball or fishing line; who ever had such respect for the proprieties of polite society as not to scratch in the presence of company around chigger time; or who ever refused, because of moral reasons, to take a piece of juicy pie or chocolate-covered cake that happened to be laying around and looking sorter lonesome? Yes; when it came to manners and conduct Old Ned was only a boy.

But in spite of his ancestry, in spite of his looks, in spite of his manners and conduct, Old Ned was a great pal and, above all, a great teacher.

We played together, we hunted together, we fished together, we went swimming together, we hoed corn together, went after the cows together, milked together, and, when mamma was not acting the part of the detective, slept together.

And many lessons that have stood me in hand I learned from Old Ned.

Though small of stature, bigness never frightened Old Ned. In defense of his rights he would fight anything, large or small, from a tomcat to a vicious bull. And I learned the lesson of courage from Old Ned.

Though ofttimes neglected and mistreated, nothing could come between our friendship or cause him to turn against his pal. And I learned the lesson of loyalty from Old Ned.

Though ofttimes he went without his meals or shivered through the cold winter night, there was never a whimper. And I learned the lesson of fortitude from Old Ned.

Ever appreciative of every act of kindness, he would express it in his doggish way by licking my face, or jumping up on me with his paws, or barking out words of love. And I learned the lesson of gratitude from Old Ned.

And then one day in the spring Old Ned, my dog, passed on. And over in the orchard under the June apple tree where we had often played and frolicked together, where we had often lay down and watched the clouds go by or listened to the music of the birds, I buried Old Ned and erected a marker over his grave, and that night a country boy sobbed himself to sleep with a petition upon his lips for the dog he loved.

Oh, it may be just a boyish dream, a fancy that found lodgment in my boyish mind, but somehow down through the years I have nurtured the belief that my dog had the spark of immortality, and that God just borrowed him for a season to gladden the heart of some lonesome little boy up there, and that Old Ned hasn't forgotten any more than I have forgotten, and that when I arrive one of the first to greet me will be Old Ned, who will run up, put his paws upon my breast as he did in the days of yore, look up with those knowing eyes, wag his tail, and bark out a greeting that I will understand.

And there in the presence of that heavenly throng, if the expressions on their faces indicate that they do not understand how Old Ned recognized the newcomer, I will not wait for them to ask, but with joy in my heart and pride in my voice I will answer, "He is my dog."

FRANCIS E. TOWNSEND

The SPEAKER. Under the special order for today the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Montana [Mr. MONAGHAN] for 10 minutes.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I must make what might be termed an ex-post-facto speech here this morning. I would have made this speech here last Friday had I been allowed the time, but as the man whose lawyer stated, "You should not be in jail", replied "But here I am." This often happens, and might be the case with Dr. Townsend. However, I believe that if the courts will look into the law there will be no such miscarriage of justice, even though there may have been a miscarriage of legislation in this House last Friday.

The purpose of the Constitution of the United States, and the Bill of Rights especially, was to preserve and safeguard first and foremost the citizen's individual rights, to keep him free from unreasonable search and seizure, and to prevent inquisitions against the individual. The right of Congress to investigate is only an implied right growing out of the general provision in the Constitution that the Congress shall have the authority to make all laws that are necessary for carrying into execution the expressed powers granted in the Constitution of the United States. Therefore the power to investigate is implied. It is not a real or express power.

The power to cite for contempt, therefore, is likewise an implied power, which has been construed and interpreted by the courts to exist merely to safeguard the rights and to preserve intact the legislative powers of the Congress of the United States. In order to legislate more properly the courts have permitted Congress to question witnesses to get information which might be necessary to properly enact laws, but the courts have constantly, consistently, and without exception held that the rights of a witness to refuse to answer questions when the scope of the congressional inquiry is exceeded is a real right which arises under the fourth and fifth amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

The resolution was, in my judgment, out of order, inasmuch as the investigating committee exceeded its legislative bounds. Plainly there could be no reason for such an investigation as that authorized by House Resolution 443 unless it were looking to and springing from the desire for legislation—either positive legislation or repeal legislation; that is, legislation for the enactment of pension legislation or for the repeal of existing pension legislation. There can be no question in the mind of anyone that the purpose of House Resolution 443 was not to get information to pass pension legislation but rather, if possible, to destroy the greatest single movement for the promotion of pension legislation in this country ever organized, the Townsend movement; and take a fine, upstanding citizen, whose greatness and whose conscientiousness and integrity exceed by far many of those who occupy seats in this body, and tear his character to pieces and thereby prevent passage of legislation which he sponsored.

The questions propounded during the course of the inquiry, which was set in motion by House Resolution 443, clearly showed that the investigating committee was an inquisitive, rather than a legislative, committee.

Let me give you a citation from the case of Seqmour v. The United States (77 Fed. at p. 580):

The limitation of power of investigation is that it must be germane to some matter concerning which the House conducting the investigation is about to act, whether such action be enactment of statutes or something else, and not a mere inquisition into the private affairs of the citizen.

In the case of McCracken v. Jurney (72 Fed. at p. 565), they cited Kilbourne against The United States as holding that "A witness rightfully may refuse to answer where the bounds of the power are exceeded or the questions are not pertinent to the matter under inquiry."

Also in the Marshall against Gordon case the Supreme Court—wherein a United States attorney wrote a very critical letter about the Judiciary Committee, which was trying him for nonfeasance and malfeasance in the Supreme Court—held that—

The proceedings concerning which the alleged contempt was committed were not impeachment proceedings; that, whether they were impeachment proceedings or not, the House was without power by its own action, as distinct from such action as might be taken under criminal laws, to arrest or punish for such acts as were committed by appellant.

And the opinion of the Court cited on page 115 of Jefferson's Manual expressly is:

No express power to punish for contempt was granted to the House of Representatives save the power to deal with contempts committed by its own Members.

In MacCracken against Jurney this same doctrine was expounded, and while the Court held in MacCracken against Jurney that the Congress had the power to cite MacCracken for contempt it did so upon the theory of self-preservation of the powers of Congress; that is, the power of Congress to legislate, using this language: That—

The legislative powers granted and secure their free exertion, and yet, at the same time, not substantially interfere with the great guaranties and limitations concerning the exertion of the power to criminally punish.

Let me distinguish the MacCracken against Jurney, McGrain against Daugherty from the instant case. In both these cases the contempt would have prevented a legislative act. In the instant case the action of Dr. Townsend in refusing to testify before the Bell House Investigating Committee was with no view to preventing pension legislation, but rather to prevent the committee from destroying pension legislation and movements for pension legislation in this country.

The power of Congress was clearly exceeded in the Townsend case. The witness was questioned on the receipt of a dollar from some widow, asking the good doctor what he had done with that dollar. What possible connection there can be between that transaction and information necessary for Congress to legislate is beyond my comprehension.

I rise, therefore, today, with the limited time at my disposal, which, thank God, I had previously obtained by unanimous consent, or I know I would never have been allowed to obtain it afterward, because it seems Congress does not want the country to know the true legal status of this situation—I have risen today and have taken time to look up all of the legal authorities in the matter. Unfortunately, I shall not have time to cite them all. I am going to ask unanimous consent, however, to put such of them as are necessary in the RECORD to prove the case in point.

It is clear to me, and it should be clear to anyone, that if we are going to preserve the Constitution of the United States intact we must destroy the power of any legislature to wage an inquisition into the affairs of a citizen.

In McGrain v. Daugherty (273 U. S. 137) it was argued that each House of Congress has power to conduct an investigation in aid of its legislative functions.

Each House of Congress has power to conduct an investigation in aid of its legislative functions, to compel attendance before it of witnesses, and the production of books and papers which may throw light upon the subject of inquiry; subject, of course, to protection against the invasion of such privileges as those against unreasonable searches and seizures, etc. This power is for the purpose of aiding each House more fitly to discharge its legislative duties.

In all cases where the power of the courts to punish for contempt was upheld the case was decided solely on whether or not the action of the witness was obstructing legislation and preventing the Congress from exercising a legislative function. The report of the committee which was read before the House of Representatives itself shows that the line of questioning to which the doctor was subjected and to which the members of the Townsend organization were subjected were such not as to glean information for a legislative purpose but for the purpose of discrediting, if possible, those men who were engaged in promoting pension legislation. The action of the committee was inquisitive rather than legislative.

In refusing to testify, Dr. Townsend himself first attempted to read into the record a brief statement by himself, which right the committee denied him. In making an oral statement, he said:

In view of the unfriendly attitude of this committee and its attempt to discredit the movement with which I am connected, I am refusing to return to this inquisition.

A subpena issued on May 18 to one of the witnesses to be cited for contempt stated:

Come and bring exact copies of your income-tax returns.

What in the name of creation can income-tax returns have to do with the old-age pension legislation? On the contrary, this subpena itself is prima-facie evidence that the committee was not seeking information with which to legislate but seeking information for the sole purpose of discrediting the movement. In so doing it was violating the Constitution of the United States. Amendment 4 and amendment 5 provide that:

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall be issued but upon probable cause.

Amendment 4 provides:

No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury.

The same conclusion may be obtained from a thorough reading in re Chapman (166 U. S. 661).

Without going into further detail, and to summarize, it is patent: First, that the committee was conducting its investigation as a criminal inquiry, not as a legislative inquiry; second, that its intent in so doing was to destroy, not to promote, legislation for the aged.

In the kingship of old was vested the power to execute, to make laws, and at the same time to be the judge and jury. If the Congress of the United States is going to be given this kingship power, and, seemingly, it has taken it and assumed it in this citing of Townsend for contempt, it ceases to be the legislative branch of the Government, and as the gentleman from Texas said the other day in making his point of order, it becomes a judicial or a quasi-judicial branch of the Government.

We have established courts, we have established Federal judges and United States district attorneys. The unfortunate part of it is that half of them should be impeached, because when it comes to a case of real violation of law they refuse to act, even when the Attorney General of the United States is called upon, as I did in the case where the KGIR radio station was openly and flagrantly violating the law. My letter to the Attorney General was as follows:

MAY 7, 1936.

Hon. HOMER S. CUMMINGS,
Attorney General of the United States,
Department of Justice, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CUMMINGS: I have your letter of May 1, 1936, which is a reply to my telegram to you of April 27 with respect to the difficulty I am encountering in obtaining time from radio station KGIR, Butte, Mont.

I note you are of the opinion that since the definition of "carrier" does not include a person engaged in radio broadcasting the rights of citizens under the Communications Act of 1934 to obtain time from a radio station are thereby annihilated; but I refer you to section 201 (a) of the Communications Act, which provides as follows:

"It shall be the duty of every common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign communication by wire or radio to furnish such communication service upon reasonable request therefor."

Carrying your contention to its logical conclusion would destroy the very intent and purpose of Congress in enacting the communications law, since Congress sought destruction of control over the radio stations of the country. In further support of the contention that it was the Congress' intent to make radio facilities available to all who desired, I cite you to section 202 (a) of the Communications Act, under which I am proceeding.

You are also of the opinion which was erroneously maintained by United States Attorney Tansil that the only rights which might accrue to me under the Communications Act of 1934 are those of a candidate for public office. Since I am not "a legally qualified candidate" for the United States Senate as yet, the sentence in section 315 which you quote, to wit: "No obligation shall be imposed upon such licensee to permit the use of its facilities to any such candidate," is not applicable. I am a person within the meaning of the act as defined in section 3, subparagraph (i), as follows:

"'Person' includes an individual", etc. Under this definition I am an individual. As such person I have sought from KGIR a definite contract for time. KGIR has refused such definite contract for time and in the process of refusing a definite contract admits discrimination and the giving of unreasonable preference which violates section 202 (a) of the Communications Act providing:

"It shall be unlawful for any common carrier to make any unjust or unreasonable discrimination in charges, practices, classifications, regulations, facilities, or services for or in connection with like communication service, directly or indirectly, by any means or device, or to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, class of persons, or locality, or to subject any particular person, class of persons, or locality to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage."

And to specifically include radio broadcasting within the definition of the act (b) specifically sets forth:

"(b) Charges for services, whenever referred to in this act, include charges for, or services in connection with, the use of wires in chain broadcasting or incidental to radio communication of any kind."

It will be readily seen by one who is not attempting to find loopholes in the Federal Communications Act of 1934 that its purpose is clear and definite; that its intent was to prevent just such situations as have arisen in the instant case. I may say, Mr. Attorney General, that if this were merely a matter of my obtaining time on the radio the night before election, I should not have gone to such great lengths in attempting to see that specific action be taken. But it is because it involves the very fundamental principle of the Communications Act itself, namely, keeping the radio waves of our country free from domination and control by anyone, that I have fought this matter right to the highest authority of this Nation. Evidence of the bad faith of radio station KGIR in the premises is the fact that the easiest way out of the difficulty would have been to furnish me with a definite contract, which that station has stubbornly refused to do—that is, unless they were advised beforehand that they could flaunt the law with impunity. It was with the most profound regret and disgust that I read the following telegram which was incorporated in a letter directed to me on April 29, 1936, by Mr. John Tansil, and which was sent to him from the Department of Justice on April 28:

"Retel April 23, station KGIR, Butte department, is informally advised by Communications Commission that complaint referred to is without merit. Department approves your action thus far. It is suggested that you advise interested persons to present the matter to the Communications Commission."

This telegram, in effect, says this: "The Communications Commission favors violating the Communications Act and will protect KGIR in defying the law. Otherwise, the Attorney General's office will protect KGIR. But to give the appearance of justice, tell Monaghan to go to the Communications Commission, which has already decided to decide against him, and thus rob him of any further remedy under the act." See section 207, Communications Act of 1934.

It was collusion such as this, in defiance of law and order, that led the pioneers of the western country in which I was born to organize into vigilante committees. If you wink at such violations of the law, no alternative is left but to seek the highest executive of the Nation, charged with the responsibility of executing the laws of the land. That I have done.

This country has in the past known a siege and orgy of crime that has shocked the world. It is time that our law enforcers awakened to their duty to respectable citizens. If departments of Government are to condone evil and garb with a cloak of innocence those forces that defy law and order and decent and orderly Government, the very foundations of our Nation are at stake and the rights of the people in jeopardy.

I, therefore, urge you, in the interest of orderly Government and due process of law, to instruct the United States District Attorney for Montana to institute immediate action to enforce the Communications Act of 1934 to the end that the rights of citizens under the act be protected.

Very truly yours,

——— ———.

But they will not waste any time in dragging Dr. Townsend into court, because it seems to be the wish and will of those who are embarrassed to destroy any real legislation for the people of the country. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. Speaker, I asked unanimous consent during the course of my speech to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to ask the gentleman if he thinks that where a man uses the mails to take dimes and nickels out of poor people, to whom he knows he can give nothing in return, and says "there are millions in it", the Congress then has not the right to investigate him.

Mr. MONAGHAN. I will say to the gentleman that that has been investigated, and they gave the doctor a clean bill of health. Notwithstanding this, the Congress would be exceeding its constitutional authority in investigating except for legislative purposes.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, the committee had just begun to uncover that stuff and to show over a million dollars he had taken from aged, poor people who needed it themselves.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROBSION] for 30 minutes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, I wish to take this opportunity to thank the Speaker and the Members of the House for giving unanimous consent for me to address you at this time.

As you well know, I am a Republican. I come from the great highland district of Kentucky. I represent a wonderful people. They had an important part in winning the Revolution; they were with General Jackson at New Orleans, with General Taylor at Buena Vista, and helped General Scott to raise the Stars and Stripes over the ancient capital of the Montezumas in Mexico. They were with the great "Teddy" Roosevelt at San Juan Hill, with Admiral Dewey at Manila, and helped to carry the Stars and Stripes to victory on Flanders Fields.

These hill people, like the hill people throughout all the ages, loved freedom and despised slavery. Like Abraham Lincoln, they have always believed in a government of all the people, by all the people, and for all the people. Abraham Lincoln was a product of the Kentucky hills. He, too, had a great passion for the Union and was a consistent opponent of Negro slavery. It is not strange, therefore, that there were more men and boys who entered the Union Army from my district than there were voters in the counties now composing that district. They were with Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Garfield, McKinley, and other great Union commanders on many of the bloodiest battlefields of the great Civil War.

It is not my purpose on this occasion to fight over again the great Civil War or to refer to the stirring scenes that culminated in that war, or the questions relating to parties, policies, and government, only insofar as it may be necessary to present the facts and clarify the issues raised wherein our colored Democratic colleague, Mr. MITCHELL, of Chicago, in his political speech on the floor of the House on April 22, 1936, made an attack on Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party. I thank God that great war is over. The sons of those who wore the blue on the Republican side of this House, as well as the sons of those who wore the gray, on the Democratic side, may justly point with pride to the military genius and accomplishments of the respective commanders of their armies and the unfaltering devotion and courage of those who served under them.

Every good American should be grateful that Divine Providence so guided the affairs of our Nation in that trying period that we are today united and not divided, and that the darkest blot on the pages of American history, Negro slavery, is no longer sanctioned by law.

On May 30, our national Memorial Day, in the great cities of the dead, in the quiet country churchyard, amid the tangled vines, under the spreading oaks and elms, kindly hands strewed flowers over the graves of the Blue and the Gray and tears were shed over the last resting places of the Gray and the Blue.

RACE HAS MADE GREAT PROGRESS

I yield to no man in my appreciation of the accomplishments of this race or the fine qualities of mind, high character, and loyal patriotism of the Douglasses, the Washingtons, and other great men and women of the colored race. I am in accord with the opinion expressed by a great many of the white race that the colored race in this country has made more progress in the last 65 years than any other race of people under like circumstances. As a race of people they are grateful, courteous, kind, and forgiving. I have wondered at their magnanimity and forbears, especially during the Civil War. While their masters were away in the army fighting to keep them in bondage, the slaves remained at home and took care of the missis and the children. No other race of people has been so loyal, generous, and magnanimous. [Applause.]

I am informed that the father and mother of our colored colleague [Mr. MITCHELL] were slaves. It is most gratifying to me that he has overcome so many handicaps.

REPUBLICAN PARTY CONCEIVED IN AND DEDICATED TO HUMAN RIGHTS

The Republican Party is the only party born on American soil that was conceived in and dedicated to human rights. It placed humanity above dollars. It claimed that the traffic in human beings was barbarous and an outrage against humanity. It insisted that the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States contemplated a government of all the people, by all the people, and for all the people in this Nation alike, without regard to race, color, or creed. [Applause.]

The Democratic Party believed in African slavery and its extension throughout this Nation. It seceded from the Union, established the Confederate States of America, the cornerstone of which was the continuation and perpetuation of African slavery.

The Republican Party has always held to the belief that the black man, although kissed by the shadow of God's love, is a human being and has an immortal soul. On the other hand, the doctrine has been preached through all the years in the Democratic States that the black man was not a human being—he ought to be a chattel, bought and sold. Study as carefully as you will the history of this country, and almost without exception every effort made for the advancement of the colored race, securing its freedom, educational, industrial, economic, and political rights, has been sponsored and put through by the Republican Party and over the active and bitter opposition of the Democratic Party. Many of our Democratic friends from the South opposed the bonus, and one of the main objections was that it would give a lot of money to a lot of trifling "niggers" in the South, although these black boys had responded to their country's call under a great Democratic President, Woodrow Wilson. The Republican Party has always held that if a black father and a black mother can bring forth sons who may be called to the defense of their country, and they meet, as they have, the carnage of battle heroically and unfalteringly, they certainly ought to have the right on election day to cast their ballots for the person and party of their choice.

The Democratic platform adopted at the Democratic national convention at Cincinnati, Ohio, June 2–6, 1856, among other things, as to slavery declared as follows:

> * * * that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences, and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people * * *.
> 3. That the Democratic Party will resist all attempts at renewing, in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question, under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.
> * * * and repudiating all parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States and incite to treason and armed resistance to law * * *.

Our Democratic colored colleague of Chicago included in his speech on April 22 only a part of section 4 of the Republican platform of 1860. If he had included all that section anyone could see at once that the section of the platform related only to what was known as the Kansas-Nebraska contention. The national Democratic administration was trying to force the free people of the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska, through their Democratic Governors and by the use of the torch and sword, to adopt a constitution favoring African slavery; and this section 4 of the Republican platform denounced this action and claimed that the Federal Government had no right to force the free people of those States to admit Negro slavery into those two free Territories.

In order that we may get the attitude of the Republican Party and the Democratic Party, as expressed in their platforms in 1856, 1860, and 1864, I invite your attention to the Democratic platform of 1856. You can see at once that the Democratic Party stood unfalteringly for the continuation of Negro slavery and denounced all parties and platforms favoring the abolition or control in any way of Negro slavery.

The Republican platform adopted at its first national convention at Philadelphia, Pa., on June 17, 1856, among other things, declared as follows on African slavery. I quote from sections 1, 2, and 4:

> "SECTION 1. Resolved, That the maintenance of the principles promulgated in the Declaration of Independence and embodied in the Federal Constitution are essential to the preservation of our republican institutions, and that the Federal Constitution, the rights of the States, and the Union of the States must be preserved.
>
> "SEC. 2. Resolved, That, with our republican fathers, we hold it to be a self-evident truth that all men are endowed with the inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. * * * it becomes our duty to maintain this provision of the Constitution against all attempts to violate it for the purpose of establishing slavery in the United States, by positive legislation, prohibiting its existence or extension therein. * * *
> "SEC. 3. * * * and that in the exercise of this sovereign power it is both the right and the imperative duty of Congress to prohibit in the Territories those twin relics of barbarism, polygamy and slavery."

Can anything be more positive and explicit than that platform in expressly denouncing slavery and the slave trade? It declares that the attempt of the Democratic Party to perpetuate and expand Negro slavery is a crime against humanity and a burning shame to our country and age, and they call upon Congress to take prompt and efficient measures to abolish this barbarous practice.

The Democratic platform adopted by the national Democratic convention held in Baltimore, Md., June 18–23, 1860, declared:

> SEC. 6. Resolved, That the enactments of States' legislatures to defeat the faithful execution of the fugitive slave law are hostile in character, subversive of the Constitution, and revolutionary in their effect.

Section 2 declares that the Democratic Party will abide by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States on questions of constitutional law. In this day and time we hear very little about the Democratic Party standing by the decisions of the Supreme Court on questions of constitutional law. We hear a lot of criticism and derision by the New Dealers of the Supreme Court and the Constitution itself. They call it "horse and buggy" stuff.

Why was the Democratic Party so anxious to stand by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1860? Many of the Republican and free States had passed laws against pursuing and arresting Negroes in free territory. Chief Justice Taney, a Democrat of Maryland, had upheld the fugitive slave law and announced that the Negro was just a chattel—property like a horse, a cow, or a hog—and that slave owners could carry their slaves, just like they could any other property, into any State of the Union. That decision held that any Negro who was a descendant of African Negroes, even though his ancestors had been freed by their masters, could not maintain an action in court, could not be a party to any lawsuit in any court, and could not even testify as a witness for himself even though he might have been unlawfully and wrongfully picked up and held by some slave trader. This is the decision that the Democratic Party in 1860 wanted the American people to uphold and stand by.

The Republican platform adopted by its national convention May 16–18, 1860, at Chicago, which nominated Abraham Lincoln, denounced the fugitive-slave law, the Kansas-Nebraska bill, the efforts of the Democratic administration to force slavery into the free Territories of Kansas and Nebraska, and in section 9 of that platform used the following language:

> That we brand the recent reopening of the African slave trade, under the cover of our national flag, aided by perversions of judicial power, as a crime against humanity and a burning shame to our country and age, and we call upon Congress to take prompt and efficient measures for the total and final suppression of that execrable traffic.

Abraham Lincoln stood on that platform in the election of 1860 and was elected. Abraham Lincoln was a delegate to the Republican national convention in 1856, and helped to write that platform expressing opposition to and denouncing human slavery. Yet our colored colleague from Chicago says that the Republican Party and Abraham Lincoln were not against Negro slavery.

The Democratic platform adopted by the Democratic national convention at Chicago August 29, 1864, in section 2 denounced Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party for violating the Constitution in freeing the Negroes, and called upon Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party to stop the war, pull down the Stars and Stripes, and run up the white flag of surrender, and permit the Democratic Party to continue to enslave human beings.

The Republican Party wrote a very different platform. The Republican platform adopted at Baltimore on June 7, 1864, with Abraham Lincoln as the candidate, in section 3 of that platform declared as follows:

3. Resolved, That as slavery was the cause and now constitutes the strength of this rebellion, and, as it must be always and everywhere hostile to the principles of republican government, justice and the national safety demand its utter and complete extirpation from the soil of the Republic; and that while we uphold and maintain the acts and proclamations by which the Government, in its own defense, has aimed a deathblow at this gigantic evil, we are in favor, furthermore, of such an amendment to the Constitution, to be made by the people in conformity with its provisions, as shall terminate and forever prohibit the existence of slavery within the limits of the jurisdiction of the United States.

You can see at once that section 3 again denounces slavery and declares that—

The principles of republican government, justice, and the national safety demand its utter and complete extirpation from the soil of the Republic.

It also urges the adoption of amendments to the Constitution—

As shall terminate and forever prohibit the existence of slavery within the limits of the jurisdiction of the United States.

Why did not our colored colleague from Chicago give these planks of the Republican platforms and why was he as silent as the tomb in quoting anything in his speech from any Democratic platform from the days of Thomas Jefferson down to now that was favorable to the Negro race, and especially why did not he quote from the Democratic platforms of 1856, 1860, and 1864?

ATTACK UNJUSTIFIED

Our colored Democratic colleague had the right to make a political speech on the floor of this House for himself and the Democratic Party. It is his constitutional right as well as any other person, black or white, to leave one party and join another party. The Republican Party now stands and has always stood for a free ballot without regard to race, creed, or color; but was our colleague justified in his great desire for political preferment and in his zeal for his newfound political friends to fly in the face of recorded history and the testimony of mankind to belittle, misrepresent, and assail the great services rendered by Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party to his own father and mother and to millions of his own race and with little-concealed scorn to make this attack in the presence of the sons who sit on the Republican side of this Chamber whose sires helped to hold the lines at Vicksburg, Gettysburg, Petersburg, and on a hundred other battlefields that his own father and mother as well as millions of others of his own race might be free, so that they might bring forth sons in freedom such as our colored colleague from Chicago? It does not seem to me that the political exigencies of himself and the Democratic Party required our Democratic colored colleague to so forget the sacrifices that were made for him, his loved ones, and those of his race.

Of course, if our colored colleague from Chicago now takes delight in being politically grouped with the sons of some of the sires who consistently favored Negro slavery and fought desperately under the Stars and Bars to keep his own father and mother in bondage and did all they could to prevent the adoption of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution and deny to our colored colleague the right to be born a freeman, the right to be a citizen, the right to vote, and the right to hold any office of trust or honor, that is a matter that addresses itself to his own conscience.

One of the noblest emotions that ever animated the human heart is gratitude. Can there be anything more ignoble than ingratitude? I have seen the swine in the mountains of Kentucky fill themselves day by day on the choicest nuts that fell from the oak, the chestnut, and the beach, but I have never yet seen one hog look up to seek the source of its bounty.

Ten lepers appealed to the Savior to cleanse them. He did cleanse them. One returned and, falling on his knees before the Savior, poured out his heartfelt gratitude. The Savior said to him, "Were there not ten healed? Where are the nine?"

I have pointed out that one of the finest traits of the colored people is their gratitude. Where you find one that has forgotten, there are thousands that have not forgotten.

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I desire to finish my statement and hope the gentleman will not take any of my time.

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. I simply want to ask the gentleman what it was that I said about Abraham Lincoln as a reflection on him. I quoted from his speech. Does the gentleman deny the quotation?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Why did not the gentleman tell the whole truth about Abraham Lincoln?

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. I told it as he told it.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Our colored colleague from Chicago quoted only a few words from one of the many speeches of Abraham Lincoln and said nothing of his activities. Our colleague from Chicago belittled Abraham Lincoln and his service. The speech shows for itself.

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I cannot yield further. Our colleague from Chicago left the emancipator in the attitude of being an impostor and a deceiver of the colored race.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that where a speaker refers to another Member of this House and misquotes him, he ought to yield, and that he has no right to refer to him as "you", but it must be in the third person.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. That is not true, and I object to the statement.

Mr. BLANTON. Well, I am making the statement on my own responsibility. I heard the speech, and say that he was misquoted in some particulars.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I have the speech of our Democratic colleague of Chicago before me, and I have not misquoted him or misinterpreted his slur on Abraham Lincoln. Of course, when one Member refers to another Member of this House it must be in the third person.

The SPEAKER. The rules are that a Member must address another Member in the third person. Of course, it is up to the gentleman who has the floor as to whether he yields. The Chair sustains the point of order that Members must refer to their colleagues on the floor in the third person.

LINCOLN, THE EMANCIPATOR AND MARTYR

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I have been a Member of the House and Senate for many years. I have heard many speeches made on Abraham Lincoln by Republicans and northern and southern Democrats. They were all highly eulogistic. I have never heard any Democrat on the floor of the House or Senate contend that Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party did not free the black race. Is not it a sad commentary on the intelligence of Fred Douglass, Booker T. Washington, and thousands of other intelligent men and women of his race that they never discovered that Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party freed the black race until 4 or 5 years ago?

I am told that our colored colleague, Mr. MITCHELL, was born in Alabama. He was a Republican and many times lauded Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party for having freed his father, mother, himself, and his race. I am also informed that he lived in Alabama until he was past 40 years of age, but he never voted. He migrated from Alabama to the city of Washington, and about 1928 located in the big colored Republican congressional district in Chicago. He attached himself to the Republican organization, and I am also informed that he was employed and paid by the Republican Party at least for much of the time until near about 1932, when, according to his own statement in his speech, he thought the Republican Party was headed for defeat by the Democrats at the November election in 1932. He says he met a great Democratic leader in Washington and from his statement I assume that this great Democratic leader took him up on a high mountain and showed him the kingdoms of the earth. This is not a new experience. Nearly 20 centuries ago a certain character took the Savior of man up on a high mountain and showed him the kingdoms of the earth.

I am surprised that our colored colleague did not mention the name of Fred Douglass. He is by common consent regarded by his race as the greatest Negro this country ever produced. He was a slave. He had felt the anguish of being taken from his own mother. He had felt the sting of the taskmaster's lash. Two of his sons and his son-in-law served loyally in the Union Army. He electrified not only this country but England with his great plea to uphold Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party who were trying to free his unfortunate race. Fred Douglass said on many occasions and up to the time of his death—"The Republican Party is the great ship of safety for the Negro, and all else is the great wide seething seas." He sought out no big Democratic politician to tell him that Abraham Lincoln was a deceiver and that the Republican Party was an impostor.

Abraham Lincoln, privately and publicly, expressed himself against African slavery long before 1860. When he visited, as a young man, the slave market in New Orleans and saw the golden chord of mother and child rudely broken by the slave trader, his great heart moved him to say "If I ever get a lick at that terrible institution, I will hit it hard."

In his memorable debates with Stephen A. Douglass in 1858, did he not declare—

> This Nation cannot long endure half slave and half free. A house divided against itself cannot stand. I do not expect the house to fall, but I do expect it to cease to be divided.

He was a delegate to the new Republican Party national convention in 1856. It denounced African slavery. The Republican platform on which Abraham Lincoln stood in 1860 declared against Negro slavery, denounced the inhuman fugitive-slave law and the Kansas-Nebraska bill, while on the other hand the Democratic Party in its platform in 1856 declared itself in favor of slavery and denounced all parties and platforms that were opposed to slavery. In 1860 the Democratic Party again declared in favor of slavery and it again denounced all parties and platforms that were against slavery.

Chief Justice Taney, a Democrat of Maryland, some time before that convention had announced the famous "Dred Scott decision" which held that slaves were simply personal property like horses, hogs, and cattle, and their owners could carry them into all parts of the Union. It also held that a Negro, even though his parents had been made free by their masters, and even though the son was born of free parents, yet he could not be a party to a suit or testify in any court in his own behalf.

The Democratic platform of 1860 called upon the people to stand by the Constitution as interpreted by the Dred Scott decision. The Republicans were opposed to the principles and policies enunciated in that decision. Mr. Lincoln stood on that Republican platform and was elected.

It is true that Mr. Lincoln and others believed it would take perhaps constitutional amendments and congressional action to do away with slavery. It is true that he was trying to avert a civil war and preserve the Union. It is history that it was his purpose to have the Federal Government pay the slaveholders for their slaves. He did offer the slaveholders the sum of $400,000,000 from the Government to purchase the freedom of the slaves, but the Democratic Party haughtily rejected his generous offer and insisted upon going on with the war, dividing the Union, and perpetuating Negro slavery.

But let us not be deceived. The Republican platform in 1856 and in 1860 in no uncertain terms denounced the traffic in human beings. Mr. MITCHELL only quoted a part of section 4 of the Republican platform of 1860. The Democratic administration had appointed Democratic territorial governors for Kansas and Nebraska. The power and influence of the Democratic national administration with the bayonet and torch was trying to force slavery upon the free people of Kansas and Nebraska, and section 4 of that platform denounced the attempt of the National Government to extend slavery into those territories. Section 9 of the Republican platform of 1860 declared:

> That we brand the recent reopening of the African slave trade, under the cover of our national flag, aided by perversions of judicial power, as a crime against humanity and a burning shame to our country and age, and we call upon Congress to take prompt and efficient measures for the total and final suppression of that execrable traffic.

Was our Democratic colored colleague [Mr. MITCHELL] knowingly attempting to deceive the people of his race in not telling the whole story about the Republican platform of 1860? Why did not he quote the Democratic platform of 1860?

Our colored colleague from Chicago says that the Negroes found out only 4 or 5 years ago that Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party did not free the Negroes and did not intend to free the Negroes. The Democratic Party after the election in 1860 did not share that belief. The Democratic Party and its leaders were so certain that it was the purpose of Lincoln and the Republican Party to free the slaves that they immediately set about to secede. They did secede from the Union and established the Confederate States of America and asserted that African slavery was its chief cornerstone. They pulled down the Stars and Stripes and hoisted a new flag, the Stars and Bars.

Some contend that the war was over States' rights. Yes, but what was the matter that was pinching? The Republican Party was against slavery. The Democratic Party was in favor of slavery. The only real point at issue was the claim of the Democratic Party that they had a right under States' rights to continue to traffic in human beings and to carry on unmolested Negro slavery. The North and the South were not quarreling over the money question—it was the slave question. The Democratic Party saw the anti-slavery sentiment growing. New States were about to be admitted and they felt that the Republicans would amend the Constitution and abolish slavery.

The only two speeches of any American ever written in stone were Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg speech and his second inaugural. He said at Gettysburg: "We must go forward and complete the work that those who died here have so nobly begun." And he further says, "Let us renew our devotion to a government of the people, by the people, and for the people." This meant, then, to Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party that we cannot have a real government of the people, by the people, and for the people unless you give to all our citizens alike, without regard to race, creed, or color, the rights vouchsafed to them by the Constitution.

In 1864 the Republican Party, in its platform, again denounced slavery and pledged itself to go forward with the war "until African slavery was extirpated"—dug up root and branch—and that platform approved the emancipation proclamation of Abraham Lincoln and pledged the Republican Party to amend the Constitution so as "to forever bar human slavery in this country." The great Democratic Party—new friend of our colored colleague from Chicago—also wrote a platform. It denounced the war and called upon Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party to pull down the Stars and Stripes and run up the white flag and permit Negro slavery to continue in this Nation.

The Union soldiers and sailors had been sorely pressed for 4 long years, the Federal Treasury had been greatly depleted, the credit of the Nation was strained, and strong appeals had been made to Lincoln and the Republican Party to cease the war. What did he say in response to the Democratic platform and these appeals in his second inaugural address on March 4, 1865?—

If every dollar piled up by the 250 years of unrequited toil of the bondmen must be sunk, and if for every drop of blood drawn by the lash another must be drawn by the sword, I will still say, as the prophet of old said 3,000 years ago, the judgments of the Lord are just and righteous altogether.

Is this the language of the dodger, the deceiver, or quitter? It is sublime courage. What devotion to a great cause. He was told many years before he became President: "Mr. Lincoln, if you continue to fight against slavery, it will ruin your career." What was his response? "I, too, may be destroyed by it, but yield to it I never will."

FREED SLAVES' LINCOLN MEMORIAL

Our colored Democratic colleague from Chicago says that he and the other Negroes of this Nation have discovered within the last 4 or 5 years that Lincoln was a deceiver and the Republican Party was an impostor. I wish to invite him to visit Lincoln Park, in the Nation's Capital. There is a fine statue of the emancipator. How majestic, how wonderful, how gracious and kindly he looks. Bowing before him is a magnificent specimen of young colored manhood with the shackles on his wrists making an appeal to Father Abraham to break them. But more significant than anything else are the words written in brass on that monument:

Freedom's memorial. In grateful memory of Abraham Lincoln this monument was erected with funds contributed solely by emancipated citizens of the United States declared free by his proclamation January 1, A. D. 1863. The first contribution of $5 was made by Charlotte Scott, a freedwoman of Virginia, being her first earning in freedom, and consecrated at her suggestion and request, on the day she heard of President Lincoln's death, to build a monument to his memory.

Is this not an answer to the attack of our colored Democratic colleague from Chicago on Lincoln and the Republican Party? No orator could speak words so eloquent—"In grateful remembrance of Abraham Lincoln." The money was contributed by emancipated slaves. The first contribution of $5 was made by Charlotte Scott, a freedwoman of Virginia, it being her first earnings in freedom, and consecrated, at her suggestion and request on the day that she heard of President Lincoln's death, to build a monument to his grave. This money came in, no doubt, in nickels, dimes, and dollars through the outpouring of the freed, grateful, black men and women of America.

Hundreds of thousands of Union soldiers were killed, crippled, or broken in health. Billions of dollars were contributed by the Republican Party, but freedom and the Union required also the blood sacrifice of the Great Emancipator. Magnificent memorials and monuments throughout the Nation still stand, even after the speech of our colored Democratic colleague from Chicago. All men and women, whether white or black, who love freedom and justice, except our Democratic colleague from Chicago, have enshrined in their hearts the image of the Great Emancipator, and all of these standing at his tomb, except our colored Democratic colleague from Chicago, might well say of the Emancipator:

O death, where is thy sting?
O grave, where is they victory?

The sting of death was healed with the love and affection of the millions of black men, women, and children. The grave itself was robbed of its victory by his supreme triumph in death. [Applause.]

WHAT AND WHERE IS THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY?

Our colored colleague [Mr. MITCHELL] states in his speech that the Negroes have found out during the last 4 or 5 years that the "Democratic Party is a safe place to live and vote." Let us understand where the Democratic Party is and what it is.

A great majority of the Democrats from the North, East, and West come here because of division or dissension in the Republican Party. They come and go, but the Democrats of the South stay on forever. They have had control of the Democratic Party since the days of Thomas Jefferson. We have to but look around to see where the real Democratic Party is and the section that furnishes the leadership and power of the Democratic Party.

Our distinguished, able, and splendid Speaker comes from Tennessee. Our distinguished and capable Democratic leader, Mr. BANKHEAD, comes from Alabama. Distinguished and able Democrats are chairmen of all the powerful and influential committees of the House: Ways and Means, Mr. DOUGHTON, of North Carolina; Appropriations, Mr. BUCHANAN, of Texas; Agriculture, Mr. JONES, of Texas; Judiciary, Mr. SUMNERS of Texas; Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Mr. RAYBURN, of Texas; Rivers and Harbors, Mr. MANSFIELD, of Texas; Public Buildings and Grounds, Mr. LANHAM, of Texas; Military Affairs, Mr. MCSWAIN, of South Carolina; Naval Affairs, Mr. VINSON of Georgia; Foreign Affairs, Mr. MCREYNOLDS, of Tennessee; Banking and Currency, Mr. STEAGALL, of Alabama; World War Veterans, Mr. RANKIN, of Mississippi; Pensions, Mr. GASQUE, of South Carolina; Indian Affairs, Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma; Merchant Marine, Mr. BLAND, of Virginia; Public Lands, Mr. DEROUEN, of Louisiana; Roads, Mr. CARTWRIGHT, of Oklahoma; Territories, Mr. GREEN, of Florida; Education, Mr. PALMISANO, of Maryland; Flood Control, Mr. WILSON of Louisiana; Civil Service, Mr. RAMSPECK, of Georgia; Accounts, Mr. WARREN, of North Carolina; Elections No. 1, Mr. DEAR, of Louisiana; Elections No. 3, Mr. KERR, of North Carolina; Printing, Mr. LAMBETH, of North Carolina.

Think of it—these 12 so-called solid year-in and year-out Democratic States with the Speaker and the Democratic leader, and control of these powerful committees! They give chairmanships of the so-called minor committees to border States like Maryland, Missouri, and West Virginia, and the Clerk of the House to Kentucky. [Applause.]

I point out this great number of powerful and outstanding Democratic leaders not in any sense of criticism but that we may show the power and preponderance of influence in this House from the so-called Democratic States. I must congratulate them upon their solidarity and their stick-to-it-iveness. I make bold to say that the group I have named could put through most any measure, not only that the President might desire but that they might desire.

It was the South that put the two-thirds rule on the Democratic Party and maintained it through all the years, and I think they will still maintain it, Mr. Farley to the contrary notwithstanding.

What I have said of the preponderance of leadership from the so-called 12 or 13 Democratic States in the House is matched in the Senate. The Vice President is from Texas, the Democratic leader is from Arkansas, the chairman of the great Finance Committee is from Mississippi.

THE LAW VERSUS ANARCHY

The taking of human life by the mob is anarchy. It is the overthrow of county and State governments and the courts where lynchings occur. It is substituting anarchy for the orderly processes of the law and the courts. Lynchings are universally condemned by all civilized peoples. It has received universal condemnation by the press, pulpit, platform, public officers, high and low, and citizens without regard to race, creed, or color in every walk of life, yet nothing effective is done about it where this monster crime is most prevalent. There are those who, in a roundabout way, assert that lynchings and mob violence are necessary to protect the womanhood of this country. None of us who favor antilynching legislation endorse crimes against women, murders, or any other crime for which men and women have been lynched. There is not a man in this House but who looks with horror upon the crime of rape. To me it is an unspeakable crime. Any man who is guilty of such a crime, whether white or black, should be put to death. This is the law in Kentucky. Any man who is half man desires more than anything else to see the womanhood of this country not only protected but respected. Let us bear in mind that all the chivalry and gallantry is not in the Democratic Party or in the Republican Party, or in any particular section of our Nation.

Our forefathers sacrificed their fortunes and their lives in order to establish a Constitution, laws, and courts. Our Federal and our State Constitutions provide that every person is entitled to the equal protection of the law and that every person charged with a crime is entitled to a fair and impartial trial, to be confronted by his accusers before an impartial tribunal. The mob in its wild spirit of frenzy and hate is the arresting officer, the accuser, the prosecutor, the jury, the court, and the executioner. This crime has been indicted by the enlightened public opinion of the civilized world, and the thing that causes many of us to blush with shame is the fact that your country and mine sins more grievously in this respect than any other civilized country in the world.

I am opposed to mob violence and lynching. I spoke and voted in favor of H. R. 13, the Dyer antilynching bill, in 1922, and I am now more convinced than I was then of the justice and necessity of this legislation.

The record shows that in 16 States there have been no lynchings since 1889. The South is the place where lynchings are most prevalent, and in about 95 percent of the cases the persons lynched are Negroes.

If a Negro is charged with crime, his case goes before a white grand jury. He is tried by a white jury before a white judge, and is confronted usually with white witnesses. Is there any doubt in any sane person's mind but what a Negro under such circumstances will get all that is coming to him? If the crime justifies the death penalty the juries in those States and under those circumstances do not hesitate to inflict it. Ought the law exact any higher penalty than the life of the accused? Or do we want to let the mob and the lynchers go unrestrained so that they may burn people at the stake and in many cases burn innocent people?

There are others in favor of this legislation besides the Republican Party. The legislatures of 12 great States, all of them Republican States, have urged Congress to act. Among those organizations that favor this legislation are the following, with their memberships:

ORGANIZATION	Membership
The Federal Council of Churches	26,000,000
American Federation of Labor	5,000,000
National Baptist Convention	3,196,623
Young Women's Christian Association	404,632
Young Men's Christian Association	857,241
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People	100,000
National Association of Colored Women	250,000
American Federation of Teachers	----------
National Council of Women	----------
National Council of Jewish Women	50,000
The Protestant Episcopal Church	2,000,000
Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church (United States of America)	1,969,788
Congregational and Christian Churches	1,000,000
Women's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South	225,000
Synagogue Council of America	1,000,000
Christian Youth Council	10,000,000

I have given only a partial list. The membership of all the organizations, industrial, civil, religious, and political, exceeds 40,000,000. They recognize this blot upon our country and that lynching and mob violence is not only a crime against the individual but it is an outrage against our twentieth century civilization.

NECESSITY FOR ANTILYNCHING LEGISLATION—DEMOCRATS IN ABSOLUTE CONTROL

The Democrat Party came into absolute control of the executive and legislative branches of the Government on March 4, 1933, and, of course, have been in absolute control ever since. Soon after they secured control there was introduced in the Seventy-third Congress in the House and Senate a great many antilynching bills by Republicans and Democrats. Extensive hearings were held by the Judiciary Committee on these bills—the Wagner-Costigan bill, and others. There appeared before that committee many distinguished men and women, Republicans and Democrats, urging favorable action on this legislation. The Senate Judiciary Committee is about three to one Democratic and made up of many distinguished lawyers, and I understand it made a favorable report in the Seventy-third Congress. Of course, when the Seventy-third Congress ended, all these antilynching and other bills died.

Early in the Seventy-fourth Congress more than 30 antilynching bills were introduced in the House and Senate. The Judiciary Committee of the Senate on March 18, 1935, submitted a favorable report on the Wagner-Costigan bill, and in this report it used the following very significant language:

> The committee, during the Seventy-third Congress, and during the Seventy-fourth Congress, has given much consideration to this bill. Hearings were held by a subcommittee at which evidence was presented demonstrating to the committee's satisfaction the continuing and increasing need for Federal legislation of this character. When a measure similar to the pending reported bill was before Congress in 1934 and its enactment into law appeared to be more than a possibility, two lynchings occurred in January 1934, a month prior to the public hearings conducted by this committee. During the months from January 30 to June 8, 1934, when public opinion in favor of legislation to curb the practice of lynching was particularly articulate, no lynchings occurred. During the first week in June 1934, word was generally circulated that hope for the enactment of the propcsed measure had been abandoned. On June 8 there was a lynching in Mississippi, followed in rapid succession by two lynchings in Alabama, one in Texas, one in Tennessee, one in Louisiana, a third in Mississippi, a third in Alabama, one in Georgia, and one in Florida. * * * In the committee's opinion it is more than a coincidence that the practice of lynching is practically stopped when Federal legislation designed to curb this practice is pending in Congress. A continuation of the practice of lynching, coupled with a complete failure of the government of those States involved to apprehend and punish the participators of these crimes, supports the need for Federal legislation.
> In the Sixty-seventh Congress a bill (H. R. 13) having similar purposes to the pending measure was passed by the House of Representatives, but was not allowed to reach a vote in the Senate. At that time the constitutionality of this legislation was discussed in much detail. * * * Favorable reports of the Judiciary Committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate arrived at the conclusion that the legislation was clearly constitutional. * * *
>
> After giving earnest thought to the consideration of S. 24, the committee has reached the conclusion that as amended the bill is constitutional and should be passed. It is the opinion of the committee that the proposed legislation is "appropriate legislation" to discourage and prevent the evil of lynching wherever in the United States that evil exists or is or may be committed.

A BLACK RECORD

I have called the attention of the House to the report of the Senate committee in which it is said—

> A continuation of the practice of lynching, coupled with a complete failure of the government of those States involved to apprehend and punish the participators of these crimes, supports the need for Federal legislation.

Who is making this terrible indictment? It is the great Democratic Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate. In 1922, when we had up the Dyer bill, our Democratic friends complained that it was the Republican Party expressing its dislike to the South when similar charges were made. Where is the practice of lynching and in what States is there a complete failure to apprehend and punish those guilty of lynchings and mob violence? Upon what evidence did the Senate Judiciary Committee make its report?

They heard many witnesses and had before them many records. The testimony and records submitted showed for the period beginning in 1889 and extending to March 1935 there were 3,216 lynchings in 13 States, and were distributed as follows:

Georgia	458
Alabama	340
Kentucky	174
Mississippi	455
Florida	242
South Carolina	140
Texas	373
Arkansas	242
Oklahoma	107
Louisiana	249
Tennessee	209
Missouri	92
North Carolina	90

If we count from 1882 to date, there have been 582 lynchings in the State of Mississippi alone.

More than 100 of these were women, and according to the statement of Professor Chadbourn, law professor of the University of North Carolina, and others, less than one out of every six lynched was even charged with rape or attempted rape. Hundreds and hundreds if guilty of any offense, they were trivial offenses. The records disclosed that 186 of these 3,216 lynched persons were innocent of any crime, and of these, 33 were in Louisiana, 32 in Georgia, 25 in Alabama, 17 in Kentucky, 15 in Mississippi, 18 in Texas, and 13 in Arkansas. These seven States provide 148 of the innocent people who were lynched, and the 13 Democratic States provide 3,216 lynched from 1889 to March 1935.

Only in about 12 cases were the lynchers apprehended and convicted, and they were given inconsequential sentences according to the evidence submitted. It is little wonder that the Judiciary Committee of the Senate in its report declared:

A continuation of the practice of lynching, coupled with a complete failure of the government of those States involved to apprehend and punish the participators of these crimes, supports the need for Federal legislation.

How can our colored colleague, with this record staring him in the face and with the report of the Judiciary Committee, sponsored by Democrats, say that his race has found in the last 4 or 5 years that the Democratic Party is a safe place to live?

DEMOCRATS INSINCERE AND ARE DECEIVING NEGROES

The Democrats have 322 of the 435 Members of the House. They have 70 of the 96 Senators. I am sure that at least 90 percent of the Republicans, Progressives, and Farmer-Laborites in the House and Senate favor antilynching legislation. The 6 Republicans on the Judiciary Committee of the House have been willing and are now willing to help the 18 Democrats on that committee bring the antilynching bill to the floor of the House, and I am sure the Republican leadership will help the 322 Democrats to bring the bill up in the House and to help them pass it.

Mr. MAVERICK. Why did not the gentleman have those bills enacted during the Republican administration? [Applause.]

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I thank the gentleman from Texas for asking that very question.

Mr. MAVERICK. I want to know why that was not done.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. We did pass the Dyer antilynching bill in 1922 over the active, vigorous opposition of the Democrats by a vote of 231 to 119. The Democrats at that time had 139 Members of the House, and every Democrat voted against the bill or was paired against it, except 6 Democrats in the North, East, and West voted for it and 1 was paired for it. Not a Democrat in the Democratic States raised his voice in support of the measure, but many of them made very vigorous speeches against it. [Applause.]

This report says the Dyer antilynching bill, while reported favorably by the Judiciary Committee to the Senate in 1922, "was not allowed to come to a vote." Who did not allow it to come to a vote? The Democrats of the Senate organized a filibuster, led by that distinguished Democratic leader, Senator Oscar Underwood, of Alabama, and he announced that no bills would be permitted to be considered in the Senate, however important they might be, until the antilynching bill was laid aside, and, in response to the Republicans, he stated: "The Democratic Party will assume full responsibility for the defeat of the Dyer bill." An organized minority in the Senate can accomplish things like this, and it was accomplished.

I am not surprised to see our two Democratic friends from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK and Mr. BLANTON] seeking to interrupt me. Our colored Democratic colleague from Chicago ought to go down in Texas and try to vote in the Democratic primary and try to attend a Democratic convention. The Democrats have put through a law in the State of Texas forbidding a Negro to participate in its Democratic primaries or in a Democratic convention. [Applause.]

Mr. BUCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I do not have the time. I cannot yield. If the Democrats do not pass this bill when the Republicans are offering to help them to do so, every colored man or woman must know and the country will know that they are doing nothing more or less than attempting to deceive the colored race of this Nation.

Now if this measure is not permitted to come up in the House and Senate with the big Democratic majorities and with the Republicans willing to assist, it will be because the Democratic Party is opposed to the antilynching bill and will not permit it to come up and be passed.

The Democrats of the North, East, and West are becoming alarmed over the failure of the Democratic Party to act on this important measure. They got up a petition urging the Democratic caucus leader to call a caucus of the Democratic Party in the House to consider whether or not the antilynching bill should be brought up. The caucus was called for Friday night, May 22, 1936, but no action was taken because they could not get a majority of the Democrats there. The Democrats let the antilynching bill die in the Seventy-third Congress and they are going to let all these thirty-odd antilynching bills die in the Seventy-fourth Congress.

These Democrats who come and go, from the North, East, and West, can talk around, but the real Democratic Party from the South will see to it that this bill is not passed. They have never intended to pass any antilynching bill and will not do so. In fact, our distinguished Democratic floor leader of the House, according to press reports, says it will not be passed.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has something to say on this subject. Some uninformed people think that this association is made up wholly of Negroes. It is true that there are many outstanding colored men and women active in this great association, with its thousands of members, but it has among its officers and executive boards many of the outstanding white leaders of this country, Democrats and Republicans—for instance, Senator CAPPER, Republican, of Kansas; Governor Lehman, Democrat, Governor of New York; and Hon. Frank Murphy, Democrat, former mayor of Detroit and former Governor of the Philippine Islands.

On or about May 7, 1936, the officers of this great organization sent to President Roosevelt the following earnest message:

FORTY MILLION ENDORSEMENTS

At Colbert, Ga., on April 28 and at Lepanto, Ark., April 29, occurred the seventy-first and seventy-second authenticated lynchings since you took office on March 4, 1933. These killings by mobs have occurred at an average of 1 every 15½ days since you have been the Chief Executive of this Nation. * * * Since January 1934 the Government has had it within its power to pass a Federal antilynching law, but thus far the Costigan-Wagner bill has been sidetracked while unchecked mobs stage grisly parades every fortnight.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, together with more than 40,000,000 persons who have endorsed this legislation, urgently request your administration to bring this legislation to the floor of both Houses so that it may be considered upon its merits.

The records show that about every 15 days since President Roosevelt and the Democrat Party have been in absolute control there has occurred a lynching, and in more than 95 percent of these cases these lynchings have occurerd in the real Democratic States.

Yet this administration fails and refuses to act. A quorum of the Democrats have failed to meet and even caucus on the question. A petition has been filed at the Clerk's desk to discharge the Judiciary Committee of the House and bring this bill out on the floor. This petition has been numerously signed by Republicans; 129 Members, including myself, have signed this petition. There are about 200 Democrats in the House now from the North, East, and West. If all the Democrats of the North, East, and West would join the Republicans who signed this petition, it would force the antilynching bill out on the floor of the House for consideration. There are 21 Democrats in the House from Illinois. There are five Republicans. These 5 Republicans have signed this antilynching bill petition, but I am informed that only 4 of the 21 Democrats from Illinois up until now have signed it.

Since the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People sent that message to President Roosevelt, there have been more lynchings. Within 10 days after our Democratic colored colleague made his speech, there were three lynchings—two in Georgia and one in Arkansas. What has the President and the Democratic Party done in response to that appeal? There still have been no hearings on the thirty-odd antilynching bills in the House Judiciary Committee. No effort has been made to report out any bill. I predict there will be no hearing and there will be no report.

Our distinguished chairman, Judge SUMNERS of Texas, is opposed to this legislation. I have heard many able speeches from our Judiciary Committee chairman and other distinguished Members from these Democratic Southern States, and they say they are opposed to this legislation as it will increase mob violence and increase lynchings, and that it is unconstitutional, although the Judiciary Committees of the House and Senate in 1921 reported the Dyer bill favorably, stating that it was necessary legislation and that it was constitutional. Two Democratic Judiciary Committees of the Senate have declared this legislation essential, proper, and constitutional.

PEANUT, POTATO, COTTON, PIG, RICE, BUT NOT NEGRO

The President had no trouble in having our Democratic Congress rush through the "must" bills for peanuts, potatoes, rice, and to plow up cotton, corn, and wheat, and kill the pigs. Our Democratic friends had no qualms about offending against the Constitution then. They have no objection to a peanut, a potato, a bale of cotton, a sack of rice, or a pig coming between them and the Constitution, but the threatened black man, woman, and child, even though innocent, cannot and must not come between them and the Constitution. [Applause and laughter.]

The Democratic Party in the House and Senate are giving these antilynching bills a long, long "Rip Van Winkle" sleep. While, as said in this message of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People to the President:

> Since January 1934 the Government has had it within its power to pass a Federal antilynching bill, but thus far the Costigan-Wagner bill has been sidetracked while unchecked mobs stage grisly parades every fortnight.

How can the Democratic Party escape the charge of double-dealing and insincerity with the colored people of this country? I challenge the Democratic Party of the House to bring the antilynching bill to the floor of the House for consideration. I call upon President Roosevelt to make this a "must" bill and put behind it the power and influence of his administration.

They bury the antilynching bills, and then send out our colored Democratic colleague from Chicago to tell the colored people—in the States where the Negroes are allowed to vote—how deeply interested the Democratic Party is in the black race. He says, in effect, that they are going to give to "my President" and this administration, that has denied to them the equal protection of the law as is provided in the Federal Constitution, more votes than they gave to General Grant, to the gallant McKinley, and the reliable defender of the black people, Gen. Rutherford B. Hayes. Yes; they would send him forth to belittle Abraham Lincoln and denounce the Republican Party.

There is no real reason on earth why the colored people should turn on their real friend and back the party that has fought them through all the years and the party that now refuses to protect the lives and votes of the colored people.

The intelligent, fair-minded, appreciative black men and women of this race may have been deceived in 1932, but I predict that they will not be misled in 1936. They are sure to find out that the leopard has not changed its spots and neither has the tiger lost its stripes. It is the same Democratic Party that has fought every step of advancement of the Negro throughout all the years.

MITCHELL'S ANTILYNCHING BILL

Our colleague [Mr. MITCHELL] in his speech tells the House and the country that he, too, is deeply interested in antilynching legislation; that he, too, introduced a bill, and I wish to take your time to point out the wonderful protection afforded to the colored people by his bill if it should pass. In section 3 of his bill he uses this remarkable language:

> Any officer, agent, or employee of any State or governmental subdivision thereof, acting as such officer, agent, or employee under authority of law, having in his custody or control a prisoner, who shall conspire, combine, or confederate with any person to injure or put such prisoner to death, or who shall conspire, combine, or confederate with any person to suffer or permit any person to take such prisoner from his custody or control, to be injured or put to death, shall be guilty of a felony * * *. On conviction the parties participating therein shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 2 years and not more than 10 years.

Is not that a wonderful protection to throw about the people of his race from mob violence? To fix the punishment of an officer who has a person in his care and who conspires with the mob to put his prisoner to death at from 2 to 10 years. Everyone knows that such an act would be willful murder. It would be murder in the first degree. The law in no State of this Union or in any civilized country, unless it is Russia, fixes the penalty for willful murder, or first-degree murder, at anything less than death or life imprisonment. Our colored colleague said nothing about the thousands of people of his race that were hanged, burned, and drowned in the States where they have a real Democratic Party all the time. He was very careful not to say that he appeared before our committee and urged our committee to report out his bill. He tells us about calling on "my great President", Mr. Roosevelt, and of his undying loyalty to the Democratic Party. Why does he not demand that "my great President" make the antilynching bill a "must" bill, and why does he not insist on his Democratic Party passing an antilynching bill? If "my President" could force through the peanut bill, the potato bill, the cotton bill, the pig bill, and other bills, why not do something for these millions and millions of loyal colored people Mr. MITCHELL says have been and are willing to vote for "my President"?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. [Applause, Republicans rising.]

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be given 2 minutes, so that I may ask him a question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COOLEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I object. [Laughter and applause.] Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the objection.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I understood the gentleman from Illinois desired an additional 5 minutes.

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. I withdrew my objection.

Mr. KNUTSON. No. The gentleman from Illinois has not withdrawn his objection.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. There were some facts I wanted to submit which were considered by the Democratic Judiciary Committee and the action taken by the Democratic Judiciary Committee of the Senate, and I wish to discuss the action taken thereon and the discrimination shown therein in relief and in other matters in the States where the Democratic Party is in control.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky may have 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, because of the expiration of my time I was unable to complete all that I desired to say, and under the unanimous consent given to me by the Speaker of the House I extend the remainder of my speech in the RECORD.

IS THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY A SAFE PLACE FOR NEGROES TO VOTE?

Our colored Democratic colleague from Chicago informs an awaiting world that the Negro race of this country found out that the Republican Party was its enemy and "had done the Negro more harm than it had done harm to this country, and had found out that the Democratic Party is a safe place for the Negro to live and vote." We have pointed out how unsafe it was for the Negro to live in the States that are now and have been before and since the war controlled by the Democratic Party. The next question arises, Is the Democratic Party a safe place for the Negro to vote? Our colleague says that he and others "were able" to bring to the fold of the Democratic Party 60 percent of the Negro votes in the States where Negroes can vote. He also tells us that he is going to make a great campaign this year in the States where Negroes are permitted to vote. The Democratic Party is now flirting with the Negroes because the Negroes have one thing that the Democratic Party want, and they want and need it very much—that is their votes. Is not this a very, very strange situation? It was Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party that gave the Negroes their freedom and their right to vote. It was the Republican Party that required the Democratic States to adopt constitutions and laws recognizing the freedom of the Negro and his right to vote.

The Republican States of the North, East, and West freely adopted such constitutions and laws, and these free Republican States have always maintained these constitutions and laws, and but for this action and this persistent defense and protection by the Republican Party through all the years, our colored colleague would not have the right to vote. He would not be in Congress; he would not be going over the Republican States "where Negroes vote" urging the Negroes to vote the Democratic ticket. Why does he not go where the Democratic Party really is, and where there are seven or eight million of his race and some three or four million of votes? Why not go there and make his appeal? For instance, in his native State of Alabama, and to Texas, South Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana, Florida, Arkansas, and North Carolina. It seems to me that those are fertile fields.

IS THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY SAFE PLACE FOR NEGROES TO VOTE?

Our colleague Mitchell, Booker T. Washington, or even the great Fred Douglass could have lived in those States for a hundred years and not one of them could have been elected as dog catcher. I am informed that in 15 counties of one of these States in recent elections not a single negro vote was cast, and in another of these States there was not a Negro vote cast in 5 counties. He can sit among his Democratic colleagues here on the floor of the House; but if he should campaign down in Alabama, Texas, South Carolina, Mississippi, or other real Democratic States, he would not be permitted to ride in the same railroad coach with his Democratic colleagues from those States. The laws of those States would permit the vilest criminal and the lowest-down white man to ride in the same railroad coach with them, but it would not permit their Democratic colored colleague from Chicago to do so.

We have pointed out how powerful and great the Democratic Party is in the State of Texas. Under the laws passed by a Democratic legislature in that State, our Democratic colleague would not be permitted to vote in a Democratic primary and he would not be permitted to attend a Democratic convention, and I am informed that the Democratic Legislature of Texas some months ago adopted a resolution calling upon the Democratic Party of the Nation to prevent Negro delegates from sitting in the Democratic national convention.

It would be easy for our colored colleague [Mr. MITCHELL] to vote the Democratic ticket in South Carolina. The Democrats have put on their statute books a law giving a Negro a right to vote in a Democratic primary—there is no real Republican Party in South Carolina—providing 10 good Democrats will make a sworn affidavit that they know the particular Negro and to their own personal knowledge he voted for Wade Hampton in 1876 and has been supporting the Democratic Party ever since. Wade Hampton was a candidate in 1876, 60 years ago. Our colored colleague from Chicago is less than 60 years of age. You can see how easy and safe it would be for him to vote in and for his new-found love, the Democratic Party in South Carolina.

It is interesting to study what effective efforts have been put forth in Mississippi to take away the right of the Negro to vote. He must first register. In order to register he must be able to satisfy the clerk of the court, before whom he registers, of his ability to read and interpret the Constitution of Mississippi and the Constitution of the United States. In order to make it easy for him to read the Constitution, the clerk presents him a copy, so I am informed by many of the leading educated reliable Negroes of that State, with some of the lines arranged perpendicularly and other lines horizontally on the page. If a Negro can figure out that puzzle, they proceed to ask him some real questions about "what is an ex-post-facto law, and what does it mean to suspend the writ of habeas corpus?" If the clerk refuses to permit the Negro to register there is no appeal from his decision. A recent census shows there are 1,009,781 Negroes living in Mississippi, more Negroes than whites. Only about six or eight thousand Negroes vote in that State.

In some of these Democratic States some years ago they adopted the so-called "grandfather clause", denying the right to vote to those Negroes whose parents or grandparents were slaves. So far as I have been able to learn, there is not a real Democratic State in the Union, or border State, that the Democrats have not adopted the grandfather clause, or something equally as effective, or has not attempted to do so. The Democrats made tremendous efforts to adopt the grandfather clause to the State Constitutions of Kentucky, Missouri, and Maryland. Who prevented these grandfather clauses from being adopted and the disfranchisement of the black people? It was accomplished through the leadership of the Republican Party in those States. What party has been busy trying to take away the right to vote of the colored people ever since they were granted the right to vote by Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party? It has been the Democratic Party. The Democratic Party, where it controls—and the leaders off the record make no denial—are opposed to the Negroes participating in politics. They contend the Negroes are not qualified or fit to participate in government.

It is the Republican Party, through all the years, that has fought these efforts of the Democratic Party to disfranchise the Negro, and the Republican Party has never ceased in its efforts to preserve a free ballot for the Negro and all citizens alike without regard to race, creed, or color. Yet, in the face of this record and these admitted facts, our Democratic colored colleague from Chicago tells us and the country that the Negroes found out 4 or 5 years ago that Abraham Lincoln was a deceiver; that the Republican Party has been through all the years the enemy of the Negro race, and they have found that the Democratic Party is the safe place for them to live and to vote.

NEGROES ELECTED TO OFFICE

Our colored colleague [Mr. MITCHELL] says that he is the first Negro to be elected to Congress by the Democratic Party. I assume that is true. Under the free-election laws that the Republican Party, after the war, required these real Democratic States to adopt, at least two Negroes were elected to the United States Senate and many more Negroes to Congress. In the free States (where Negroes vote) the Republican Party has elected a hundred Negroes where the Democratic Party has elected one, but let us bear in mind that Mr. MITCHELL would never have been elected in his district if the Democrats could have elected a white Democrat. The colored race has about 70 percent of the population. In 1928 the Republicans elected De Priest, a colored man. From 1928 to 1932 the Democrats tried in every way possible to defeat De Priest with a white Democrat. In 1932 they nominated a Mr. Baker, a white man in that district, but he died before the election. There was some division among the colored Republicans. Certain Democrats of the Chicago ring thought it was a good time to further split the Republican Party in that district, and a small committee nominated our colored colleague [Mr. MITCHELL].

You will find that the Democrats never give their support to any Negro anywhere until after the Republican Party has honored the Negroes and the Democrats cannot beat the Negro Republican with a white Democrat, but if the real Democratic Party really wants to send Negroes to the American Congress they should permit the Negroes in these Southern States to vote. They should not be content to send only one Negro to Congress, and he a renegade Republican. Why not send some real Negroes from the South? When De Priest, the colored Republican from this same colored district of Chicago, was elected to Congress some of our Democratic friends almost blew the lid off the Capitol. They claimed that it was an outrage and a disgrace for any district to send "a nigger to Congress", and our colleague [Mr. MITCHELL] can mark it down, if the Democrats in that district ever get in shape to send a white Democrat to Congress he will be out. I understand, however, that the Republicans are now united in that district. They have nominated De Priest, and he will return to Congress at the November election.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY—TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE

Our colored colleague speaks eloquently about the Tuskegee Institute and Booker T. Washington. Tuskegee Institute was founded through the generosity of northern Republicans and those who, like the Republican Party, have always been deeply concerned in promoting the welfare of the colored race.

The great Howard University is called the Harvard of the Negro race of this country. It is a great institution. Was it founded by the Democratic Party or the Democrats of this Nation? No. A few years after the war, through the generosity of outstanding Republican philanthropists and those sincerely interested in the progress and development of the colored race contributed the money out of their own pockets to found that great institution. It was named "Howard" out of respect to General Howard, one of the commanders of the Union forces and a great friend and admirer of Abraham Lincoln. It was a Republican Congress that initiated the policy of the Federal Government making appropriations to Howard University. For years and years every step taken in this direction was vigorously resisted by the Democratic Party in Congress.

It was the Republican Party that established the Freedmen's Bureau and the Freedmen's Hospital, and it was the Republicans that established scores and scores of other splendid educational and hospital institutions throughout the land for the benefit of the colored race.

DISCRIMINATION

Our Democratic colored colleague speaks of the dole that has been handed out to the colored people. According to reliable reports, even in this there is the worst sort of discrimination against his people. There have been great State meetings of colored people in various Democratic States. In one State a great gathering of colored people pointed out that while more than 50 percent of the population was colored, and the colored people need relief more than any other class, yet they had received only about 5 percent of the relief sent to that State. In a certain Democratic State it is reported that not one single colored contractor has received a contract under this relief work. The white-collared colored workers were even denied opportunities to help administer relief to their own race with only rare exceptions, and they were paid only about half what the white Democratic workers received for the same character of work.

The colored people have been discriminated against in these Democratic States in the distribution of the Federal funds for building schools, gymnasiums, playgrounds, and so forth.

In some of the Democratic States the per capita for the colored children is about one-fifth or one-sixth of what it is for the white children. School busses are supplied in abundance for the white children, but only in rare instances are busses provided for the black children in those States.

What chance have the toilers among the black people to organize and maintain labor unions and farm unions to promote the welfare of themselves and their families in the Democratic States?

One of the greatest discriminations against colored people, especially in the South, was the passage of the Bankhead Act and the A. A. A. This is made clear in the report of the Committee of Thirteen sent by the Administrator of the A. A. A. to visit the South and find out the effect of the Cotton Act and the A. A. A. measures, especially on the tenant farmers or croppers and laborers of the South. They were appointed by the New Deal. They were acting for the New Deal. They made their report last September. It was kept secret until recently, when the Republicans forced it from under cover.

That report disclosed how hard the colored tenant farmers and laborers were hit in the South. It was an easy matter for that great British corporation that held 50,000 acres of cotton and sugar land in Mississippi, and others, to secure a million dollars in these free checks, but it was a rare thing for a poor Negro to receive one of the checks of the A. A. A., and so forth. The effect of these measures, this report says, was to drive approximately a million tenant farmers and laborers from the farms and force them on relief. They number, with their wives and children, perhaps more than 4,000,000 people, and this is one of the reasons that the relief rolls have grown so rapidly under this New Deal administration.

The black people for the most part are wage earners. The high processing taxes hit them harder than any other group in this country. In many instances it doubled the cost of flour, meal, meat, and other necessities of life.

Yes, this New Deal administration took the means of making a livelihood from these millions of colored people and now they are using the dole to capitalize on the miseries of these needy people, to club them and force them to support the Democrat Party.

I am not ready to believe that the millions of honest, industrious black men and black women of this country are willing to exchange their liberties for a mess of Democratic pottage. I am unwilling to believe that they are not ready and anxious to have honest-to-God work with honest-to-God wages to support themselves and their families as honest-to-God American citizens. I know they think more of their liberties, lives, and their rights as freemen and free citizens than they do of this small dole.

The alien, yes, even the smuggled-in alien and the criminal alien, in the North and East under this New Deal secures a much larger portion of dole and higher wages under the work relief than do the black citizens of these Democratic States.

The Republican Party stands for adequate relief for its needy citizens. They have put forth every effort in Congress to help secure adequate relief and to have this relief administered without regard to politics, so that every needy person may receive just and fair treatment without regard to politics, race, creed, or color, and so that this relief may go to those who need relief and not be squandered on this great army of approximately 300,000 Democratic politicians who have been put on the backs of the black as well as the white taxpayers or our Nation.

The Republican Party stands four-square for relief to the needy, but it is opposed to this relief being consumed by white Democratic politicians and so-called overhead expenses. In some instances 90 cents of the dollar appropriated for relief goes to the Democratic politicians and for overhead, and only 10 cents of the dollar goes to the needy. The Republican Party is unalterably opposed to any such policy, and it is now and has been through all the years unalterably opposed to these discriminations against the black people.

CAN THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY DO SOMETHING FOR THE NEGRO?

The Democratic Party has absolute control. It can do many things for the black race. What is dearer to any man than life? What next does he hold as one of his inalienable rights and priceless possessions? The right to be free and vote. The Democrats can join with the Republicans and pass an antilynching bill which will, especially in those States now where they are denied equal protection of the law according to the report of the Democratic Judiciary Committee of the Senate. It will save innocent men, women, and children from being hanged, burned, and drowned by the mobs. It has the control, and especially in the States where the political rights given to the black race by the Republican Party have been taken from it by the Democratic Party. It can restore these rights vouchsafed to them by the Constitution. It can provide a free ballot. It is said that the ballot will solve every question in this great Republic. Under the present general denial of the right to vote in these Democratic States, Democratic officers may permit mobs, and in some instances actually conspire with the mobs to murder and burn Negroes. The Negro has no way to correct conditions like that. In States where Negroes have the right to vote, they can protect with their votes their lives, and help to correct such conditions.

The Democratic Party can change its policy of discrimination against the black people in educational, industrial, and economic opportunities. A large percentage of the black population must depend upon their wages as workers for the support of themselves and their families. It has been charged on the floor of this House and in the Senate by Democrats that this administration has been trying to force through the Kerr-Coolidge immigration bill, and thereby break down the wholesome immigration laws passed by Republican Congresses and signed by Republican Presidents. This, of course, would increase the number of alien job holders and relief clients. A lot of us, Democrats and Republicans, have been trying to get through the Starnes-Reynolds anti-immigration bill. It would apply the quota to the Western Hemisphere and keep out millions of Mexicans and others who have been coming into our country and taking the jobs from our black as well as our white workers. We have a great army of criminal aliens in this country. We have millions of aliens who have come into this country unlawfully. Millions are on relief and have relief jobs. These should be deported. In the North, East, and West such aliens as I have enumerated receive better wages and larger portions of relief than do the loyal Negro citizens of the South.

This administration could have avoided and should not continue its unconstitutional program of scarcity in this country. It could have adopted a policy and program of plenty. Instead of forcing millions of black people from their farms and jobs, they could urge them to produce at least enough food and raw materials to supply our own country, and if there should be a surplus that might beat down the market a plan could be arranged to take care of that surplus, even out of the Treasury, and maintain fair prices. This administration could stop this tremendous flow of foreign farm products and foreign goods into our country that take away the jobs of black as well as white workers.

This administration took more than 40,000,000 acres of productive land out of production and forced the Negro and others to pay heavy processing taxes in order that the checks might be handed out by the million dollars each to the big landowners and plantation owners of this country. Yes; it turned out that one big wheat farmer was renting Indian lands at from 50 cents to $1.50 per acre, and the Government then handed him not less than $7.50 per acre not to produce wheat. Under this transaction, sanctioned by the A. A. A., more than $28,000 in easy money was handed to him. The black man and his family, who attempt to eat biscuits or white bread, was taxed more than 20 cents a sack on flour.

Yes; this administration handed a British corporation down in Mississippi nearly a million dollars not to produce cotton, and forced its Negro tenants and Negro workers from the lands and forced these black folks to pay a high processing tax on their shirts, overalls, and other clothing for themselves and their families.

This administration could protect our white farmers and the black farmers from the imports of foreign farm products. Its processing tax destroyed the export market for more than 4,000,000 bales of cotton. If we had a sane American policy it would require at least 40,000,000 acres or more of good land to replace these foreign products from foreign lands, and to produce these millions of bales of cotton. This administration could prevent discrimination against the black people of the South in the way of direct relief and work relief. This administration has created a deficit of at least $12,000,000,000, and before the end we will have a national debt of approximately $40,000,000,000. The black people, as well as the white, their children, and their childrens' children must help to pay these deficits and debts, and to meet this wild squandering and wasting of the taxpayers' money because taxes must come from those who consume, it matters not how poor or how black you are.

If you consume, you must pay taxes. No administration in all history has soaked the common people, black and white, with taxes as this administration has. This administration could adopt sane, sound, and economical policies, cut down the taxes, and increase opportunities. It could shut out the products that are coming into this country from Japan and every other country of the earth. These take away the jobs of white and black workers in the shops, mills, factories, and mines of our country. We must work out a plan where our people, black and white, may be gainfully employed and not depend upon the little dole handed out by the Democratic Party, and this great Nation must always be ready and willing to help those who cannot help themselves. Let this be a land of equal opportunity to all, with special privileges to none.

OUR COLORED DEMOCRATIC COLLEAGUE SHOULD TELL HIS BRETHREN

Our colored colleague should tell his brethren the whole truth. He gravely tells us that Abraham Lincoln is dead and that he has been dead for 70 years. The Savior of Man has been dead for 1,900 years, but His spirit still lives. The purpose for which the Man of Galilee died is yet a great living ideal in charting the lives and guiding the footsteps of men.

The Great Emancipator shed his blood that the father and mother of our colleague might be free and to save him from the curse of being born a slave. The spirit of Abraham Lincoln and his wonderful work as the chief exponent of the Republican Party and the great ideals that he and that party espoused at the time, still live and will live so long as the people of this Nation love freedom and the Union.

When our colored colleague goes out to campaign this year in the free Republican States to urge the colored people to support the Democratic ticket, may we urge him to tell the whole story and the true story about Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party? Let him say to his audience, "Brethren, I would not be holding a high office and would not be here to address you and you would not be here to hear me as freemen with the right to vote, and my own father and mother would have continued to feel the sting of the lash and would have died with their chains on but for Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party."

Let him tell them the whole sordid, terrible story of approximately 3,000 of their black brethren being hung, burned, and drowned by mobs between 1889 and 1935 in the 13 Democratic States of the Union. Tell them that more than 175 of these upon investigation were found to be innocent and guiltless of any crime. Tell them that approximately 100 of these were women and not more than one-sixth of these 3,000 black folks were charged with rape or even attempted rape.

Tell them about section 3 of his antilynching bill that fixes the punishment of an officer who conspires with a mob to lynch a black prisoner with punishment from 2 to 10 years in the penitentiary, and that only in 12 cases out of more than 3,000 has anyone been apprehended and convicted for these mob crimes and then given but little punishment.

Tell them that he has not appeared before the Judiciary Committee or urged his bill or any other antilynching bill to be reported.

Tell them that his great President pushed through the peanut, pig, cotton, and potato bills, and with an overwhelming majority in both the House and Senate, with an offer of support of at least 90 percent of the Republicans, he has turned deaf ears to the black race of this country to save their people from the mobs, and all of the thirty-odd antilynching bills have been allowed to sleep for more than 3 years.

Tell his brethren that the Democratic Party has always fought any effort to put through antilynching bills, and that they will not put one through this time, although the Republican minority has urged them to do so.

Tell them that the real Democratic Party of the Nation has fought bitterly every step taken by the Republican Party and others for the advancement of this race.

Tell them that even the enemy aliens of this country in the North and East receive a larger portion of the dole and a larger wage for relief work than the honest, law-abiding colored citizens in these Democratic States.

Tell them that the Democratic Party, where it has control, has been busy through all the years to take away and nullify the franchise rights given to them by Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party.

Tell them that approximately 200 Democrats in the North, East, and West could have long ago brought out the antilynching bill to the floor for action if these Democrats of the North, East, and West had signed the petition to bring out the antilynching bill. This petition has been numerously signed by Republicans.

Tell his brethren about the great Democratic leader taking him up on a high mountain between 1928 and 1932 and showing him "the kingdoms of the earth."

Tell them that during President Roosevelt's administration there has been a lynching approximately every 15 days, but still the President and his big majorities in the House and Senate take no steps, and "the mob rides on."

Tell them that, even after the speeches of himself, the magnificent monuments and memorials built to the immortal Lincoln and the Union soldiers and sailors still stand throughout this land and in every country and nation of the earth.

Tell them the Republican Party will still live on through the years to save our country and fight for the rights of the colored race.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COOLEY). Under the special order of the House, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. NELSON] for 15 minutes.

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I want to submit a unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. NELSON. I yield.

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be given 5 minutes to reply to the gentleman's talk.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, when the gentleman from Chicago addressed the House the other day he refused to yield, and I think it is ill-becoming the gentleman to insist on interrupting the gentleman from Kentucky and then to ask for time.

Mr. SCHULTE. Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, it was not my purpose when I entered this Chamber today to make a speech. My only excuse for asking the time of this House to address you at this time is to reply to some of the misstatements of fact made by the gentleman from Kentucky in his attack on me and my speech delivered on this floor April 22 last. Had the gentleman from Kentucky yielded as I so requested and permitted me to correct some of the most glaring misstatements of facts made by him during his tirade, I would not now ask this time to address you; but, Mr. Speaker, I wish to assure you that while it was not my purpose to speak, I am happy to have this opportunity to stand here once again for the purpose of affirming every word I said in my speech April 22 last, notwithstanding the gross misquotations that have been brought to you by the gentleman from Kentucky.

To begin with, I may say that when I stood here on the 22d of April I read Abraham Lincoln's own speech, and I read every word that he used discussing the question of the abolition of slavery and the paragraph which he took from the Republican platform of 1860, and I defy any man, living or dead, to show the contrary. I shall repeat or read the same later.

ROBSION'S SPEECH SAME OLD REPUBLICAN STORY

What have we done here this morning? We have listened to a typical Republican campaign speech. We have listened to the speech that has been made by Republicans to my people for 70 years, and all the while they have kept us in political slavery [applause], and now one of my colleagues from Kentucky [Mr. ROBSION] has the audacity to wish to continue that kind of political slavery.

What is the purpose of this speech? It has but one purpose, coming as it does from the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky. It has been made to order for no purpose except to continue to deceive the Negro voters of this country and to bind upon them the shackles of political slavery, in order to use them as tools for the Republican Party. I should like to remind the gentleman that the Negro of 1936 is not the Negro of 1870, 1880, and 1890, but a new Negro with political vision and ambition. He has struggled for political freedom, and it will do your cause no good to go back to 1860 and wave the red flag before our faces. We have too long tried you and your party, to our sorrow.

SEVENTY YEARS OF NEGRO LOYALTY TO REPUBLICAN PARTY

For 70 years we followed you blindly; for 70 years we perpetuated you in power; and for 70 long years you promised relief, and forgot your promises the minute you found yourself in office. You have had your day with the Negro vote.

Granting that all you contend is true—and I say it is not—has not the Negro paid you for what you did for him in 1861, 1863, and 1865? Is it your idea that because he was liberated during the administration of a Republican President he must still vote your ticket as a matter of gratitude, with his eyes closed toward his present and future needs? I deny that this should be the requirement of any party. Does not 70 years of unbroken loyalty to you and your party even up the debt, or is it your contention that this party loyalty you are claiming is to be an eternal thing? Can you not cease to talk about what your party did 70 years ago, and tell the aspiring youth of this country what your party proposes to do in 1936 and the years to follow? Do you think we are so blind and so dumb as to be led again to the political slaughter by Republicans seeking to hold office, whose record insofar as we are concerned is a chain of broken promises reaching across three-quarters of a century?

REPUBLICAN PARTY NO LONGER GENEROUS TO THE NEGRO

It has well been said by an outstanding Negro Republican:

> The generous attitude of the Republican Party toward the Negro ended with the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, 28 years ago. Since then the Grand Old Party has deviated from its ancient doctrine of human rights in quest of material prosperity. It has grown cold and indifferent toward its black ward and beneficiary, as if in the process of weaning him. In the meantime the Democratic Party has been gradually growing, not only less hostile but more friendly.

I repeat to you, my friends, what I said April 22 are the words of Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln said himself. He did not expect to interfere with slavery where it existed. I was making no particular attack on Abraham Lincoln. I take second place to no person from Kentucky or any other State in admiring that great statesman, but I deny that he is President now, and that his party has by its political conduct bound me or my people to follow their lead blindly.

LINCOLN—STATESMAN AND POLITICIAN

Abraham Lincoln has been dead 70 years. If the gentleman does not know it, there are people who know that when he lived he was a politician like all the rest of us. He worked to get into office. He served in this House. He served in the legislature of his State. He served in various offices. He even served in the Presidency of the United States, and he made no effort to free the Negro until 1863, almost 2 years after he came into the Presidency, and I am told, and those who have read the story know, the difficulty that Republicans and Democrats alike throughout this country, who believed in the abolition of human slavery, had in getting him to sign the emancipation proclamation, which was not signed until January 1, 1863. If he and his party were so bent on freeing the Negro, why did they have to wait all those 2 years to start about it? They started about it when we had conscription riots in New York City and German war vessels were standing off the coast of that State and helping to suppress the riots, and Abraham Lincoln had to free the Negroes in order to bring conscripts into the Army to save that situation.

LINCOLN'S ATTITUDE ON SLAVERY TAKEN FROM INAUGURAL ADDRESS (MARCH 4, 1861)

Apprehension seems to exist among the people of the Southern States that by the accession of a Republican administration their property and their peace and personal security are to be endangered. There has never been any reasonable cause for such apprehension. Indeed, the most ample evidence to the contrary has all the while existed and been open to their inspection. It is found in nearly all the published speeches of him who now addresses you. I do but quote from one of those speeches when I declare that "I have no purpose, directly or indirectly, to interfere with the institution of slavery in the States where it exists. I believe I have no lawful right to do so, and I have no inclination to do so." Those who nominated and elected me did so with full knowledge that I made this and many similar declarations and had never recanted them. And, more than this, they placed in the platform for my acceptance, and as a law to themselves and to me, the clear and emphatic resolution which I now read:

"Resolved, That the maintenance inviolate of the rights of the States, and especially the right of each State to order and control its own domestic institutions according to its own judgment exclusively, is essential to that balance of power on which the perfection and endurance of our political fabric depend, and we denounce the lawless invasion by armed force of the soil of any State or Territory, no matter under what pretext, as among the gravest of crimes."

I now reiterate these sentiments, and in doing so I only press upon the public attention the most conclusive evidence of which the case is susceptible, that the property, peace, and security of no section are to be in anywise endangered by the now incoming administration.

REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRATS ALIKE FOUGHT TO SAVE THE UNION

These are the words of the sainted Abraham Lincoln, after he had been elected and was no longer seeking votes, he had adopted his party's platform, not in 1854 or 1856, but in 1860, when he was that party's candidate. Why does the gentleman come here and tell us about a whole lot of platforms that were written just for the same purpose you are writing them now? We have the story of the man's work, we have the story of the man's life, and we know that Democrats as well as Republicans joined the Union Army and fought to preserve this Union. [Applause.]

I want to say that I have to take a second look at any man who comes here and tells us that the Republican Party is the party that saved the Union and the Democratic Party had nothing to do with it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois may proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. I thank you.

REPUBLICAN PARTY NO LONGER ABLE TO DECEIVE THE NEGRO

Now, my friends, what is the matter with the gentlemen on this side? I sounded an alarm to you the other day, and whether you believe it or not, you are going to witness not only difficulty but an impossibility in putting the Negro vote in your vest pocket this year. You can no longer fool the Negroes as you have done for 70 years. [Applause.]

You have boasted that you carry us in your vest pocket. That boast, thank God, is no longer true. In 1928, over here in the Barr Building, when Hoover was running for President of the United States, his campaign manager was approached and asked to give some money to maintain a Negro headquarters in Chicago, and he said, "We will not give another dime; we have the Negro vote in our vest pocket, and we can win without spending another cent on them."

Now, the Negroes have learned you do not want them.

NEGRO VOTERS THINK FOR THEMSELVES

You have said here today that the Democratic Party does not want them. I am inclined to concede that neither party particularly wants us. You, the Republicans, had us for 70 years, and kicked us around like footballs, and showed you have no real respect for us.

It is not a question now of which party wants us; it is a question of which party offers us a better opportunity to rise in this country and live as citizens should live. In other words, the question is this, which party does the Negro want? And I say frankly that the Negro not only wants but he is going to work for that party that assures him of the largest opportunity to enjoy the blessings of freedom, justice, and an opportunity to develop into the fullest degree of manhood. We shall not take either party all together upon its past record; we shall deal with both parties as they show an interest in us and deal with us in 1936. For my part there is no question in my mind but that the Democratic Party, as constituted today, offers the Negro by far the best opportunity in this country, and I shall use all the influence and all the power that I possess to drive this truth home to the Negroes in this country.

Today the Negro refuses to stand by you simply on 60-year-old promises still unfulfilled. Until you make good the promises that you have made for the last 70 years, we shall try new political fields not marked "G. O. P." [Applause.]

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois. I refuse to yield. The gentleman from Kentucky told you about conditions in Texas and what the Democratic Party would do to you. I come from Alabama and I would like to tell you what the Republican Party will do to you in Alabama.

REPUBLICAN PARTY DESERTED NEGRO IN THE SOUTH

I was a Republican and in a Republican convention in Alabama when the "lily white" Republican Party came into existence. I, with many others, was driven out of the Republican convention in City Hall just across from the big Hilman Hotel in Birmingham. The "lily whites" marched into the hotel. The Negroes were told to go out where they belonged, and no Negro could be admitted to the "lily white" party.

There were a few of us who met the educational qualifications, a few who met the property qualifications, and the Democrats registered us. After we were registered it was left to the Republican Party of Alabama to drive us out, although we were registered voters there. They said they were going to have a real white party. [Applause.] It is high time that you Republicans stopped playing the hypocrite. When the Democratic Party kicked us out they told us they did not want us. You told us that you wanted us and then kicked us out of the party. [Laughter and applause.]

The Republican Party has conjured with the name of Lincoln long enough. Lincoln has been dead for 70 years, and his party as the party of human rights died years ago. [Laughter and applause.]

Now, I am going to conclude with this story: There were two Irishmen—and I am making no reflections on the Irish; they are my friends—there were two Irishmen walking through the cemetery and reading the inscriptions on the tombstones. They came to one and they read, "Not dead but sleeping." Mike said to Pat, "What does it say there?" Pat says, "Not dead but sleeping." Mike says, "Listen, if I was dead I would confess it and not tell a lie about it, would you?" [Laughter and applause.]

FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAY ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. CARTWRIGHT, from the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 11687) to amend the Federal Aid Highway Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes, for printing under the rule.

ROOSEVELT THE HOME SAVER

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COOLEY). The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. NELSON] for 15 minutes.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. NELSON was granted leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD and to include official figures showing Federal aid extended to the Second Missouri Congressional District.)

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, "home" is the greatest of all words and Franklin D. Roosevelt the greatest of all home savers.

I like—

Says the President—

to think of our country as one home, in which the interests of each member are bound up with the happiness of all.

Under his guidance farm homes have been saved, town homes have been saved, old homes have been improved, and new homes have been built.

In this modern day, with its crowded cities, where so many are born in hospitals, live in apartment houses, and are buried from funeral homes, the anchor which in other days held fast in stress and storm had largely been lost. Happily, though, because we have in the White House a true home lover, a home saver, and a home helper, we are witnessing a new appreciation of the home and all that it means to America.

A little more than 3 years ago, when millions of homes—country homes and city homes—were about to be lost to their owners, a home-helping and home-saving program was proposed. It has worked wonderfully well. The story of how millions of home owners have been helped is one of the brightest in all our history. The benefits have included every State, every congressional district, and each of the more than 3,000 counties in the United States.

I shall refer especially to the 15 counties in Missouri's Second Congressional District, which I have the honor to represent. These counties are Benton, Boone, Camden, Carroll, Chariton, Cole, Cooper, Hickory, Howard, Lafayette, Miller, Moniteau, Morgan, Randolph, and Saline. In beauty of streams and lakes, in superiority of soil and citizenship and of homes and herds, this district is excelled by none.

Before referring in general to home saving, I want especially to speak of the farm home. I was born on a farm. My boyhood days, and, in fact, many years of my life, were lived on the old home place, which I still own and farm. My entire life thus far has been spent in the farm cause, so you will pardon me if I seem doubly interested in these homes out in the country, where those who till the soil and love the land live in close partnership with the Master of the Vineyard. I just cannot help feeling as I do, for down deep in my heart is a sympathy which comes only as a result of country living. I understand the farmer's battles. I know how great is his gamble; how he must contend with frost, flood, and drought, and unfavorable seasons in many forms. But he does not quit. If he did, famine would follow.

While home saving, under the leadership of our great President, has been confined to no class or group, the farmer has, I believe, received the greatest benefits, and justly so, because his needs were greatest, because he had held on just as long as he could.

On the Union Station here in Washington are the words, "The farm, best home of the family." It should be so. We must preserve this farm home. Having in the White House an understanding friend under whose leadership the American farmer was for the first time permitted to enjoy the benefits of a farm program which the farmer himself approved, a new prosperity and a new sense of security came to the country.

It is a sad day for the individual; yes, and a sadder day for America when, because of debt, the farm family is forced to leave the old home and pass for the last time from the house, which somehow seems almost to have a soul, and start out for, God only knows where.

I love old houses, with vines running over,
Set in a riot of roses and clover,
Set in a wonder of old, old trees,
Dreaming of far, dim memories.

It is important that the farmer-minded man be kept on the farm, just as it is that the farmer-minded Member be kept in Congress. With the farm problem the greatest of all, there is need in legislative halls of men who speak and understand the farm language; men who know the meaning of "gee" and "haw"; who know that the now frequently used term "earmarking", as applied to money, had its origin on the farm, where hogs' ears were marked with crops and slits and underbits; men who have heard the expression, "busted hame strings"; and who not only know the meaning of "time to take out" but who will never consent to "take out" until the fight for a square deal for the farmer has been won. So it behooves agricultural districts to be truly represented by those who have, during the darkest days, stood on the firing line for the farmer.

I have referred to the loss of farm homes. When a great tree falls it may not mean much but the loss is there, and when a million trees fall the loss in the forest is felt. When one farmer loses his home it may falsely be thought of as an individual matter. It is, though, a part of a national problem. The helpful, anchoring influence of one farm family, the members of which have for generations owned and lived upon the same land, may be greater than that of a thousand families crowded together, yet strangers, in an immense apartment house. The touch of the soil is a human touch. There is, too, the financial side. Every forced sale of a farm reduces the sale value of every other farm in the neighborhood.

There is justifiable pride in ownership. Only the man who has owned land can fully appreciate the meaning of the term "the home place." As he improves this place it becomes a part of himself. It has been said that nobody fights for a boarding house and, although some of the best farmers I have ever known are tenants, few fight for rented farms, unless they may look with hope to the day of ownership. Under the Roosevelt plan it is being made possible for many to buy farms, while others are enabled to hold on to what they have. The same applies to city homes.

A GLAD DAY AND A SAD DAY

In the home-saving, farm-betterment battle as it has been fought under the Roosevelt administration, 2 days—one glad, the other sad—stand out in my mind. One of these days was when, as a member of the Agricultural Committee, I, with others, stood on the south porch of the White House and looked into the faces of more than 5,000 farmers as they listened to an address by President Roosevelt. These men had come to Washington to express their appreciation of the A. A. A. program. The other day was that on which the United States Supreme Court, by a divided vote, declared the Farm Act unconstitutional. When decision was made known in the House there was cheering on the Republican side but none on the Democratic side. In justice let it be said that not all minority Members applauded. Some, like the Democrats from farm States, were sad and silent.

No wonder that farmers who had suffered heavy losses under the Hoover Farm Board, when farm prices fell to one-third of what they had been, were distressed when the Supreme Court put an end to the A. A. A., under which prices had more than doubled.

THE NEW FARM PROGRAM

When the A. A. A. was knocked out, friends of the farmer did not "take out." Following the Supreme Court decision, our House Agricultural Committee, carrying out the known wishes of the home saver in the White House, went to work to frame a bill to, insofar as possible, take the place of the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Using as a basis the Soil Erosion Act, which our committee had reported in the first session of the present Congress, a bill was soon agreed upon, reported out, and passed. It is under this law, "An act to promote the conservation and profitable use of agricultural land resources by temporary Federal aid to farmers and by providing for a permanent policy of Federal aid to States for such purposes", the act being approved February 29, 1936, that the new farm program, for which this Congress has appropriated $500,000,000, is being carried on. So, under President Roosevelt, home saver, all Federal aid for farmers who voluntarily cooperate, but without contracts, has not been lost. Rather is the farmer now put in a position where he can afford to do what he has long wanted to do, to build up and save the soil. In this work, so necessary if agriculture is to survive and if those who follow after us are to be fed, unless it be by foreigners, the entire Nation will share.

PAYING EVERY DOLLAR DUE

Not only was the new farm-help bill hurried through ahead of the 1936 planting season, but Congress, and especially those of us on the Agricultural Committee, saw to it that every dollar needed, $296,000,000, was provided to pay in full every farmer who had signed, or agreed to sign, a crop-production contract under the A. A. A. The last of thousands of these corn-hog checks, totaling $50,000 or more for each of many counties, are now being mailed out from Washington and are helping save more farm homes.

MORE THAN $6,000,000

The following table, showing rental and benefit payments received by farmers of our congressional district from May 12, 1933, to January 31, 1936, under the A. A. A., later payments not being included, speaks for itself. Without such payments, sometimes referred to as the farmer's tariff, thousands of farm owners would have been unable to meet interest and taxes.

LOANS AT LOW INTEREST RATES

Under the Roosevelt home-saving program the Farm Credit Administration made loans in Missouri, from May 1, 1933, through March 31, 1936, as follows: Farm mortgage loans—Federal land banks, 6,634, totaling $21,265,700; Land Bank Commissioner, 13,518, totaling $21,903,200. Short-term credit—Production credit associations, 9,484 loans totaling $4,510,033; emergency crop loans, 12,042, totaling $874,836; drought relief loans, 20,605, totaling $2,030,507.

A long-time loan at a low rate of interest is one of the greatest needs of the man deeply in debt. The object in making farm loans has been to provide a rate of interest that the borrower can afford to pay and to give him time in which to pay. Such loans have brought new hope to many farm families. Here is a report, by counties, in the Second Congressional District in Missouri:

Number and amount of Federal land bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans closed by counties in the Second Congressional District of Missouri for the period May 1, 1933, to Jan. 1, 1936

PRODUCTION CREDIT LOANS

As it has been found impossible to secure figures showing, separately, loans made to each county in the Second Missouri District under the Production Credit Administration, there is given figures for associations in the several divisions of the State, which include the following counties: Chariton, Carroll, and Randolph, 1,073 loans for $510,585; Lafayette, 332 loans for $228,579; Hickory, 1,284 loans for $492,872; Benton, Boone, Camden, Cole, Cooper, Howard, Miller, Moniteau, Morgan, and Saline, 559 loans for $234,162.

R. F. C. LOANS

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation had, up to February 29, 1936, made loans within counties shown as follows:

Loans by Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Second Congressional District of Missouri

H. O. L. C. LOANS

As I have said, home-saving loans have been made, both in city and country. Second Congressional District loans, as reported by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation up to January 2, 1936, totaling $2,209,228, are as follows: Benton County, 5 loans, $4,050; Boone County, 189 loans, $544,929; Camden County, none; Carroll County, 25 loans, $48,765; Chariton County, 32 loans, $48,861; Cole County, 93 loans, $315,149; Cooper County, 21 loans, $68,416; Hickory County, 2 loans, $2,942; Howard County, 58 loans, $94,384; Lafayette County, 29 loans, $60,243; Miller County, 29 loans, $40,861; Moniteau County, 18 loans, $27,049; Morgan County, 12 loans, $14,389; Randolph County, 304 loans, $609,272; and Saline County, 174 loans, $329,918.

The almost total failure in Missouri of some crops in 1934 caused many farmers to seek emergency loans in order to carry on and save their homes.

CASH INSTEAD OF CARRION

Bad as was the 1934 drought in our district, hardships were made less and losses reduced because of action taken by the Roosevelt administration. For instance, livestock was not "sold for a song" or allowed to die on the farms as in other droughts. Instead the Federal Government provided funds for the purchase at reasonable prices of drought cattle, sheep, and goats in our congressional district as follows, farmers in this way receiving almost three-quarters of a million dollars:

LOANS, GRANTS, AND ADJUSTMENTS

The beginning of the Roosevelt administration found farmers deep in debt, due largely to less than cost-of-production prices for which they had been forced to sell livestock and grain during the latter part of the preceding administration. These ruinous prices also applied to eggs and butter and everything else offered for sale by the thrifty farm woman. As a result of such markets and other contributing causes, President Roosevelt approved a rural-help program. The following figures show some of the work up to April 30, 1936, in the Second Congressional District in Missouri:

County	Number of farmers to whom loans have been made	Amount of approved loans
Benton	6	$3,534.50

FARM-DEBT ADJUSTMENTS

An important help in the Roosevelt home-saving program has been in the scaling down of debts to a point where they could be refinanced, with justifiable hope of final payment. So agricultural advisory councils were formed, and in thousands of cases debt adjustments favorable to both parties concerned have been agreed upon. These advisory councils were set up in 2,752 counties, and it is estimated that the scale-downs amount to well above $2,000,000.

BIG APPROPRIATIONS, BUT BETTER OFF

Money appropriated is not going in loans to foreign countries which will never repay. Every dollar stays at home, where it goes to save homes and help millions of needy men and women and boys and girls. True, billions of dollars have been spent—spent to save, not to destroy life. Of this money much has gone out in loans and will be repaid. And get this: The estimated gain in wealth of the United States since the beginning of the present administration on March 4, 1933, is double that of every dollar appropriated for relief under President Roosevelt, who has made a sincere effort to correct a condition not of his making. Best of all, the time seems in sight when emergency appropriations will no longer be necesary. We are digging out.

With the lowest interest rates the farmer has ever had—and as a member of the Agricultural Committee, I am glad to have voted to continue these rates, including 3½ percent on land-bank loans—the debt burden is lighter. Then, with prices of hogs three times higher than under the Hoover low, where 1 pound of live hog formerly paid the interest on but 50 cents, it now pays interest on $2.

MORE THAN LOUISIANA PURCHASE PRICE

I am sorry that I do not have late figures showing total amounts received by our district from various Federal sources. While some of the figures which I use are almost a year old and are incomplete, they do show average payments of more than a million dollars per county, as follows: Benton, $655,454; Boone, $2,885,877; Camden, $449,254; Carroll, $1,518,959; Chariton, $1,249,160; Cole, $2,311,282; Cooper, $1,383,163; Hickory, $315,893; Howard, $1,090,191; Lafayette, $1,554,472; Miller, $582,178; Moniteau, $596,417; Morgan, $715,355; Randolph, $1,802,610; and Saline, $3,122,416.

In other words, under the Roosevelt home-saving administration, more Federal money has come to the Second Congressional District in Missouri than was paid for the entire Louisiana Purchase, which, under the leadership of Thomas Jefferson, was acquired for $15,000,000.

WORK OF THE C. C. C. CAMPS

Of all the emergency and relief work of the Roosevelt administration, none is more popular than that of the Civilian Conservation Corps. These C. C. C. camps make for home saving, boy saving, and soil saving.

When, a few weeks ago, word went out that more than 700 of these camps, including some in our district, were shortly to be discontinued, with others to follow later, I, with many of my colleagues who believed in this great cause, got busy. As one of an executive committee of eight, named to carry on the fight and empowered to act, I am glad to say that the camp-closing order was withdrawn and assurance given that all camps, where there is unfinished work and where the enrollment can be kept up to 163 men, will be continued. Only those of us who were in the thick of this fight to prevent the closing of the camps know how discouraging the outlook was for a while. As a part of the agreement reached, appropriations have been made to keep the camps going until the expiration of the law on April 1, 1936, at which time continuing legislation will, no doubt, be passed.

During the 3 years the Civilian Conservation Corps has been in operation, direct employment for varying periods of time has been afforded 44,666 Missouri men.

The estimated obligations for Emergency Conservation work in Missouri from April, 1933, through March 20, 1936, approximate $22,459,000. Of this sum, a total of $12,459,000 was obligated during the first 2 years of the program and the balance of $10,000,000, obtained from the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, was obligated between April 1, 1935, and March 20, 1936.

It is estimated that from the beginning of the program through February 29, 1936, Missouri enrollees have allotted home to dependents approximately $6,590,000 of their earnings. The basic cash allowance of each enrolled man in the corps is $30 per month. All of the young men and many of the war veterans allot from $22 to $25 of their monthly cash allowances to needy dependents, and these allotments are mailed directly to the families of the boys by the War Department. In addition to receiving cash allowances which permit them to contribute substantially to the support of their families, C. C. C. enrollees are housed, fed, clothed, given medical care, and afforded adequate recreational and educational opportunities.

At the present time there are 52 C. C. C. camps within the 13 congressional districts comprising the State of Missouri, of which 5 are located in the Second Congressional District, as follows: D-2, Carroll County, Carrollton, Mo.; SCS-20, Chariton County, Salisbury, Mo.; SCS-21, Moniteau County, California, Mo.; SCS-26, Randolph County, Moberly, Mo.; and SP-20, Miller and Camden Counties, Kaiser, Mo.

MORE MONEY FOR FARM ROADS

Most important in the life of the Nation is not the superhighway, the peacock boulevard, but the farm-to-market or neighborhood road which leads to a home, however humble.

It is for money to build such roads that I have worked as for no other cause, and, under the leadership of President Roosevelt, home saver, a new day has come in the country. Happy the man whose home is on a byway, yet who can travel a highway. With many more millions of dollars appropriated by the present Congress for farm-to-market and neighborhood roads, added comfort is coming to thousands of farm families. First consideration is being given to roads, not primarily for the tourist, but for the homefolk. We need the long, broad highways, but in common justice means should be provided so that they can be reached by all.

The following figures, as of April 30, 1936, supplied by Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, relate to highway projects in the Second Congressional District, under the supervision of the Federal Bureau and the State Highway Department of Missouri, and which are financed by funds made available by Congress since March, 1933:

Funds programmed, plans approved but not yet under construction, projects under construction, and projects completed

County	Estimated total cost	Federal funds	Miles
Benton	$217,487	$168,374	21.5
Boone	192,300	178,125	25.7
Camden	391,029	228,125	23.3
Carroll	456,856	341,633	38.8
Chariton	294,803	289,085	30.0
Cole	200,177	179,951	8.7
Cooper	68,569	59,689	9.9
Hickory	37,135	37,135	15.4
Howard	89,953	89,711	14.2
Lafayette	305,511	305,067	28.9
Miller	60,942	56,663	15.7
Moniteau	37,631	37,631	6.8
Morgan	63,531	47,737	20.5
Randolph	283,542	256,662	49.1
Saline	654,610	496,011	46.0
Total	3,354,076	2,771,602	354.5

On April 1 of the present year 215 miles of the more than 354 miles of road for our district had been completed, at a cost of $1,788,582, of this amount $1,440,072 being Federal funds.

SAVE THE SMALL TOWN, TOO

To save the farm and the small town is to save America and her homes. No red flag ever floated from a farm. We owe much to the villages, to the tiny towns which never grew up, but which, like little children, are most lovable. Calamity would long ago have come to our country had all the Main Streets grown to be Wall Streets. Lovers of country life and intent upon home saving, both the Roosevelts—two great Presidents—have seen this. Undue concentration of wealth builds crowded cities, homes of millionaires, and many mendicants. The country, whence come the durable satisfactions of life, is the ever-normal granary of real citizenship, and under the present administration more country homes have been saved than ever before. Better is it to have a farm within a mile of a live town of 1,000 people than own one on rural route 9,999 of a city of 1,000,000 population.

A BELIEVER IN BETTER HOMES

President Roosevelt is not only a home saver but he is also a believer in better homes. Following is a report of the Federal Housing Administration business in the Second Congressional District in Missouri through March 31, 1936:

Modernization notes insured: Benton County, 12, for $2,531; Boone County, 119, for $40,347; Camden County, 28, for $13,120; Carroll County, 9, for $3,561; Chariton County, 12, for $3,327; Cole County, 224, for $61,558; Cooper County, 34, for $7,655; Hickory County, 2, for $384; Howard County, 23, for $6,780; Lafayette County, 36, for $7,378; Miller County, 20, for $13,391; Moniteau County, 2, for $817; Morgan County, 10, for $2,656; Randolph County, 79, for $26,404; and Saline County, 39, for $7,866. Total, 669 notes, insured for the sum of $197,775.

RESETTLEMENT AND LAND UTILIZATION

The land-utilization program directed by the present administration involves the purchase of approximately 9,300,000 acres of land comprising 206 approved projects throughout the country. Land-utilization activities in the Second District in Missouri comprise the acquisition of land for the development of several land-use projects.

The University of Missouri Game Preservation involves the acquisition of approximately 2,253 acres in Boone County at an estimated cost of $29,073. The land-development plans for this acreage include forestation, reforestation, erosion, and flood control by tree planting and reseeding of barren areas, and so on. The authorized cost of the development work is $74,250.

The Swan Lake Migratory Waterfowl Refuge involves the acquisition of approximately 5,534 acres in Chariton County at an estimated cost of $162,124. The land purchased for this project by the Resettlement Administration is to be developed by the Bureau of Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture as a migratory-bird refuge.

The Lake of the Ozarks project includes 14,782 acres in Camden and Miller Counties at an estimated cost of $257,282. The land-development plans for this acreage provide for the establishment of a public-park area with many facilities open to Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, charity organizations, and the public in general. The present authorized cost of the development work is $208,450. On April 24 there were 689 men employed on the project.

Recently a rural resettlement project, which includes acreage in our district, has received final approval. This project, known as Osage Valley Farms, means the buying of approximately 10,500 acres of farming land in Cooper, Moniteau, Morgan, and Pettis Counties for the resettlement of 150 farm families on individual farms. The sum of $525,000 has been authorized for land purchase. The total estimated cost of the project is $1,641,500.

ASSISTANCE TO YOUTH

President Roosevelt, more than any other President, has given much sympathetic consideration to youth. For the first time millions of dollars have been set aside in a special fund for the boys and girls of America, the home owners and home builders of tomorrow.

The following shows National Youth Administration assistance given youth of the Second Congressional District in Missouri: Benton County: Monthly allotment of $264 to 44 high-school students at Cole Camp, Lincoln, and Warsaw. Boone County: Monthly allotment of $7,709 to 57 high-school students, 520 students at the University of Missouri, 27 students at Christian College and 9 students on projects. Camden County: Monthly allotment of $216 to 34 high-school students at Climax Springs, Linn Creek, Macks Creek, Montreal, and Stoutland. Carroll County: Monthly allotment of $236 to 31 high-school students at Bosworth, Carrollton, Norborne, and Tina. Chariton County: Monthly allotment of $198 to 37 high-school students at Bynumville, Dalton, Keytesville, Mendon, Rothville, Salisbury, Sumner, and Triplett. Cole County: Monthly allotment of $1,551 to 37 high-school students at Eugene and Jefferson City, 12 students at Jefferson City Junior College, 50 students at Lincoln University, and 33 on projects in Jefferson City. Cooper County: Monthly allotment of $162 to 28 high-school students at Blackwater, Boonville, Otterville, Pilot Grove, and Wooldridge. Hickory County: Monthly allotment of $849 to 4 high-school students at Glasgow and New Franklin, and 90 college students at Central College. Lafayette County: Monthly allotment of $270 to 30 high-school students at Alma, Concordia, Dover, Lexington, Mayview, and Odessa. College aid to six students at St. Paul's College. Miller County: Monthly allotment of $300 to 34 high-school students at Brumley, Eldon, Iberia, Olean, and School of the Osage. College aid to 15 students at Iberia Junior College. Moniteau County: Monthly allotment of $144 to 24 high-school students at Clarksburg, Fortuna, Jamestown, Latham, and Tipton. Morgan County: Monthly allotment of $534 to 47 high-school students in Gravois Mills, Oak Hill, Stover, Syracuse, and Versailles. Randolph County: Monthly allotment of $2,215 to 37 high-school students at Higbee, Huntsville, and Moberly; 17 college students at Moberly Junior College and 115 students on library project in the county. Saline County: Monthly allotment of $932 to 41 high-school students in Malta Bend, Marshall, Miami, Napton, Nelson, Slater, and Sweet Springs; college aid to 24 students at Missouri Valley College, and 20 students on library-extension project throughout the county.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION

Ever mindful of the comforts of the farm family, and especially of the homemaker, President Roosevelt early advocated legislation which would make possible electric light and power on farms. With Congress enthusiastically supporting the plan, there has been provided millions of dollars for rural electrification, and in our district hundreds of farmers have organized to take advantage of the new law. Think what a blessing this will be to the average farm home and how electricity will lighten the work of the woman in the house.

BANKS SAFE AND HOMES SAVED

Of all the home-saving moves made by President Roosevelt, his handling of the banking situation, taken a few hours after he became President, deserves first rank. Where, under the Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover administrations, there were thousands of bank failures, today a bank failure is almost unknown. Owing to the passage of the Federal deposit insurance law, for which I voted, a bank depositor can know that his money is absolutely safe, and homes are no longer lost because of "busted banks." It is a new day and a new deal.

SAFETY AND SECURITY

After all, though, higher prices, better business, and more employment are not enough. There must be a sense of safety and security. So our President proposed and witnessed the passage of the first Social Security Act ever enacted by Congress. Glad, indeed, was I to vote for this measure, which will benefit aged men and women and many others. The average home, too, has been made safer—safer against disease—because of the enlarged field of the United States Bureau of the Public Health Service; safer against gangsters, kidnapers, and other criminals, due to the work of G-men and other law-enforcing agencies.

Labor, never before having had such a friend in the White House, can today, with President Roosevelt advocating justice and right and placing the man above the dollar, share in the blessings of a new day.

SOME MISTAKES MADE, OF COURSE

In President Roosevelt's humanity-helping, home-saving program some mistakes have, of course, been made. But think what a terrible mistake it would have been, a mistake tragic beyond description, had nothing been tried. Not only would millions of average homes, since saved, been lost but no multimillionaire, once the masses had been driven to desperation, would have been secure in his possession. There is a point, in the search for right, where reason rests and radicalism rules.

In conclusion, I would say that greatest of all, and most worthy to be remembered, stand the home saver and the homemaker. The pioneer mother was the greatest character America has ever known. She was a "homebody", making of her dwelling place, humble as it might have been, "a little bit of heaven here." Nor have her daughters and granddaughters fallen short of the standard which she set. The American home is the best in the world and most important to be saved.

So, truly do I believe that in the years to come the highest tribute that the historian can possibly pay to Franklin D. Roosevelt, our great President, is to record that he was America's foremost home saver.

So long as there are homes to which men turn at the close of day;
So long as there are homes where children are, where women stay;
If love and loyalty and faith be found across those sills,
A stricken nation can recover from its gravest ills.

So long as there are homes where fires burn, and there is bread,
So long as there are homes where lamps are lit and prayers are said;
Although a people falter through the dark, and nations grope,
With God Himself back of these little homes, we have sure hope.

[Applause.]

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NELSON. I yield.

Mr. FULMER. I have enjoyed very much the splendid speech which the gentleman has made. I realize the gentleman is somewhat modest, and perhaps will not refer to himself, but in view of the fact that I have had the pleasure of serving with the gentleman for many years on the Committee on Agriculture, I would like for the people of his district to know and realize his deep interest in agriculture, and the type of service he has been rendering here for the people of his great State. I am delighted to put this much into the RECORD at this place. [Applause.]

Mr. NELSON. I thank my colleague, one of the veteran Members of the House and whose work is outstanding, very much.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NELSON. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. It should be mentioned also the splendid services which the gentleman from Missouri has given not only on agriculture but on every other subject that comes up in Congress. [Applause.]

Mr. NELSON. I thank the gentleman.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow after the special orders already on the calendar I may address the House for 25 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. KELLER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I ask on what subject?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, tomorrow is Private Calendar day.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we not only have the Private Calendar but there are two special orders. We want to take up some rules also. For a week or two objection should have been made to all these speeches. If we are going to finish at any time in the near future, we must object to special orders.

At the close of the Congress every Member will be given at least 2 weeks within which he may insert in the RECORD any speech he cares to. There must be an end to these speeches. We had some political speeches today. We must consider these rules.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. Considering the fact that Members on the Democratic side have about an hour tomorrow, I do not think it would be unfair to give the gentleman from Massachusetts 25 minutes. I suggest that the gentleman object to further requests after that.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not know who has allowed all these special orders, but we are not going to get through at this rate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I renew my request with the modification that I may address the House for 15 minutes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will modify his request and make it 10 minutes I shall not object, but I am afraid we have got to object to a longer time.

Mr. SNELL. I did not object to the request of Members on the gentleman's side of the aisle.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

PRESENTATION TO MR. SNELL

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, a week from tomorrow the Republican National Convention assembles in the city of Cleveland. In all human probability one of our own Members will be the permanent chairman of that gathering. [Applause, the Members rising.] The hearty applause of the House is indicative of the feeling these Members have, irrespective of party, toward the skill and ability of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] properly to preside over that great gathering. [Applause.]

Mr. COX. And their great confidence and love.

Mr. TREADWAY. His Republican colleagues are very glad to present him at this time with the proper implements of his office. In behalf, therefore, of the Members of this side—and I know the Members on the other side feel the same toward him as we do—it is my privilege to present him with an excellent block and a very sturdy gavel to use in that convention. [Applause.] They are properly marked. I shall read the inscription:

Hon. BERTRAND H. SNELL, chairman, Republican National Convention, Cleveland, June 9–13, 1936, from his Republican congressional colleagues.

In addition to presenting him with a very firm and useful implement, which we want him to use at the convention, we want him to have a souvenir not so rugged but more appropriate to preserve and hand down to posterity as a souvenir of that great event; and on behalf of his Republican congressional colleagues I now present him with this second gavel.

In connection with securing these articles, I want particularly to thank the Clerk of the House, Mr. South Trimble, who has so kindly cooperated with us in securing the gavels and having them properly inscribed.

I am sure I voice the sentiment of the entire House when I say that the gentleman from New York will preside over that deliberative body with dignity, success, and honor to us as Members of Congress. [Applause.]

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, may I proceed for a minute and a half?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York is recognized.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, a few minutes ago my friend the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] said, "I want you to stay and hear my speech." I wondered just why I had to listen to what the gentleman had to say today; but since I have listened and heard not only his speech but the generous response from the House, I thank him for what he said and for having requested me to remain to hear it.

To be designated chairman of a history-making Republican convention I considered was a great honor, and I appreciated it; but it is really a double honor to have that recognition approved by my Republican colleagues here in the House, and I want them to know I thank them from the bottom of my heart for what they have done in presenting me with this gavel. In the same breath I desire to thank the Speaker and my Democratic colleagues for the generous applause and cooperation in allowing this gavel to be presented on the floor of the House.

I assure my Republican colleagues these gavels will remain most sacred treasures and be carefully guarded. I hope I may hand at least one of them down to my young grandson, Bertrand Snell Cheel, who now is about a year and a half old. [Applause.] I think he is sturdy enough to handle one of these gavels and will make a good lumberjack like his grandfather.

In closing let me say that I trust, in presiding over this convention, I may use these gavels in such a way as to reflect nothing but respect, dignity, and honor to the House of Representatives. [Applause.] I thank you.

The SPEAKER. Under the special order the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALY] is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield that I may submit a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. DALY. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I want to say this in respect to the presentation of the gavel to the distinguished minority leader: I congratulate his party for again this year recognizing the House of Representatives to participate in its convention. Another great party which holds conventions almost invariably recognizes only Members of another body. As a matter of fact the platform is so crowded with those Members that Members of the House of Representatives cannot find a place to sit.

If the great convention to be held in Cleveland ever gets past the preliminary stages and up to the point of electing a permanent chairman, we all feel sure the distinguished minority leader will preside with all the grace, and all the ability, and with the outstanding parliamentary skill which he has displayed as chairman of the Rules Committee and on the floor of this House.

Of course we should like to see an advance copy of the speech before the gentleman leaves for Ohio, because we know it is going to be a great historic document—from the standpoint of the Republican Party. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. Under the special order for today the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALY] is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. DALY. Mr. Speaker, I thought it would be interesting to call to the attention of the membership that 147 years ago today there was enacted into law the first bill that was ever passed by an American Congress. This occurred on the 1st of June 1789.

It might be interesting in connection therewith to note that the bill which became a law on the 1st of June 1789 has remained inviolate and unchanged to the present day. It was the law that prescribed the manner in which the oath of office should be administered to officials of the United States.

It might be interesting further to note that when the first session of the First Congress convened on the 4th of March 1789 the House had a membership of 66. There were only 13 Members present when it opened, and the House could transact no business by reason of a lack of quorum for 1 month and 2 days. It was April 6, 1789, before the House was able to secure a quorum in order to proceed to the transaction of business. As Texas was not a part of the Union at that time and had no representation in Congress, I am not prepared to say how many quorum calls were asked for during this month.

It is interesting to note also that the Speaker of the House at that time was a Democrat, and of the 13 Members that did attend the Congress, 6 of the 8 Pennsylvania Members attended and remained in attendance all the way through.

Possibly we do not get quorums today, and we do not transact business as rapidly as we should because of the precedent set by our forbears.

There were three sessions of the First Congress, the first extending from March 4, 1789, to August 8, 1789; the second from January 4, 1790, to August 12, 1790; and the third from December 6, 1790, to March 3, 1791. In all, the House of Representatives was in session for 591 days out of the 730 days comprising the 2 years. It was not until 1820 that the first Monday of December of each year was agreed upon as the time for the regular meeting of each session of Congress and that practice was continued until 1932.

Just a word apart from the historical fact just stated. Mention was made a moment ago of the first Republican convention in 1856. The gentleman from Kentucky did not state who the permanent chairman of that convention was. The Members on that side have just presented a gift to our distinguished minority leader [Mr. SNELL], who will be the permanent chairman of the last Republican convention that this country will ever know. If I might be so bold, I would ask that there be placed on the gavel just presented to Mr. SNELL an amended inscription calling attention to this fact.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 5 additional minutes, as he is about to pronounce a eulogy, and I think he should proceed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, are there any further special orders?

The SPEAKER. This is the last one.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. DALY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kentucky propounded a query a few moments ago. He wanted to know where the Democratic Party was. He is even worse off than that patriot, and I presume he was one, who is now buried in that great cemetery referred to by my good friend from Illinois [Mr. MITCHELL]. I think he is blind. He has only to look at this House; he has only to go to the other end of the Capitol; he has only to go to the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue; he has only to go into every department of the National Government to find where the Democratic Party is and where the Democratic Party is going to stay.

May I say that he very graphically and eloquently spoke of the fact that the Republican Party struck from the black man the shackles and the chains that bound him, although I disagree with the gentleman. If that be true, and if it was done entirely by the Republican Party that he represents here today, may I ask him if it was done for the purpose of accomplishing that which they thereafter accomplished; that is, the reforging of new chains and new shackles to be placed upon the industrial workers of this country, white and black, at the behest of the monopolistic powers of the country? [Applause.]

There is no greater slavery existing in this country or any other country today, nor has there ever been, than that which was imposed upon the people of this Nation by the Republican Party with the bills they enacted and steadfastly tried to have enacted in the House of Representatives.

I want to say to my friend from Kentucky that when he returns from the last Republican convention to be held in the history of this Nation next week and comes back to this House next year—and I hope he does come back—he will know that the Democratic Party will have a larger membership in this House and a larger membership in the other body, which will devote itself toward the enactment of legislation that will improve the condition of every toiler in this country and strike from his wrist and his ankles the shackles placed upon him by Republican legislation.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DALY. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania is unduly pessimistic. I realize the country is going to the dogs just as fast as it can. Of course, the gentleman from Pennsylvania is proceeding on the premise that the Democrats will win again this year and there will be no Republic in 1940.

Mr. DALY. There will be no Republican Party.

Mr. KNUTSON. There may not be either Republican or Democratic Party. I admit that the country is going to the dogs very fast, but I do not think as fast as the gentleman intimates.

Mr. DALY. I did not mean to imply that it was going to the dogs. The Nation, as a matter of fact, is on the road to recovery.

Mr. KNUTSON. There was only one inference I could draw, and that is that the country is going to the dogs.

The regular order was demanded.

Mr. DALY. I am not responsible for inferences drawn by an irresponsible party. [Laughter and applause.]

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ADMISSION OF THE STATE OF TENNESSEE INTO THE UNION

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as this is the one hundred and fortieth anniversary of the admission of the State of Tennessee to the Union, the State from which comes our distinguished Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes on the occasion of the one hundred and fortieth anniversary of the admission into the Union of the State of Tennessee. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTIETH BIRTHDAY OF TENNESSEE

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, shortly after 5 o'clock in the afternoon of June 1, 1796, 140 years ago today, and in the last hour of the first session of the Fourth Congress of the United States, Samuel A. Otis, Secretary of the Senate, appeared at the bar of the House of Representatives and delivered this message:

Mr. Speaker, I am directed to inform this House that the President of the United States did this day approve and sign an act which originated in the Senate, entitled "An act for the admission of the State of Tennessee into the Union."

Thus Tennessee became the sixteenth State, preceded only by Vermont and Kentucky in annexation to the Original Thirteen States. Thus also came true the dreams of those restless pioneers who, oppressed by the despotism of colonial rulers, had penetrated the Great Smoky Mountains in search of freedom before the Declaration of Independence was even contemplated.

The struggle for statehood had been long and heartbreaking. Isolated from the seats of existing governments, the early settlers of the Tennessee country had to form their own institutions; and the first written constitution adopted by a community of American-born freemen was the "Articles of the Watauga Association" promulgated in 1772. These Watauga pioneers were "destined to play a most important part in the successful termination of the Revolutionary War and in the winning of the West." Indeed, the Battle of King's Mountain on October 7, 1780, has always figured in American history as the turning point in the War for Independence, and it has been said that that battle connected the history of Tennessee with Bunker Hill and the early annals of the United States.

When North Carolina, in 1784, offered to cede to the Confederation the territory west of the watershed of the mountains, the settlers therein immediately set about to form a separate State, resolving that if the Confederation would not admit the new government, the settlement would remain a sovereign Commonwealth, independent of the general Government. Accordingly the ill-fated State of Franklin was created; and, in May 1785, William Cocke went to New York, where the Continental Congress was in session, and presented the memorial of the Assembly of Franklin to accept the cession proffered by North Carolina and "admit Franklin into the sisterhood of sovereign States."

In the meantime, however, North Carolina had repealed the First Cession Act, and as a consequence the State of Franklin ceased to exist after about 4 years of independent government. During that period the Federal Convention had met and adopted the Constitution of the United States of America, and in 1790 North Carolina ceded to the Union all of her western territory, an area of 45,600 square miles, or 29,184,000 acres.

By the terms of the deed of cession and the Ordinance of 1787, the new Territory was entitled to become a State whenever the population amounted to 60,000. The census properly should have been taken under Federal supervision, but the legislature of the Territory, in ignorance or in disregard of that fact, passed an act in July 1795 for the enumeration of the people. The population was found to exceed 75,000, and a convention was called to meet in Knoxville in January 1796, when a constitution, which Thomas Jefferson said was "the least imperfect and the most republican" of the State constitutions, was adopted. The name Tennessee was given to the new government, and Joseph McMinn was appointed messenger to transmit to the Secretary of State of the United States in Philadelphia a copy of the census return and a copy of the State constitution. He arrived there on February 28, 1796, and these documents were transmitted by President Washington to the Senate on April 11, with a message submitting the matter to Congress. In the meantime, the territorial government had ceased, and on March 28, 1796, the State legislature convened, inaugurated John Sevier as Governor, and prematurely elected William Blount and William Cocke as United States Senators. Their credentials were presented to the Senate on May 9 and on May 23 they were invited to occupy seats in the Senate chamber as spectators.

The President's message was referred to a special committee, which filed an adverse report 25 days later to the effect that Congress, and not the people of the Territory, should lay out and form the Territory and make proof of the population. A storm of protest arose, largely because it was evident that party interest was the underlying motive for the unfavorable report. The Federalists opposed the admission of Tennessee, believing that its vote would be given to Jefferson in the approaching election. In this they were right, and their course in opposing admission had the effect of confirming the State's Democracy. The people were indignant, and for many years no public man in Tennessee dared to admit that he entertained Federalist principles. James Phelan, once a Member of Congress from Tennessee, tells us in his history of the State:

For a time the question assumed serious proportions and threatened to convulse the country. The balance of power, as a determinative principle in the admission of States, had not yet attained the full development of later years when slavery became a deeply rooted institution; but it was there, and derived an increased vitality, not only from local prejudices existing between North and South, but also from the fear on the part of the older States that their power might ultimately slip from them and fall to the share of those yet to be created.

However, after amendments and conferences and active championship by Senator Aaron Burr, the bill passed. Tennessee had volunteered herself into the Union; and ere long came to be known as the Volunteer State.

To look back today over the intervening 140 years is to fill the heart of every loyal Tennessean with pardonable pride and patriotic emotions. In Tennessee, within the limits of a century and a half, we have a picture of national life as complete as that of England through her thousand years. It is a story of stout hearts, intrepid souls, and high ambitions.

In the building of the Nation, Tennessee has furnished more than her quota of leaders in every phase of public service. Three Presidents, each illustrating distinctive traits of national character which stand out vividly in American life, have come from Tennessee. Andrew Jackson, seventh President and the State's first Representative in Congress, with his dauntless courage, his dominating will, and his loyalty to friends and hatred of enemies, represented the fireat new West and its Democracy. He was the idol of the mass of the people, and literally "took the West to Washington." He exemplified his belief that the "President should be the interpreter of the will of the people and must execute that will independently of and without interference from Congress or the Supreme Court."

James K. Polk, the second President from Tennessee, was an educated gentleman of Scotch-Irish descent. He had served 14 years in the House and was twice Speaker before he became President. Polk was an ardent expansionist, and one of the most constructive of American statesmen. During his term about 1,000,000 square miles of new and valuable territory were annexed to the United States. While few Presidents met such powerful opposition as did Polk, yet few Presidents placed upon the Federal statute books as many and such vital general laws.

The unlettered Andrew Johnson, who had come across the mountains from North Carolina at the age of 18, leading a blind pony hitched to a cart carrying his widowed mother and a few of the necessities of life, was called to the Presidency in one of the most difficult and trying periods in history. He strove to take Lincoln's place and to carry out Lincoln's plan of reconstruction. With unlimited trust in the people, an unswerving devotion to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and with his back to the wall, Andrew Johnson kept the faith of Abraham Lincoln with tragic consequences to himself.

Many Tennesseeans have been appointed to the Cabinets of the Presidents. George W. Campbell was Secretary of the Treasury under President Madison; John H. Eaton, Carey E. Harris, John Bell, Luke E. Wright, and Jacob M. Dickinson were Secretaries of War; Felix Grundy and James C. McReynolds, Attorneys General; Cave Johnson, Aaron V. Brown, David M. Key, and Horace Maynard became Postmasters General; and the present Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, long an outstanding Member of this House, is an honored Tennesseean. In addition to James K. Polk, John Bell, who later was the Constitutional Union candidate for the Presidency in 1860, was Speaker of the House; and Tennessee is proud to claim as a native son the distinguished and beloved Speaker who presides today.

Five Justices of the United States Supreme Court have been appointed from Tennessee: John Catron, Howell E. Jackson, Horace H. Lurton, James C. McReynolds, and Edward T. Sanford; and each of them served ably, honorably, and efficiently on this the greatest Court in the world.

It is of interest that Matthew Fontaine Maury, the "Pathfinder of the oceans", spent his early years in Tennessee and was appointed to the United States Navy by Representative Sam Houston.

On land and sea in all the country's wars, Tennesseeans have played conspicuous parts. The heroic deeds of John Sevier, Andrew Jackson, Sam Houston, David Crockett, Nathan Bedford Forrest, Sam Davis, David G. Farragut, and Alvin York are known far and wide. To the War of 1812 Tennessee sent 28,000 troops and had double the number of men from any other State in the decisive Battle of New Orleans. Incidentally, the vanquished British who survived that rout went back to Europe and aided in the defeat of Napoleon at Waterloo. The State furnished four of the commanders and nearly all the soldiers engaged in the several Indian wars which brought peace and security to the life and property of the people east of the Mississippi. At the outbreak of the Mexican War, when 2,800 volunteers were called for in Tennessee, more than 30,000 men responded for duty; and although Tennessee was the last Confederate State to secede from the Union and the first to return, she furnished more soldiers than any other Southern State, even sending 30,000 men to the Federal Army. Next to Virginia, more battles have been fought on Tennessee soil than on that of any other State in the Nation. In the World War, Tennesseans maintained the traditional valor and spirit of their forefathers, and distinguished themselves on the crimsoned fields of France and Belgium.

Today Tennessee is a prosperous State with almost 3,000,000 inhabitants. Theodore Roosevelt wrote in his "Winning of the West" that the purest strain of Anglo-Saxon blood extant in America would be found in Tennessee, and the descendants of those hardy pioneers who came into the Federal Union 140 years ago constitute more than 60 percent of the population now.

Tennessee is truly American in temperament and sentiment. Her people are deeply grateful for the glorious privilege of statehood in an indivisible nation of self-governing citizens, who have their internal contentions, and sometimes emulations, as to who can best govern and best achieve, but who, when a common enemy appears, join hands and hearts and work and serve and fight and die for America! [Applause.]

KEEP FAITH WITH PUERTO RICO

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include therein a memorial of the Legislature of Puerto Rico and letters from the Banco of Ponce and the Chamber of Commerce of Puerto Rico.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Puerto Rico?

There was no objection.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, please give some attention to the facts which I shall explain below. Permit me also to express to you my sincere protest against the surprise action of Senator TYDINGS, chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, by reporting out his resolution, Senate Joint Resolution 270, "To provide for the appointment of a committee to study the question of Puerto Rican independence", and also S. 5428, "To regulate the conduct of elections in Puerto Rico", without, at least, giving the proper and accredited representatives of the island an opportunity to express their opinions of so far-reaching legislation. I never thought that a Senate committee would have taken such action on legislation so vital to the rights, liberties, and social and political life of over 1,700,000 without the proper consultation and hearings.

ASKING FOR REPRESENTATION

It is my honest conviction that, if a true study of conditions in Puerto Rico is desired, that study should be unbiased and thorough, encompassing the economic, social, and political aspects, both present and future, without reference to, or mention of, independence, statehood, or complete self-government with a permanent union with the United States.

Any commission recommended to study conditions there should include representatives of agriculture, commerce, labor, and sugar-industry associations of the island.

The Commission should begin its work on November 20, after the general elections are held. The report of the findings of the Commission would be presented to the President on April 20, 1937, pursuant to which the President would send the report to Congress with his own recommendations.

Hearings should have been held on a resolution affecting more than 1,700,000 American citizens who for 38 years have maintained their loyalty to the United States, and who desire a permanent union with the people of the United States. They would have been happy, I am sure, to have made their position clearly known before the committee and to have demonstrated their faith in the noble and inspiring intention on the part of the people of the United States and the administration to do justice toward Puerto Rico's future.

SELF-GOVERNMENT OR STATEHOOD MEMORIAL

No political status should have been mentioned, having in consideration that there is in the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, of which Senator TYDINGS is chairman, an official memorial from the Legislature of Puerto Rico which asks for complete self-government and final statehood. The Senator mentions independence alone, when, it seems to me, some attention should have been paid to the memorial of the legislature of the island which was referred to his committee.

The memorial, in part, is as follows:

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The Vice President laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Puerto Rico, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs:

"Whereas during that interregnum in which the people of Puerto Rico has lived, trusting in the justice of the people of the United States of America, the latter believing the former capable of living a life of equality, dignity, and honor in their relations with each other, granted to the Puerto Ricans, through Congress, American citizenship with all the prerogatives inherent therein;

"Whereas the people of Puerto Rico have always aspired and continue to aspire to the fulfillment of the words which, in the lexicon of liberty of the United States of America, involving the consecration of the principle that 'peoples have the right to determine their own destines': Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved by the Legislature of Puerto Rico—

"SECTION 1. That the people of Puerto Rico desire that Puerto Rico become a State and be admitted to the Union under the same conditions as the States which integrate the same.

"SEC. 2. To request from the Congress of the United States of America, as it is hereby requested, legislation authorizing the people of Puerto Rico to frame its own State constitution in order to submit it for the approval of the Congress of the United States of America after it is ratified by the electoral body of Puerto Rico, to which it shall be submitted through a plebiscite for such purpose, the result of which shall be certified by the executive secretary of Puerto Rico; and the Governor of Puerto Rico shall give notice thereof to the President of the United States for the proper purposes.

"Whereas with the enactment of measures of this kind, while the proceedings are being carried out and the obstacles in the way of enjoying the final status of statehood are being overcome, the people of Puerto Rico shall have full political and fiscal autonomy to solve its own problems, and may temporarily enjoy its internal independence and its internal sovereignty: Now, therefore, be it further

"Resolved by the Legislature of Puerto Rico—

"SEC. 3. That the people of Puerto Rico demand an immediate liberalizing reform, of a political and economic nature, of the autonomic regimen of government which it now enjoys, petitioning the Congress of the United States of America, as it is hereby petitioned, to amend the Organic Act of Puerto Rico, in force, in accord with the following:

"1. Recognizing the right of the people of Puerto Rico to elect its own Governor.

"2. Granting powers to the Governor of Puerto Rico, so that he may, with the advice and consent of the insular senate, appoint all the heads of department of the insular government of Puerto Rico.

"3. Authorizing the Governor of Puerto Rico to fill the vacancies among senators and representatives without the need of holding partial elections, and on proposal of the directing body of the party to which the legislators whose post is vacant belonged.

"4. Granting power to the Legislature of Puerto Rico to revoke the veto of the executive by the vote of two-thirds of the total number of members of each legislative house.

"5. To request the Congress of the United States of America, as it is hereby requested, to authorize the Legislature of Puerto Rico to adopt legislation tending to solve the problem of absenteeism and, as a consequence thereof, the concentration of property of nonresidents.

REGULATING ELECTIONS

Regarding the bill of Senator TYDINGS (S. 4529) about the elections in Puerto Rico, and which tends to regulate voting at the general elections of 1936 and at subsequent elections, I desire to say that as regards the process of voting, the bill is substantially the same as the bill (S. R. 20) recently passed by the insular legislature, especially as regards the isolation of voters until a fixed hour on the day of elections, so that afterward these voters may vote during the rest of the day. But section 3 of the bill of Senator TYDINGS, which provides that the lists of registered voters shall be those of the persons appearing in the statistics of the Federal census of 1935–36, has to meet with the vigorous objection of all the political parties and of all the citizen voters of Puerto Rico. The measure is arbitrary and implies by itself an act of coercion and tyranny against the voters of Puerto Rico.

Against the measure seven strong objections occur to me at this moment: First, because it annuls with a single stroke of the pen the election registrations made in Puerto Rico by virtue of the laws in force, and it tends to deprive thousands and thousands of Puerto Ricans of the rights acquired by them when registering in Puerto Rico under the provisions of the insular laws.

Second. Because said measure is in open conflict with all the precedents in election matters, inasmuch as when the Federal census of 1935–36 was made no intervention was given to the political parties which represent the organized public opinion in Puerto Rico.

Third. Because, in accordance with said statistics of the said Federal census, thousands of lawful voters in Puerto Rico would be deprived of the right to vote, inasmuch as we know that there are numberless voters with ample rights recognized by our laws who do not appear enumerated in said census, and the approval of such measure by Congress would illegally deprive the thousands of citizens of their right to vote in Puerto Rico.

Fourth. Because the data for said Federal census were taken by employees politically partial in general, practically chosen by only one of the political sectors of Puerto Rico to the detriment of the other political sectors which have been fighting against the activities of the Federal agency, P. R. R. A., which furnished the personnel for said census.

Fifth. Because said Federal measure would double the cost of the election expenses to the treasury of Puerto Rico, inasmuch as the approval of said measure would ipso facto annul all the lists already prepared, which have cost thousands of dollars to the public treasury, and if said measure is approved the whole work will have to be started again, preparing the general lists of voters and the special lists for each and every one of the precincts and polling places for election day.

Sixth. Because the approval of said measure by Congress would make it necessary to hold new registrations for which we have neither the time nor the money, inasmuch as in the statistics of the census all the conditions required by the laws in force for voting are not shown.

Seventh. Because the approval of said measure would be the greatest encouragement for promoting and establishing the most scandalous fraud in Puerto Rico, inasmuch as by the mere declaration of persons when giving the data for the census, without any intervention whatsoever by the political parties and without any proceedings for verifying such data, the right to vote would be given to thousands and thousands of persons who are not legally qualified for suffrage, and with such a measure the parties and the voters would not be given a reasonable opportunity to purge the elections lists.

The idea that Congress should say by law who are the voters in Puerto Rico is a reactionary and tyrannic idea without precedent in all the electoral legislation for the States and Territories of the United States. If this principle be accepted, the doors would be open for Congress to establish at any moment in Puerto Rico an aristocratic form of government, inasmuch as Congress could at any moment say what persons are considered as registered and with the right to vote in Puerto Rico. I do not believe that there is a single Puerto Rican who, for political or personal convenience, can accept the indignity of having Congress adopt such a measure for our island.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF PUERTO RICO

MAY 28, 1936.

Senator MILLIARD E. TYDINGS,
Chairman, Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR TYDINGS: The resolution introduced by your good self, and providing for a committee to study and investigate the economic consequences of a change in the political status of Puerto Rico, will be interpreted here, in America, and throughout the world as an indication that the administration has realized that it blundered when it decided to sponsor the bill providing for a plebiscite on the question of independence for the island, introduced by you in the Senate recently.

In my humble estimation, that bill was ill conceived and amounts to a negation of the spirit of fair play so highly prized by the American people. Furthermore, it was evidently based on an utter ignorance of the true feelings of the people of Puerto Rico, ignoring entirely the political aspirations of a large section of the community whose feelings were as much worthy and entitled to respect and consideration as those of any other group or sector of opinion.

But, undoubtedly, the biggest defect of the proposed legislation is its failure to recognize the responsibility of the United States in the present social and economical conditions of the Puerto Rican people. Allow me to say, in passing, that I do not share the view of our local extremists who would place all of the blame for the present conditions at the door of the United States. Yet I am fully convinced that in taking over Puerto Rico the American people assumed a responsibility before the world and civilization that no administration could ignore without damage to the prestige of the Nation and without betraying the feelings of its own people.

Perhaps the biggest evil caused by that bill has been the manner in which it has affected the spiritual and economical relations between the United States and Puerto Rico; it played into the hands of the irresponsible extremists and zealots, bringing about a number of incidents which all patriotic islanders deeply regret and disown, in the first place, because we consider them unworthy of a self-respecting community, and, in the second place, because they are liable to cause resentment and a distorted impression of our real feelings amongst our fellow citizens of the mainland. I am afraid that the damage thereby caused is irreparable and that it will take time to blot out its consequences.

The introduction of the plebiscite bill caused a bewildering conflict of policy on the part of the administration that could not but add confusion to the local political situation. It was impossible for us, impartial observers, to reconcile the manifest determination of the administration to correct the evils of the palpably defective economical system allowed to be established here, and then, when its efforts toward the realization of that aim had hardly been initiated, to turn around and, violently thrusting aside such high purpose, offer the Puerto Rican people a sort of independence which spells utter economical ruin. Such inconsistency could not possibly be justified in the light of true statesmanship or the exigencies of an inescapable moral responsibility. I sincerely believe that the above expresses the reaction caused in the mind of the average observer, both here and in the mainland.

Your resolution providing for the appointment of an investigating committee is bound, therefore, to have a salutary effect here and elsewhere. It will do away, to a large extent, with the justified indignation aroused by that proposed measure; it will renew our faith in the spirit of fair play of the American people, and it will go a long way to enable our people to make a sober and dispassionate analysis of the matter. In so doing the administration not only gives proof that it fully realizes the moral and human responsibility that the American people assumed when they undertook to guide the destinies of this island, but, furthermore, clears it of the widespread suspicion that it was determined to coerce the people of Puerto Rico.

There is no self-respecting islander who is not sincerely convinced that the Government of the United States has made a great mistake by allowing the political status of the island to remain undetermined for such a long time. They are equally convinced that such an error has been a constant source of irritation, friction, confusion, and uncertainty which has adversely affected our normal development. I feel that I make no mistake in saying that there is not a single Puerto Rican who is not anxious to see the error corrected and have the political status of Puerto Rico definitely settled. Consequently, any plan that will bring about the realization of that purpose in a fair and generous manner will be heartily welcomed by everyone here and, I dare say, by everyone in continental United States who realizes the true import and significance of the community of interest which has been developed between the United States and Puerto Rico during the last 38 years.

As a nonpartisan organization we are not directly concerned in the political possibilities of your resolution. As self-respecting members of the community who have always striven to advance its best general interest, we do not wish to unduly influence the political sentiment of our people; but since the fundamental purpose of any form of civilized government is to seek the welfare and happiness of the people, we are naturally concerned over the economical consequences of any change in our political status, and are convinced that we owe it to our people and are in duty bound to assist them in appreciating the economical meaning and consequences of any change, so that, when the time comes to pass upon the matter, they may have a fair notion of it and may be able to vote in an enlightened and conscientious manner.

Your resolution will accomplish that very purpose, and we are naturally anxious to participate in the work to be performed through it. We note that the same provides for a committee of 17 and that it is silent as to the manner in which a portion of its membership will be appointed. Considering the purpose and scope of its mission, we think it is logical to assume that the intention of the legislator has been to give representation in the said body to other than purely political organizations. This has seemed to us all the more plausible since it will be the only means of securing an accurate cross section of the opinion of the island as a basis for an intelligent, authoritative, and unbiased report on the matter. Resting on that assumption, we believe that, as the oldest business organization of the island, we are entitled to have a voice in the said commission, and with that aim in view we telegraphed you on the 26th instant as follows:

"Respectfully request that provision be made to include in investigating committee to be appointed under Tydings resolution two members from Chamber of Commerce of Puerto Rico to represent Puerto Rican business interests. Considering fundamental purpose of investigation, strongly submit that business interests are fully entitled to be represented in said committee and that such representation will greatly assist in its work."

which we now beg to confirm.

I believe that it is generally admitted that there is no business organization in Puerto Rico more thoroughly representative of the business interests of the island, and, furthermore, that no other organization can point to a more impressive record of public-spirited service to the community. Consequently, by having two representatives from this body, the commission would thereby secure the benefit of expert, unbiased, and unselfish advices on all matters relating to trade and business activities.

In order to give an idea of the universality of the chamber, it will suffice to say that, in addition to being an insular organization, its membership includes the following organizations:

Tobacco Dealers of Puerto Rico.
Insular Chamber of Wholesellers.
Puerto Rico Needlework Association.
Bus Owners' Association of Puerto Rico.
Association of Wholesale Merchants.
Puerto Rico Institute of Accountants.
Liquor Distillers' Association of Puerto Rico.
College of Business Administration of the University of Puerto Rico; and, for the purpose of the proposed investigation, it will also have the representation of the Contractors' Association of Puerto Rico and the Association of Sugar Cane Growers of Southern Puerto Rico.

Allow me to assure you, my dear Senator, that in asking for such representation the chamber seeks no selfish aim but is entirely prompted by a sincere desire to assist and cooperate in the highly important work to be performed by the investigating committee. We are confident that you will kindly submit this letter to the consideration of your committee and that it will favorably act upon the same.

Personally, I should be extremely grateful to you for a candid expression of your personal reaction to our petition.

Very sincerely yours,

BANCO DE PONCE,
Ponce, P. R., May 22, 1936.

Senator MILLARD E. TYDINGS,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR TYDINGS: The importance of the independence bill to the future welfare of our population and a sense of civic duty induce me to present for your consideration some aspects of the local situation. I am a 100-percent Puerto Rican who feels 100-percent American and who thinks that the two sentiments are not incompatible, just the same as you are a true Marylander and an excellent American.

Recurrent misundertandings in the relationship of the island and the mainland have been due mostly to the lack of knowledge of the island's affairs by Federal officials directly in charge, who have also failed to understand the psychology of a highly sensitive people. This has given a prevalent and wrong impression amongst our population that continental Americans collectively display a sense of racial superiority in their dealings with a people who are by nature and by right of their old civilization proud and touchy. As a result the best-intentioned and unselfish measures of the Federal Government have very often fallen short of their true objective by reason of the manner displayed in granting them. If a permanent, nonpolitical department were set up at Washington to administer insular affairs, the knowledge that competent officials would acquire by virtue of the permanency of their position would, in our opinion, redound to an intimate, mutual comprehension in our relationship and would surely eliminate present grounds of misunderstandings.

The immediate cause of unsatisfactory recent developments has been the change of the administration of insular affairs from the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department to the Division of Territories of the Department of the Interior, a change from a nonpolitical department to a department which, at the present time, is the most active in national politics. With all its faults the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department had acquired practice in the administration of Puerto Rican affairs, and, because of its nonpolitical set-up, it never mingled in local politics. The politically minded personnel of the Department of the Interior, their ignorance of Puerto Rican problems, excusable because of their lack of comprehension of their newly acquired responsibilities, have inaugurated a policy of active participation in local politics, with the result that it has driven local politicians to a state of desperation in defending their position against unfavorable odds represented by the millions involved in the rehabilitation program under the control of Washington officials. As a consequence the local political battle front has been moved from the island to Washington, where local political parties keep their representatives to curry the favor of those who stand close to Uncle Sam's purse strings. Those representatives apparently more friendly to the administration, irrespective of whether they represent the local government or the minority party, obtain the greatest benefit for their party.

As the island did not register a vote at the national polls, the injustice of officials in charge of Puerto Rican affairs is glaring when they meddle and show political partiality to any one party or its representative on the basis of friendship. It is obvious that the prestige of the Federal Government is not enhanced even in the estimation of those who are presently favored and whose sense of equanimity would be upset if the tide of partiality should turn. The exasperation of those presently not in favor, and who, to make their distress more poignant, happen to be the legally constituted local government majority, has driven them to extremes which have been detrimental to our welfare and has given the erroneous impression that we, as a people, are ungrateful for the Federal cooperation received. The cessation of meddling in our local politics would correct this condition, and the placing of our affairs at Washington in a nonpolitical department or bureau should be the logical solution.

The situation brought about by the lack of foresight of those directly in charge of our affairs has worried the administration to the point of desiring to ascertain if the island wishes independence through a referendum and the promise of its grant. Prior to the presentation of the bill there was a very small but compact group, and, like all closely knitted minorities, very noisy, aggressive, and chauvinistic, which clamored for independence, their number being estimated at about 5,000. The balance of the voting population militated in three parties, more or less evenly divided, and one of which has had on its platform the independence issue and used that issue very effectively as a vote-catching bait for election purposes.

Of this the Government has been or should have been fully aware. The majority of the members of that party gave passing importance to the independence feature of their plank, and with your knowledge of the actual value of a party platform its existence and the little importance attached to the issue should not be surprising. The present administration was voted into power on a plank which has been very seldom followed, if at all, as witness the fact that in the Democratic plank statehood for Puerto Rico was the basis suggested for the solution of our status.

After the presentation of the independence bill it would be difficult to estimate how prevalent the issue has become, as the fact that no other definite alternative is offered has offended and aroused local sentiment. As to the final outcome of a plebiscite, it is difficult to anticipate, even though it is unanimously felt that independence would be suicidal to our common welfare. What the intention of the administration-sponsored bill is no one seems to know; but impractical as independence appears to be for the island, I wish to express my conviction that independence can only be sustained in Puerto Rico on one and only one basis—communism. Our economic condition, the density of our increasing population, our limited resources and small territory, our heavy indebtedness, our statutory labor laws, and our relatively high standard of living in proportion to our wealth, could not possibly withstand the shock of a sudden pauperization, with all its attendant consequences, without serious convulsions, and their only solution would be a partition of what little there might be amongst a population condemned to future starvation.

I have endeavored to explain what appears to be some of the underlying causes of our recurrent misunderstandings, the immediate causes of more unsatisfactory developments, the negligible separatist feeling prevalent prior to the presentation of the independence bill, and the probable results should the bill be brought to fruition and the island become independent. I would hesitate to have taken so much of your time without endeavoring to make a constructive suggestion.

Why should not a common meeting ground be found satisfactory to the 1,700,000 United States citizens? I think it would be rather simple if all efforts should be bent toward that end. But, rather than suggesting the form myself, I am going to put it in President Roosevelt's own words, as expressed when he was Governor of New York in defending State's rights:

"The preservation of this home rule by the States is not a cry of jealous commonwealths seeking their own aggrandizement at the expense of sister States. It is a fundamental necessity if we are to remain a truly united country. * * *

"Thus it will be seen that this home rule is a most important thing—the most vital thing—if we are to continue along the course on which we have so far progressed with such unprecedented success. * * *

"Let us remember that from the very beginning differences in climate, soil conditions, habits, and mode of living in States separated by thousands of miles rendered it necessary to give the fullest individual latitude to the individual States. Remembering that the mining States of the Rockies, the fertile savannas of the South, the prairies of the West, and the rocky soil of the New England States created many problems, introduced many factors in each locality which have no existence in others, it is obvious that almost every new or old problem of government must be solved, if it is to be solved to the satisfaction of the people of the whole country, by each State in its own way."

Sincerely yours,

P. J. ROSALY.

SOME FACTS ABOUT PUERTO RICO

The total annual budget of income of the Spanish autonomous regime reached the sum of $3,536,342.19. This total income of the insular treasury was spent, in a great part, for soldiers and marines, clergy, construction of and repair of churches, and pensions, up to the sum of $2,174,879.13. The other expenditures of the government, such as public education, public works, sanitation, and justice were assigned $1,361,963.06. The yearly budget of income under the American regime is over $12,000,000.

EDUCATION

In those days we spent on public education from the funds of the insular government $30,000, and the municipalities spent $99,255 on education through the Paulist Fathers, Jesuits, and Sisters of the Sacred Heart. There were only 22,265 children in the schools throughout the island. The benefit of superior studies was granted to only 55 students every year.

Under the first year of our American regime the construction of the first buildings for public schools was ordered. We have already organized a corps of 5,000 teachers who teach English and Spanish to 250,000 children of all classes, and we use at present more than 2,000 buildings constructed for common graded and high schools which are the property of the insular government. About $5,000,000 is expended every year on education for our girls and boys. The university costs the Puerto Rican Government over $1,000,000 a year.

When the old regime was changed for the American regime there were 275 kilometers of constructed roads. From June 30, 1900, to June 30, 1934, 1,859 kilometers of insular roads had been constructed, and also numerous bridges and buildings at a great cost. June 30, 1934, the bonded debt of the Puerto Rico Irrigation & Electric Service was $3,775,000. Of bond issues totaling $6,775,000, $3,000,000 were redeemed in 1932.

Sanitation was organized for the first time in the island during the present regime, and the installation of a modern system of public-health service was inaugurated.

OFFICEHOLDERS

The insular government is composed at present of the following employees in public service, including the Governor, the legislature, and the departments, who receive the following compensation: 6,011 Puerto Rican-American employees, $6,579,748, and 233 employees, continental Americans, $409,585.75. Of this total employees, over 5,000 are school teachers and 900 police.

COMMERCIAL BUSINESS

Puerto Rico stands today as the first best buyer of American goods in all Pan America. The fact that Puerto Rico has bought, and is continuing to buy, millions of dollars worth of goods from continental United States is vitally important to continental business interests. Specifically, the people of the island purchase yearly $8,000,000 worth of rice; $2,200,000 of wheat flour, corn, cereal goods, and so forth; $6,000,000 beans and potatoes; $2,000,000 fresh vegetables; automobiles and rubber manufactured goods, about $4,000,000; tobacco and cigarettes, $2,800,000; cotton manufactures, $9,800,000; cotton cloth, $7,000,000; and so on. In fact, Puerto Rico has had about $2,000,000,000 of commerce with the mainland in 36 years.

Speech delivered by Dr. Blas C. Herrero, member of the majority of the Legislature of Puerto Rico, through the radio station WOL, Washington, D. C., May 23, 1936, on Puerto Rico and Its Present Situation, is as follows:

When one reads news dispatches reporting riots, mass demonstrations, and other public manifestations in a particular country, for a particular cause, the natural conclusion is that most of the people in that country favor the cause in question. Frequently the activities of a noisy minority make news, not infrequently they make the headlines; and those who read the headlines know little or nothing of what's behind the news in a country that may be several thousand miles away.

Press dispatches recently reported riots and demonstrations for independence in Puerto Rico. To most people in this country, unfamiliar with the political situation on the island, these manifestations might indicate widespread, overwhelming sentiment for independence. Such is not the case. There is no deep-rooted, general sentiment for independence in Puerto Rico. The political organization with which I am affiliated—the Coalition Party—is the majority party of the island. My party, which constitutes a union of the conservative and labor groups, is not in favor of independence, but advocates rather statehood, or a territorial government with popular election of governor and cabinet—a political status, in other words, that will draw us even closer to the American people; one that will make us an integral part of this great Government; that will make us feel we are something more than a mere possession. The Coalition Party of Puerto Rico—the majority party of insular politics—represents elements that have been "pro-American" since the occupation, elements that are proud to serve under a flag that has brought such benefits to their native land.

These people feel that 36 years of unswerving loyalty to American institutions merits recognition, merits a reward, if you will, that should take the form of admission to a closer, more intimate participation in this Government; recognition that will make us feel we are not just "adopted" children of indulgent foster parents, but genuine blood beneficiaries of the greatest of all democracies. And we feel, too, that the American people are sympathetic with our aspirations, and, when they are acquainted with the desires of the majority, will not be unwilling to accede to our wishes.

The Nationalist Party is the radical independence faction of Puerto Rico. Its leader is a man of oratorical talent—a Harvard University graduate—and a man who harbors relentless antagonism toward the Government of the United States. About him he has gathered a following of university students and political adventurers, a following mostly of the young, the impressionable, and the gullible, but one, nevertheless, that is aggressive and unremitting in its efforts for independence.

The Nationalist Party polled less than 2 percent of the total vote cast in the last general election. This will indicate the voting strength of that organization. Standing alone, strictly on its own, it would be a political factor of no great consequence. But recently two events have transpired that have added to its potentiality, have made of it an organization that warrants serious consideration. The independence bill introduced in the United States Senate had the unfortunate effect of leading people to believe that this Government favors independence. It enabled the Nationalists to boast that their rioting and their demonstrations had borne fruit, had made this Government regard them as the strong, impelling force on the island. Some people—honest, sober-minded, serious people—began to wonder, began to entertain doubts whether this Government continued to be concerned over their welfare; whether, after all the years of cherishing American ideals, they were to be coldly cast adrift, left to shift for themselves, denied the goal they hope to achieve—that of statehood or Territorial government. And leaders of the Liberal Party, the minority political party of the island, made political capital of the situation and declared for independence. Now, the active forces for independence constitute an unofficial union of the Liberal Party, the party favored by Dr. Ernest Gruening, Director of the Division of Territories and Insular Possessions, and of the Nationalist Party, the party that preaches hatred for American institutions—violence and open rebellion.

What a curious combination! What strange bedfellows! The party favored by the American Government, and the party that is concentrating all of its efforts toward bringing about rebellion against the American Government. The minority party on the island—the Liberal Party—petted and pampered by Dr. Gruening, going along, hand in hand, with a party that makes a practice of hauling down American flags, of inciting school children to public demonstrations, and other anti-American manifestations.

The Liberal Party—the party that has been entrusted with administration of millions of American dollars for rehabilitation—joining hands with the party that preaches eternal hatred of everything that is American.

But now a few words concerning a most amazing situation, a most astounding sequence of events, a drama of deception, double-dealing, and brazen betrayal that would make Judas Iscariot blush for shame.

Following decisive defeat in the last general elections, the Liberal Party was reduced to the status of a political organization of no consequence. Its forces were utterly demoralized, its leadership foundering, its finances at the vanishing point, and its political prestige completely ruined. But then, at the time of deepest despair—the period when hopes of the Liberals were at the lowest ebb—came manna from the political heavens, the prospect of money—money from the Government of the United States—money for relief, for rehabilitation of insular business, and agriculture.

Rehabilitation programs were drafted by both parties—by my party, the Coalition, and by some of the so-called "intellectuals", the "theorists", and "advanced thinkers" of the Liberal Party.

The plan of my party—the majority party—was prepared by the "economic committee of the legislature." It was the subject of extensive public hearings, at which were heard the best business, technical, and agricultural minds of the island. And when it went to Washington the plan had the unqualified approval and endorsement of representative business and agricultural groups—groups that knew, from years of experience, what was necessary for effective rehabilitation—people who had the welfare of the island at heart. It was not a plan hastily knocked together by a group of impractical visionaries and theorists, not an uncertain adventure in nebulous experimentation, but a common-sense, practical plan, grounded upon practical recommendations from practical business and agricultural experts.

But all of the planning—all of the hearings—all of the recommendations of experts—went for naught. The plan was rejected in Washington. Why? Only Dr. Gruening can answer that question. The plan submitted by the Liberal Party was accepted. And last February over $40,000,000—American dollars—were made available to the Liberal Party for the work of rehabilitation—American dollars, mind you, for the political party on the island that now is openly advocating independence. The president of that party, in a passionate plea for independence, delivered recently before 10,000 people in the city of Caguas, P. R., shouted, "We will go to the extreme of revolution if necessary." Revolution is an ugly word in any language and under any circumstances. But how does it sound coming from the leader of the party in Puerto Rico that controls the administration of forty million American dollars—$40,000,000 that came from the people against whom this party exhorts their followers to wage revolution if necessary?

The Puerto Rican Rehabilitation Administration, known on the island as the P. R. R. A., is directed by the reputed author of the plan, the chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico, and an outstanding leader of the Liberal Party. His attitude concerning independence may be taken from the fact that a short time before the assassination of Chief of Police Riggs he had as a speaker at the university Albizo Campos, the leader of the Nationalist group. Under his administration as chancellor the university, supported in part by funds from the Government of the United States, has become the "hotbed" of independence and of anti-American agitation.

Personnel of the P. R. R. A., now over the 20,000 mark, consists entirely of members of the Liberal Party. It is, in fact, impossible to secure an appointment in that organization without endorsement of Liberal Party leaders. Those who happen to be affiliated with my party—the Coalition, or majority, party—can obtain neither work nor workers from that organization, whose relief facilities theoretically are supposed to be available to all residents of the island, regardless of party or of political inclinations. It has been utilized not so much for the rehabilitation of Puerto Rico as for the rehabilitation of the Liberal Party of Puerto Rico—a scandalous diversion of public moneys to political channels—a flagrant case of "false pretenses" if ever there was one.

The Liberal Party of Puerto Rico has been playing a shameless game of double-dealing with the Government here in Washington—a game of accepting favors and money with one hand and spreading anti-American propaganda with the other. On their numerous missions to Washington, Liberal Party leaders are loud in their protestations of stout, loyal Americanism; in Puerto Rico, secretly before but openly now, they are anti-American. The best and most convincing proof of the latter is the liberal leader's recent speech at Caguas, P. R., in which he exhorted the people to revolution if necessary. Let him explain, if he dares or if he will, honestly, his convictions concerning American institutions, his attitude now and in the past with respect to the American regime. Let him explain his words in the Caguas speech, "We will go to the extreme of revolution if necessary."

The Nationalist Party is anti-American to the core; but, at least, it is honest about it. Unlike the Liberal Party, it makes no pretensions of being otherwise. Its leaders are not accepting American money and using that money to undermine American institutions. At least it is in the open fighting for independence, while the Liberal Party is giving lip service to Americanism and secretly sowing seeds of anti-Americanism.

The Coalition Party—the majority party of Puerto Rico—that which has been "pro-American" since the occupation—has been studiously and most thoroughly snubbed by Dr. Gruening, Director of the Division of Territories and Insular Possessions. All of its good offices, all of its constructive recommendations, all of its efforts to cooperate and participate in the work of rehabilitation, have been treated with studied contempt. And this in a democracy, where I have always been taught that the majority rules. But in spite of Dr. Gruening, in spite of the fact that we, the majority party, have been shunted aside, ignored, and treated with contempt, our faith in the fairness of the American people has not diminished. We feel that our day will come, that the present shocking situation cannot continue forever, and that our efforts in defense of American institutions will receive due recognition. We are proud of our association with the people of the United States; we are happy, indeed, to be a part of this great Nation; we are grateful for the good that has come to us from the American people; and it is our fervent hope that soon the bonds that now join us will be strengthened, will be drawn closer, in the form of statehood or Territorial government.

I thank you.

THE BITUMINOUS COAL ACT OF 1936

Mr. GREENWOOD, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged report (Rept. No. 2903), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

House Resolution 535

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 12800, a bill to regulate interstate commerce in bituminous coal, and for other purposes. And all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday next, following the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table and the special order heretofore granted for that day, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD] may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes, and, following his address, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as I have explained—I do not know whether the gentleman from Massachusetts was here or not—as I understand, on Wednesday the plan is to bring up the coal bill, known as the Vinson-Guffey coal bill.

At this stage of the session we have important legislation, and I think the gentleman considers this measure as important. It will take all day, and if we take one-half hour out of the day, we may have to run over until the next day, which will interfere with the schedule. I hope the gentleman will not press his request.

Mr. CONNERY. May I say to my friend from New York that I was going to make the request for Thursday myself, but the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD] has to leave Wednesday.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not recall, in seven Congresses, that speeches were made in the last 2 weeks of a session. There are at least 2 or 3 weeks when any number of speeches may be put in the RECORD by the Members. This has gone further this session than any other session to my knowledge.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. If necessary, Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

REFUNDS UNDER A. A. A.

Mr. O'CONNOR, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following report (Rept. No. 2904), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed:

House Resolution 536

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 12793, a bill "to amend certain administrative provisions of the internal-revenue laws, and for other purposes." And all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

THE CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. This is Consent Calendar day. The Clerk will call the first bill on the calendar.

PACIFIC OCEAN FISHERIES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3013) to provide for the construction and operation of a vessel for use in research work with respect to Pacific Ocean fisheries.

Mr. WOLCOTT, Mr. JENKINS, and Mr. McLEAN objected.

LONGSHOREMEN'S AND HARBOR WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8293, to amend the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act.

Mr. BLAND, Mr. SMITH of Virginia, Mr. CARMICHAEL, and Mr. CHANDLER objected.

SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUOR IN ARMY POST EXCHANGES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 11300) to provide that the sale of or dealing in beer, wine, or intoxicating liquor in Army post exchanges and military establishments shall be subject to regulation by the Secretary of War.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. CHURCH, Mr. TARVER, Mr. JENKINS of Ohio, and Mr. UMSTEAD objected.

ADJUSTMENT OF IRRIGATION CHARGES

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1318, to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to investigate and adjust irrigation charges on irrigation lands within projects on Indian reservations, and for other purposes.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection.

There was no objection.

COMMEMORATION OF THE BATTLE OF EUTAW SPRINGS, S. C.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 255, to provide for the commemoration of the Battle of Eutaw Springs, in the State of South Carolina.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, may I ask the author of the bill how is this proposition going to be financed? I wondered what the purpose was in getting the approval of Congress.

Mr. FULMER. This is the regular bill endorsed by the Secretary of the Interior. It will not cost the Government any money. They donate a certain tract of a few acres so it will be included in this type of legislation that we have been passing from time to time. It is in my county, and one of the most important battlefields of the Revolutionary War.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand from the gentleman that this will not cost the Government anything?

Mr. FULMER. Absolutely not. That is made clear in the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of commemorating the battle which occurred at Eutaw Springs, in the State of South Carolina, during the Revolutionary War, the Secretary of War is authorized to accept title to approximately 2 acres of land on the site of said battlefield, free of cost to the United States, to fence said parcel of land or demarcate its limits, and to erect a monument thereon. He is further authorized to do all matters incident to procurement and erection provided for herein, by contract or otherwise, with or without advertising, including also the engagement by contract or otherwise, without regard to section 3709, Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5), and at such rates of compensation as he may determine, of the services of architects, sculptors, artists, and other technical and professional personnel as may be necessary, or of firms, partnerships, or corporations thereof.

SEC. 2. To enable the Secretary of War to carry out the provisions of this act, including the purchase of plans, drawings, and specifications, and the payment of mileage of officers of the Army and actual expenses of civilian employees traveling on duty in connection therewith, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended for the purposes of this act.

SEC. 3. The land acquired under this act shall be under the jurisdiction and control of the Secretary of War. He shall provide for the care and maintenance of said monument and its site, and for this purpose shall submit an estimate with his annual estimates to Congress.

With the following committee amendments:

On page 1, line 5, after the word "War", strike out all language and insert the following: "when title to such lands on the site of the Battle of Eutaw Springs as may be designated by the Secretary of the Interior, in the exercise of his discretion, as necessary or desirable for battlefield site purposes, shall be vested in the United States, said area shall be set apart as a battlefield site for the benefit and inspiration of the people and shall be called the Eutaw Springs Battlefield Site.

"SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized to accept donations of land, interests in land and/or buildings, structures, and other property within the boundaries of the said battle field site as determined and fixed hereunder, and donations of funds for the purchase and/or maintenance thereof, the title and evidence of title to lands acquired to be satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That he may acquire on behalf of the United States out of any donated funds, either by purchase at prices deemed by him reasonable, or by condemnation under the provisions of the act of August 1, 1888, such tracts of land on the said battlefield site as may be necessary for the completion thereof.

"SEC. 3. The administration, protection, and development of the aforesaid battlefield site shall be exercised under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior by the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916, entitled 'An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes', as amended."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL DISTRICT JUDGE FOR OKLAHOMA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2137, to provide for the appointment of one additional district judge for the eastern, northern, and western districts of Oklahoma.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as I understand the Rules Committee has reported out a rule for the consideration of an omnibus bill for additional judges which includes this bill, I ask that this go over without prejudice.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Would it not be more expeditious to pass the bill today and save the time that will necessarily be taken up under the rule?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have made a statement relative to these bills, and probably my objection is less meritorious to this than the others. I do not want to prejudice the bill. I made the statement when the bills first came up that there were so many I felt it was a matter that should have some discussion on the floor as to the policy of increasing the number of judges.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I may say that all the judges' bills on the Consent Calendar are not included in the rule to which the gentleman refers as an "omnibus bill." There was a careful discrimination made and only those bills that provided for additional judges which were approved by the judicial council of judges were included within the rule. Some judgeship bills did not have that approval and they were left out. The Rules Committee did not approve of them. But each judgeship bill included in the rule has been approved by the judicial council, of which the Chief Justice of the United States is a member.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I appreciate that some of the bills have not been included in the omnibus bill and we take the responsibility of determining which are meritorious.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I was simply trying to save time.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes.

Mr. SHORT. It seems to me that the statement made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] was a very good argument why these bills should be considered in the omnibus bill before we take them up for consideration in the House.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I understand that under the rule the omnibus bill cannot be amended by including a new judgeship, although it may be amended by striking out.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is not exactly an "omnibus bill", I might state, to clear up the situation. It is a bill to consider, I think, six or seven separate bills, each bill to be taken up separately, pertaining to one particular district. That bill cannot be amended by the inclusion of any other district. The bill must be voted up or down.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It could not be amended because the amendment would not be germane to that particular section.

Mr. O'CONNOR. There being only one item, another could not be added.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think the chairman of the Committee on Rules has been fair about this, and that we should have some discussion. I renew my request that the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EMPLOYMENT OF ANGUS D. M'LEAN

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3781) limiting the operation of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code and section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States with respect to counsel in certain cases.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That nothing in sections 109 and 113 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States", approved March 4, 1909, as amended, or in section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, or in any other act of Congress forbidding officers or employees or former officers or employees of the United States from acting as counsel, attorney, or agent for another before any court, department, or branch of the Government, or from receiving or agreeing to receive compensation therefor, shall be deemed to apply to attorneys or counselors who have been or may be specially employed, retained, or appointed by the Attorney General or under authority of the Department of Justice to assist in the prosecution of the case pending in the Supreme Court of the United States entitled The Sugar Institute, Inc., et al., appellants, v. The United States of America (docket no. 268, October term, 1935), or the investigation and prosecution of any case pending either in the Federal or State courts, in the western district of North Carolina, involving lands owned or claimed by the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, or by the United States in their behalf, or other public lands owned or involved in litigation in such western district of North Carolina.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That the employment of Angus D. MacLean as an attorney or counsellor especially employed, retained, or appointed by the Attorney General or under authority of the Department of Justice to assist in the prosecution of the case pending in the Supreme Court of the United States entitled The Sugar Institute, Inc., et al., appellants, v. The United States of America (docket no. 268, October term, 1935), or the investigation and prosecution of any case pending either in the Federal or State courts, in the western district of North Carolina, involving lands owned or claimed by the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, or by the United States in their behalf, or other public lands owned or involved in litigation in such western district of North Carolina shall not be construed to be employment within the meaning of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code of the United States, as amended (U. S. C., title 18, secs. 198 and 203), or section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 99)."

The committee amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL JUDGE, EASTERN AND WESTERN DISTRICTS OF KENTUCKY

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3344) to appoint one additional judge of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern and Western Districts of Kentucky.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. In view of the discussion of a similar situation with respect to an Oklahoma judgeship, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection in order to permit me to say to the gentleman from Michigan that this bill providing for an additional judge for Kentucky is not in the omnibus bill. I think it is a meritorious bill. The bar of the State want it, and I think the business demands it. It is not in the omnibus bill, because it has never been submitted to the judicial council.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I understand the judicial council never passed on this bill. My reason for asking that this go over without prejudice is to leave it in position where it may be discussed on the floor.

Mr. SPENCE. But if this goes over without prejudice, it means the end of the bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I am forced into a position where I must be consistent with respect to these judgeship bills. I regret they were put on this calendar at all and that we have to consider them in this way.

Mr. SPENCE. If it goes over without prejudice, it is the end of the bill, because it will not be considered in the omnibus bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I suggest, then, that the gentleman confer with the Speaker and obtain recognition to suspend the rules. That at least would give us some little time for discussion. If it is a meritorious bill, I should be very glad to go along with the gentleman.

Mr. SPENCE. I did not want the gentleman to be under the impression when he asks that the bill go over without prejudice that he is not destroying the bill, because that is what it does in its present status.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think there is time to make such a request of the Speaker to suspend the rules, and in that way we may have some little time for the consideration of the bill on its merits. I renew my request, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection that the bill go over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

ENLARGEMENT OF GOVERNORS ISLAND

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 12009) to authorize the enlargement of Governors Island and consenting to the use of a portion thereof as a landing field for the city of New York and its environs.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, and ask the attention of the sponsor of the bill. Will the gentleman accept an amendment to the bill to the following effect? After the first proviso in section 2 on page 2, line 22, insert the following:

Provided further, That the Secretary of Commerce shall first certify that the existence and use of such landing field shall not be a hindrance or menace to navigation.

Mr. PEYSER. Mr. Speaker, I should be very glad to accept that amendment.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, and I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to clear and make available that portion of Governors Island in New York Harbor situate and lying west and south of a line 200 feet west and south of and parallel to a line known as the James line as the same was fixed by act of Congress dated July 3, 1930 (46 Stat. 908), for use by the said city of New York as a public landing field for the loading and discharge of passengers, mail, and cargo from all airplanes and aircraft engaged in interstate commerce.

SEC. 2. The United States hereby consents to the filling in of so much land now under water adjacent to Governors Island, N. Y., in New York Harbor, as may be necessary to enlarge the area thereof by 70 acres, more or less, in such manner as may be necessary to accomplish the purpose of providing a landing field for the city of New York and environs, and such filling in to be in such direction and in such manner and according to such rules and regulations as may least interfere with water navigation in New York Harbor and all subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe: Provided, That the consent hereby given shall be null and void unless the State of New York and any person that may be found to be the rightful owner of said land under water or any part thereof shall grant to the United States the title to said land and the permission to use the same as a landing field as herein stipulated and for defensive military operations in time of war or during a national emergency declared by the President of the United States to exist: Provided further, That the provisions of this act shall not become operative until the State of New York shall by appropriate legislation cede to the United States concurrent criminal and civil jurisdiction over and upon said land as the same now exists and as the same shall exist by the filling in operations herein provided for: And provided further, That all such filling in, improving, and developing operations, including the laying of runways, landing strips, and other construction necessary for a public landing field, shall be at the expense of the city of New York and without any expense whatsoever to the United States.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to assign that portion of the existing area of Governors Island south and west of the line above mentioned for use by the city of New York for the operation of a public landing field, to be operated all the time for the landing and departure of all airplanes and for the discharge of and loading of passengers, mail, and other cargo under such rules and regulations as the said city of New York by its duly authorized agent or agents may promulgate and proclaim.

SEC. 4. That the city of New York by its duly authorized agent or agents is hereby authorized to fix and collect reasonable fees and to prescribe reasonable rules and regulations for the privileges and use of said landing field: Provided, That no charge shall be collected for any forced landing by any aircraft and no fee shall be charged for any aircraft operated by the United States Government or any department thereof.

SEC. 5. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, all jurisdiction and control over said portion of said Governors Islands as is hereby authorized to be used by the city of New York as a landing field shall revert to the Secretary of War immediately upon any declaration of war by the Congress of the United States, or upon any proclamation by the President of the United States that a national emergency exists, rendering necessary or desirable the use of said area for military operations and in such case the jurisdiction and control over said area shall immediately vest in the Secretary of War, and no damages or claim for damages shall accrue by reason of such reversion of possession and control for the period of any war or any national military emergency.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 8, following the parentheses, insert "said line to extend only to the present limits and confines of Governors Island."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 3, strike out the period, insert a semicolon and the following: "Provided, That no portion of said Governors Island shall be made available by the Secretary of War that is needed for military purposes or for the use of the Army troops stationed on the island."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. LEHLBACH: Page 2, line 22, after the word "exist", insert: "Provided further, That the Secretary of Commerce shall first certify that the existence and use of said landing field shall not be a hindrance or menace to navigation."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

SPECIAL COUNSEL IN ASSOCIATED GAS & ELECTRIC CO. LITIGATION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11615, limiting the operation of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code and section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States with respect to counsel in certain cases.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LAMNECK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is that not the same bill that was passed previously, the Senate bill?

Mr. McLEAN. No. That is a different bill.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT OF PUERTO RICO

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 10312, to amend section 40 of the act of March 2, 1917, entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I promised a Member of the House that I would have that matter put over for further consideration this afternoon. He was compelled to go to the Supreme Court. I wonder if it would be out of order for me to ask that it be passed over temporarily? If it is in order, I make such a request.

The SPEAKER. There is no guaranty that it can be taken up later on.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Well, I make that request, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the bill being passed over temporarily?

There was no objection.

BICENTENARY OF BIRTH OF CHARLES CARROLL OF CARROLLTON

The Clerk called the next business, Senate Joint Resolution 151, making provision for a national celebration of the bicentenary of the birth of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, wealthiest signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. RICH. I will reserve it, but I am against the rich, past and present.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. I may say that I am somewhat in sympathy with the gentleman's criticisms of that word. I did not draft the resolution, but the obvious reason for the inclusion of the word is to dignify the position which Charles Carroll occupied at the time of the Declaration of Independence, being the wealthiest man in the Colonies. It required a brave and noble man to do what he did. This resolution, introduced by the senior Senator from my State, Senator TYDINGS, and which I sponsored before the House committee and handled at the request of Senator TYDINGS without introducing a resolution of my own, presents a matter of great public interest to the people of Maryland especially, as my colleague Congressman KENNEDY of Maryland, who sits at my side, well knows. The great manifestation of interest which I found amongst many Members of the House from other parts of the country was demonstrated by the fine support given this measure, the chairman of the committee, my colleague Mr. KELLER, my colleague Mr. O'CONNOR, of New York, and a number of others who could not be present today. The idea of a bicentenary celebration originated with the Maryland Historical Society, of which my good friend and one of the leading citizens of our State, Gen. Clinton L. Riggs, is now president. It has been a privilege to encourage the passage of this resolution through the various stages up to this point, and I hope the gentleman from Pennsylvania will not interpose an objection at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. RICH. Since the chairman of the Rules Committee and these gentlemen want to honor this man, if they will eliminate that one word I will not object.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Well, Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes; I will reserve it.

Mr. KELLER. There is a better reason for putting in that word than the one given. I do not believe even the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] would object if he understood it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have no objection to that. My objection goes to the fact that we are spending $12,500 for a bicentenary celebration.

Mr. KELLER. The richest man in America offered to absolutely suffer the destruction of his fortune.

Mr. WOLCOTT. But we are spending entirely too much money for celebrations, and I object.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes; I will.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman object if the amount is reduced to $7,500?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Do I understand that the gentleman from Michigan objects to the amount involved?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have no objection to the amount.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, would the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER] have any objection to inserting the words "last survivor"?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Simply that it is a Senate bill, and would require further consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the Senate joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Whereas Charles Carroll of Carrollton during his lifetime of nearly a century rendered services of paramount importance to his country; and

Whereas on February 18, 1776, more than 4 months before the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, John Adams stated that "in the cause of American liberty, his zeal, fortitude, and perseverance have been so conspicuous that he is said to be marked out for a peculiar vengeance by the friends of administration; but he continues to hazard his all, his immense fortune, the largest in America, and his life"; and

Whereas in signing the Declaration of Independence Charles Carroll of Carrollton pledged his life, his sacred honor, and the largest fortune in America to the success of the Revolution; and

Whereas the services rendered by Charles Carroll of Carrollton to the United States during the War of Independence, and in the subsequent struggle to preserve the Republic from disintegrating, which resulted in the adoption of the present Constitution, received the warm praise of his contemporaries, including the Father of his Country; and

Whereas Charles Carroll of Carrollton, as United States Senator from Maryland, played a foremost part in the organization of the Federal Government, under the Presidency of George Washington; and

Whereas for a period of 56 years following the signing of the Declaration of Independence Charles Carroll of Carrollton watched the progress of American affairs with eager solicitude and labored unceasingly for the advancement of the Republic; and

Whereas Daniel Webster in an oration delivered at Faneuil Hall, Boston, on August 2, 1826, on the occasion of a civic tribute to Thomas Jefferson and John Adams, then recently deceased, paid eloquent homage to Charles Carroll of Carrollton, then the last of the signers, comparing him to a venerable oak "standing alone on the plain", hailing him as a "fortunate, distinguished patriot", and exhorting his hearers to "let him know that while we honor the dead we do not forget the living, and that there is not a heart here which does not fervently pray that Heaven may yet keep him back from the society of his companions"; and

Whereas in 1828, as a mark of national homage to Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Congress, by joint resolution, conferred upon him the franking privilege, Speaker Stevenson requesting him, in his official notification, to receive the honor "as a token of the distinguished respect and veneration which Congress entertains toward an early and devoted friend of liberty, and one who stood eminently forward in the purest and noblest band of patriots that the world has ever seen"; and

Whereas on November 15, 1832, the President of the United States, Andrew Jackson, voiced in feeling terms the tribute of the Republic to Charles Carroll of Carrollton, who had died on the preceding day, affirming that "no one estimated higher than I did his claims, whilst living, upon the gratitude and love of his country; none will cherish more sacredly his memory now that he is taken from us by the Great Disposer of the affairs of this world"; and

Whereas the bicentenary of the birth of Charles Carroll of Carrollton occurs on September 19, 1937; and

Whereas it is eminently proper and desirable that the United States should officially commemorate this event: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a body of five persons, to be designated "The Charles Carroll of Carrollton Bicentenary Commission", this Commission to be charged by him with the work of making adequate preparations for a national celebration of the bicentenary of the birth of Charles Carroll of Carrollton. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 4, line 2, strike out the words "appropriated such sums as may be necessary" and insert "appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum of not to exceed $12,500, or the necessary part thereof."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Senate joint resolution, as amended, was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SAN JUAN RIVER

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3488, to provide for an examination and survey to determine the best utilization of the surplus waters of the San Juan River and to determine the feasibility and cost of storing such waters and of diverting them to the Rio Chama.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

MEMORIAL TO BETSY ROSS

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 470, to authorize the selection of a site and the erection thereon of a suitable monument as a memorial to Betsy Ross.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House joint resolution?

Mr. McLEAN and Mr. WOLCOTT objected.

Mr. McGROARTY. Will the gentlemen reserve their objection?

The SPEAKER. This joint resolution requires three objections.

Mr. LAMNECK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will reserve the objection for the purpose of allowing the gentleman from California to make a statement.

Mr. McGROARTY. Mr. Speaker, I do not think if the gentlemen would consider this for a moment, they would have any possible objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have considered it, and considered it carefully, and I have put my objections in the RECORD. If the gentleman had read the record he would know that I had studied it thoroughly and my reasons for objecting to it.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. McCORMACK. My parliamentary inquiry is whether or not three objections are required on this bill.

The SPEAKER. Three objections are required.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, Is there objection to the consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. LAMNECK, Mr. McLEAN, Mr. WOLCOTT, and Mr. EKWALL objected.

UTE INDIAN RESERVATION, UTAH

The Clerk called the next bill (H. R. 9156) to define the exterior boundary of the Ute Indian Reservation in the State of Utah, and for other purposes.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

INDIANS OF CALIFORNIA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1793, to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the Attorney General of the State of California to bring suit in the Court of Claims on behalf of the Indians of California", approved May 18, 1928 (45 Stat. L. 602).

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point a letter I received from the Secretary of the Interior on this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The letter referred to follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, May 1, 1936.

Hon. JOHN J. COCHRAN,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. COCHRAN: Upon your objection, along with that of three others, the California Indian jurisdictional bill (H. R. 5167), as reported by the House Indian Committee, was removed from the Consent Calendar.

A bill containing the same text (S. 1793) has now been placed upon the Consent Calendar of the House. Certain amendments to this bill, as I am advised, will be offered upon the floor in behalf of the House Indian Committee.

Analysis of the proposed amendments indicates that if enacted they would cause a delay of years in the settlement of the California Indian Jurisdictional Act now pending in the Court of Claims, with no compensating benefit either to the Indians or to the Government.

For your fuller information I am enclosing a copy of a letter which Commissioner Collier has sent to Chairman ROGERS, of the House Committee on Indian Affairs, and of the memorandum referred to in that letter.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, April 27, 1936.

Hon. WILL ROGERS,
Chairman, House Committee on Indian Affairs,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. ROGERS: I suggest that serious attention needs to be given to the facts contained in the memorandum enclosed herewith.

The proposed amendment was not known to me nor to anybody in the Indian Office of the Department until it was presented at the committee's session on April 22. Therefore I was not able to do more than advise the committee that the amendment was not objectionable in that degree or in that way which had been true of the amendments that had been proposed at the earlier session.

I have now subjected the amendments to an analysis. I have gone back over the California rolls, and the documents that the rolls were built on, and have consulted with the Smithsonian Institution. The result is that which is put into the memorandum; that is, in sum:

(1) The amendment, if adopted, will constitute a leap into the dark. Neither its advocates nor Congress can know from existing records whether amendment will mean little or much gain or loss to the Indians or to the Government, as compared to the language of the unamended bill. But more important—

(2) The amendment, if adopted, would require the execution by the Department of the Interior and the Smithsonian Institution of a task wholly impossible. The California roll, which the amendment makes the basis for the determination of ratios, does not contain the information on which the two Departments would be required to base their determinations. Therefore if the amendment were adopted the bill thereafter would have to be again amended, and the inescapable research work in the field would delay the completion of the pending suit by many years while the Government set-offs continued to pile up.

The facts are given in the attached memorandum, and would be supported and elaborated should the committee desire to call before it the experts of the Smithsonian Institution.

In addition to the above, and wholly apart from it, I think it is proper to call your attention to an obscurity of language that reaches to the heart of the proposed amendment.

In an earlier letter dealing with the earlier proposed amendment I pointed out that the Court of Claims had consistently refused to award damages to Indians for the losses of lands which they claimed merely by virtue of aboriginal occupancy. Aboriginal occupancy, as construed by this unbroken opinion of the Court of Claims, did not create title.

Now the proposed amendment directs that the Court of Claims shall determine "the acreage of lands to which such tribes or bands of Indians * * * had title by reason of occupancy and use." The court is not directed to find what lands they had occupancy and use of; it is not directed to find that such occupancy and use constituted title; it is merely directed to find what lands, if any, these Indians had title to by reason of occupancy and use.

This language clearly fails to convey the result which the drafters of the amendment presumptively intended. The Court of Claims would be free to find that occupancy and use had created no title to a single acre. The precedent of the court would lead it to make exactly that determination. Hence the supposed purpose of the amendment, limited and indefinite as it is, would, or at least might, be defeated by the very language of the amendment.

The above considerations would seem to be conclusive to the effect that the amendment in its form as given would be (a) a leap into the dark; (b) the institution of a procedure altogether unfeasible in the light of what the rolls actually do contain; (c) a step seriously endangering the possibility of any recovery whatsoever by the Indians for the loss of the nontreaty areas.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) JOHN COLLIER, Commissioner.

MEMORANDUM EXPLAINING UNFEASIBILITY OF AMENDMENT OF CALIFORNIA INDIAN JURISDICTIONAL ACT AS PROPOSED BY HOUSE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

The amendment proposed on page 4, beginning line 1, of the House bill amendatory of the existing California Indian Jurisdictional Act would require the identification of each California Indian as being a descendant or not a descendant of a tribe or band which was a party to one of the "lost treaties." This identification would have to be based on the California Indian roll. Such is the requirement of the proposed amendment.

The language is loose, but the present tense is used. The wording used is: "That the net amount to be allowed on account of such nontreaty lands shall be limited to an amount which shall bear a relation to the amount allowed by reason of said treaties not greater than the number of nontreaty Indians bears to the number of treaty Indians." (Italics mine.)

Two issues, therefore, are raised.

First. What, on the basis of present information, can Congress presume as to the ratio between the descendants of treaty and nontreaty Indians?

This essential question simply cannot be answered at the present time. The data do not exist for answering it. No deduction can be made by working downward in time from the assumed ratios that may have existed in 1852. There has been much intermarriage between Indians presumptively descended from the treaty Indians and presumptively descended from the nontreaty group. The rate of decline of population has been in no sense uniform among the more than 300 California bands that existed in 1852.

The matter is further complicated by a reading of the signatures upon the "lost treaties." One hundred and forty tribes or bands appear as allegedly represented by at least one signatory. There were, as before stated, more than 300 tribes and bands. It is not clear, and in the absence of legislative definition it would become the duty of the court to determine whether bands not appearing among the signatories, but known as being linquistically or geographically or governmentally connected with the signatory bands, are or are not to be considered treaty Indians.

From the above it follows that no estimate as to the ratios would have any validity whatsoever, and from the point of view of the practical results that would flow from the proposed amendment Congress would be acting wholly in the dark.

Second. An even more baffling difficulty arises when an attempt is made to think out the operation of the amendment in terms of the processes leading toward an ultimate finding by the Court of Claims. The number of enrollees listed under the Jurisdictional Act is about 22,000. Examination of the rolls shows that the rolls do not yield the information even as to the alleged tribal or band origin of large numbers of Indians on the rolls. Going back of the rolls to the case records, it is found that the essential question 29, calling for statement of paternal and maternal California Indian ancestors back to 1852, is usually not answered at all.

In other words, from the existent record, the necessary evidence could not be gleaned—evidence which the court would absolutely have to have before it—for determining the essential question of ratios.

This would mean a new ethnogenealogical research, conducted on the ground, not by ordinary enrollment officers but by some ethnologist who has specialized upon California.

Be it noted that the act directs the Secretary of the Interior and the Smithsonian Institution to certify to the court from the census roll the requisite facts; and be it noted that the census roll does not contain the requisite facts.

An impossibility would be set up, necessitating amendatory legislation, with new appropriations for an original research that would require years of time to complete, and the passage of the case to final judgment would be delayed by at least that many years.

The above are practical facts which evidently were not known to or were not taken into account by those who formulated the proposed amendment.

It may be added that although the amendment has a certain appearance of superficial logic, there really is no logic to it.

(a) The ratio between nontreaty and treaty Indians as of 1852 might have equitable significance; their unknown and probably undeterminable ratio as of today has no equitable significance.

(b) The areas held in exclusive use by the divers tribes and bands were not measured by population, but were highly variable in size in relation to population. If the treaty groups made undue surrenders under the practically forced documents which they signed, is that any reason to retrospectively impose, after 80 years, a similar undue surrender upon the nontreaty groups?

(c) The treaties never were made effective; the Indians never moved into the areas delimited therein; those within the areas received no protection; the only practical significance of the treaties is that retrospective significance conveyed to them when Congress, through an act of grace, made them the measure of recovery for the California Indians as a body.

All the above procedural impossibility and confusion would be removed if, instead of adopting the amendment as proposed, the court simply were directed to award for aboriginal occupancy at an amount per acre to be named by Congress. If $1.25 per acre be deemed too large, then it would be simple enough for Congress to cut the per-acre award to 50 cents or 25 cents, or any figure which it wanted to adopt. Thereupon the case could proceed to judgment and not undergo delay of many years and be found unfeasible at the end of that time. The proposed amendment as it stands could only result in long delay and in unfeasibility.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may go over without prejudice.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his request?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I withhold my request to permit the gentleman to make a statement.

Mr. BURDICK. This bill S. 1793 merely authorizes that attorneys representing the Indians in the California Indian matter now pending before the circuit court of appeals be selected by the Indians themselves. In other words, this bill is to permit the Indians to select counsel of their own choosing to represent them in the case, as well as the attorney general of the State of California.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. If the gentleman will read the letters I am placing in the RECORD——

Mr. BURDICK. I have seen the letters. They were before the committee. The committee reported the bill unanimously.

Mr. COCHRAN. Why were they not placed in the report on the bill, then?

Mr. BURDICK. What is the use of having a Committee on Indian Affairs if we do not pay any attention to them?

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California that the bill go over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT FOR PUERTO RICO

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12119, to amend sections 13 and 19 of the act of March 2, 1917, entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes."

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will some member of the committee inform me whether a supplementary report has been filed in conformity with the Ramseyer rule?

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill go over without prejudice. I have not had the benefit of any supplemental report or been able to study the bill, and there are many really important changes.

Mr. BLANTON. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that the bill may go over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL JUDGESHIP, DISTRICT OF KANSAS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3434, to provide for the appointment of one additional judge for the District of Kansas.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

INDIANS OF THE STATE OF OKLAHOMA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2047, to promote the general welfare of the Indians of the State of Oklahoma, and for other purposes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, has the gentleman given consideration to the bill except section 6 which is the authorization?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I may say it is quite a radical departure from existing policy. Because of this I do not think it should be passed by unanimous consent. In addition, it involves about $2,000,000. I think it should be brought to the floor and considered as one of the very important Indian bills.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert at this point in the RECORD a letter I have received on this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes; I object. I object to the bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill has already been passed over without prejudice.

CHOCTAW INDIANS, MISSISSIPPI

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2715, conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claims of the Choctaw Indians in the State of Mississippi.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD at this point a letter I have received on this bill.

Mr. BURDICK. From whom does the letter come?

Mr. COCHRAN. From the Comptroller General.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I object to the bill.

CAPT. MOSES ROGERS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8998, to authorize the erection of a monument in memory of Capt. Moses Rogers.

Mr. WOLCOTT, Mr. YOUNG, and Mr. RICH objected.

DESIGNATION OF SEQUOIA TREE AS THE NATIONAL TREE OF THE UNITED STATES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 10106, to designate the sequoia tree (Sequoia gigantea) as the national tree of the United States.

Mr. WOLCOTT, Mr. LEHLBACH, and Mr. McLEAN objected.

PROHIBITION OF INTERSTATE TRANSPORTATION OF STRIKE BREAKERS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2039, making it a felony to transport in interstate or foreign commerce persons to be employed to obstruct or interfere with the right of peaceful picketing during labor controversies.

Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut, Mr. RICH, and Mr. BLANTON objected.

IDENTIFICATION OF PRISON-MADE GOODS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11372, to amend Public Law No. 215, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session.

Mr. WOOD, Mr. SCHULTE, Mr. CURLEY, and Mr. CONNERY objected.

THE FEDERAL REGISTER

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11337, to amend the Federal Register Act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask my friend, the author of the bill, if he would be willing to accept an amendment which would add a new section providing that section 3 of such Federal Register Act is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence? "The Federal Register shall be published not oftener than once a week."

Mr. CELLER. I may say to the gentleman from Indiana that I personally would have no objection. However, since speaking to the gentleman I read through the original bill and I find that section 5 of the bill provides for the publication of the various proclamations by the President and the various rules and regulations of the departments and they must be published within certain designated periods. If the Register is published only once a week, we would have to also amend section 5 of the original act.

Mr. LUDLOW. May I say to the gentleman that I have read the original act very carefully and I cannot find in it anywhere a direction as to the number of times this publication shall be issued per week. I think it is very important in the interest of economy that a section be added which prescribes that the Register shall be issued but once a week.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUDLOW. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. How many Members out of the 435 does the gentleman from Indiana think even look at the Federal Register?

Mr. LUDLOW. I may say to the gentleman that I think it ought to be abolished entirely, but if we are going to keep it, I think it should be held down to one issue a week. There are now five issues every week, and it costs the taxpayers $263,000 a year, or over $1,000 every day it is issued. There are to date only 480 paid subscriptions, and the total revenue up to this moment is only $4,200. I submit that the Register ought to be abolished and this useless expense stopped.

Mr. BLANTON. Hundreds of them go into the waste-basket.

Mr. CELLER. The gentleman is in error. A great many Members read the Federal Register.

Mr. BLANTON. Has the gentleman read the last issue?

Mr. CELLER. I read the last one. This is not only for the edification of the Members of Congress. It is for the enlightenment of the entire country.

Mr. SCHULTE demanded the regular order.

Mr. LUDLOW. If the gentleman will not accept the amendment, I shall be compelled to object. I regret to object, because I know how deeply and sincerely the gentleman from New York is interested in this publication, but my sense of duty compels me to do so. If the gentleman will agree to my amendment, I shall not object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LAMNECK, Mr. BLANTON, Mr. SCHULTE, and Mr. LUDLOW objected.

WHY LIMIT WAR PROFITS?

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a good speech I made over the radio last week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, some time ago I was invited by the National Council for Prevention of War to broadcast over WOL and associated stations on the subject "Why Limit War Profits?" Because of my recent investigation concerning this subject matter, I was glad to accept their invitation and on Thursday evening, May 28, delivered the following address:

I first desire to thank WOL for their courtesy in the use of their facilities this evening. I wish I had ample time in which to cover the subject assigned to me, "Why Limit War Profits?"

It is a very interesting subject and has many interesting phases, and it would take some time to cover the different angles. The whole question of open competition, limitation of profits, or, in the alternative, Government ownership of factories making war supplies, is wrapped up in the question of our system of procurement of all war supplies since the beginning of our entry into the World War and our experience in trying to secure competition in all of our war-supply purchases since the war down to date.

MUNITIONS LOBBY

Because of the different war munitions lobbyists operating in Washington, they have been able to secure legislation appropriating many millions of dollars. The records show how a few concerns in truth and in fact have secured the lion's share of these millions expended. For example, we find the naval expenditures the last 25 years total $10,670,778,419, and Army expenditures $24,295,519,301.

COST PLUS 10 PERCENT WAR CONTRACTS

During the World War practically all war-munitions contracts were let on what was known as a cost-plus 10-percent profits basis. Different investigations since the war have shown how flagrant were the violations of these contracts and the different methods used by the war profiteers to run up unconscionable profits. Because of the disclosures thus made over the cost-plus 10-percent contracts this system of procurement was discontinued soon thereafter.

ORIGINALLY COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE HAD SAY

Under the general law the legality of all Government procurement contracts and the provisions of the law requiring open competition in such procurement has been under the direction and supervision of the Comptroller General's office. This office has rendered splendid service as far as within its power in requiring the strict compliance with the law and requiring open competition in the letting of such contracts.

The war profiteers making all kinds of materials, such as ships, aircraft, ordnance, etc., have had their well-organized lobbies to turn the heat on Congress to amend the procurement laws so as to take away from the Comptroller's office the final say as to whether or not the requirements of the law as to competition in the purchase of all such equipment has been complied with.

THE AIRCRAFT ACT OF 1926

For example, the aircraft and scientific-instrument concerns were instrumental in the enactment of the Aircraft Act of 1926, which took away from the Comptroller's office the final right to say whether or not open competition had been met in all aircraft procurement. This act set up a system of purchasing all aircraft supplies and accessories under the exclusive control of the War and Navy Departments, and the Secretaries of War and the Navy had the final say as to whether or not competition was had in such purchases.

MILITARY AND NAVAL AFFAIRS INVESTIGATIONS

Investigating committees were appointed by the House Military and Naval Affairs Committees in 1934 to check up on all purchases of aircraft and accessories for the War and Navy Departments. While a majority of the Naval Affairs Investigating Committee found all naval aircraft purchases from 1926 to date were in keeping with the law, I filed a minority report pointing out that the Comptroller's records show that 92 percent of all the naval aircraft equipment and 91.3 percent of all the Army aircraft equipment purchased under said act of 1926 down to date of filing said report in 1934 had been purchased in violation of said law, and that the Judge Advocate General's Departments of both the War and Navy had continuously so held that such equipment had been bought without open competition, as required by such law.

The House Military Affairs Investigating Committee later filed a similar report, showing that the Army had not followed the Aircraft Act in requiring open competition in their aircraft procurement. In my report at the time I pointed out, as shown by the records, the enormous profits that were being made by these different aircraft concerns and showed from the Comptroller's records that about one-half dozen aircraft companies and two aircraft engine manufacturing companies practically controlled all aircraft business with the Army and the Navy Departments.

MY MINORITY REPORT

I also pointed out that from July 1926 through December 1933 the Army had bought 4,245 engines and 1,857 airplanes and the Navy 3,158 engines and 1,076 airplanes; of the 4,245 engines purchased by the Army 2,492 were bought from Pratt & Whitney, and 1,740 from the Wright Aeronautical Co., and only 13 engines were bought from all other engine concerns in the United States. Of the 3,158 engines purchased by the Navy 2,149 were purchased from Pratt & Whitney, 973 from the Wright Aeronautical, and 36 from all others.

I placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD my minority report, which contained carefully checked charts which showed the latest known performance of every warplane and engine in the world at that time, and this chart clearly showed that while the United States was spending far more money than any other nation for aircraft equipment, we stood practically at the foot of the list in each of the categories as compared to the latest known performance of the different warplanes and engines of the other great powers.

SYSTEM OF PROCUREMENT

Under the Aircraft Act of 1926, whenever different or experimental equipment is desired other than that in use in the service, the law provides, under section 10K of said act, that all such experimental equipment shall be purchased through negotiated contracts at Government expense under proper Government supervision; and more than $20,000,000 the last 10 years has been appropriated and expended by the Navy Department and more than twice that sum by the War Department for such experimental aircraft supposedly to be purchased through negotiated contracts. On all quantity purchases under the act open competition is provided. According to the Comptroller's records and their construction of these contracts, as above shown, 92 percent of these purchases have been made in violation of the law.

TEN PERCENT FOR THE NAVY

Mr. TOBEY, of New Hampshire, offered the 10-percent profits-limitation amendment to the Vinson-Trammell Act on the floor of Congress on March 6, 1934, limiting the profits on all ship and aircraft construction of the Navy. This amendment was agreed to by the chairman and finally worked out and approved in free conference and became a law March 27, 1934.

TEN PERCENT FOR THE ARMY

I offered a 10-percent profits-limitation amendment to the War Department appropriations bill on February 14 this year, limiting the profits on all aircraft and ordnance supplies, which amendment was unanimously approved by the House.

GENERAL CRAIG AND MR. WOODRING TESTIFY

When this appropriations bill went to the Senate, General Craig and Assistant Secretary of War Woodring went before the Senate subcommittee on appropriations and bitterly opposed this 10-percent amendment.

General Craig testified before the Senate committee that the naval 10-percent profits-limitation amendment "was the outgrowth of careful hearing in committee, amendment, debate, conference, and rejected agreement and further conference. It was sufficient to constitute a problem in itself. The War Department is quite in accord with the implied intention of this proposed section to limit profit on contracts to reasonable figures. However, it is strongly opposed to any wording of such an important law being inserted in the appropriation act without careful investigation of its reactions on its system of proposals."

When, as shown by the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, the naval amendment was inserted on the floor of the House and retained in the conference committee report, Mr. Woodring in his testimony before the Senate committee frankly admitted the aircraft law had not been complied with when he testified:

"In looking up the law some 2 years ago I found that we were not carrying out the law, the Defense Aircraft Act of 1926, in the method in which we were procuring our aircraft, and as you know—you have heard a lot about it—we changed from a negotiated contract to a competitive-bidding basis, which I think conscientious opinion holds is according to law."

Under the Aircraft Act of 1926 all experimental aircraft in small quantities is supposed to be purchased through negotiated contracts by the War and Navy Department and after the kind and character of equipment is determined under said act when purchases of aircraft are to be made in quantity lots, the law requires advertising to the public and open competitive bidding so that all may compete.

Under the system, Mr. Woodring has worked out, according to his testimony to the Senate committee, he states:

"The bidder is required to submit with his bid a completed airplane on the line for test, as he submits his bid, and these airplanes are thoroughly tested and contracts awarded to the manufacturer who has produced the finest-performing airplane, after we have evaluated all the planes in competition.

"To insure the reasonableness of the cost a careful financial audit is made of the cost figures of the manufacturer, after we make an award."

Thus you will note that their present system of aircraft procurement has no open competition as required by law, and no bidder has any assurance that regardless of the superiority of his products, will he have any right to expect to secure the contract.

HOW MR. WOODRING'S SYSTEM WORKS

For example, in August 1934 the War Department decided to buy 20 airplanes for a quantity purchase, but they disregarded advertising as the law requires, and the planes were not purchased as experimental contract as the law requires. There were, it seems, four bidders for this contract: Douglass, Curtiss-Wright Airplane Co., Fairchild Aircraft Corporation, and Bellanca Aircraft Corporation. Douglass bid $49,500 for the skeleton plane, Curtiss-Wright $29,500, the Fairchild Aircraft Corporation $29,150, and Ballanca Aircraft Corporation $17,424. The War Department gave the contract to the Douglass Co., whose bid was more than $20,000 per skeleton plane higher than each of the other bidders, all of whose planes met more than the minimum requirements as set out in the specifications.

I spoke on the policy of aircraft procurement and covered this subject fully in my remarks in the RECORD of February 18 and March 23, pointing out the Comptroller General's reasons why he recommended the rejection of the contract to the Douglass Co.

In debate on the conference report May 6, the records show one of the members indicated the reason for the purchase of the Douglass planes in spite of the high bid was that: "The savings of gasoline alone has been about $12,000 aside from the increased efficiency and safety."

I immediately wired the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation for the facts regarding purchase of said planes, to which they replied:

"Retel on order for 20 Bellancas, Government would have saved $250,000 on planes and additional $375,000 in gasoline, making a total saving of $1,223,000. Had Air Corps expended same amount for Bellancas as for 20 Douglasses would have secured 40 Bellanca cargo planes, flying 6,000,000 more miles and carrying 51,700,000 more pounds over 300-mile trips. Bellanca transport cargo airplanes safest in world; not a single fatality in millions miles operations. Fourteen Bellanca cargo ships were used by Air Corps in carrying air mail in January 1934, with best results. Detailed letter follows special delivery. Bellanca Aircraft Corporation."

Thus we see how the War Department, regardless of the merits of the planes offered for any reason known to themselves, real or imaginary, they purchase whatever plane they desire, regardless of its merit or cost to the Government.

According to Fairchild and Bellanca, on these 20 planes alone the Government stands to lose more than $1,000,000, to say nothing of inferior equipment.

We are now in the midst of purchasing hundreds of airplanes for both the War and Navy Departments, which, under the system now in force, gives little or no protection to opening competition to the industry or to protect the taxpayers.

Yet my 10-percent profits-limitation amendment was taken out of the War Department's appropriation bill, and the 10-percent profits-limitation amendment placed in the Vinson-Trammell Naval Act in 1934 will be practically nullified if H. R. 5730, now pending on the calendar of the Senate, is enacted, but we urge you to ask your Senator to vote against this bill.

Every national war veterans' organization has urged Congress to take the profits out of war. If we cannot have honest competition in all war-munitions procurement or limit their profits, the only other alternative is Government ownership, to protect the taxpayer and to stop the war profiteers from continually lobbying through Congress large appropriations for their own private gain.

Every taxpayer should read the Senate Munitions Committee's investigations report, with which I am in hearty accord. Good night.

CONSENT CALENDAR

PRESCRIBING A CONDITION PRECEDENT TO THE AWARD OF CERTAIN CONTRACTS BY FEDERAL AGENCIES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12260, prescribing a condition precedent to the award of certain contracts by Federal agencies.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Federal agencies (as defined in sec. 3 of this act) shall require bids for the construction, alteration, or repair of any public building or public work to be accomplished by bid security. No bid for any such work which is not accompanied by the stipulated security shall be accepted.

SEC. 2. Such bid security shall be a bid bond executed by a guaranty company as surety or a certified check or obligations of the United States (including obligations which are guaranteed by the United States as to the payment of principal and interest). The amount of such security shall be stipulated in the invitation to bid, which amount shall be expressed either as a percentage of the amount of the bid or as a lump sum as may be deemed advisable by the contracting Federal agency.

SEC. 3. The term "Federal agency", as used in this act, means any executive department, independent establishment, commission, board, bureau, division, office in the executive branch, or corporation whose stock is wholly owned by the United States.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 5, strike out "accomplished" and insert "accompanied."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NAVAL AIR BASE AT TONGUE POINT, OREG.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 10129, authorizing an appropriation for the development of a naval air base at Tongue Point, Oreg.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman withhold his objection?

Mr. UMSTEAD. I shall be glad to withhold the objection.

Mr. MOTT. I may say to the gentleman that he and possibly one other Member are the only Members of the House, so far as I can ascertain, who have any objection to this bill. It is my understanding that it is impossible, under the circumstances, to secure a rule upon this bill at the present session of Congress so that a vote may be had upon this matter. This is very likely the last Consent Calendar day of the session. The gentleman has had several weeks to make a careful investigation, and I do not believe he really has a fundamental objection to the bill.

Under the circumstances I am simply asking if the gentleman cannot see his way clear to let this authorization go through at this session?

Mr. UMSTEAD. I regret I cannot, Mr. Speaker. I object.

CONSTRUCTION OF AUXILIARY VESSELS FOR THE NAVY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11369, to authorize the construction of certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that a rule has been granted by the Rules Committee for the consideration of this measure, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be stricken from the Consent Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

CLAIMS OF THE ASSINIBOINE INDIANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9144, conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and enter judgment in any claims which the Assiniboine Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I have a letter from the Comptroller General of the United States with respect to this bill, and I ask unanimous consent to place the letter in the RECORD at this point.

Mr. BURDICK. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. COCHRAN. I object to the consideration of the bill, Mr. Speaker.

LIMITATION OF SHIPOWNERS' LIABILITY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9969, relative to limitation of shipowners' liability.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I see the author of the bill here, and I wonder if he would not make a brief statement about the measure.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, the bill clarifies the bill that was passed in the closing days of the last session of the Congress with reference to limitation of liability. This is one feature of the bill.

Another feature of the measure is that it was found that on the back of a number of passenger tickets that were being issued, there were provisions that practically did away with the liability that had been passed by this House and that we had made the law of the land. We have put provisions in this bill that will make them null and void. This is really a clarifying measure, and I may say that the advisory committee in the interest of safety-at-sea legislation recommends that the bill be passed.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. COSTELLO. On page 6, of the bill, I notice the amendment strikes the word "actual" from the original draft. It would seem to me in order to make it possible for the master of a seagoing vessel to be held liable he should only be responsible, in the event of loss of life, in a case where there was actual privity or knowledge on the part of the master, and it sems to me that anybody seeking to bring suit should be obligated to prove actual knowledge.

Mr. BLAND. Well, there was considerable difficulty about that. The matter was considered very carefully, and that was one of the bones of contention, and the word "actual" was contemplated to mean personal, as used there, and it was felt that to require actual knowledge on the part of the master was going too far; that if there were circumstances and conditions that imposed upon the master the duty to know these things, then he ought to know them.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 4655), an identical bill, which this day passed the Senate, and consider the same in lieu of the House bill.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill as follows:

An act relative to limitation of shipowners' liability

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4283 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 183; Supp. I, title 46, sec. 183), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4283. (a) The liability of the owner of any vessel, whether American or foreign, for any embezzlement, loss, or destruction by any person of any property, goods, or merchandise shipped or put on board of such vessel, or for any loss, damage, or injury by collision, or for any act, matter, or thing, loss, damage, or forfeiture, done, occasioned, or incurred, without the privity or knowledge of such owner or owners, shall not, except in the cases provided for in subsection (b) of this section, exceed the amount or value of the interest of such owner in such vessel, and her freight then pending.

"(b) In the case of any seagoing vessel, if the amount of the owner's liability as limited under subsection (a) is insufficient to pay all losses in full, and the portion of such amount applicable to the payment of losses in respect of loss of life or bodily injury is less than $60 per ton of such vessel's tonnage, such portion shall be increased to an amount equal to $60 per ton, to be available only for the payment of losses in respect of loss of life or bodily injury. If such portion so increased is insufficient to pay such losses in full, they shall be paid therefrom in proportion to their respective amounts.

"(c) For the purposes of this section the tonnage of a seagoing steam or motor vessel shall be her gross tonnage without deduction on account of engine room, and the tonnage of a seagoing sailing vessel shall be her registered tonnage: Provided, That there shall not be included in such tonnage any space occupied by seamen or apprentices and appropriated to their use.

"(d) The owner of any such seagoing vessel shall be liable in respect of loss of life or bodily injury arising on distinct occasions to the same extent as if no other loss of life or bodily injury had arisen.

"(e) In respect of loss of life or bodily injury the privity or knowledge of the master of a seagoing vessel or of the superintendent or managing agent of the owner thereof, at or prior to the commencement of each voyage, shall be deemed conclusively the privity or knowledge of the owner of such vessel.

"(f) As used in subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e) of this section, and in section 4283A, the term 'seagoing vessel' shall not include pleasure yachts, tugs, towboats, towing vessels, tank vessels, fishing vessels or their tenders, self-propelled lighters, nondescript self-propelled vessels, canal boats, scows, car floats, barges, lighters, or nondescript non-self-propelled vessels, even though the same may be seagoing vessels within the meaning of such term as used in section 4289 of this chapter, as amended."

SEC. 2. Chapter 6 of title 48 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting after section 4283A the following new section:

"SEC. 4283B. Stipulations limiting liability for negligence invalid: It shall be unlawful for the manager, agent, master, or owner of any vessel transporting passengers between ports of the United States or between any such port and a foreign port to insert in any rule, regulation, contract, or agreement any provision or limitation (1) purporting, in the event of loss of life or bodily injury arising from the negligence or fault of such owner or his servants, to relieve such owner, master, or agent from liability, or from liability beyond any stipulated amount, for such loss or injury, or (2) purporting in such event to lessen, weaken, or avoid the right of any claimant to a trial by court of competent jurisdiction on the question of liability for such loss or injury or the measure of damages therefor. All such provisions or limitations contained in any such rule, regulation, contract, or agreement are hereby declared to be against public policy and shall be null and void and of no effect."

SEC. 3. Section 4285 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 185) is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4285. The vessel owner, within 6 months after a claimant shall have given to or filed with such owner written notice of claim, may petition a district court of the United States of competent jurisdiction for limitation of liability within the provisions of this chapter, as amended, and the owner (a) shall deposit with the court, for the benefit of claimants, a sum equal to the amount or value of the interest of such owner in the vessel and freight, or approved security therefor, and in addition such sums, or approved security therefor, as the court may from time to time fix as necessary to carry out the provisions of section 4283, as amended, or (b) at his option shall transfer, for the benefit of claimants, to a trustee to be appointed by the court, his interest in the vessel and freight, together with such sums, or approved security therefor, as the court may from time to time fix as necessary to carry out the provisions of section 4283, as amended. Upon compliance with the requirements of this section all claims and proceedings against the owner with respect to the matter in question shall cease."

SEC. 4. Section 4289 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 188), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4289. Except as otherwise specifically provided therein, the provisions of the nine preceding sections and of section 18 of the act entitled 'An act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine and encourage the American foreign carrying trade, and for other purposes', approved June 26, 1884 (23 Stat. 57; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 189), shall apply to all seagoing vessels, and also to all vessels used on lakes or rivers or in inland navigation, including canal boats, barges, and lighters."

SEC. 5. Section 2 of the act entitled "An act relative to limitation of shipowners' liability", approved August 29, 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. I, sec. 183a), is hereby repealed.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The similar House bill was laid on the table.

INTERSTATE REFERENCE BUREAU

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 481, to make available to Congress the services and data of the Interstate Reference Bureau.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That upon the acceptance of the provisions of this joint resolution by the Council of State Governments it shall be its duty and the duty of the Interstate Reference Bureau, jointly conducted by said council and by the American Legislators Association, the National Association of Attorneys General, and the National Association of Secretaries of State, upon request therefor, to make their services and their indices, digests, compilations, bulletins, and other data available to either House of Congress, its committees and Members, and to the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, and to act as a clearing house in making so available the similar data of the legislative reference bureaus of the several States and the similar data of other research agencies. For carrying out the purpose of this joint resolution there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for each fiscal year thereafter, the sum of $40,000 to be expended by the Council of State Governments for the maintenance of said Interstate Reference Bureau. The Council of State Governments and its executive and administrative agency, the Interstate Reference Bureau, are hereby recognized as agencies capable of rendering valuable assistance and information in connection with legislative problems and other governmental problems, as well as useful instrumentalities in connection with efforts to coordinate the legislation and governmental activities of the several States and of the Federal Government, and as quasi-governmental agencies, which are maintained in part by appropriation of various States. The appropriations made pursuant to this joint resolution shall be disbursed by the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NAVAL AIR STATION, ALAMEDA, CALIF.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 4020) to authorize the acquisition of lands in the city of Alameda, county of Alameda, State of California, as a site for a naval air station and to authorize the construction and installation of a naval air station thereon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. DELANEY. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as the Rules Committee has reported a rule on this bill, I ask that it be stricken from the calendar.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL DISTRICT JUDGE FOR NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN DISTRICTS OF WEST VIRGINIA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2456, an act to provide for the appointment of an additional district judge for the northern and southern districts of West Virginia.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS TRUST FUND BOARD

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12353, to amend an act entitled "An act to create a Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1925.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to create a Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1925, is amended by striking out the first seven words of the last paragraph of section 2 thereof, to wit, the words "Should any gift or bequest so provide" and substituting therefor the words "In the absence of any specification to the contrary."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF SIX MILE CREEK, LOGAN COUNTY, ARK.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 12202) to provide for a preliminary examination of Six Mile Creek in Logan County, Ark., with a view to flood control, and to determine the cost of such improvement.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, we have a very comprehensive flood-control bill pending, and I should like to some explanation of this bill.

Mr. MILLER. I can tell the gentleman what it does. It is to survey this stream under direction of the War Department, as it has surveyed thousands of other streams.

Mr. RICH. This bill is only to give a preliminary survey by the War Department.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I withdraw my reservation of objection.

There being no further objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of Six Mile Creek (also known in its lower reach as Short Mountain Creek) in Logan County, Ark., to determine the feasibility of flood-control work on said creek and the cost of such improvement, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the control of floods of the Mississippi River and the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, and the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROMOTION OF SPECIAL-DELIVERY MESSENGERS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11822, to permit certain special-delivery messengers to acquire a classified status through noncompetitive examination.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, this bill putting the special-delivery carriers under civil service in its political aspect is comparable to a bill before us sometime ago putting the first-, second-, and third-class postmasters under civil service. It will result in placing these carriers under civil service without a competitive examination, and for that reason I object.

Mr. HAINES. Let me say that this bill was introduced by the request of several special messengers appointed years ago who had no opportunity to get a civil-service status. It does not apply to any except those who have been in the service 5 years.

Mr. WOLCOTT. All of the special-delivery carriers in my district have been replaced within the last 2 or 3 years. If this administration is reelected, they will have had 5 years' service.

This act provides that they will carry on the duties of a special carrier until they are called into the regular service, which authorizes the perpetuation in office of every politically appointed special-delivery carrier in the event that this administration is returned to office. For that reason I object.

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Speaker, I do not know anything about the political status the gentleman refers to. This bill did not come from the Department.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I never would object to a bill brought in here which provided to put these men under the civil service after a competitive examination; and if the gentleman will bring in a bill of that kind, it will be passed.

Mr. HAINES. This bill was brought to us by some employees, not by the Department.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

POSTAL RATES ON THIRD-CLASS MATTER

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 11954) to amend the act of February 28, 1925 (43 Stat. 1053), relative to postal rates on third-class mail matter.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 206 (a) of the act entitled "An act reclassifying the salaries of postmasters and employees of the Postal Service, readjusting their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis, increasing postal rates to provide for such readjustment, and for other purposes", approved February 28, 1925, as amended (43 Stat. 1053; U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 39, sec. 235), is hereby amended by inserting before the period at the end of such section a comma and the following: "but bills or statements of account produced by any photographic or mechanical process shall not be accepted as mail matter of the third class unless presented in quantities of 20 or more identical copies. When such bills or statements are not identical or are presented in quantities of less than 20 identical copies, they shall be subject to postage at the first-class rate".

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

MEMORIAL IN HONOR OF UNKNOWN SOLDIERS BURIED IN PHILADELPHIA

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 9040) to provide for the erection of a memorial in the National Cemetery of Philadelphia, Pa., in honor of the 40 unknown soldiers of America's wars who lie buried there.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

MEMORIAL FOR CHIEF JUSTICE JOHN JAY

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 10716) securing memorial for John Jay, first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Has this bill been approved by the Park Commission?

Mr. KELLER. It does not have to be.

Mr. MILLARD. The bill has been approved by the Committee on the Library and by Chief Justice Hughes and the other Justices of the Supreme Court. It is merely for the erection of a tablet in memory of John Jay, to be selected by the Chief Justice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the United States Supreme Court Building Commission be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to secure and place in the new Supreme Court Building in the city of Washington, D. C., a suitable memorial to John Jay, the first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

MEMORIAL TO HAYM SALOMON

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 467, authorizing the erection of a memorial to the late Haym Salomon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will not object to this. This is an instance of perhaps the gravest national ingratitude there is on record. There is no expense to the Government involved in this resolution.

Mr. COSTELLO. There will be no cost at all to the Federal Government other than providing the site?

Mr. GILLETTE. No.

Mr. COSTELLO. The Government will not be called upon to erect the statute?

Mr. GILLETTE. No; all this provides for is just the site.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to grant permission for the erection on public grounds of the United States in the city of Washington, other than those of the Capitol, the Library of Congress, and the White House, of a memorial of proper and artistic form to the late Haym Salomon, by his friends in America, in recognition of the patriotic and meritorious services rendered by him to the United States Government during the most trying period of the American Revolution: Provided, That the site chosen and the design of the memorial shall have the approval of the National Commission of Fine Arts, and that the United States shall be put to no expense in or by the erection of the said memorial.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

JEFFERSON DAVIS NATIONAL HIGHWAY

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2737) authorizing the erection in the District of Columbia of a suitable terminal marker for the Jefferson Davis National Highway.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

SEVENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY, BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 532, for the establishment of a commission in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg in 1938.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, the President of the United States is authorized to appoint a commission of five persons to cooperate with the commission appointed by the Governor of the State of Pennsylvania. The commission shall serve without compensation and shall select a chairman from among their number.

SEC. 2. That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,000 to be expended by the commission in accordance with the provisions of this resolution.

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of the commission to aid in planning for the commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, and to give due and proper consideration to any plan or plans which may be submitted to them.

SEC. 4. That the commissioners shall be paid their actual and necessary traveling, hotel, and other expenses incurred in the discharge of their duties out of the money appropriated.

SEC. 5. The commission is authorized to approve the style and form of medals which can be offered for sale upon such terms and plans agreed upon.

SEC. 6. That the term of the commission hereby created shall expire within 1 year after the commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg.

SEC. 7. This joint resolution shall take effect immediately.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, strike out lines 1 to 4, inclusive, and page 2, strike out lines 10 to 13, inclusive, and on page 2, correct the section numbers.

The amendments were agreed to; and the joint resolution, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12455, to provide for the administration and maintenance of the Blue Ridge Parkway, in the States of Virginia and North Carolina, by the Secretary of the Interior, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, in the conference report which will be submitted to the House in a few days on the Highway Act, amendment no. 5 authorizes this parkway. I objected to the amendment in conference, and I expect a contest on that amendment which will cover the subject matter of this bill. This parkway is 477 miles long and 800 feet wide. It is not within the realm of the ability of the human mind to contemplate any such park. For that reason I object.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will withhold the objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Of course, if the gentleman wants to object, that is his privilege, but this does not provide for the appropriation of any money. The parkway is already under construction, and, so far as the right-of-way of 800 feet is concerned, that only provides for an easement, over which the Park Service may have control, to see that no improper signs should be erected, and so forth.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman should have in mind that the construction of this parkway was authorized by Executive order only. They have spent something like $1,000,000 on it already. It is eventually going to cost $25,000,000.

Mr. DOUGHTON. But there have been $6,000,000 already allocated, and there are 100 miles already under construction.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It is the President's responsibility for doing it without the consent of Congress. Two wrongs do not make one right. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I object.

CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11959, to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the construction of certain public buildings, and for other purposes", approved May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 630), as amended.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, does the gentleman from Indiana wish to make a statement?

Mr. CROWE. I should like to say that this bill is to further carry out the Federal building program in Washington, D. C., which was started in 1926, amended in 1928, and again in 1930. It contemplates the purchase of lots 81, 104, 122, 58, 59, 44, and 33, as well as some other parcels of ground, for the War and Navy Building and for a complete plan of further construction of Federal buildings. We pay more than $2,000,000 rent which might be saved by completing the Federal program of building in Washington, D. C.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think I am in accord with the gentleman's proposition. I know what he is trying to accomplish, but this involves some millions of dollars, and I think it is too important to be considered by unanimous consent. I might say to the gentleman that I may go along with him and vote for the bill after a discussion of the bill, but I do not think, under the conditions under which we are living now, that this House should adopt such bills as this, virtually authorizing the Government to commit the Treasury to spend millions of dollars without more consideration than is given under unanimous consent.

If the gentleman prefers, I will ask unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice, so that the bill will be in no way prejudiced if the gentleman wishes to ask to suspend the rules, or to get a rule for consideration of the bill.

Mr. CROWE. I will appreciate it very much if the gentleman will do that.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ATTENDANCE OF MARINE BAND AT TEXAS CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION, ARKANSAS CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION, AND NATIONAL CONFEDERATE REUNION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11970, to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the Arkansas Centennial Celebration, at Little Rock, Ark., on June 2, 3, 4, and 5, 1936; the Texas Centennial, at Dallas, Tex., on June 6, 7, and 8, 1936; and the Forty-sixth National Confederate Reunion, at Shreveport, La., on June 9, 10, 11, and 12, 1936.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will reserve it; yes.

Mr. FULLER. The Senate has just passed a bill reducing the amount of money appropriated. This is for the purpose of sending the Marine Band to the Confederate Reunion at Shreveport, La., and also to Dallas, Tex., and Little Rock, Ark., for the opening of their centennials. The President of the United States is going to make a trip down there to open those celebrations and they want the band at Little Rock on the 10th of June. The main expense is to attend the Confederate Reunion at Shreveport. Since I have been a Member of this House I have never heard of anyone objecting to the Marine Band going to the Confederate or G. A. R. reunions at any point in the United States. I trust the gentleman will withdraw his objection to this measure.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is quite the common practice that the Marine Band is sent to these celebrations. It has been done time and again.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I am very sorry, but under the circumstances I must object.

Mr. TERRY. The amount has been reduced to $11,500.

Mr. FULLER. I think it is a courtesy which we owe to the President of our Nation when he is going to make a trip like this, in addition to the fact that it is to enable them to attend the Confederate reunion.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I regret exceedingly that I am compelled to do it, but I am constrained to object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

HIGH COMMISSIONER TO THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12061, to authorize the President to designate an Acting High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I do not think we should pass these bills without studying the motive behind the bill.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Request for a rule has been made of the Rules Committee, but at this stage of the session we are anxious to avoid rules. The Secretary has communicated with me and is anxious to have this bill passed. The present Commissioner is in this country and when he is not in the Philippines an acting commissioner is necessary.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think I understand the situation; but again I say we should not pass bills of this kind without clearly understanding what we are doing. The purpose of this bill without any question of doubt in anybody's mind is to allow the present Commissioner General of the Philippine Islands to return to the United States and, under orders of the Postmaster General or the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, either one or the other, to run for Governor of the State of Michigan. I was very pleased, indeed, the other day when Mr. Murphy announced that he would not run for Governor; and I may say that I am pleased that he is not going to run because I admire him personally and I would regret exceedingly that a man of his capabilities were to suffer his first defeat at the hands of a State which is so overwhelmingly Republican that neither Jim Farley nor anyone else can Tammanyize it. I am afraid I shall have to object to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to substitute a similar Senate bill (S. 4340) to authorize the President to designate an acting High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to designate a member of the staff of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands or an officer of the Army or Navy of the United States, to act as the High Commissioner in the event of a vacancy in said office, or the temporary disability or absence of the High Commissioner, and the official so designated shall have all the powers and perform all the duties of the High Commissioner during such vacancy, disability, or absence.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider and a House bill (H. R. 12061) were laid on the table.

KENNEBEC RIVER, MAINE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12006, to authorize a preliminary examination of the Kennebec River, Maine, and its tributaries, with a view to the control of their floods.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, will the author of the bill tell us the situation in the State of Maine on this river with regard to the necessity for this examination?

Mr. MORAN. The Kennebec River is one of three rivers in my congressional district that suffered in the recent flood. It affected our capital city, Augusta, and the nearby cities of Waterville, Hallowell, and Gardiner; and down near the mouth of the river at Brunswick there was also real serious damage. There are no official figures, but our Governor estimates the damage at $25,000,000. We now have over 2,000 people working on W. P. A. flood-control projects in Maine, evidence that the flood situation was very bad in the State. This bill is an authorization to make a preliminary survey to determine what may be done to prevent future floods, and is therefore constructive legislation of real benefit to the people of Maine.

Mr. COSTELLO. Is this bill similar to the next two bills which follow on the calendar?

Mr. MORAN. Yes; the three bills are of exactly the same type. I prepared bills covering the three rivers in my congressional district that were most seriously affected by the floods.

Mr. COSTELLO. The reason I reserved the right to object is to say that the Army Board of Engineers at the present time is besieged with requests of this kind, and unless there is real flood menace that requires attention at the present time I personally feel that these preliminary examinations should not be ordered because of the crowded condition of the engineers' office. I understand there is pending with them at the present time requests for 250 preliminary surveys.

Mr. MORAN. I assure the gentleman from California that the flood situation in Maine was very bad and the damage, as I say, is estimated at $25,000,000. A constructive effort to prevent recurrence of such damage in future is urgently needed.

Mr. COSTELLO. Has any previous examination of this river ever been made?

Mr. MORAN. Yes; there was an examination in 1930, but nothing was done at that time.

Mr. COSTELLO. Was any recommendation made at that time?

Mr. MORAN. The examination made in 1930 was not with principal reference to flood control but was principally from the standpoint of power and navigation. It was made on the same river, however.

Mr. COSTELLO. Was it made by the Army engineers?

Mr. MORAN. Yes.

Mr. COSTELLO. They should be able to use a good deal of the information they then secured, should they not?

Mr. MORAN. Their examination at that time was made with a principal view to the development of power and navigation.

Mr. COSTELLO. The information they gathered at that time should aid them in making this examination, should it not?

Mr. MORAN. Yes; it should be very helpful.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. I may say that the situation with respect to the Penobscot River is the same as that with respect to the Kennebec. There was an examination by the Board of Engineers. They reported that there was no danger of a flood, yet the floods came, and the city of Bangor, in my district, was threatened with inundation by 8 feet of water, and would have been inundated had not an icebreaker been able to break the ice jam in the river at a time when the river was rising at the rate of 2 or 3 feet an hour. So there really is a very serious situation on the Penobscot River.

Mr. COSTELLO. Of course, the information these gentlemen have given me as to the present situation was not contained in the committee report and so was not available to me.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of the Kennebec River and its tributaries in the State of Maine, with a view to the control of their floods, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of an act entitled "An act to provide for control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF PENOBSCOT RIVER, MAINE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12007, to authorize a preliminary examination of the Penobscot River, Maine, and its tributaries, with a view to the control of their floods.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of the Penobscot River and its tributaries in the State of Maine, with a view to the control of their floods, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of an act entitled "An act to provide for control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

The title was amended to read as follows: "A bill to authorize a preliminary examination of the tributaries, sources, and headwaters of the Allegheny and Susquehanna Rivers in the State of Pennsylvania, where no examination and survey has heretofore been made, with a view to the control of their floods and the regulation and conservation of their waters."

FLOOD-CONTROL WORK ALONG THE LACKAWANNA RIVER

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12002, to authorize funds for the prosecution of works for flood control against flood disasters along the Lackawanna River.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a project for flood control and protection against floods on the Lackawanna River from its mouth where it empties into the Susquehanna River through Luzerne and Lackawanna Counties, Pa., is hereby authorized, and the work is hereby directed to be prosecuted as herein provided; that the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause such dredging and other work to be done on the said river, at places selected by the Army engineers, as will eliminate the flood hazard along the said river. Such work is to be done so as to fit into the general and active scheme and plan of the Federal Government for flood control. The sum expended is not to exceed $250,000.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of the Lackawanna River, in the State of Pennsylvania, with a view to the control of its flood in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to provide for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes', approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors."

Be it enacted, etc., That section 302 of the Communications Act of 1934 is hereby repealed.

SEC. 2. Subsection (b) of section 307 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) In considering applications for licenses, and modifications and renewals thereof, when and insofar as there is demand for the same, the Commission shall make such distribution of licenses, frequencies, hours of operation, and of power among the several States and communities as to provide a fair, efficient, and equitable distribution of radio service to each of the same."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FISH-CULTURAL PROGRAM FOR PUERTO RICO

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 1391, to authorize and direct the United States Commissioner of Fisheries to undertake fish-cultural and related activities in Puerto Rico, making appropriations therefor, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the United States Commissioner of Fisheries is authorized and hereby directed to conduct fish-cultural operations and all incidental activities in Puerto Rico, construct fish hatcheries on lands owned by the United States or government of Puerto Rico, acquire property and equipment, and employ such personnel as he shall from time to time determine until the end of the fiscal year 1939, and shall thereupon transfer all such activities and all structures, buildings, property, and equipment of every kind held or operated in connection therewith to the government of Puerto Rico.

SEC. 2. Upon the request of the Commissioner of Fisheries the Governor of Puerto Rico shall from time to time make and promulgate general or special rules and regulations not inconsistent with law covering utilization and protection of the fishery resources of Puerto Rico and prescribe appropriate penalties for violations thereof.

SEC. 3. The following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, for the organization, support, and maintenance of all activities in connection with the propagation of food fishes, their distribution and planting, and the regulation of the fishery in Puerto Rico, namely: For construction, maintenance, repair, alteration, improvement, equipment, and operation of fish-cultural stations, technical surveys, and investigations and patrol, travel expenses, and subsistence of employees and technical advisers, general propagation of food fishes and their distribution, including shipment of eggs and brood fishes from the continental United States, purchase and movement, maintenance, and repair of trucks and passenger-carrying vehicles, purchase of equipment (including rubber boots and oilskins) and apparatus, contingent expenses, pay of permanent employees not to exceed $11,300, temporary labor, in all $29,700.

SEC. 4. For the continued maintenance of fish propagation and fishery regulation in Puerto Rico and for the continuation of the activities mentioned in the preceding section of this act, there is authorized to be appropriated in each of the fiscal years 1936, 1937, 1938, and 1939 the sum of $16,600.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 9, strike out "1939" and insert "1941."

Page 2, line 10, strike out "appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935", and insert: "authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937."

Page 3, after line 10, insert the following:

"SEC. 5. Any amount appropriated pursuant to the provisions of sections 3 and 4 for any fiscal year shall not be available for expenditure until the government of Puerto Rico has appropriated, for expenditure during the same year, an equal amount to be used for the same purposes."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended to read as follows: "A bill to authorize and direct the United States Commissioner of Fisheries to undertake fish-cultural and related activities in Puerto Rico, authorizing appropriations therefor, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STATUS OF SPECIAL-DELIVERY MESSENGERS

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the bill (H. R. 11822) to permit certain special-delivery messengers to acquire a classified status through noncompetitive examination, No. 797 on the Consent Calendar. I understand the objection which has been made to the consideration of this bill previously will be withdrawn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object to returning to the consideration of any previous bills on the Consent Calendar. I should personally object to the consideration of this bill at the present time if we did go back to it.

AMENDMENT OF SHIPPING ACT OF 1916

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3467, amending the Shipping Act of 1916, as amended.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Shipping Act, 1916, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting after section 16 a new section to read as follows:

"FALSE BILLING

"SEC. 16A. Any shipper, consignor, consignee, forwarder, broker, or other person, or any officer, agent, or employee thereof, who shall knowingly and willfully, directly or indirectly, by false billing, false claim, false representation, or any other device or means, whether with or without the consent or connivance of the carrier, its officer, agent, or employee, obtain or attempt to obtain transportation for property by any common carrier subject to the provisions of the act at less than the regular rates or charges then in force by such common carrier; or who shall knowingly and willfully, directly or indirectly, by false claim, false representation, or other device or means, obtain, or attempt to obtain, any allowance, refund, or payment in connection with or growing out of the transportation of such property, whether with or without the consent or connivance of the carrier, its officer, agent, or employee, whereby the compensation of such carrier shall be less than or different from the regular rates or charges in force by such common carrier at the time of such transportation, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof in any court of the United Sttaes of competent jurisdiction, be subject for each offense to a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $3,000."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, strike out lines 3 to 8, inclusive, and on page 2, strike out lines 1 to 21, inclusive, and insert:

That section 16 of the Shipping Act, 1916, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 815), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 16. That it shall be unlawful for any shipper, consignor, consignee, forwarder, broker, or other person, or any officer, agent, or employee thereof, knowingly and willfully, directly or indirectly, by means of false billing, false classification, false weighing, false report of weight, or by any other unjust or unfair device or means to obtain or attempt to obtain transportation by water for property at less than the rates or charges which would otherwise be applicable.

"That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier by water, or other person subject to this act, either alone or in conjunction with any other person, directly or indirectly—

"First. To make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, locality, or description of traffic in any respect whatsoever, or to subject any particular person, locality, or description of traffic to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever.

"Second. To allow any person to obtain transportation for property at less than the regular rates or charges then established and enforced on the line of such carrier by means of false billing, false classification, false weighing, false report of weight, or by any other unjust or unfair device or means.

"Third. To induce, persuade, or otherwise influence any marine insurance company or underwriter, or agent thereof, not to give a competing carrier by water as favorable a rate of insurance on vessel or cargo, having due regard to the class of vessel or cargo, as is granted to such carrier or other person subject to this act.

"Whoever violates any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000 for each offense."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RENEWALS OF OATHS OF OFFICE BY CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS AND INDEPENDENT ESTABLISHMENTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12219, to dispense with unnecessary renewals of oaths of office by civilian employees of the executive departments and independent establishments.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Let the bill go over.

Mr. MILLER. No; I want to make a statement on the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. I object to the bill, Mr. Speaker.

INVESTIGATION OF TRAFFIC CONDITIONS BY THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 10591, to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate and report on traffic conditions, with recommendations for corrective legislation.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to use during the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, such part as may be necessary of the administrative fund of the Bureau of Public Roads, but not to exceed a total of $150,000, for study and research of traffic conditions and measures for their improvement, and to cooperate with Federal, State, District of Columbia, and municipal authorities, and other agencies, in connection with such study and research: Provided, That not to exceed $7,500 of the said sum may be used for printing necessary for the purposes of the work authorized and directed by this paragraph.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to make a preliminary report to Congress within the next 9 months of the results of the above study and research, and of the status of uniform motor-vehicle traffic laws throughout the country, and not later than June 30, 1937, to make a complete report with his recommendations, including suggestions for legislation, which will promote the necessary uniformity in such laws.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 2, strike out "$7,500" and insert "$5,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS AND SOCIAL WELFARE OF INDIANS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3452, to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to arrange with States or Territories for the education, medical attention, relief of distress, and social welfare of Indians, and for other purposes."

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of April 16, 1934 (48 Stat. 596), entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to arrange with States or Territories for the education, medical attention, relief of distress, and social welfare of Indians, and for other purposes", be, and the same hereby is, amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized, in his discretion, to enter into a contract or contracts with any State or Territory, or political subdivision thereof, or with any State university, college, or school, or with any appropriate State or private corporation, agency, or institution, for the education, medical attention, agricultural assistance, and social welfare, including relief of distress, of Indians in such State or Territory, through the agencies of the State or Territory or of the corporations and organizations hereinbefore named, and to expend under such contract or contracts moneys appropriated by Congess for the education, medical attention, agricultural assistance, and social welfare, including relief of distress, of Indians in such State or Territory.

"SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior, in making any contract herein authorized, may permit such contracting party to utilize, for the purposes of this act, existing school buildings, hospitals, and other facilities, and all equipment therein or appertaining thereto, including livestock and other personal property owned by the Government, under such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon for their use and maintenance.

"SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to perform any and all acts and to make such rules and regulations, including minimum standards of service, as may be necessary and proper for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this act into effect: Provided, That such minimum standards of service are not less than the highest maintained by the States or Territories within which said contract or contracts, as herein provided, are to be effective.

"SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Interior shall report annually to the Congress any contract or contracts made under the provisions of this act, and the moneys expended thereunder."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PAYMENT OF CERTAIN NON-INDIAN CLAIMANTS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 4298, to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum to compensate white settlers or non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. L. 636), but who have been found by the Secretary of the Interior, in conformity with the proviso to section 3 of the act of May 31, 1933 (48 Stat. L. 108, 109), to be entitled to increased compensation by reason of errors in the amount of award previously allowed or entitled to original awards by reason of errors in the omission of legitimate claimants. The non-Indian claimants, or their successors, as found and reported by the Secretary of the Interior, to be compensated out of said appropriation to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in the amounts found to be due them, as follows: Within the Pueblo of Nambe, $456.40; within the Pueblo of San Ildefonso, $141.88; within the Pueblo of Cochiti, $936.55; within the Pueblo of Sandia, $1,292.21; within the Pueblo of San Juan, $244.20; in all, $3,071.24.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

JURISDICTION OF THE JUDGE FOR THE NORTHERN AND MIDDLE DISTRICTS OF ALABAMA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3477, relating to the jurisdiction of the judge of the northern and middle districts of Alabama.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the date of enactment of this act, except as hereinafter provided, the jurisdiction of the present district judge for the northern and middle districts of Alabama, and his successors, shall be confined to the middle district of such State.

SEC. 2. (a) If the trial of any case has been entered upon in the northern district of Alabama before said district judge for the northern and middle districts of Alabama and has not been concluded on or before the date of enactment of this act, the jurisdiction in such northern district of said judge shall be deemed to be extended as to such trial until it has been concluded.

(b) The said judge shall have power, notwithstanding his absence from such northern district, to decide all matters which have been submitted to him within such district, to decide motions for new trials, settle bills of exceptions, certify or authenticate narratives of testimony, or perform any other act required by law or the rules to be performed in order to prepare any case so tried by him for review in an appellate court; and his action thereon in writing filed with the clerk of the court where the trial or hearing was had shall be as valid as if such action had been taken by him within such district and prior to the date of enactment of this act.

SEC. 3. Nothing in this act shall be construed to alter or amend any provision of law relating to the designation and assignment of a district judge to hold court in a district other than his own.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TRAVELING AND SUBSISTENCE EXPENSES OF CIRCUIT AND DISTRICT JUDGES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12329, to reenact section 259 of the Judicial Code, relating to the traveling and subsistence expenses of circuit and district judges.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 259 of the Judicial Code (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 28, sec. 374) is hereby reenacted as follows:

"SEC. 259. The circuit justices, the circuit and district judges of the United States, and the judges of the district courts of the United States in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, shall each be allowed and paid his necessary expenses of travel, and his reasonable expenses (not to exceed $10 per day) actually incurred for maintenance, consequent upon his attending court or transacting other official business in pursuance of law at any place other than his official place of residence, said expenses to be paid by the marshal of the district in which such court is held or official business transacted, upon the written certificate of the justice or judge. The official place of residence of each circuit and district judge, and of each judge of the district courts of the United States in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, shall be at that place nearest his actual residence at which either a circuit court of appeals or a district court is regularly held. Every such judge shall, upon his appointment, and from time to time thereafter whenever he may change his official residence, in writing notify the Department of Justice of his official place of residence."

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect July 1, 1936.

Mr. DUFFY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DUFFY of New York: Page 2, line 14, after the word "residence", insert a new section 2, to read as follows:

"The judges of the United States Customs Court shall each be allowed and paid his necessary expenses of travel and his reasonable expenses, not to exceed $10 per day, actually incurred for maintenance while absent from New York on official business."

Strike out, on page 2, line 15, the number "2" and insert in lieu thereof the number "3."

Mr. DUFFY of New York. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is approved by the Judiciary Committee and makes this bill conform to the Senate bill, which has just been passed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF STATE OF MAINE

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3043) for the relief of the State of Maine.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of section 3646, as amended, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the Chief Disbursing Officer of the Treasury Department is authorized and directed to issue, without the requirement of an indemnity bond, a duplicate of original check no. 66562 and a duplicate of original check no. 66563, drawn February 12, 1935, under his symbol 79088, in favor of "Treasurer, State of Maine (trust fund)" for $7,075 and $11,275, respectively, and lost, stolen, or miscarried in the mails.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

COMPILATION OF LAWS RELATING TO VETERANS

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 583, authorizing the Veterans' Administration to prepare and publish a compilation of all Federal laws relating to veterans of wars of the United States.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized to compile and publish all Federal laws relating to veterans' relief, including such laws as are administered by the Veterans' Administration as well as by other agencies of the Government, in such form as he may, in his discretion, deem advisable for the purpose of making currently available for the use of the Veterans' Administration and full-time representatives of the several service organizations an annotated, indexed, and cross-referenced statement of the laws providing veterans' relief in convenient form, and the Administrator is further authorized to maintain such compilation on a current basis either by the publication, from time to time, of supplementary documents or by complete revision of the compilation: Provided, That funds from the printing and binding appropriation for the Veterans' Administration may be used for this purpose and the distribution of the compilation to the representatives of the several service organizations shall be determined by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs.

SEC. 2. Distribution of the supply remaining in the Veterans' Administration of Senate Document No. 131, Federal Laws Relating to Veterans of Wars of the United States, shall be made in the discretion of the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, notwithstanding the provisions of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 29, Seventy-second Congress, first session.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

PRINTING AND DISTRIBUTION OF CERTAIN GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3440) to amend certain acts relating to public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents, and acts amendatory thereof.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. This bill is quite a complicated bill. It does a great many things. I dislike to object to it, but I also dislike to have it passed by unanimous consent without a lot of explanation. To start out, just what does it do with respect to the number of copies of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that we have to distribute?

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, under the present policy each Member of Congress gets 60 copies of the RECORD and each Member of the Senate 88 copies, but under this law those Members who do not use their full quota of the daily RECORDS get the difference in the bound RECORDS at the end of the sessions, which means that they cannot go to print on the bound RECORD until the end of the session. The cost of the bound RECORD is about $10 greater than the daily RECORD, and it has led to great waste and the piling up of surplus documents in the folding room. This resolution does not change the allotment of the daily RECORD, but gives each Member a fixed allotment of the bound RECORD, each Member of the House three and each Member of the Senate five.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It provides that one copy of the daily RECORD would be held out for that purpose?

Mr. LAMBETH. No; none are to be held out. You get the same copies of the daily RECORD and three additional copies of the bound RECORD. It will result in the saving of $44,000.

Mr. WOLCOTT. How many bound volumes do we get?

Mr. LAMBETH. Under this bill three. We get a definite quota. We will get them at least 30 days earlier and it will save $44,000. The committees of the House and the Senate have worked over this bill for 18 months. It will result in economy and the elimination of waste. I hope the gentleman will not object. If he has any other question, I would like to answer it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. What is the present procedure with reference to the bound volume in excess of the demands of Members? For example, if a Member has been sending out 40 daily RECORDS, including his own, he would be credited with 20 sets of the bound volume.

Mr. LAMBETH. Yes; and most of them would lie in the folding room. That is the main purpose of the resolution. There are minor amendments to the printing law, which has not been revised for some time.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Under the present law, if he had used up his full quota of 59, he would have none.

Mr. LAMBETH. That is correct.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This guarantees him three sets.

Mr. LAMBETH. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman explain changes in respect to the allotment of memorial addresses—or perhaps I can ask a question which will clear that up. Under the present law the Members of Congress from States other than that of the deceased Member will get no copies?

Mr. LAMBETH. Yes; they will get one copy.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And the copies that now go to them under existing law would go to the Members of Congress from the State of the deceased Member?

Mr. LAMBETH. Yes. It will get them into circulation.

Mr. WOLCOTT. That will save the Members the bother and necessity of getting transfers from Members outside of their own State.

Mr. LAMBETH. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBETH. Yes.

Mr. WHITE. A Member is entitled to mail out so many RECORDS. In the event that he does not use that number, he will get the bound RECORD.

Mr. LAMBETH. That is correct. He will get a definite number of the bound RECORD.

Mr. WHITE. Suppose he does not use up 14 of his allotment; he gets that many of the bound?

Mr. LAMBETH. No; this bill will fix a definite quota of the bound RECORD. That is one of the major purposes of the bill. Under the present procedure they do not know how many bound RECORDS to print until the end of the session.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Let the Chair ask the gentleman from North Carolina whether there is anything in this bill that has reference to the House folding room?

Mr. LAMBETH. No.

Mr. BOILEAU. Do I understand that a Member will not be able to get more than three bound volumes?

Mr. LAMBETH. No; except by exchange with other Members. He will get them 30 days earlier.

There being no further objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That certain acts relating to the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents and acts amendatory thereof, be amended as follows:

TITLE I

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES

That so much of chapter 23, section 73 (28 Stat. 616), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 151), as relates to the publication of eulogies of deceased Members of Congress, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

151. Memorial addresses; preparation; distribution: There shall be compiled, prepared, printed with illustrations, and bound in cloth in one volume, in such style, form, and manner as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, without extra compensation to any employee therefor, the legislative proceedings of Congress and the exercises at the general memorial services held in the House of Representatives during each session relative to the death of any Member of Congress, together with all memorial addresses and eulogies published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD during the same session of Congress in connection therewith, and such other matter as the committee may consider relevant thereto; and there shall be printed as many copies as may be required to supply the total quantity hereinafter provided, of which number 50 copies, bound in full morocco, with gilt edges, suitably lettered as may be requested, shall be delivered to the family of the deceased, and the remaining copies shall be distributed as follows:

Of all eulogies on deceased Members of Congress there shall be delivered, through the Postmaster of each House, to each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner, one copy.

Of the eulogies on deceased Senators there shall be furnished 250 copies for each Senator of the State represented by the deceased and 20 copies for each Representative therefrom.

Of the eulogies on deceased Representatives, Delegates, and Resident Commissioners there shall be furnished 250 copies for the successor in office of the deceased Member; 20 copies for each of the other Representatives, Delegates, or Resident Commissioners of the State, Territory, or insular possession represented by the deceased, and 20 copies for each Senator therefrom.

TITLE II

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

That chapter 23, section 14 (28 Stat. 603), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 182), be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

182. CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; indexes: The Joint Committee on Printing shall designate to the Public Printer competent persons to prepare the semimonthly and the session index to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and shall fix and regulate the compensation to be paid by the Public Printer for the said work and direct the form and manner of its publication and distribution.

182a. Same; daily and permanent forms: That the public proceedings of each House of Congress, as reported by the Official Reporters thereof, shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, which shall be issued in daily form during each session and shall be revised, printed, and bound promptly, as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, in permanent form, for distribution during and after the close of each session of Congress. The daily and the permanent RECORD shall bear the same date, which shall be that of the actual day's proceedings reported therein. The "usual number" of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD shall not be printed.

182b. Same; illustrations; maps; diagrams: No maps, diagrams, or illustrations may be inserted in the RECORD without the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing. All requests for such approval should be submitted to the Joint Committee on Printing, through the Chairman of the Committee on Printing of the respective House in which the speech desired to be illustrated may be delivered. Illustrations shall not exceed in size a page of the RECORD and shall be line cuts only.

That chapter 23, section 73 (28 Stat. 617), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895, as amended (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 183), be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

183. Same; gratuitous copies; subscriptions: The Public Printer shall furnish the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as follows and shall furnish gratuitously no others in addition thereto:

Of the bound edition to the folding room of the Senate 5 copies for the Vice President and each Senator; to the Secretary and Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, each, 2 copies; and to the Joint Committee on Printing not to exceed 100 copies; to the folding room of the House of Representatives 3 copies for each Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner; and to the Clerk, Sergeant at Arms, and Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, each, 2 copies.

Of the daily edition to the Vice President and each Senator, 105 copies; to the Secretary and Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, each, 25 copies; to the Secretary, for official use, not to exceed 35 copies; and to the Sergeant at Arms for use on the floor of the Senate, not to exceed 50 copies.

To each Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner in Congress, 75 copies; to the Clerk, Sergeant at Arms, and Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, each, 25 copies; to the Clerk, for official use, not to exceed 50 copies; and to the Doorkeeper for use on the floor of the House of Representatives, not to exceed 75 copies.

To the Vice President and each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner in Congress there shall also be furnished (and shall not be transferable) three copies of the daily RECORD, of which one shall be delivered at his residence, one at his office, and one at the Capitol.

In addition to the foregoing the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD shall also be furnished as follows:

There shall be printed and held in reserve by the Public Printer, in unstitched form, as many copies of the daily RECORD as may be required to supply a semimonthly edition, which shall be bound in paper cover together with each semimonthly index when the same is issued and shall then be delivered promptly and without delay as hereinafter provided.

To each committee and commission of Congress, one daily and one semimonthly copy.

To each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner in Congress, one semimonthly copy.

To the President of the United States, for the use of the Executive Office, 10 copies of the daily, 2 semimonthly copies, and 1 bound copy.

To the Chief Justice of the United States and each of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, one copy of the daily.

To the offices of the Marshal and Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States, each, two copies of the daily and one semimonthly copy.

To the offices of the Vice President and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, each, six copies of the daily and one semimonthly copy.

To the Sergeant at Arms, the Chaplain, the Postmaster, the superintendent and the foreman of the folding room of the Senate and House of Represenatives, respectively; to the secretaries of the majority and the minority of the Senate, and to the Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, each, one copy of the daily.

To the offices of the Official Reporters of Debates of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, each, 15 copies of the daily, 1 semimonthly copy, and 3 bound copies.

To the office of the stenographers to committees of the House of Representatives, four copies of the daily and one semimonthly copy.

To the office of the Congressional Record Index, 10 copies of the daily and 2 semimonthly copies.

To the offices of the superintendents of the Senate and House document rooms, each, three copies of the daily, one semimonthly copy, and one bound copy.

To the offices of the superintendents of the Senate and House press galleries, each, two copies of the daily, one semimonthly copy, and one bound copy.

To the offices of the legislative counsel of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, and the Architect of the Capitol, each, three copies of the daily, one semimonthly copy, and one bound copy.

To the Library of Congress for international exchange and for official use in Washington, D. C., not to exceed 145 copies of the daily, 5 semimonthly copies, and 150 bound copies.

To the library of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, each, 3 copies of the daily, 2 semimonthly copies, and not to exceed 15 bound copies.

To the library of the Supreme Court of the United States, two copies of the daily, two semimonthly copies, and not to exceed five bound copies.

To the Public Printer for official use, not to exceed 75 copies of the daily, 10 semimonthly copies, and 2 bound copies.

To the Director of the Botanic Garden, two copies of the daily.

To The National Archives, five copies of the daily, two semimonthly copies, and two bound copies.

To the library of each executive department, independent office, and establishment of the Government now in Washington, D. C., or which may be created, except those designated as depository libraries, and to the libraries of the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Naval Observatory, and the Smithsonian Institution, each, two copies of the daily, one semimonthly copy, and one bound copy.

To the Government of the Philippine Islands at Manila, 10 copies in both daily and bound form.

To the offices of the Governors of Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, each, five copies in both daily and bound form.

To the office of the Governor of the Panama Canal, five copies in both daily and bound form.

To each ex-President and ex-Vice President of the United States, one copy of the daily.

To the Governor of each State, one copy in both daily and bound form.

To the United States Soldiers' Home and to each of the National Homes for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, and to each of the State soldiers' homes now established or which hereafter may be created for either Federal or Confederate soldiers, one copy of the daily.

To the Superintendent of Documents, as many bound copies as may be required for distribution to depository libraries.

To the Department of State, not to exceed 150 copies of the daily, for distribution to each of our embassies and legations abroad, and to the principal consular offices in the discretion of the Secretary of State.

To each foreign legation in Washington whose government extends a like courtesy to our embassies and legations abroad, one copy of the daily, to be furnished upon requisition of and sent through the Secretary of State.

To each newspaper correspondent whose name appears in the Congressional Directory, and who makes application therefor, for his personal use and that of the paper or papers he represents, one copy of the daily and one copy of the bound, the same to be sent to the office address of each member of the press or elsewhere as he may direct: Provided, however, That not to exceed four copies in all shall be furnished to members of the same press bureau.

All copies of the daily edition shall, unless otherwise directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, be supplied and delivered promptly on the day after the actual day's proceedings as originally published. Each order for the daily RECORD shall begin with the current issue thereof, if previous issues of the same session are not available. The apportionment herein specified for daily copies shall not be transferable for the bound form, and any allotment of daily copies not used by any Member during a session shall lapse when the session ends.

The Public Printer is authorized to furnish to subcribers the daily RECORD at $1.50 per month, payable in advance.

That chapter 23, section 24 (28 Stat. 604), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 184), and Public Resolution No. 25 (35 Stat. 1169), approved March 4, 1909 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 186), be, and are hereby repealed.

TITLE III

DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT

334. (Judicial Code, sec. 227, amended.) Printing, binding, and distribution of reports and digests: That so much of section 683 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 334), as relates to the distribution of reports and digests of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States to the law library of the Supreme Court, be, and is hereby, amended by striking out the words "to the law library of the Supreme Court, 25 copies" and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"To the Library of Congress for the use of the law library and for international exchange, not to exceed 150 copies each of the bound and advance editions."

TITLE IV

PUBLICATIONS TO THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

139. International Exchange of Government Publications: That, for the purpose of more fully carrying into effect the provisions of the convention concluded at Brussels on March 15, 1886, and proclaimed by the President of the United States on January 15, 1889, there shall hereafter be supplied to the Library of Congress not to exceed 125 copies each of all Government publications, for distribution, through the Smithsonian Institution, to such foreign governments as may agree to send to the United States similar publications of their governments for delivery to the Library of Congress.

139a. Distribution of Government publications to the Library of Congress: That there shall be printed and furnished to the Library of Congress for official use in Washington, D. C., and for international exchange as provided in section 139 of this title, not to exceed 150 copies of the publications described in this section, to wit: House documents and reports, bound; Senate documents and reports, bound; Senate and House Journals, bound; public bills and resolutions; the United States Code and supplements, bound; the Official Register of the United States, bound; and all other publications and maps which are printed, or otherwise reproduced, under authority of law, upon the requisition of any Congressional committee, executive department, bureau, independent office, establishment, commission, or officer of the Government: Provided, That confidential matter, blank forms, and circular letters not of a public character shall be excepted.

In addition to the foregoing, there shall be delivered as printed to the Library of Congress 10 copies of each House document and report, unbound; 10 copies of each Senate document and report, unbound; and 10 copies of each private bill and resolution, and 50 copies of the laws in slip form.

That Public Resolution No. 16 (31 Stat. 1464), to regulate the distribution of public documents to the Library of Congress for its own use and for international exchange, approved March 2, 1901 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 139), and Public Resolution No. 25 (35 Stat. 1169), approved March 4, 1909 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 186), and section 7 of the act (43 Stat. 1106) approved March 3, 1925 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 139a), be, and are hereby, repealed.

TITLE V

MANUSCRIPT OF ANNUAL REPORTS

That chapter 209, section 3 (39 Stat. 336), of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, approved July 1, 1916 (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 108), be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

108. Manuscript of annual reports and accompanying documents: The appropriations made for printing and binding shall not be used for any annual report or the accompanying documents unless the manuscript and proof therefor is furnished to the Public Printer in the following manner: Manuscript of the documents accompanying such annual reports on or before the 15th day of November of each year; manuscript of the annual reports on or before the 10th day of December of each year; complete revised proofs of the accompanying documents and the annual reports on the 5th and 10th days of December of each year, respectively; and all of said annual reports and accompanying documents shall be printed, made public, and available for distribution not later than within the first 5 days after the assembling of each regular session of Congress. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the annual reports of the Smithsonian Institution, the Commissioner of Patents, the Comptroller of the Currency, or the Secretary of the Treasury.

TITLE VI

STATUTES AT LARGE

That so much of chapter 23, section 73 (28 Stat. 615), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895, as amended, as relates to the publication and distribution of the Statutes at Large (U. S. C., title 1, sec. 30, and title 44, sec. 196), be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

196. Statutes at Large; contents; admissibility in evidence: The Secretary of State shall cause to be compiled, edited, and indexed the United States Statutes at Large, which shall contain all the laws and concurrent resolutions enacted during each session of Congress, and also all conventions, treaties, and international agreements to which the United States is a party and which have come into force since the date of the adjournment of the session of Congress next preceding, including all proclamations issued since that date.

196a. Same; distribution: The Public Printer shall print, and after the final adjournment of each session of Congress, bind and deliver to the Superintendent of Documents as many copies of the Statutes at Large as may be required for distribution as follows:

To the President of the United States, four copies, one of which shall be for the library of the Executive Mansion;

To the Post Office Department, not to exceed 50 copies;

To the Department of Justice, including those for the judges and the officers of the United States and Territorial courts, not to exceed 800 copies;

To the Department of Agriculture, not to exceed 100 copies;

To the Department of Commerce, not to exceed 100 copies;

To the Department of Labor, including those for the officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, not to exceed 175 copies;

To the Government of the Philippine Islands at Manila, 10 copies;

To the offices of the Governors of Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, each 2 copies;

To the office of the Governor of the Panama Canal, 3 copies;

To the library of the court of last resort of each State, Territory, and insular possession, and of the District of Columbia, each 1 copy;

To each designated depository library in each State, Territory, and insular possession, 1 copy;

To each independent office and establishment of the Government now in Washington, D. C., or which hereafter may be created, not to exceed 6 copies; and

To the library of the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Naval Observatory, and the Smithsonian Institution, each 1 copy.

In addition to the foregoing the Public Printer shall print 1,200 copies of the Statutes at Large, of which 300 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 900 copies for the use of the House of Representatives. The "usual number" shall not be printed.

That so much of chapter 23, section 73 (28 Stat. 614), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895, as relates to the publication and distribution of pamphlet copies of the statutes of each session of Congress (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 195), be, and is hereby, repealed.

TITLE VII

OWNERSHIP OF GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS SHALL REMAIN PUBLIC PROPERTY.—All Government publications furnished by authority of law to officers of the United States Government, for their official use, shall be stamped "Property of the United States Government", and shall be preserved by such officers and by them delivered to their successors in office as a part of the property appertaining to the office. Government publications furnished depository libraries shall be made available for the free use of the general public and must not be disposed of except as the Superintendent of Documents may direct.

That section 1777 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 89) and so much of chapter 433, section 1 (22 Stat. 336), of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act, for 1883, approved August 7, 1882, relating to statutes furnished judges to remain public property (U. On page 22, after line 10, insert two new titles (see p. 26 of this report for titles VIII and IX).
On page 23, line 13, insert "SEC. 15."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING THE NATIONAL DEFENSE ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 4132, to amend section 4 (b) of the National Defense Act, as amended, relating to certain enlisted men of the Army.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, this is a very important bill. May I ask the gentleman who now establishes the number of enlisted personnel of the Army? It is Congress, is it not?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes. Under the act of 1920.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Under this bill the President by Executive order determines the number of enlisted personnel.

Mr. FADDIS. Let me say to the gentleman that this will allow the Army the same as the Navy may now do. It provides a more flexible system than is now in effect for the assignment of various grades within the Army. It merely gives the Army the same opportunity that the Navy has at the present time.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Does the President have authority to determine the enlisted personnel of the Navy?

What does the bill provide? That the President shall hereafter be authorized to determine the total number of enlisted personnel in the Army?

Mr. FADDIS. I cannot tell the gentleman that for sure. I did not report the bill, and had nothing to do with it, but I had an interest in it from the fact that the Army ought to have the same opportunity basis as the Navy. I know they are very desirous of it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think there should be a definite understanding about the matter. I think the RECORD should show that the Congress interprets this act as granting delegation of power to the President to determine the number and rating of the grades of enlisted personnel, but not the total number of enlisted personnel. I refer to line 10, page 1, of the bill, where it says:

> The numbers in grades and/or ratings of enlisted men shall be such as are authorized from time to time by the President by Executive order.

I think the RECORD should show that the understanding is that that means the number of grades, and has no reference to the total number of enlisted personnel.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection.

Mr. SCHNEIDER of Wisconsin. I object.

AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT IN PENNSYLVANIA

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, cash receipts from the sale of principal farm products in Pennsylvania for 1935 increased to approximately 76 percent of their 1929 level. This compares favorably with the 1935 cash receipts in the cotton and tobacco States of the South Atlantic group which for 1935 were also 76 percent of their 1929 level.

In 1929 cash receipts of Pennsylvania farmers aggregated $280,285,000. From the low point of $151,590,000 in 1932 they rose to $211,736,000 in 1935, including $1,663,000 in rental and benefit payments. This is an increase of 40 percent.

By 1932 cash receipts in Pennsylvania and in the North Atlantic States had fallen to about 54 percent of their 1929 level. But in the Tobacco, Cotton, Corn-hog, and Wheat Belts of the South Atlantic and Central States, they had tobogganed to approximately 39 percent of that level. By 1935, while for the country as a whole, they rose to about 66 percent of their 1929 level; for the North Atlantic States they rose to 72 percent and for Pennsylvania to 76 percent of that level.

Price changes on certain selected commodities, which brought about a considerable share of the increased cash receipts indicated above, are:

Annual average prices received by Pennsylvania farmers, 1932 and 1935 (in cents)

Commodity	Unit	1932	1935 [1]
Wheat	Bushel	57	80
Corn	Bushel	49	70
Oats	Bushel	29	42
Barley	Bushel	42	56
Rye	Bushel	45	58
Buckwheat	Bushel	43	52
Potatoes	Bushel	48	60
Hay, all (loose)	Ton	[2] 949	[2] 1,009
Apples	Bushel	62	73
Hogs	Hundredweight	475	910
Beef cattle	Hundredweight	485	710
Veal calves	Hundredweight	610	840
Chickens	Pound	15.5	17.5
Butter, farm	Pound	23	29
Eggs	Dozen	18.2	26.4

[1] Preliminary. [2] Dec. 1 price.

For the United States as a whole, the yearly average price of all groups of farm products increased from 65 percent to 108 percent of the pre-war level during the period 1932–35, an increase of 66 percent. In 1935, farm prices averaged 74 percent of their 1929 level. The low point occurred in March 1933, when prices were only 55 percent of pre-war, whereas in December 1935, they averaged 110 percent of that level. These figures do not include rental and benefit payments. The gain in exchange value of farm products per unit was somewhat less than the gain in farm prices, since prices farmers pay for commodities used in living and production also advanced about 17 percent during the period. The exchange value, per unit of farm products, increased from 61 percent of the pre-war level in 1932 to 86 percent in 1935, a gain of about 41 percent.

FARM REAL ESTATE ON THE UPTURN

A new appreciation of farm real estate in Pennsylvania has been one result of increased farm income. The number of forced farm sales declined from 24 per thousand for the year ending March 15, 1933, to 20.5 per thousand for the year ending March 15, 1935. The decline in value of farm real estate per acre halted in the year ending March 1, 1933, when it stood at a low of 78, the State average value from 1912 to 1914 being 100. From this low of 78 in 1933 and 1934, the estimated value per acre rose to 79 for the year ending March 1, 1935. Further improvements in these respects are indicated for the current year.

IMPROVEMENT EXTENDED TO FARM-LABOR CONDITIONS

On January 1, 1933, the demand for farm labor in Pennsylvania was 34 percent below the standard regarded as normal, and the supply 32 percent above. At this time the farm wage rate per person with board was $19 per month. Three years later, on January 1, 1936, the farm-labor supply was 6 percent below the standard accepted as normal. Demand was only 21 percent below normal. The farm wage rate per person with board stood at $21.50 per month, having advanced 13 percent above the 1933 level.

DAIRY CATTLE DISEASE ERADICATION

Milk has been perhaps the most important single source of farm income in Pennsylvania for several years. Milk producers are, consequently, interested in measures for the health of their herds.

Approximately $50,000,000 of Agricultural Adjustment Administration funds have been made available for use in the United States in eradicating cattle disease, primarily bovine tuberculosis, Bang's disease, and mastitis. Some 1,071,962 cattle in Pennsylvania had been given the tuberculin test and approximately 199,500 the agglutination test for Bang's disease. Of the $50,000 allocated for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis in this State, $40,598.78 had been expended in operating expenses and indemnities as of December 31, 1935. Pennsylvania was allocated $737,000 for the eradication of Bang's disease, and of this amount, indemnities and operating expenses as of December 31, last, totaled $499,744.

EXTENT OF FARMER PARTICIPATION IN PROGRAMS

From the inauguration of the adjustment programs in 1933 until their conclusion under the Hoosac Mills decision of the Supreme Court, a total of 28,557 contracts signed by cooperating Pennsylvania farmers had been accepted by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, according to latest official reports. Of this number of contracts, 5,214 were corn-hog, 9,799 were wheat, and 13,544 were cigar tobacco.

Pennsylvania farmers evidenced their cooperation in the adjustment programs by their votes in the different program referenda in this State.

Cooperating Pennsylvania cigar-tobacco growers voted 91.2 percent strong for continuation of the program. A nation-wide wheat referendum was conducted on May 25, 1935, in which producers were asked: "Are you in favor of a wheat-production adjustment program to follow the present one which expires with the 1935 crop year?" In Pennsylvania, 2,809 votes were cast for a program, while 1,085 opposed. In the referendum for corn-hog producers who were asked on October 26, 1935, whether they favored a program for 1936, official returns indicate that 1,807 producers wanted a program, and that 417 opposed.

FARMERS NOW BETTER CUSTOMERS

The extent to which increased farm income during the past 3 years has enabled Pennsylvania farmers to increase their purchases of city-made goods needed to operate their farms as businesses and as homes, is reflected in several ways.

New car registrations in Pennsylvania were 111,000 in 1932, 141,000 in 1933, 177,000 in 1934, and 234,000 in 1935.

This represents an increase of about 111 percent from 1932 to 1935.

According to Automobile Facts and Figures, a publication of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association, the 1934 retail automobile sales gain in Pennsylvania was greatest in small towns and on farms. From 1933 to 1934 new passenger-car registrations on farms and in towns under 10,000 population increased 24 percent, whereas in towns over 10,000 population the increase was only 20 percent.

Mr. Speaker, this increased purchase of new cars by citizens of Pennsylvania brings a similar increase in gasoline consumption. In 1932 the total consumption figure for the State stood at 1,041,061,000 gallons. By 1933 it had increased to 1,048,463,000 gallons, by 1934 to 1,136,344,000, and by 1935 to 1,171,438,000. The increase from 1932 to 1935 amounted to 13 percent.

Increased sales of new ordinary life insurance in Pennsylvania have been another indication of bettered conditions. The value of sales for 1935 aggregated $572,249,000, an increase of 11 percent over the 1933 figure of $517,488,000.

A recent study of railroad-freight waybills on carlot shipments of industrial products over four railroads from Pennsylvania to 10 agricultural States of the Southeast shows that shipments in the year ending June 30, 1934, were greater by 122,456,748 pounds, or 55.2 percent, than in the preceding 12 months.

In a similar study of the freight waybills on five railroads of carlot shipments of industrial products from Pennsylvania, shipments increased from 197,110,698 pounds to 375,605,989 pounds, a gain of 90.6 percent.

Improved banking conditions are further indications of increased business. Individual bank deposits—time, savings, and commercial—in Pennsylvania aggregated $3,816,967,000 for the year closing June 29, 1935, an advance of $540,058,000, or 16 percent, over deposits in the year ending June 30, 1933, according to reports received by the American Bankers' Association.

The number of commercial failures in the State showed a large decrease from 1932 to 1935. From a total of 2,152 failures in 1932, the figure dropped to 831 in 1935, a decrease of 61 percent.

Definite improvement is evident in the building industry in Pennsylvania. For 1933 the value of building permits in 24 important cities of the State stood at $20,718,000. By 1935 the value rose to $26,165,000, an increase of 26 percent.

In the manufacturing establishments of Pennsylvania, employment increased 16 percent from 1933 to 1935, while pay rolls advanced 43 percent. These indices are unweighted and are based on monthly percentage changes computed from reports supplied to the Bureau of Labor Statistics by identical establishments in the current and preceding month.

CONSENT CALENDAR

CLAIMS FOR EXCESS COST OF NAVIGATION DAMS AND LOCKS ON MISSISSIPPI RIVER

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 10846, to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and enter judgment upon the claims of contractors for excess costs incurred while constructing navigation dams and locks on the Mississippi River and its tributaries.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FULLER). Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES RESULTING FROM OPERATION OF VESSELS OF COAST GUARD AND PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3818, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to consider, ascertain, adjust, and determine certain claims for damages resulting from the operation of vessels of the Coast Guard and Public Health Service.

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to consider, ascertain, adjust, and determine the amounts due on all claims for damages occasioned after the date of the enactment of this act, where the amount of the claim does not exceed the sum of $3,000, occasioned by collisions or damage incident to the operation of vessels for which collisions or other damage vessels of the Coast Guard or the Public Health Service, or vessels in the service of the Coast Guard or the Public Health Service, shall be found to be responsible, and report the amounts so ascertained and determined to be due the claimants to the Congress for payment as legal claims out of appropriations that may be made by Congress therefor.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 1, strike out all after the enacting clause, down to and including line 7, on page 2, and insert:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury may consider, ascertain, adjust, and determine any claim accruing after the approval of this act, on account of damages occasioned by collisions or incident to the operation of vessels of the United States Coast Guard or of the United States Public Health Service, and for which damage the said vessels shall be found to be responsible, and such amount as may be ascertained and determined to be due any claimant, not exceeding $3,000 in any one case, shall be certified to Congress as a legal claim for payment out of appropriations that may be made by Congress therefor, together with a brief statement of the character of each claim, the amount claimed, and the amount allowed: Provided, That no claim shall be considered under this act unless presented to the Secretary of the Treasury within 1 year from the date of the accrual of said claim: Provided further, That acceptance by any claimant of the amount determined to be due under the provisions of this act shall be deemed to be in full and final settlement of such claim against the Government of the United States."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended to read: "An act to provide for the adjustment and settlement of certain claims for damages resulting from the operation of vessels of the Coast Guard and Public Health Service."

AMENDING PROVISIONS OF ACT OF MARCH 7, 1928

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11643, to amend certain provisions of the act of March 7, 1928 (45 Stat. L. 210–212).

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress approved March 7, 1928 (45 Stat. L. 210–212), and acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto are hereby amended so as to provide that the net revenues from the sale of surplus power developed at the Coolidge Dam and other generating plants of the San Carlos project and transmitted over existing transmission lines shall be devoted, first, to reimbursing the United States for the cost of developing such electrical power; second, to reimbursing the United States for the cost of the San Carlos irrigation project; third, to payment of operation and maintenance charges and the making of repairs and improvements on said project: Provided, however, That all net power revenues from the sale of power transmitted over such additional transmission lines as may hereafter be constructed by the San Carlos Irrigation and Drainage District for the benefit of the San Carlos project shall first be devoted to the repayment of the construction costs of such additional transmission lines: Provided further, That the United States and the San Carlos Irrigation District shall enter into an appropriate contract in accordance with the terms of this act to be approved by the Secretary of the Interior, which contract shall provide that the additional transmission lines hereafter constructed by the district shall, upon completion of construction, be conveyed to the United States: Provided further, That after reimbursement to the district from such net power revenues of the cost of constructing additional transmission lines the net power revenues received from the sales of power transmitted over additional transmission lines hereafter constructed by the district shall be applied as herein provided for the application of net power revenues from the sale of power transmitted over existing transmission lines.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT OF VIRGIN ISLANDS OF UNITED STATES

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 4524, to provide a civil government for the Virgin Islands of the United States.

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of this act, and the name "the Virgin Islands" as used in this act, shall apply to and include the territorial domain, lands, and waters acquired by the United States through cession of the Danish West Indian Islands by the convention between the United States of America and His Majesty the King of Denmark entered into August 4, 1916, and ratified by the Senate on September 7, 1916 (39 Stat. L. 1706).

SEC. 2. The insular possession which is the Virgin Islands shall be divided into two municipalities, namely, (1) the municipality of St. Croix and (2) the municipality of St. Thomas and St. John. The boundaries of said municipalities shall be the same as at present established in accordance with laws in force on the date of enactment of this act, and the capital and seat of the central government shall be St. Thomas. In this act the phrase "the Government of the Virgin Islands" shall include, in addition to the governing authority of the insular possession, the governing authority of the two municipalities, unless the context shall indicate a different intention.

SEC. 3. The inhabitants of the municipality of St. Croix and of the municipality of St. Thomas and St. John are hereby constituted into bodies politic and juridic, under the present name of each such municipality, and as such bodies they shall have perpetual succession and power (a) to adopt and use an official seal; (b) to sue and in cases arising out of contract to be sued; (c) to demand the fulfillment of obligations under the law and to defend and prosecute all actions at law; (d) to acquire property by purchase, exchange, donation or bequest, by virtue of proceedings for the collection of taxes, by eminent-domain proceedings, or by any other means provided by law, and to possess, administer, and govern such property; and (e) to alienate or encumber any of their property, subject to the provisions of this act.

SEC. 4. All property which may have been acquired by the United States from Denmark in the Virgin Islands under the convention entered into August 4, 1916, not heretofore or within 1 year hereafter reserved by the United States for public purposes, is hereby placed under the control of the Government of the Virgin Islands: Provided, That, except as otherwise expressly provided, all laws of the United States for the protection and improvement of the navigable waters of the United States and the preservation of the interest of navigation and commerce shall apply to the Virgin Islands: Provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to affect or impair in any manner the terms and conditions of any authorizations, permits, or other powers heretofore lawfully granted or exercised in or in respect of the Virgin Islands by any authorized officer or agent of the United States: Provided, further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall be authorized to lease or to sell upon such terms as he may deem advantageous to the Government of the United States any property of the United States under his administrative supervision in the Virgin Islands not needed for public purposes.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

SEC. 5. All local legislative powers in the municipality of St. Croix, except as herein otherwise provided, shall be vested in a local legislative assemby, which shall be designated the Municipal Council of St. Croix. Said council shall consist of nine members elected by the qualified electors of the municipality for a term of 2 years beginning the 1st day of January next succeeding the date of election. The members shall be elected in four representative districts, two of which shall be the town of Christiansted and the country district thereof, and two of which shall be the town of Frederiksted and the country district thereof, as defined by law in force on the date of enactment of this Act: Provided, That two members shall be elected for each of said districts and one member at large.

SEC. 6. All local legislative powers in the municipality of St. Thomas and St. John, except as herein otherwise provided, shall be vested in a local legislative assembly which shall be designated the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John. Said council shall consist of seven members elected by the qualified electors of the municipality for a term of 2 years beginning the 1st day of January next succeeding the date of election. The members shall be elected in three representative districts, one of which shall be the town district and one the country district of St. Thomas, and one the district of St. John, as defined by law in force on the date of enactment of this act: Provided, That two members shall be elected for each of the districts of St. Thomas, one member for the district of St. John, and two members at large.

SEC. 7. After January 1, 1937, joint sessions of said municipal councils shall constitute and shall be designated the Legislative Assembly of the Virgin Islands. The legislative assembly shall convene in St. Thomas upon call by the Governor, and also whenever both municipal councils shall determine by resolutions passed by each of them: Provided, That the Governor shall call the legislative assembly at least once during each calendar year. The legislative assembly shall have power to enact legislation applicable to the Virgin Islands as a whole, but no legislation shall be considered other than that specified in the message by the Governor calling such a session, or in both of said resolutions: Provided further, That so long as the membership of the legislative assembly does not exceed 16 members, a quorum of the legislative assembly shall consist of not less than 10 members, and no bill shall be enacted until it shall be passed by a two-thirds majority vote of the members present. The municipal councils shall not enact laws or ordinances in conflict with the enactments of the legislative assembly.

SEC. 8. The present colonial councils shall continue to function until January 1, 1937. The next general election in the Virgin Islands shall be held on November 3, 1936. At such election there shall be chosen the entire membership of each municipal council as herein provided. Thereafter the elections shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning with the year 1938, and every 2 years thereafter. The terms of office of members of the respective colonial councils of the municipalities of St. Thomas and St. John and of St. Croix, whose terms of office under existing law would expire prior to January 1, 1937, are hereby extended to that date.

SEC. 9. No person shall be eligible to be a member of either municipal council unless he is a citizen of the United States, over 25 years of age, is a qualified voter of the municipality in which elected, has resided in the Virgin Islands for a period of not less than 3 years next preceding the date of election, and has not been convicted of a felony or of a crime involving moral turpitude. Each municipal council may exclude from membership therein persons receiving compensation from the Government of the United States or from either of the municipal governments of the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 10. The members of each municipal council shall receive allowance for actual travel expenses and such reasonable subsistence as may be prescribed by the council.

SEC. 11. The respective municipal councils shall be the sole judges of the elections, returns, and qualifications of their members, shall be vested with the authority and attributes inherent in legislative bodies, and shall jointly or separately have the power to institute and conduct investigations, issue subpenas to witnesses and other parties concerned, and administer oaths. Existing rules of the colonial councils shall continue in force and effect, except as inconsistent with this act, until altered, amended, or repealed by the respective municipal councils. No member shall be held to answer before any tribunal other than the respective municipal councils themselves for any speech or debate in the municipal councils and the members shall in all cases, except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of the municipal councils and in going to and returning from the same.

SEC. 12. Each municipal council shall annually appoint from among its members, for a term of 1 year, three members to serve as a standing committee, which, under the name of the "Municipal Committee", shall advise the Governor concerning the management of the fiscal affairs of the municipality, and concerning matters relating to the municipality. The procedure of the Municipal Committee shall be in accordance with the bylaws adopted by the municipal council and approved by the Governor. The Municipal Committee shall have power when granted by local law to recommend to the Governor transfers between items in the annual budgets, and loans from municipal funds, but no such transfers or loans shall be made by the Governor except upon the recommendation of the Municipal Committee.

SEC. 13. Each municipal council shall assemble for ordinary meetings on a certain day of every second month, which day shall be previously fixed by the Governor for the whole year, and for extraordinary meetings at the call of the Governor or the chairman of the council. The Governor may postpone the meetings of the municipal councils, but not for a longer period than 14 days. The Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John shall convene at St. Thomas, and the Municipal Council of St. Croix shall convene at Christiansted.

SEC. 14. The Governor may introduce bills in the respective municipal councils. The Governor shall submit to the respective municipal councils, at least 90 days before the close of each fiscal year, a budget of estimated receipts and expenditures for the respective municipalities, which shall be the basis for the annual local appropriation bills for such municipalities. He shall from time to time submit to the respective municipal councils such reports concerning the fiscal affairs of the municipalities as may be requested by resolution of either municipal council.

SEC. 15. The quorum of each municipal council shall consist of an absolute majority of all its members. No bill shall become a law until it shall be passed by a majority (yea-and-nay) vote of the members present and voting of the municipal council having jurisdiction, entered upon the journal, and approved by the Governor, except as otherwise herein provided. Each municipal council shall keep a journal of its proceedings and publish the same during the year, and the yeas and nays of the members voting on any question shall be entered on the journal.

SEC. 16. New legislation, and repeals, alterations, and amendments of local laws of the Virgin Islands by the municipal council having jurisdiction, and by the legislative assembly, shall be effective and enforced when, and to the extent, such new legislation, repeals, alterations, and amendments are approved by the Governor, and the Governor shall state specifically in each case whether his approval or disapproval is in whole or in part, and if in part only, what part is approved and what part not approved. The Governor may veto any specific item or items in any bill which appropriates money for specific purposes, but shall veto other bills, if at all, only as a whole. If any bill passed by the municipal council having jurisdiction or by the legislative assembly be disapproved in whole or in part by the Governor, the Governor shall within 30 calendar days return such bill to the said municipal council or to the legislative assembly, whether in actual session or not, setting forth his objections. If after reconsideration by the legislative body having jurisdiction two-thirds of all the members of the said body pass such bill or part thereof, it shall be sent to the Governor who, in case he shall not then approve it, shall transmit the same to the President. If the President approves such bill or part of bill, he shall sign it and it shall become law; if he does not approve such bill or part of bill, he shall return it to the Governor, so stating, and it shall not become law. If any bill shall not be returned by the Governor as herein provided within 30 calendar days after it shall have been presented to him the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it. The President shall approve or disapprove an act submitted to him under the provisions of this section within 3 months from and after its presentation for his approval; and if not acted upon within such time, shall become a law the same as if it had been specifically approved. All laws enacted by the Municipal Council of St. Croix, by the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John, or by the legislative assembly, shall be reported by the Governor to the Secretary of the Interior, and by him to the Congress, which hereby reserves the power and the authority to annul the same. The laws not annulled shall be published annually as a public document. If at the termination of any fiscal year the appropriation necessary for the support of the municipal government for the ensuing fiscal year shall not have been made, then the several sums appropriated in the last appropriation bills for the objects and purposes therein specified, so far as the same may be applicable, shall be deemed to be reappropriated, item by item; and until the municipal council of the municipality having jurisdiction shall act in such behalf, the Governor may make the payments and collections necessary for the purpose aforesaid.

SEC. 17. Beginning on January 1, 1938, or on such earlier date subsequent to January 1, 1937, as may be fixed by local law or ordinance for either municipality, and thereafter, the franchise shall be vested in residents of the Virgin Islands who are citizens of the United States, 21 years of age or over, and able to read and write the English language. Additional qualifications may be prescribed by the legislative assembly: Provided, however, That no property or income qualification shall ever be imposed upon or required of any voter, nor shall any discrimination in qualification be made or based upon difference in race, color, sex, or religious belief.

SEC. 18. The laws of the United States applicable to the Virgin Islands on the date of enactment of this act, and all local laws and ordinances in force on such date in the Virgin Islands, not inconsistent with this act, shall continue in force and effect: Provided, That the Municipal Council of St. Croix and the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John, and the legislative assembly, shall have power, when not inconsistent with this act and within their respective jurisdictions, to amend, alter, modify, or repeal any law of the United States of local application only, or any ordinance, public or private, civil or criminal, continued in force and effect by this act, except as herein otherwise provided, and to enact new laws and ordinances not inconsistent with this act and not inconsistent with the laws of the United States hereafter made applicable to the Virgin Islands or any part thereof, subject to the power of the Congress to annul the same. The laws of the United States relating to patents, trade marks, and copyrights, and to the enforcement of rights arising thereunder, shall have the same force and effect in the Virgin Islands as in the continental United States, and the District Court of the Virgin Islands shall have the same jurisdiction in causes arising under such laws as is exercised by United States district courts.

SEC. 19. The legislative power of the Virgin Islands shall extend to all subjects of local application not inconsistent with this act or the laws of the United States made applicable to said islands, but no law shall be enacted which would impair rights existing or arising by virtue of any treaty entered into by the United States, nor shall the lands or other property of nonresidents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents.

EXECUTIVE BRANCH

SEC. 20. The executive power of the Virgin Islands and of the municipalities thereof shall be vested in an executive officer whose title shall be "the Governor of the Virgin Islands" and shall be exercised under supervision of the Secretary of the Interior. The Governor shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold office at the pleasure of the President and until his successor is chosen and qualified. The Governor shall reside in the Virgin Islands during his official incumbency. He shall have general supervision and control of all executive and administrative departments, bureaus, and offices of the Government of the Virgin Islands. He shall faithfully execute the laws of the United States applicable to the Virgin Islands, and the laws and ordinances of the Virgin Islands. He may grant pardons and reprieves and remit fines and forfeitures for offenses against the local laws, and may grant respites for all offenses against the applicable laws of the United States until the decision of the President can be ascertained. He may veto any legislation as provided in this act. He shall commission all officers that he may be authorized to appoint. He may call upon the commanders of the military and naval forces of the United States in the islands, or summon the posse comitatus, or call out the militia, to prevent or suppress violence, invasion, insurrection, or rebellion; and he may, in case of rebellion or invasion, or imminent danger thereof, when the public safety requires it, suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, or place the islands, or any part thereof, under martial law, until communication can be had with the President and the President's decision thereon made known. He shall annually, and at such other times as the President or the Congress may require, make official report of the transactions of the Government of the Virgin Islands to the Secretary of the Interior, and his said annual report shall be transmitted to the Congress. He shall perform such additional duties and functions as may, in pursuance of law, be delegated to him by the President, or by the Secretary of the Interior. He shall have the power to issue executive regulations not in conflict with any applicable law or ordinance. He shall attend or may depute another person to represent him at the meetings of the legislative authorities herein established, and may give expression to his views on any matter before such bodies.

SEC. 21. The President shall appoint a Government Secretary for the Virgin Islands, who shall have all the powers of the Governor in the case of a vacancy or temporary removal, resignation, or disability of the Governor, or in case of his temporary absence. He shall have custody of the seal of the Virgin Islands and shall countersign and affix such seal to all executive proclamations and all other executive documents. He shall, when practicable, attend all meetings of the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John, before which body he shall give expression to the advice of the Governor. He shall record and preserve the laws enacted by the legislative authorities herein established. He shall promulgate all proclamations and orders of the Governor and all laws enacted by said legislative authorities. He shall have all such executive powers and perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law or assigned to him by the Governor.

SEC. 22. The Secretary of the Interior shall appoint an Administrator for St. Croix, who shall act for the Governor in the administration of the affairs of the municipality of St. Croix. He shall, when practicable, attend all meetings of the Municipal Council of St. Croix, before which body he shall give expression to the advice of the Governor. He shall exercise supervision over all the administrative departments in the municipality of St. Croix, subject to the direction of the Governor.

SEC. 23. The Secretary of the Interior shall appoint such other executive and administrative officers as may, in his discretion, be required. Such officers shall have such powers and duties as may be conferred or imposed upon them by law or ordinance, or by order of the Secretary of the Interior or executive regulation of the Governor not inconsistent with any such law or ordinance. The salary of all executive officers and employees appointed by the President or by the Secretary of the Interior shall be paid from funds appropriated for the Government of the Virgin Islands by the Congress in annual appropriation bills, or as may be otherwise provided by law. The officers appointed by the Secretary of the Interior shall hold office during his pleasure, and in making such appointments the Secretary shall give due consideration to natives of the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 24. The Governor shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the municipal council having jurisdiction, all salaried officers and employees of the municipal governments whose salaries are provided for in the budgets of the municipal governments. In the event of a vacancy in any appointive office under the Government of the Virgin Islands, or the absence, illness, or temporary disqualification of any appointive officer, the Governor shall designate an officer or employee of the Goverment of the Virgin Islands to discharge the functions of such officer during such vacancy, absence, illness, or temporary disqualification.

JUDICIAL BRANCH

SEC. 25. The judicial power of the Virgin Islands shall be vested in a court to be designated "the District Court of the Virgin Islands" and in such court or courts of inferior jurisdiction as may have been or may hereafter be established by local law: Provided, That the legislative assembly may provide for the organization and conduct of a Superior Court of the Virgin Islands and may transfer from the district court to such superior court jurisdiction over any or all causes other than those arising under the laws of the United States. Appeals from the superior court shall be as provided by law in the case of appeals from the district court.

SEC. 26. The President shall, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint a judge and a district attorney for the district court of the Virgin Islands who shall hold office for the term of 4 years and until their successors are chosen and qualified unless sooner removed by the President for cause.

The Attorney General shall appoint and fix the compensation of all other officers necessary for the transaction of the business of the district court, and the compensation of the judge of the district court, and of the district attorney, and the administrative expenses of such court shall be paid from appropriations made for the Department of Justice. The duties of such officers shall be prescribed by law or ordinance and by order of the Attorney General not inconsistent therewith: Provided, That the Governor may call upon the district attorney to advise him upon any legal questions concerning the administration of the government of the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 27. The District Court of the Virgin Islands shall consist of two divisions, one constituted by the municipality of St. Croix and one constituted by the municipality of St. Thomas and St. John, as defined by local law in force on the date of enactment of this act. The judge of the district court shall hold court in each division at such time as he may designate by order, at least once in 2 months in each division. The rules of practice and procedure in such district court shall be prescribed by law or ordinance or by rules and regulations of the district judge not inconsistent with law or ordinance. The process of the district court shall run throughout the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 28. The district court shall have jurisdiction of—

(1) All criminal cases under the laws of the respective municipalities or under the laws of the United States applicable to the Virgin Islands;

(2) All cases in equity;

(3) All cases in admiralty;

(4) All cases of divorce and annulment of marriage;

(5) All cases at law involving principal sums exceeding $200;

(6) All cases involving title to real estate;

(7) All appeals from judgments rendered in the inferior courts;

(8) All matters and proceedings not otherwise hereinabove provided for which, on the date of enactment of this act, were within the jurisdiction of the District Court of the Virgin Islands, or of the judge thereof, or which may hereafter be placed within the jurisdiction of the District Court of the Virgin Islands, or of the judge thereof, by local law.

The district court shall also have concurrent jurisdiction with the inferior courts as provided in section 32.

SEC. 29. The district court shall also have jurisdiction of offenses under the criminal laws of the United States when such offenses are committed on the high seas beyond the territorial limits of the Virgin Islands on vessels belonging in whole or in part to the United States, to any citizen thereof, or to any corporation created by or under the laws of the United States or of any State or Territory thereof, and the offenders are found in the Virgin Islands or are brought into the Virgin Islands after the commission of the offense.

SEC. 30. Appeals from the District Court of the Virgin Islands shall be as provided by law in force on the date of enactment of this act: Provided, That no appeal shall be predicated upon the existence of a right of appeal under the law of Denmark.

SEC. 31. In any case, civil or criminal, originating in said district court, no person shall be denied the right to trial by jury on the demand of either party: Provided, That if no jury is demanded the case shall be tried by the court without a jury: Provided further, That the judge of the district court may, on his own motion, order a jury for the trial of any criminal action: Provided further, That the respective municipal councils of St. Croix and of St. Thomas and St. John, may provide for trial in misdemeanor cases by a jury of six qualified persons.

SEC. 32. The inferior courts shall have jurisdiction concurrent with the district court in all civil cases in which the principal sum claimed does not exceed $200, and of all criminal cases wherein the punishment that may be imposed shall not exceed a fine of $100 or imprisonment not exceeding 6 months, all violations of police regulations and executive regulations, and any cause or offense wherein jurisdiction hereafter shall have been conferred by local law. Such inferior courts shall hold preliminary investigations in charges of felony and charges of misdemeanor in which the punishment that may be imposed is beyond the jurisdiction granted to the inferior courts by this section, and shall commit offenders to the district court and grant bail in bailable cases. The rules governing said courts and prescribing the duties of inferior judges and inferior court officers, oaths, and bonds, the times and places of holding such courts, the disposition of fines, costs, forfeitures, enforcements of judgments, providing for appeals therefrom to the district court, and the disposition and treatment of prisoners shall be as established by law or ordinance in force on the date of enactment of this act or as may hereafter be established by law or ordinance by the municipal council having jurisdiction.

SEC. 33. Appeals in civil and criminal cases from the judgments and rulings of the inferior courts shall be to the district court and shall be taken in accordance with the laws and ordinances of the respective municipalities: Provided, That the right of appeal in all cases, civil and criminal, shall be as established by law or ordinance in force on the date of enactment of this act, or as may hereafter be established by law or ordinance by the municipal council having jurisdiction.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 34. No law shall be enacted in the Virgin Islands which shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law or deny to any person therein equal protection of the laws.

In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to be represented by counsel for his defense, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to have a copy thereof, to have a speedy and public trial, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, and to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor.

No person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law, and no person for the same offense shall be twice put in jeopardy of punishment, nor shall be compelled in any criminal cause to give evidence against himself; nor shall any person sit as judge or magistrate in any case in which he has been engaged as attorney or prosecutor.

All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties in the case of criminal offenses, except for first-degree murder or any capital offense when the proof is evident or the presumption great.

No law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be enacted.

No person shall be imprisoned or shall suffer forced labor for debt.

All persons shall have the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus and the same shall not be suspended except as herein expressly provided.

No ex-post-facto law or bill of attainder shall be enacted.

Private property shall not be taken for public use except upon payment of just compensation ascertained in the manner provided by law.

Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to limit the power of the municipal councils herein provided to enact laws for the protection of life, the public health, or the public safety.

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted.

The right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated.

No warrant for arrest or search shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized.

Slavery shall not exist in the Virgin Islands.

Involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall not exist in the Virgin Islands.

No law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and petition the Government for the redress of grievances.

No law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or preference shall forever be allowed, and no political or religious test other than an oath to support the Constitution and the laws of the United States applicable to the Virgin Islands, and the laws of the Virgin Islands, shall be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the Government of the Virgin Islands.

The contracting of polygamous or plural marriages is prohibited.

No money shall be paid out of the treasury except in accordance with an act of Congress or money bill of the local legislative authority having jurisdiction and on warrant drawn by the proper officer.

The employment of children under the age of 14 years in any occupation injurious to health or morals or hazardous to life or limb is hereby prohibited.

SEC. 35. All taxes, duties, fees, and public revenues collected in the municipality of St. Croix shall be covered into the treasury of the Virgin Islands and held in account for said municipality and all taxes, duties, fees, and public revenues collected in the municipality of St. Thomas and St. John shall be covered into said treasury of the Virgin Islands and held in account for said municipality: Provided, That the proceeds of customs duties, less the cost of collection, and the proceeds of the United States income tax, and the proceeds of any taxes levied by the Congress on the inhabitants of the Virgin Islands, and all quarantine, passport, immigration, and naturalization fees collected in the Virgin Islands shall be covered into the treasury of the Virgin Islands and held in account for the respective municipalities, and shall be expended for the benefit and government of said municipalities in accordance with the annual municipal budgets. The Municipal Council of St. Croix may make appropriations for the purposes of said municipality from, and to be paid out of, the funds credited to its account in the treasury of the Virgin Islands; and the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John may make appropriations for the purposes of said municipality from, and to be paid out of, the funds credited to its account in said treasury.

SEC. 36. Taxes and assessments on property and incomes, internal-revenue taxes, license fees, and service fees may be imposed and collected, and royalties for franchises, privileges, and concessions granted may be collected for the purposes of the Government of the Virgin Islands as may be provided and defined by the municipal councils herein established: Provided, That all money hereafter derived from any tax levied or assessed for a special purpose shall be treated as a special fund in the treasury of the Virgin Islands and paid out for such purpose only, except when otherwise authorized by the legislative authority having jurisdiction after the purpose for which such fund was created has been accomplished. Until Congress shall otherwise provide, all laws concerning import duties and customs in the municipality of St. Thomas and St. John now in effect shall be in force and effect in and for the Virgin Islands: Provided further, That the President may, by Executive order, establish or alter rules and regulations for the administration of customs laws. The export duties in effect on the date of enactment of this act may be from time to time reduced, repealed, or restored by ordinance of the municipal council having jurisdiction: Provided further, That no new export duties shall be levied in the Virgin Islands except by the Congress.

SEC. 37. All judicial process shall run in the name of "United States of America, scilicet, the President of the United States", and all penal or criminal prosecutions in the local courts shall be conducted in the name of and by authority of "the People of the Virgin Islands of the United States."

SEC. 38. All officials of the Government of the Virgin Islands shall be citizens of the United States, and before entering upon the duties of their respective offices shall take an oath to support the Constitution and the laws of the United States applicable to the Virgin Islands and the laws of the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 39. All reports required by law to be made by the Governor to any official of the United States shall hereafter be made to the Secretary of the Interior, and the President is hereby authorized to place all matters pertaining to the government of the Virgin Islands under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 40. This act shall take effect upon its enactment, but until its provisions shall severally become operative as herein provided, the corresponding legislative, executive, and judicial functions of the existing government shall continue to be exercised as now provided by law or ordinance, and the present incumbents of all offices under the government of the Virgin Islands shall continue in office until their successors are appointed and have qualified, unless sooner removed by competent authority.

SEC. 41. This act may be cited as the Organic Act of the Virgin Islands of the United States.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DEMPSEY: Section 31, page 20, line 12, strike out the words "case, civil or criminal", and insert in lieu thereof the words "criminal case."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a further committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Section 36, page 26, line 15, strike out the words between the colon on that line and the period on line 17 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall designate the several ports and subports of entry in the Virgin Islands of the United States, and shall make such rules and regulations, and appoint such officers and employees as he may deem necessary for the administration of the customs laws in the Virgin Islands of the United States, and he shall fix the compensations of all such officers and employees and provide for the payment of such compensations and other expenses of the collection of duties, fees, and taxes imposed under the customs laws from the receipts thereof."

Section 39, page 27, line 16, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a comma, and add the words "except matters relating to the judicial branch of said government which shall be as hereinbefore provided under the supervision of the Attorney General."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RATIO OF SUBSTITUTES TO REGULAR EMPLOYEES IN POST OFFICES AND RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12608, to fix the ratio of substitutes to regular employees in post offices and in the Railway Mail Service.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HIGGINS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, in lieu of consideration of this bill, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill, H. R. 7688, with a Senate amendment, and agree to the said amendment. The language of the two bills, H. R. 7688 and H. R. 12608, is exactly the same.

This bill, that in effect establishes a new ratio between substitutes and regular employees in the Postal Service, will, I am confident, provide more adequate and efficient service because the Post Office Department has been compelled to resort to practice of employing temporary employees without these men, under the present ratio, ever being afforded the protection of civil service. I speak for this class—temporary employees—throughout the Service and more particularly of and for the group of temporary employees in the Boston postal district, who are in many cases married or have dependents, who have given 8 years of faithful service to our Government as temporary employees, without the hope of protection of civil service unless this bill meets with the approval of Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That the ratio of classified substitute railway postal clerks, classified substitute post-office clerks, classified substitute city letter carriers, classified substitute village letter carriers, classified substitute laborers, watchmen, and messengers, and classified substitutes in the Motor Vehicle Service, to regular railway postal clerks, post-office clerks, city letter carriers, village letter carriers, laborers, watchmen, and messengers, and employees in the Motor Vehicle Service, shall be not more than one classified substitute to six regular employees, or fraction thereof, respectively, except that in offices having fewer than six regular employees there may be one substitute clerk and one substitute carrier, and one substitute in the Motor Vehicle Service: Provided, That where the ratio of substitutes is now in excess of these ratios, no additional classified substitutes shall be appointed until these ratios are established: Provided further, That the provisions of this act shall not operate to furlough or dismiss (1) any classified substitute railway postal clerks, post-office clerks, city letter carriers, village letter carriers, or laborers, watchmen, or messengers; or (2) any classified substitutes in the Motor Vehicle Service."

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

EXEMPTION OF PUBLICLY OWNED INTERSTATE HIGHWAY BRIDGES FROM TAXATION

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3107, to exempt publicly owned interstate highway bridges from State, municipal, and local taxation.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

TRANSPORTATION AND SALE OF NATURAL GAS IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12680, to regulate the transportation and sale of natural gas in interstate commerce, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is a bill of 28 pages, and it is a bill that affects an industry widely scattered throughout the United States, serving a great many communities. I do not believe it is the kind of a bill that should be on this calendar. I therefore object.

BRIDGES ACROSS THE TENNESSEE, TOMBIGBEE, WARRIOR, ALABAMA, AND COOSA RIVERS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12657, to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the Alabama State Bridge Corporation to construct, maintain, and operate bridges across the Tennessee, Tombigbee, Warrior, Alabama, and Coosa Rivers, within the State of Alabama", approved May 26, 1928.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the sponsor of the bill advise the House as to whether this bill has been passed on by any committee, and if so, by what committee?

Mr. CHAPMAN. I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that it was passed on by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. This bill extends the amortization period on this bridge from 18 to 28 years. The bridge has heretofore been authorized.

Mr. RICH. Was it a unanimous report by the committee?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Yes; it was.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the Alabama State Bridge Corporation to construct, maintain, and operate bridges across the Tennessee, Tombigbee, Warrior, Alabama, and Coosa Rivers, within the State of Alabama", approved May 26, 1928, is amended by striking out, where they appear therein, the words "18 years" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "28 years."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, at or near Garrison, N. Dak., authorized to be built by the State of North Dakota by an act of Congress approved February 10, 1932, heretofore extended by acts of Congress approved February 14, 1933, June 12, 1934, and May 24, 1935, are hereby further extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from June 12, 1936.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGES ACROSS RED RIVER, MOORHEAD, MINN., TO FARGO, N. DAK.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3945, to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of certain free highway bridges across the Red River, from Moorhead, Minn., to Fargo, N. Dak.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of two free highway bridges across the Red River, between Moorhead, Minn., and Fargo, N. Dak., authorized to be built by the State Highway Departments of the States of Minnesota and North Dakota by an act of Congress approved June 4, 1934, heretofore extended by an act of Congress approved August 5, 1935, are hereby further extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from June 4, 1936.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Is it in order during the consideration of the Consent Calendar to submit a unanimous consent request that a certain number of bills on the Consent Calendar be considered en bloc?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is a rather unusual request. It is the opinion of the Chair that in order to keep the record straight the bills should be considered separately.

How many of these bridge bills are there?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. There are nine bridge bills in rotation.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER, MIAMI, MO.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11820, to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Miami, Mo.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, at or near Miami, authorized to be built by Saline County, Mo., by an Act of Congress approved January 16, 1936, are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from January 16, 1937.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER, ARROW ROCK, MO.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 11819, to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Arrow Rock, Mo.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, at or near Arrow Rock, Mo., authorized to be built by J. L. Jones, Tyre W. Burton, and H. R. Turley, trustees for Howard County, Mo., by an act of Congress approved August 30, 1935, are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from August 30, 1936.

BRIDGE ACROSS CHESAPEAKE BAY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12514, authorizing the Chesapeake Bay Authority to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Chesapeake Bay, from a point in Baltimore County, Md., over Hart Island and Miller's Island to a point near Tolchester, Kent County, Md.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the Chesapeake Bay Authority, a public body created under the laws of the State of Maryland, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Chesapeake Bay at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, from a point in Baltimore County, Md., over Hart Island and Miller's Island to a point near Tolchester, Kent County, Md., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. The said Chesapeake Bay Authority is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

SEC. 3. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 40 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches; the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same; and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

SEC. 4. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Chesapeake Bay Authority to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Chesapeake Bay, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, from a point in Baltimore County, Md., over Hart Island and Millers Island to a point near Tolchester, Kent County, Md., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters', approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

"SEC. 2. If tolls are charged for the use of such bridge, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of the bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 40 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the costs of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

"SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is hereby expressly reserved."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS SAVANNAH RIVER, AUGUSTA, GA.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12473, authorizing the State Highway Board of the State of Georgia to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Savannah River at or near Augusta, Ga.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to substitute for the House bill a similar Senate bill

(S. 4549), an act authorizing the State Highway Board of the State of Georgia to replace, reconstruct, or repair the free highway bridge across the Savannah River at or near the city of Augusta, Ga.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the State Highway Board of the State of Georgia is hereby authorized to replace, reconstruct, or repair the free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Savannah River, known as the North Augusta Bridge, at or near the city of Augusta, Ga., and to maintain and operate such bridge as a free highway bridge, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the State Highway Board of the State of Georgia all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, replacement, reconstruction, repair, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

SEC. 3. The authority granted by this act shall cease and be null and void unless the replacement, reconstruction, or repair authorized herein is actually commenced within 2 years and completed within 4 years from the date of the enactment of this act.

SEC. 4. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider and a House bill (H. R. 12473) were laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE CONNECTICUT RIVER AT NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 4326, granting the consent of Congress to the Department of Public Works of Massachusetts to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Connecticut River at or near Northampton, Mass.

There being no objection the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Department of Public Works, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Connecticut River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near the city of Northampton, Mass., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE WACCAMAW RIVER AT RED BLUFF, S. C.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12685, granting the consent of Congress to the county of Horry, S. C., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Waccamaw River, at or near Red Bluff, S. C.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the county of Horry, S. C., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Waccamaw River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Red Bluff, S. C., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT TO BANKRUPTCY ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2303, to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, as amended and supplemented.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That clause (6½) of subsection (a) of section 63 of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, as amended and supplemented, is amended by inserting immediately after the words "whether voluntary or involuntarily" a colon and the following: "Provided, That the provisions of this clause (6½) shall apply to estates that were pending on June 7, 1934, and are in process of settlement."

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (n) of section 57 of such act of July 1, 1898, as amended and supplemented, claims covered by the amendatory proviso of section 1 of this act may be proved against the estate of the bankrupt at any time within 60 days after the enactment of this act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AGRICULTURAL INCOME

The Clerk called the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 444) to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to make an investigation with respect to agricultural income and the financial and economic condition of agricultural producers generally", approved August 27, 1935.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the House joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That section 1 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to make an investigation with respect to agricultural income and the financial and economic condition of agricultural producers generally", approved August 27, 1935 (Public Res. No. 61, 74th Cong.), be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"That the Federal Trade Commission is hereby authorized and directed to investigate and report, at the next session of Congress—

"First. (1) The extent of the decline in agricultural income in recent years, including the amount and percentage of such decline;

"(2) The extent of the increases or decreases in recent years in the income of the principal corporations engaged in the sale, manufacturing, warehousing, and/or processing of the principal farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables, and of the other principal sellers, manufacturers, warehousemen, and/or processors of the principal farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables, as compared with the decline in agricultural income, including the amount and percentage of such changes; and

"(3) The proportion of total consumer cost of representative products manufactured or processed from the principal farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables, which is represented by the proceeds received by (a) the farmer; (b) the manufacturers, processors, and warehousemen; and (c) the distributors and such principal farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables, and such representative products manufactured therefrom.

"Second. The financial position of the principal corporations engaged in the manufacturing, processing, warehousing, distribution, and marketing of the representative major products manufactured from such farm products, including—

"(1) The capitalization and assets of such corporations and the means and sources of the growth of such capitalization and assets;

"(2) The investment, costs, profits, and rates of return of such corporations;

"(3) The salaries of the officers of such companies; and

"(4) The extent to which said corporations avoid income taxes, if at all, and the extent to which officers receiving such salaries paid income taxes thereon.

"Third. The extent of concentration of control and of monopoly in the manufacturing, processing, warehousing, distribution, and marketing of representative major farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables, which is maintained or has been obtained by any corporation or other organization, including—

"(1) Methods and devices used by such corporations for obtaining and maintaining their control or monopoly of the manufacturing, marketing, processing, warehousing, and distribution of such commodities, and the proportion of any such major farm commodity, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables, handled by each of the large units involved; and

"(2) The extent to which fraudulent, dishonest, unfair, intimidating, and injurious methods are employed in the grading, warehousing, and transportation of such farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables, including combinations, monopolies, price fixing, and manipulation of prices on the commodity exchanges, and by racketeering and so-called auction markets.

"Fourth. The extent to which the cooperative agencies have entered into the processing, warehousing, and marketing of representative major farm products, and of table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables, and the general effects of such cooperative agencies upon the producer and consumer."

SEC. 2. That section 5 of the said joint resolution be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out the figures "150,000" and inserting the figures "300,000."

SEC. 3. That section 6 of the said joint resolution be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out all thereof and by substituting in lieu of said section the following:

"SEC. 6. The Federal Trade Commission is directed to present a report to the Congress in respect to such principal farm products and such representative products manufactured therefrom, together with recommendations for legislation not later than July 1, 1936, and an interim report to the Congress in respect to table and juice grapes, fresh fruits and vegetables on July 1, 1936, and a final report in respect to said last-mentioned farm products, together with recommendations for legislation not later than January 31, 1937."

With the following committee amendment: Page 4, strike out lines 20 to 24, inclusive, and on page 5, strike out lines 1 to 8, inclusive, and insert the following:

SEC. 3. That section 6 of the said joint resolution be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out all thereof and by substituting in lieu of the said section the following:

"SEC. 6. The Federal Trade Commission is directed to present a final report to the Congress in respect to such principal farm products and such representative products manufactured therefrom, together with recommendations for legislation not later than October 1, 1936, and a further report to the Congress in respect to table and juice grapes, fresh fruits, and vegetables, together with recommendations for legislation on or before January 31, 1937, and a final report in respect to the said last-mentioned products, together with any further recommendations, not later than May 31, 1937.

"It is hereby further provided that any unexpended balance of the appropriation of $150,000 made in the Independent Offices Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1936 in accordance with the authority contained in Public Resolution No. 61, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, is hereby made available for like purpose to and including October 1, 1936."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The House joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONSENT CALENDAR

ESTABLISHMENT AND OPERATION OF GRAZING DISTRICTS IN THE STATE OF NEVADA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 12698, relating to the establishment and operation of grazing districts in the State of Nevada.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to establish and administer additional grazing districts in the State of Nevada pursuant to the provisions and subject to the restrictions of the act entitled "An act to stop injury to the public grazing lands by preventing overgrazing and soil deterioration, to provide for their orderly use, improvement, and development, to stabilize the livestock industry, dependent upon the public range, and for other purposes", approved June 28, 1934 (48 Stat. 1269), without regard to the 80,000,000 acres limitation contained in section 1 thereof.

SEC. 2. Nothing in this act shall be construed as in any way altering or restricting the right to hunt or fish within a grazing district in accordance with the laws of the United States or of any State, or as vesting in any permittee any right whatsoever to interfere with hunting or fishing within a grazing district, except that hereafter the control of hunting and fishing within the Boulder Canyon Project Reservation, as now or as hereafter may be defined, shall be exercised by the Interior Department, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), as amended and supplemented.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SERVICE CHARGES ON PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION HOUSING PROJECTS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3247, to amend title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act as amended by the Emergency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, and as extended by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have someone explain the bill. This bill has reference to the dead N. R. A., and we would like to know what they are going to do with it.

Mr. RAMSPECK. If the gentleman will yield, I can tell him in a very few words to what this bill refers. It deals with the lower-cost housing projects.

In the first place, some of the cities in which these projects are located have declined to extend school facilities and police and fire protection to these projects unless the cities are compensated in lieu of taxes. This bill enables the Administrator of Public Works to enter into an agreement with the city for a lump-sum payment in lieu of taxes, which may be either 5 percent of the gross rental of the houses when completed or the tax collected from the property prior to the acquisition of same by the Government, whichever is the lesser sum.

Mr. RICH. How did these projects get started? Are these the projects under the Tugwell administration, which were declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court last week?

Mr. RAMSPECK. This has no relationship, as I understand it, to that. This deals with projects under the Public Works Administration.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that this bill should be considered by unanimous consent; therefore I object.

PROVISION FOR CARE AND TREATMENT OF MEMBERS OF NATIONAL GUARD, ETC.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3334, to make provision for the care and treatment of members of the National Guard, Organized Reserves, Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and citizens' military training camps who are injured or contract disease while engaged in military training, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men of the National Guard who suffer personal injury or contract disease in line of duty while en route to or from or during their attendance at encampments, maneuvers, or other exercises, or at service schools, under the provisions of sections 94, 97, and 99 of the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended; members of the Officers' Reserve Corps and of the Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army and members of the National Guard of the United States who suffer injury or contract disease in line of duty while on active duty under proper orders; and persons hereinbefore described who may now be undergoing hospital treatment at Government expense for injuries so sustained; shall, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, be entitled, at Government expense, to such hospitalization, rehospitalization, medical and surgical care, in hospital and at their homes, as is necessary for the appropriate treatment of such injury or disease, until the disability resulting from such injury or disease cannot be materially improved by further hospitalization or treatment, and during the period of such hospitalization or rehospitalization, but not for more than an aggregate of 6 months after the termination of the prescribed tour of active duty or training in any case to the pay and allowances, whether in money or in kind, that they were entitled to receive at the time such injury was suffered or disease contracted, and to the necessary transportation incident to such hospitalization and rehospitalization and return to their homes when discharged from hospital; and for any period of hospitalization or rehospitalization when they are not entitled to pay and allowances under the preceding provision, they shall be entitled to subsistence at Government expense. Officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men of the National Guard who suffer personal injury (as distinguished from disease) in line of duty when participating in aerial flights prescribed under the provisions of section 92 of said National Defense Act as amended shall, under regulations prescribed as aforesaid, be entitled to the same hospitalization, rehospitalization, medical and surgical care, pay and allowances, and transporation, as if such injury had been suffered while in line of duty during their attendance at encampments, maneuvers, or other exercises, or service schools, under the aforementioned sections 94, 97, or 99 of the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended; and members of the Officers' Reserve Corps and Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army who suffer personal injury (as distinguished from disease) in line of duty while voluntarily participating, when not on active duty, in aerial flights in Government-owned aircraft by proper authority as an incident to their military training, shall, under regulations prescribed as aforesaid, be entitled to the same hospitalization, rehospitalization, medical and surgical care, pay and allowances, and transporation as if such injury had been suffered while on active duty under proper orders. Members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and members of the citizens' military training camps who suffer personal injury or contract disease in line of duty while en route to or from and during their attendance at camps of instruction, under the provisions of section 47a or 47d of said National Defense Act, as amended, shall, under regulations prescribed as aforesaid, be entitled to hospitalization, rehospitalization, medical and surgical care, in hospital and at their homes, pay and allowances, transportation, and subsistence as in the case of persons hereinbefore described. If the death of any person mentioned herein occurs while he is on active duty, or undergoing training or hospital treatment contemplated by this section, the United States shall, under regulations prescribed as aforesaid, pay the necessary expenses for recovery of the body, its preparation for burial, including the use of such of the uniform and articles of clothing issued to him as may be required, interment (or cremation if requested by his relatives), and transportation of his remains, including round-trip transportation and subsistence of an escort, to his home or the place where he received orders for the period of training upon which engaged at the time of his death, or to such other place as his relatives may designate, provided the distance to such other place be not greater than the distance to his home: Provided, That when the expenses of the recovery, preparation, and disposition of remains herein authorized, or any part thereof, are paid by individuals, such individuals may be reimbursed therefor at an amount not exceeding that allowed by the Government for such services. The determination of the fact whether an injury was suffered or disease contracted by the person concerned in line of duty, and of all other facts and conditions necessary to entitle a person to the benefits of this act, shall be made by the Secretary of War, or by such agencies or shall be designated, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, and such determination shall be final and conclusive for all purposes of this act. Section 6 of the act of March 4, 1923, as amended by the act of April 26, 1928 (45 Stat. 461), is hereby repealed: Provided further, That any person who, on the date of the approval of this act, is receiving or entitled to receive the benefits provided by said section 6 of the act of March 4, 1923, as amended, shall be entitled to the benefits of this act in lieu thereof, and existing appropriations for carrying out the provisions of section 6 of said act of March 4, 1923, as amended, shall be available for expenditures authorized by this act.

With the following committee amendments: Page 2, line 4, after the word "orders", insert "in time of peace"; page 5, line 1, after the word "services", strike out the remainder of line 1 and all of lines 2 to 7, inclusive, down to the word "Act" in line 8.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TRANSFER OF LAND FROM THE WAR DEPARTMENT TO THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 10712, to authorize the transfer of land from the War Department to the Territory of Hawaii.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to transfer to the Territory of Hawaii all right, title, and interest of the United States in such portion of the land at the base of the east breakwater at Kahului, county of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, as is not required for the maintenance of said breakwater, on such terms and conditions as the Secretary of War may determine: Provided, That the conveyance shall be upon the express condition and with a reservation reserving the right to resume and occupy said tract of land whenever, in the judgment of the President, an emergency exists that requires the use and appropriation of the same for public defense, and also with the further reservation as to that portion of said tract of land other than known as pier no. 1 and the land immediately adjacent thereto that it shall be used for park purposes, and that in case it is not so used it shall revert to the United States.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 9, after the word "determine", insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That the conveyance shall be upon the express condition and with a reservation reserving the right to resume and occupy said tract of land whenever in the judgment of the President an emergency exists that requires the use and appropriation of the same for public defense, and also with the further reservation as to that portion of said tract of land other than known as pier no. 1 and the land immediately adjacent thereto that it shall be used for park purposes, and that in case it is not so used it shall revert to the United States."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SELECTION OF SITE FOR ERECTION OF PEDESTAL FOR ALBERT GALLATIN STATUE IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Clerk called the next resolution, Senate Joint Resolution 215, authorizing the selection of a site and the erection of a pedestal for the Albert Gallatin statue in Washington, D. C.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I withhold it.

Mr. KELLER. I simply want to call attention to the fact that there is no appropriation here except for a pedestal. The monument itself is provided by the society.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think the gentleman had better read his bill. I think he means the north entrance of the Treasury Building instead of the west entrance.

The regular order was demanded.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OF THE ENABLING ACT FOR THE STATE OF ARIZONA

The clerk called the next bill, S. 4230, to amend section 28 of the Enabling Act for the State of Arizona, approved June 20, 1910.

There being no objection, the clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 28 of the act entitled "An act to enable the people of New Mexico to form a constitution and state government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of Arizona to form a constitution and state government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States", approved June 20, 1910, is amended (1) by striking out the proviso in the third paragraph thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prevent said State of Arizona from leasing in a manner as the State legislature may direct, any of said lands referred to in this section for grazing and agricultural purposes for a term of 10 years or less, or from leasing any of said lands for mineral purposes (including leases for exploration of oil and gas and extraction thereof) for a term of 20 years or less"; (2) by striking out in the fourth paragraph thereof "nor in any case less than the minimum price hereinafter fixed,"; (3) by striking out in the fifth paragraph thereof "$3 per acre" and inserting in lieu thereof "their appraised value"; and (4) by inserting between the fifth and sixth paragraphs thereof the following new paragraph:

"The State of Arizona is authorized to exchange any lands owned by it for other lands, public or private, under such regulations as the legislature thereof may prescribe: Provided, That such exchanges involving public lands may be made only as authorized by acts of Congress and regulations thereunder."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

INTERSTATE TRANSPORTATION OF PRISON-MADE PRODUCTS

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 11372) to amend Public Law No. 215, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Public Law No. 215, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, approved July 24, 1935, entitled "An act to prohibit the interstate transportation of prison-made products in certain cases", be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding after section 2 thereof a new section to be known as section 2A and to read as follows:

"SEC. 2A. No person shall deliver for shipment any such package, as described in the foregoing section, unless each article therein contained shall be plainly and indelibly marked with the words 'prison-made', together with the name and location of the penal or reformatory institution wherein produced."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, at the last session of the Congress a bill was enacted which made it unlawful for prison-made goods to be transported in interstate commerce into those States where the sale of such goods are prohibited by State law. The practical operation of the act developed the fact that under the law that we passed at the last session, all that was required to be done was to mark on the outside of the package containing the goods "Prison made." So, when the goods reached their destination and the wrapper was removed from the package, they passed into the commerce of the State, and there was no way of identifying these goods from any others.

This bill proposes to add a section to that particular statute requiring the marking of the individual goods by stamping them indelibly as prison-made goods.

The Department of Justice states that unless such a statute is passed it is impossible to enforce the present statute; and the question, as I see it, is this, and I am going to be perfectly frank with you: It does not operate in my State in the least, so far as I know, and I have no personal feeling about the bill or personal interest in it. If we are going to prevent the mingling of prison-made goods with goods made by free labor in commerce, there does not seem to be any way to do it except by requiring the individual articles themselves to be stamped.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Is it not a fact that this very contention is one that Mr. Samuel Gompers, who was president of the American Federation of Labor for a long time, sought to have Congress provide for, so that prison-made goods could be recognized wherever they were found?

Mr. MILLER. I am not familiar with that.

Mr. BLANTON. And this is in strict accord with the former demands of organized labor, as I understand it.

Mr. MILLER. I am not informed about that.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I believe the gentleman stated the Department of Justice is in favor of this bill?

Mr. MILLER. That is my understanding.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I have a letter here dated May 26, 1936.

Mr. MILLER. That is quite recent.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. This letter is addressed to the chairman of the gentleman's committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS], and the last paragraph of the letter reads as follows:

> Whether the proposed amendment should be enacted is primarily a question of legislative policy. I desire to point out, however, that, if enacted, the law would be extremely difficult of enforcement.
> Sincerely,
> HOMER S. CUMMINGS.

Mr. MILLER. And I understand that we had another letter saying they could not enforce the present law, and the question is whether or not you want to permit prison-made goods to go into commerce without being marked and thus compete with goods manufactured by free labor. If you do, the bill ought to be defeated. If not, the bill ought to be enacted into law.

I reserve the remainder of my time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, this bill before us brings up a very difficult question. We have been battling many years in heroic attempts to abolish the sale of contract prison-made goods.

One of my objections to this amendment which requires that each garment or article be stamped or indelibly imprinted as prison made is that I do not think it very good policy for us to recognize that prison-made garments stamped prison made are marketable.

Do not think that you are going to segregate prison-made goods made by prison labor by simply stamping them prison made.

Another objection is that we only have 22 States that have enacted laws for the purpose of restricting in one manner or another the manufacture and sale of prison-made goods by prison contractors.

Some States have the State-use system.

These States—Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, and several other States that have the State-use system—have abolished the very inhuman contract-leasing system.

Then there are 15 or 18 States that have no system. We have now seven States that require the labeling of their products as made in the penitentiary.

There are a number of States that buy a great amount of clothing from the Missouri penitentiary. We have 1,500 or 1,800 making clothing of all kinds, types, and description, and there are thousands of institutions throughout the States where the State governments are caring for unfortunate children. There is no State in the Union that has not several institutions to care for orphans. I do not want any of my relatives who have little children that must go to one of these State institutions to be compelled to wear clothing day after day marked "prison made." I say to you that it is not a fair policy; it is not a good policy to get those children accustomed to looking at brands of prison-made goods.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. DINGELL. Is it not a fact that the very stamping of these prison-made goods will be recognition that they are legitimately produced.

Mr. WOOD. Yes; that is a very serious objection, that they are recognized as legitimate marketable goods. There are people who are compelled to buy such commodities. There are many good citizens who have children, two or three or four, who have very little money, and it is necessary to clothe those children. The father or mother will look on one counter, with the goods marked prison-made there, and another counter without them, or perhaps look on a counter where both are intermingled. Side by side, one stack is marked prison-made goods, the mark probably being on the collarband or somewhere not very visible, but the mark will be shown by the clerk. There will be a pair of small trousers, perhaps, or some article of clothing in that stack, tagged at 75 cents a garment, and in the next stack beside it goods of the same quality and the tag will be $1.25.

The father or mother hates to buy the prison-made goods; they dread to do it; they see under the collar this mark of prison-made, but they want the children clothed. Their great desire is to keep their children from want and misery; their desire is to keep them from shivering and suffering, and they will buy the prison garment. It is no reflection upon their character when they do that. They are confronted with a situation; and I say to you that the enactment of the Hawes-Cooper and the Ashurst-Sumners laws has started us on a rapid upward trend toward the abolition of this abominable system of the sale of convict-made goods in the open market, and especially the sale of contract-made goods.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. A number of years ago I was the coauthor of what is known as the Hawes-Cooper prison-made goods law.

Mr. WOOD. And I complimented the gentleman upon being the author of that law.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. For 50 years the American Federation of Labor worked in season and out of season to have that act become a law. This bill would not apply to the States that have no laws governing the sale of prison-made goods. It applies only to those States that have State laws governing the sale of prison-made goods.

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Can the gentleman tell me who is back of this bill? I understand the American Federation of Labor is not in favor of it.

Mr. WOOD. I have not been informed that the American Federation of Labor is back of it. Neither am I informed that the Clothing Manufacturers Association is back of it. They have been prime movers in the abolition of the sale of convict-made goods in the open market. I know of no one who had interceded in behalf of the bill.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. The representatives of the American Federation of Labor informed me this afternoon that they are opposed to the bill. I would like to know who is for it.

Mr. WOOD. I am sorry to say that I cannot tell. The representatives of the American Federation of Labor also informed me a few hours ago that they are opposed to this bill, as did several clothing manufacturers and other people who have cooperated in the great effort to abolish the open sale of these convict-made goods.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, the representatives of the American Federation of Labor have informed me that they are unalterably opposed to this legislation.

Mr. WOOD. I think there is no question about that. This is a matter of legislative policy. No Member of Congress is to be condemned for his position on this matter. It is a matter of policy, and it has been a very involved question, as you all know, for many years. I just cannot go along with the idea of legalizing and putting the stamp of approval upon prison-made garments sold in the open market. I fear if we enact this bill that that is what we will do. For years past I know that various State federations and various manufacturers' associations, as well as the American Federation of Labor, have groped around in the dark for all kinds of remedies, and in years gone we have advocated the stamping of prison-made garments when there was no State-use system, but we are now drifting rapidly toward the right solution, and that is for the State to manufacture these products for the use of State institutions and keep them out of competition, as far as possible, with free labor. I do not know what we are going to do with our prison population. Our prison population in Missouri is increasing by leaps and bounds. We built a new reformatory in the past 5 or 6 years.

They are filled to overflowing. I do not know what the remedy is, but I do know that something must be done to take care of them. I fear, if we pass this amendment to the Ashurst-Sumners law, we will find ourselves in the position where we will have a great influx of prison-made goods marked and stamped. As I said before, I fear there are a great many people who, through stress of circumstances—and, of course, we have millions of them now—may augment the sale of prison-made garments and do just the reverse of what we are attempting to do here.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. As I understand it, this bill simply provides that the articles be indelibly marked. What would prevent a person buying a suit of clothing so indelibly marked and removing the mark after he buys it? That does not mean that it has to be marked on with indelible ink.

Mr. WOOD. Yes; but they can take it off.

Mr. MOTT. What is to prevent a person, after he buys a coat, from removing that label?

Mr. WOOD. Nothing at all.

Mr. MOTT. All right, then. What is the matter with the bill? If a person buys a child's garment he can take the indelible mark off, but if this amendment were adopted it would prevent a fraud being perpetrated upon the purchaser who did not know the difference between prison-made goods and other goods.

Mr. WOOD. The words "indelibly marked" I fear mean that it is marked so that it cannot be removed. That is what I think the courts will interpret. I am not a lawyer, but I think that is the purpose and intent and meaning of the language of that amendment, and it will be so indelibly marked that it cannot be removed.

Mr. MOTT. Does the gentleman think it will have to be printed with indelible ink upon the cloth? In other words, does the gentleman say that that marking on my coat, for instance, is not an indelible mark?

Mr. WOOD. No; it is not. I do not think it is, because it could be easily removed, and what the courts may construe as "indelibly marked" seems to me to be that they would construe that that garment shall be so marked that it cannot be removed.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. I yield.

Mr. BIERMANN. At the present time prison-made goods may be shipped in interstate commerce; is that not true?

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. BIERMANN. If a man buys prison-made goods now, he does not know whether it is prison made or whether it is made by free labor, but if this bill is passed he will be put on notice as to what he is buying?

Mr. WOOD. No. I hope we will never see the day when we will teach them to buy prison-made garments. I am mighty glad that the men who buy them do not know they are prison made.

Mr. BIERMANN. Does the gentleman think this bill would encourage the buying of prison-made goods?

Mr. WOOD. In many circumstances, it would. Under the stress of circumstances, it certainly would.

Mr. BIERMANN. Then the gentleman is against the bill?

Mr. WOOD. I am against this amendment; yes. I do not think it is a proper amendment.

Mr. PEARSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. I yield.

Mr. PEARSON. Is it not true that the American Federation of Labor actively sponsored Public Law No. 215, which we enacted during the first session of this Congress?

Mr. WOOD. Yes; they actively sponsored the Ashurst-Sumners law.

Mr. PEARSON. Is it not also true that this amendment is offered for the purpose of making that particular law effective and so as to make it effective?

Mr. WOOD. I disagree with the gentleman. As I said before, it is a matter of policy that is not in accord with the opinion of the Attorney General, as was read by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. COOPER]. The Attorney General, in the last paragraph of his letter to Judge SUMNERS, chairman of the committee, stated:

> Whether the proposed amendment should be enacted is primarily a question of legislative policy. I desire to point out, however, that if enacted, the law will be extremely difficult of enforcement.

Of course, there are divers views about the difficulty of its enforcement and as to its strengthening or weakening the present law.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. I yield.

Mr. SIROVICH. During the last 10 years I have heard debates on this subject of prison-made goods and I understand they can be classified under the following groupings: A prisoner must have something to do while in prison. Therefore they have given him an opportunity to do work. Many States have recognized the humanity of taking prison-made goods to supply State institutions so that those prisoners might have work.

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. SIROVICH. Now, if this legislation is enacted, it will enable prison-made goods to compete with free labor and encourage that competition by underselling the work of free labor?

Mr. WOOD. I am very glad for the gentleman's contribution. I agree with him thoroughly.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. I yield.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman expressed great concern about the fact that we are filling up our prisons so fast.

If he will read the report of the Attorney General and the Superintendent of Prisons, he will find that since doing away with the eighteenth amendment we have increased our prison population 400 percent.

Mr. WOOD. I will say to the gentleman that we built our two institutions under the Republican administration and during prohibition.

Mr. RICH. Yes; but the reports of the Attorney General for the past 2 years and the report for the year 1935 show that they have increased 400 percent.

Mr. WOOD. Our prison institutions were filled before this administration came in.

Mr. RICH. Evidently the gentleman has not read the report of the Attorney General for this year.

Mr. WOOD. We know the situation in Missouri and, although I am ashamed to admit it, we have a good many prisoners in the institutions. We know those prisons were filled immediately after they were built.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I regret to take issue with my distinguished colleague from Missouri [Mr. WOOD] and my distinguished colleague from Ohio [Mr. COOPER]. They are two of the high class, high-standing Members of the House, both as good friends to organized labor as it ever had. The bill that this bill now seeks to amend was an organized-labor bill—the Ashurst bill—passed by Congress, which merely provides that prison-made goods to be shipped in interstate commerce can only go to those States which permit it, which have no laws against it; and when they do go there the outside box or package, the big crate or carton, whatever it is, must be marked "Prison-made goods." The inside goods themselves are not marked at all.

Under that law these great big crates of goods can go into a State which permits it, be opened and the unmarked goods inside placed on counters alongside free-labor goods and no one can distinguish them. That would be against organized labor and against the contention I heard the distinguished late lamented Samuel Gompers make before my committee at one time when he was insisting that just such a law as this now before the House be passed. Prison-made goods should be marked so the people can distinguish them from goods made by free labor.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. In just a minute, when I have completed this statement.

Mr. Speaker, I contend that it is a protection to free labor to mark prison-made goods so people can tell them from goods made by free labor. I have in my home some sample shoes that were made in a Federal penitentiary by convicts, a pair of fine calfskin shoes that the prison can make for $3.35 and give the convict some pay for it which he can send home to his wife and little children. Some of these shoes are sold to officers in the Army and Navy for $3.35, whereas like shoes made by free labor would cost $12 in any retail store in the land.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Certainly; to my friend from Missouri.

Mr. WOOD. Would the gentleman favor marking shoes that come in from Czechoslovakia?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; I would.

Mr. WOOD. Mark them indelibly "Made in Czechoslovakia"; for, does the gentleman know they can compete even with prison-made goods?

Mr. BLANTON. I would like to see every single piece of foreign merchandise, every single foreign product that comes into our ports marked so we can tell it. Then we could protect the goods of our own country against foreign goods. I would like to see every article received from Japan marked so we can tell it; then we could do something for the protection of the labor of the United States against the cheap labor of Japan.

Mr. SIROVICH. My distinguished colleague has just concluded his statement. Will he yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Certainly.

Mr. SIROVICH, Does he think it is right to take the product of forced convict labor under prison circumstances and under prison conditions and ship it in interstate commerce to compete with goods made by free American labor?

Mr. BLANTON. Answering the great humanitarian of the House, the man whose every heart pulsation is supposed to beat for suffering humanity, I may say there would be no convict-made products, there would be no prison-made goods, if there were not before Congress the problem of what to do with the convicts of the country after we put them in prisons. The prisoners are there and they cannot be permitted to remain idle. Idleness is the devil's workshop.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. Without work there would be mutinies. We are not merely punishing men while they are in penitentiaries, we are hoping to reclaim some of them. We must give them an opportunity to work, we must give them an opportunity to make a little something to help support their children by diligent endeavor.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BLANTON. Would the gentleman from New York not have them work?

Mr. SIROVICH. That is not it at all.

Mr. BLANTON. When they work, they produce something. What would the gentleman do with the product?

Mr. SIROVICH. Do as they do in my State of New York; require that it be used in State institutions.

Mr. BLANTON. Most of the Federal prison output is used by the Government, especially in the Army and Navy. Our Government institutions use practically all the output of Atlanta, and all the output of Leavenworth every year.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROBSION].

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I introduced H. R. 11372, which requires prison-made goods shipped from one State to another to have printed on each article "prison made" and the name of the prison and place in which the goods were manufactured or processed.

The chief purpose of my bill is to make effective the enforcement of the Hawes-Cooper Act, enacted some years ago by a Republican Congress, and the amendment to that act, known as the Ashurst-Sumners amendment to Public Law No. 215, which became a law on July 24, 1935. The Hawes-Cooper Act prohibits the shipment of prison-made goods from one State to another in violation of that act. The Supreme Court has held that act to be constitutional. The Ashurst-Sumners amendment to the Hawes-Cooper Act of date July 24, 1935, amended the Hawes-Cooper Act and provided means for its enforcement in that the Ashurst-Sumners amendment requires the containers of goods shipped from one State to another State to have printed on the containers the words "prison-made" and the place and name of the prison where made or processed. This amendment was recently held constitutional by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The Ashurst-Sumners amendment, however, falls short of the requirements to make effective the enforcement of the Hawes-Cooper Act, because after the merchant or other person has received the goods and removed the goods from the container and places the overalls, furniture, stoves, and so forth on the floor or shelves, there is no way to know whether or not the goods are prison-made.

The bill that is before us, H. R. 11372, introduced by me in the House, is an amendment to the Ashurst-Sumners Act, and it requires the articles within the containers to be plainly and indelibly marked with the words "prison-made", together with the name of the penal or reformatory institution wherein they are produced. Without this provision, a container could be shipped from one State to another with a thousand or 2,000 pairs of overalls, another with that number or more of shirts, another with 5,000 pairs of shoes, or containers with furniture, stoves, and so forth. The buyer of these articles would, of course, remove the container, and there would be nothing left to inform the retail purchaser that the goods or articles were prison-made.

If the House and Senate adopt this amendment before us, each pair of overalls, shirts, pants, shoes, and each article of furniture, stoves, and so forth, will be marked on the articles themselves "prison made."

The purpose of this measure is to protect free labor from the low wages paid to prison contract labor. While the cheap clothing, furniture, shoes, and so forth, made in prison are not so considerable in amount, yet there is enough of them to break down the price of those produced on the outside by free labor. It takes away the employment of free labor and creates undue preference to merchants who handle prison-made goods over the merchants whose goods are manufactured and processed by free labor.

This measure, after mature consideration, was favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee, without a dissenting vote. It had the unanimous support of our Judiciary Committee, of which I have the honor to be a member. The American Federation of Labor of my home State as well as other States has strongly urged the passage of this bill. The United Mine Workers are likewise strongly in favor of this measure. The manufacturers of clothing, shoes, furniture, stoves, and so forth, which employ free labor at fair prices, and the merchants generally of this country have commended and urged the enactment of this bill. The only active opposition I have heard of to this measure is the prison contractors, many of whom have been exploiting prison labor and also many of whom through political pull and influence have obtained unconscionable contracts with very little pay to the prisoners themselves or to the State and with inordinate profits going to the prison contractors.

I am opposed to free labor being forced into competition with prison labor, and I am opposed to manufacturers and merchants who process and handle the products of free labor being handicapped with unfair competition of prison-made goods. [Applause.]

Mr. WOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. WOOD. If the labeling of prison-made goods will stop their sale upon the open market, I would like to have the gentleman explain to me why the labeling of German cutlery, which people used to buy when I was a boy, has not stopped its sale? The people in those days felt they would get a knife with better metal in it and at a cheaper price if that knife was made in Germany. It has not stopped the sale of foreign products.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. There has been a great change in the public opinion in our country since the time spoken of by my friends from Missouri. Congress has passed an act urging "Buy American." Our governmental agencies are and should insist that American goods and products be used in and on Government contracts. I am urging an amendment to a bill in the Judiciary Committee providing that no wages or salaries for services on any Government contract shall be paid to anyone who is not an American citizen.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] stated that he should like to see a bill passed requiring foreign goods and products labeled, showing the country and place from which they come. I have introduced a bill providing that it shall be an unfair business practice for any foreign country to ship any of its goods or products into this country without their being labeled, showing the country in which they were produced and from which they come. Under this administration's reciprocal-trade agreements, there is little hope of getting through any such measure.

Japan is flooding this country with her products of crockery, silks, and textiles. They come here and study the patterns of our crockeryware, and so forth, and find out what pleases the American people; then they go back to Japan and duplicate these articles; and with wages ranging from one-tenth to one-thirtieth of what is paid in this country, they are putting our factories and shops and workers out of business.

This amendment before us is very necessary, indeed, in order to secure the effective enforcement of the Hawes-Cooper and Ashurst-Sumners Acts, and I trust that it will be adopted. [Applause.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I shall not take more than 2 or 3 minutes. It is quite correct to say that we must have some means of keeping our prison population busy, but that does not mean that we ought to put those men to work manufacturing overalls, shoes, and what not, and then selling these articles to outside merchants at reduced prices, thereby putting those goods into commerce without any identification mark being put on them, and thus making it possible to foist these goods upon the public without the public knowing the origin of the merchandise. If the public purchases prison-made goods it should know they were manufactured in prisons and not by free labor.

Mr. Speaker, a lot has been said about labor being opposed to this bill. I, personally, pay very little attention to what group may be opposed to any particular legislation. I do know common sense when I meet it. A man named Roberts has been contacting various Members. I do not know who he is and I care less. I do know that some of the State federations of labor have been very much interested in this bill. I know, further, if we take the thousands of convicts in this country and let them make articles and put those articles into the commerce of this country without some mark of identification being inscribed upon them, we will beat down the price of labor.

Mr. TERRY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. TERRY. I hold a letter in my hand which I received from the secretary-treasurer of the Arkansas State Federation of Labor, reading as follows:

> May I earnestly request your support and active interest in behalf of H. R. 11372, now pending in Congress? And which provides that each article made in prison be indelibly labeled "prison made", together with the name and location of the institution.
> The passage of this bill will go a long way in solving the question of making State and Federal laws enforcible, and will materially assist private enterprise in their attempt to compete with cheap prison labor.
>
> Thanking you in advance for your support, I remain,
>
> Yours very truly,
> H. M. THACKREY.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I want to say this to the individual Members who are doing what they think is best for labor. You better not misconstrue this letter which has been received from the Arkansas State Federation of Labor, because it is the attitude of labor generally.

Mr. MORITZ. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MORITZ. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WOOD] is president of the Missouri State Federation of Labor, and he is against this bill.

Mr. MILLER. Yes; but may I ask what instructions has he had? I am looking at the matter from a common-sense standpoint.

Here is a factory on the outside manufacturing overalls, which institution pays its laborers a fair daily wage. There is a factory on the inside of the prison walls making overalls, which they can sell on the outside market for 50 cents. The factory on the outside, if it retains its wage scale, must sell their overalls for 65 or 75 cents. You cannot convince me that the man on the outside would be in favor of letting the product of that prison factory manned by convicts to come on the market without some label being put on it.

Mr. WOOD. Does the gentleman think there would be any advantage in marking the goods? There is now being made in the prisons more clothing and shoes than anything else. If the clothing and shoes were marked in some infinitesimal corner, would that have much effect?

Mr. MILLER. I think so.

Mr. WOOD. Does the gentleman think it would have any effect?

Mr. MILLER. I think so.

Mr. Speaker, many manufacturers, wholesalers, and merchants have written us letters. The question is asked, Who is behind the bill? As I said, I do not care who is behind the bill just so its provisions are in accordance with ordinary common sense. It so happens, however, that many reputable wholesalers and dealers are asking that the bill be passed.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I have received telegrams and letters from the American Federation of Labor, from Kentucky and various other States, urging the passage of this bill. The United Mine Workers strongly urge its passage. The only opposition I have heard of comes from the prison contractors.

Mr. MILLER. That is the only opposition there is to the bill. We do have some men operating factories on the outside of prisons who buy goods from the prison and mingle those goods in interstate commerce, and they are the ones who are opposed to the bill because they buy these cheap prison-made goods and sell them to an unsuspecting public who has no way of knowing the origin of the goods.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote on the motion.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Arkansas to suspend the rules and pass the bill, as amended.

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the House divided, and there were—ayes 58, noes 28.

So, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION SLUM-CLEARANCE AND LOW-COST HOUSING PROJECTS

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 3247.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 3247) to waive any exclusive jurisdiction over premises of Public Works Administration slum-clearance and low-cost housing projects, to authorize payments to State and political subdivisions in lieu of taxes on such premises, and for other purposes, as amended.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, this bill was on the Consent Calendar, being No. 859 on that calendar. It was objected to in the House. Is it possible that they can now come in and bring up this bill without unanimous consent? I shall demand a second, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 3247, as amended. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the acquisition by the United States of any real property heretofore or hereafter acquired in connection with any low-cost housing or slum-clearance project heretofore or hereafter constructed with funds allotted to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works pursuant to title II of the National Industry Recovery Act, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, or any other law, shall not be held to deprive any State or political subdivision thereof of its civil and criminal jurisdiction in and over such property, or to impair the civil rights under the local law of the tenants or inhabitants on such property; and insofar as any such jurisdiction has been taken away from any such State or subdivision, or any such rights have been impaired, jurisdiction over any such property is hereby ceded back to such State or subdivision.

SEC. 2. Upon the request of any State or political subdivision in which any such project has been or will be constructed, the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works is authorized to enter into an agreement, and to consent to the renewal or alteration thereof, with such State or subdivision for the payment by the United States of sums in lieu of taxes. Such sums shall be fixed in such agreement and shall be based upon the cost of the public or municipal services to be supplied for the benefit of such project or the persons residing on or occupying such premises, but taking into consideration the benefits to be derived by such States or subdivision from such project. The aggregate of sums payable under such agreements in any year in respect of any project shall not exceed whichever of the following amounts is the greater:

(a) Five percent of the gross rentals of the project for such year; or

(b) The total amount of real-property taxes levied by such State and its subdivisions upon the site (including improvements) of the project for the last tax year which expired prior to the acquisition of such site by the United States.

SEC. 3. Such payments in lieu of taxes, and any other expenditures for operation and maintenance (including insurance) of any low-cost housing or slum-clearance project described in section 1, shall be made out of the receipts derived from the operation of such projects. To provide for such payments and expenditures the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works is authorized from time to time to retain out of such receipts such sums as he may estimate to be necessary for such purposes.

SEC. 4. In the operation of any slum-clearance of low-cost housing project described in section 1, the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works is authorized to fix the rents at such rates as he shall determine to be necessary in order to make such project available to those families in the community who are unable to pay enough rent to induce private enterprise to supply adequate, safe, and sanitary housing, notwithstanding that the rental rates so fixed may not provide for repayment in full of the funds expended in connection with the project.

SEC. 5. In connection with any low-cost housing or slum-clearance project described in section 1, the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works, with the approval of the President, is authorized to dedicate streets, alleys, and parks for public use, and to grant easements.

Amend the title so as to read: "An act to waive any exclusive jurisdiction over premises of Public Works Administration slum-clearance and low-cost housing projects, to authorize payments to States and political subdivisions in lieu of taxes on such premises, and for other purposes."

Mr. McCORMACK (interrupting the reading of the bill). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, that should never be done on a motion to suspend the rules. Under a motion to suspend the rules, the bill ought to be read, as the House ought to know what it is doing; and I object.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I think the Members of the House ought to hear what we have to say about this bill; and I therefore make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and twenty-one Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

On motion of Mr. VINSON of Georgia, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, several Members who are interested in solving this problem of the Federal Government paying at least a reasonable amount of the rentals derived from low-cost housing projects, presented bills which were considered by the Ways and Means Committee. A similar bill introduced in the Senate by Senator GEORGE was presented to the committee and the committee merged the three bills before us with such amendments as would give the municipalities a certain amount of the revenue derived from such low-cost housing projects without at the same time destroying the original intent and purpose of this administration.

Perhaps the most important part of the bill is to be found on page 4, beginning in line 21, which states:

The aggregate of sums payable under such agreements in any year in respect of any project shall not exceed whichever of the following amounts is the greater:

(a) Five percent of the gross rentals of the project for such year; or

(b) The total amount of real-property taxes levied by such State and its subdivisions upon the site (including improvements) of the project for the last tax year which expired prior to the acquisition of such site by the United States.

The committee feels it is only just and proper that the municipality should receive a reasonable amount of compensation for rendering sanitary services, public lighting, sewer service, giving police and fire protection, and for various other municipal services, and this is about the entire matter involved.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield.

Mr. McLEAN. Do I understand it is the object and the purpose of the Federal Government to run all of these low-cost-housing propositions at a loss?

Mr. DINGELL. I would not say at a loss; but, certainly, it is not intended that the amount charged for rentals should be so high as to wreck the entire plan and deprive those for whom the plan was devised of low-rental housing.

Mr. McLEAN. If the gentleman will yield further, as I understand the report——

Mr. DINGELL. If the gentleman will read the last three or four paragraphs on page 4 of the report, he will find that that explains the entire matter, and he can forget the entire report.

Mr. McLEAN. I am reading from the report——

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman has 20 minutes on his side, and I would prefer that he use it for that purpose.

I want to point out that in addition to the question referred to there is also the question of civil jurisdiction and criminal jurisdiction of the municipality. There are some of us who had some doubts on this point. We believed that, perhaps, unless the Congress by law ceded back such rights there would be the question in the minds of the municipal and State authorities that this is in fact a reservation of the Federal Government and that the municipality or State does not have any criminal or civil jurisdiction.

There are various other features of the bill that will be explained by those who are to follow me.

Mr. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I cannot yield.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McLEAN].

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, this is the first time that this act has come to my attention, and I have not had much time to study the situation. As I read the report of the committee, it is perfecly apparent from page 3 that the object of this bill is to confer power on the Administrator of the Housing Authority to rent these low-cost houses at a low price and to give him the power to rent these houses at a less amount than would cover the cost of maintenance and have the Government make up the balance.

That is another illustration of where you vest power in individuals to experiment with idealistic dreams, allow them to make their own rules and regulations, create their own statutory law, and to proceed just as they please to spend unlimited amounts of money without any direction from Congress.

It now develops just as we have seen in a number of instances, as we have seen in the case of organizations created under the laws of the State of Delaware, as we now see in these housing operations, as we have seen in the Tennessee Valley, that Congress cannot estimate and does not know what the cost of all these things to the Government is going to be in the years to come.

If we say to the Federal Housing Authority, "Go ahead and rent these houses for whatever you can get and we will make up the deficit", we will have an annually recurring liability until this whole business is unscrambled.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McLEAN. I yield.

Mr. RAMSPECK. How does the gentleman reach the conclusion that we will have to appropriate money to pay these taxes?

Mr. McLEAN. Well, the majority report says:

> The Comptroller General of the United States in an opinion dated January 17, 1936 (15 Ops. Comp. Gen. 619), held that the Administrator has no authority to fix rents on such projects at rates which would not be high enough to produce a fair return on costs of the project. Such a legal inhibition on the Administrator in the operation of such projects will tend to defeat the very objectives of the low-cost housing program and increase opposition on the part of private capital engaged in housing construction. For that reason the bill provides that the Administrator may fix rents at such rates as may be necessary in order to make the projects available to those families in the community who are unable to pay enough rent to induce private enterprise to supply adequate, safe, and sanitary housing. This will remove the danger that such housing operations are only in lieu of operations by private enterprise and will enable the main objective of the housing program under the Public Works Administration to be attained.

The idea of this housing, as I understand it, just as the idea of many of these operations, is to provide a yardstick in respect to rental, in order to compel landlords to rent properties at reasonable rates. How can you have a yardstick if you are merely renting the property for what you can get and the Federal Government is chipping in with the balance, whatever may be necessary?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey has expired.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Michigan yield some time now?

Mr. DINGELL. I have not anybody at present who desires to speak on the bill.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes and ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman from Michigan says that he has nobody that wants time on this bill.

Mr. DINGELL. Oh, that is not what I said.

Mr. RICH. If I were on his side of the House, I would not want to use any time either in talking for this bill, it is so bad. I do not see how anybody can talk for this bill, when you take into consideration that it is merely now trying to plug up some of the holes that you made when you passed the bill creating the N. I. R. A., which the Supreme Court kicked out of the window. We want now to turn over what is left of the things that happened during the life of the N. I. R. A. to the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. You all know how many of the great cities came to the Administration and asked it to clear their slums and build cheap housing quarters. That sounds good, and it might be a mighty fine thing to build houses in some sections of the country where they have dreadful conditions, but the cities came to the Federal Administration and said, "We want great, large buildings constructed here; we want to take all of this property to build these great institutions on, so that we can improve conditions in our own communities building expensive apartments." The Federal Government under Executive order saw fit to go ahead in these communities and build these properties.

What is the result? These same people came to the Federal Government and said, "We want you to pay a sum to our municipality for the property you have taken over; we want you to pay in one of two ways, either 5 percent of the gross revenue that is taken in on the property or an amount equal to the taxes previously paid before we constructed the building. You have given the Administrator the power to his agent to construct buildings as he deemed fit and proper. You have had no say as to what kind of buildings he was going to construct. You said nothing with reference to where these buildings should be placed, and they are coming here now and asking you to pay the cities for helping them by building fine buildings. Are you going back to Iowa, are you going back to Kansas, are you going back to Pennsylvania, to Connecticut, or any rural farming district and say to your people, "We want to tax you more to pay for the things we did in New York City in constructing these buildings; I want to tax you for the buildings we constructed in Atlanta, Ga., for the buildings we built in Boston"? That is what you are coming in here for now. That is the idea of trying to help out these cities that requested the Federal Government to spend this money for the purpose of housing, with which you have had nothing to do in the kind of building or the location—a great blunder by the administration.

Now they see their plight and want Congress again to come to their rescue by again spending more of the taxpayers' money.

Oh, but the taxpayers will call you to account in November.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. RUSSELL].

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. Speaker, of necessity I must be brief in discussing this Federal housing bill. I shall take up only two of the most important aspects of the bill.

One part of the bill provides for the release of Federal jurisdiction over the property, so as to put the burden and responsibility of policing and fire protection, and that sort of thing, on the local cities in which these housing projects have been built.

The other aspect of the bill I want to discuss is a provision for service charges to be paid to cities in which housing projects are located by the Federal Government in lieu of taxes that will be lost on this property unless such provision is enacted into law.

I am particularly familiar with the local situation in the city of Cambridge, Mass., where there is a low-cost housing project, because for 6 years I was mayor of that city. We have a population of about 120,000 people. We have taxable property to the extent of $180,000,000. We have nontaxable property in that city to the extent of $245,000,000. In other words, with $180,000,000 of taxable property we have to raise the money with which to protect $425,000,000 of property and furnish all the other city services required. I believe the chief objection raised to these housing projects will be removed if the communities are compensated to this very small extent for the loss of taxable property that would otherwise occur. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH], I think, would like to be corrected. He was in error when he said the bill provided for the payment to cities of 5 percent of the gross rental payments or the taxes levied on the property the year prior to Government acquisition—no more, no less. That is not true.

It provides that the service charges shall not exceed whichever one of these amounts is the greater, and is to be based on what the actual cost of the services to the community are.

Mr. RICH. I took my figures from the report.

Mr. RUSSELL. If the gentleman will read the bill, he will see he is in error in that statement. The actual language of the bill is to the effect that—

> The aggregate of sums payable under such agreements in any year in respect of any project shall not exceed whichever of the following amounts is the greater: (a) Five percent of the gross rentals of the project for such year; or (b) the total amount of real property taxes levied by such State and its subdivisions upon the site of the project for the last tax year, which expired prior to the acquisition of such site by the United States.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. And prior to that it says:

> Such sums shall be fixed in such agreement and shall be based upon the cost of the public or municipal services to be supplied for the benefit of such project or the persons residing on or occupying such premises, but taking into consideration the benefits to be derived by such State or subdivision from such project.

Mr. RUSSELL. I may say in closing that if this bill is enacted into law, it will remove to a large extent the objection frequently heard that the Government is competing unfairly with private property through the construction of these low-cost housing projects.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I believe there is considerable interest on the part of the membership of the House in the provisions of this bill. I want to say at the outset that I was not in sympathy with the Federal Government going into the housing business, this so-called slum-clearance business. It seemed to me that logically it was a State matter, that the States were abundantly able to take care of it; but the Federal Government has gone into it, and there are some 39 of these housing projects in various parts of the country. They are very widely distributed. One hundred and twenty-eight million dollars has been set aside to carry on the housing or slum-clearance program. As I say, they extend from one end of this country to the other. You will find them in Schenectady, Buffalo, Boston, Cambridge, Atlanta, Ga., Dallas, Tex., Oklahoma, or wherever cities have made application for the removal of these slum areas, under the procedure laid down by the Public Works Administration.

A large number of applications have been made by cities and if they are all carried out it will cost the Government something like $200,000,000. After these slum-clearance projects are accepted by the Federal Government it takes property out of the taxable area of the locality. The cities feel that to deprive them of the tax revenue is unfair. They have to furnish all the services that a municipality would ordinarily furnish to residents of a locality, and they are asking from the Federal Government something in lieu of the taxes of which they have been and will be deprived. I cannot help but feel that there is some fairness in the application for relief. It puts a tremendous load on some of the communities, although they are guilty of appealing to the Government to take over the property. They came here and asked the Federal Government to clear slums and erect buildings, but now they find it places a very heavy tax burden upon them, because it means the opening up of alleys, the putting in of sewage systems, the taking care of the garbage, the lighting systems, and various other municipal services.

The question is whether we are going to go on and take the next step and reimburse them for the loss suffered as a result of removing large areas from the local tax roll.

When this bill was under consideration by the Ways and Means Committee I had my doubts as to the wisdom of establishing such a precedent, as my questions all the way through the printed hearings will indicate. I tried to point out that the first thing that would happen would be that when we started to pay something in lieu of taxes to these communities where the housing program was in operation, we soon would have other groups where there was Government-owned property in their locality making the same request. I pointed out in connection with some of these buildings, that if the Government decided to build playgrounds and swimming pools and take more property out of taxation the cities would be here asking for something in lieu of taxes.

Some advocates of this bill took issue with me on that point before the committee. They said, "Oh, no; the cities will not be here making any such request"; but this very day there was to be a hearing on a bill which has been introduced, asking that the Government pay something in lieu of taxes wherever resettlement projects are located. I must confess that that jarred my interest in this bill very much, yet I want to be fair and I want to be just to those cities which have slum-clearance projects. While there are none of these developments in my district, there are some communities not very far from it where these Government houses are under construction. If we vote against this bill we will simply punish those communities. I think, in view of the justice of the thing, I probably shall go along on this bill, but I do warn the Members that this other bill is coming right along on the heels of this one. Where it is going to end I am not sure. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED] has expired.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK].

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, there are plenty of precedents for what this bill does. I can discuss in 2 minutes very little, but in the Tennessee Valley Act we gave 5 percent of the gross receipts to Alabama and Tennessee. This is revenue-producing property, and therefore the Government ought to pay something in lieu of taxes.

With reference to the question of fixing the rents:

We all know that the Government has loaned money to cities and to nondividend corporations for housing projects under this program where they made a grant of 45 percent. The purpose of this legislation is to offset part of the cost just like we would make a grant to a city or to a nonprofit corporation for low-cost housing projects so that the rents may be brought down to a point such as will serve the purpose for which the buildings were erected. In my own city, where one of these projects exists, if this is not done the rents will be so high that the property must be rented to people who are able to rent anything they want anyway, and it will not serve the purpose intended.

It is of no use for us here to discuss whether we ought to be in this business or not; we are in it and we have to meet these problems. If we do not pay something in lieu of taxes, the cities will not furnish police and fire protection and school facilities to these projects; so we have to meet it. I think we might just as well face the music and take this bill, which has been carefully worked out by the Committee on Ways and Means. It safeguards the interest of the Government.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CROWTHER].

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me we are making a mountain out of a molehill in this discussion. The committee had brought to their attention the project in Atlanta and another project in Cambridge where legislation of this sort is desirable. I am not in favor of the housing proposition generally. I think it is an unusual thing to establish a Government reservation right in the middle of a municipality. I am not in favor of that at all, but we are in that business now; that water has gone over the dam and this bill is for the protection of municipalities that are involved in these projects at this time. They are entitled to some return for services they render to these projects, and they ought not to be compelled to lose the taxes while at the same time they are forced to supply the services.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROWTHER. I have only 2 minutes; I cannot yield.

Mr. Speaker, I do not see any objection to the bill. As I say, we are not discussing the merits of the housing proposition, slum clearance, or anything of the sort. If we are going to be fair to the municipalities involved, we must pass a bill along these lines. This bill gives the Federal Government the alternative of paying either 5 percent of the gross rentals of the project for a year, or the total amount of real property taxes levied by such State and its subdivisions upon the site, including improvements, of the project for the last tax year which expired prior to the acquisition of such site by the United States. This sum is in lieu of taxes. It seems to me, therefore, this bill is absolutely fair to the municipalities.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD].

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, it is asserted that it is of no use to discuss this matter; that we are in it and hence it is too late to argue about it. But is it? The very first words of this bill state:

That the acquisition by the United States of any real property heretofore or hereafter acquired shall come under this provision.

This is a monumental example of governmental blundering in social planning. Certainly anybody ought to have foreseen what would happen. I wish that the gentleman from Cambridge could take half an hour and explain to you from the beginning the slum clearance or the low-cost housing project as it went along in its early days in the city of Cambridge, Mass. Low-cost hausing projects. Has there ever been any really low-cost project? The prices paid for lands and the cost to the Government of erecting these houses have proven anything but a low-cost proposition. Have you read of any that have not cost altogether more than private industry could have done the same thing for? Did you not know in the beginning that you were to be renting in competition with private industry? Is it not even against the Constitution that you should do this for selected privileged communities? The language of such an act should be general; that all communities which comply with the specifications should be entitled to equal consideration.

I spoke on the floor one day of a certain little city where there were no slums, but which, nevertheless, was granted a large amount of money for a low-cost housing project. Political influence. Governmental interference. And we all know it. But we are in it, you say. I agree that it is fair to try to get out of it in those places where it already has been permitted to exist. But the bill contains the word "hereafter", and there is no chance to amend it under the suspension of the rules.

I shall not cast my vote in the way of approval of this, even to correct this monstrous error. In the bill you permit rentals at any price in order to compete with private industry. Think what can be done with this free rein permitted for rental charges.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes, if the gentleman can help me.

Mr. COX. Gentlemen discussing this bill have said the adoption of the proposal is necessary in order to do justice to the city.

Mr. GIFFORD. One of those who have discussed this matter said they should have police protection, they should have schools, they should have fire protection, and all that. Do the cities have to give them this service if they do not wish to do so?

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman permit me to complete my question, because I am agreeing with him in opposing this bill? They speak of the injustice that would result to municipalities wherein these activities are being maintained. Did not the Government come in and make these improvements upon the urge of these various communities and with knowledge on their part of the fact that this property would not be subject to taxation?

Mr. GIFFORD. The present Government has done many futile things, and I presume that I am regarded as a part of the Government. If there is anything I can possibly do to make it desist from doing more of these things, my vote will be cast that way. I would rather have them remain as they are, a monument to the stupidity of their sponsors, than vote a continuance. There is a real principle involved here.

Mr. COX. What is the difference between taxing this type of Government property and taxing a post office, for instance?

Mr. GIFFORD. They apparently cannot tax this property under the Constitution, and this is merely an effort to circumvent the Constitution. They must need receive the municipal benefits in order to get tenants. They find now they cannot get tenants. It is impossible to believe that those behind these Government projects could not have known that these complications would necessarily follow and have planned for them in advance. It was the uppermost in stupidity to have gone so far before it dawned upon them that this condition would prevail. However, it is like many other things that the Executive has embarked upon and is now demanding of the Congress that we rescue it from the various messes into which it has gotten, by following the advice of these social planners. [Applause.]

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY].

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, in the brief time allotted me I shall discuss only two of the principal features of this bill.

I shall first consider the authorization for the payment of service charges in lieu of taxation. I do not believe that many Members of the House feel we ought to impose upon the cities already overburdened the necessity of furnishing schools, police and fire protection, and the other necessary services to the people who will occupy these developments without some compensatory return from the owner of the premises.

The project in Cambridge, Mass., will occupy an area in that city of some 7 acres. That is a large area in a city as congested as Cambridge, which already suffers from the fact that about a third of its entire area is occupied by educational and eleemosynary institutions, which are, of course, tax-exempt.

While, in my opinion, these slum-clearance projects will confer many benefits upon the cities in which they are located, nevertheless, the fact remains that they are taking out of taxation considerable areas. The cities merely desire a fair return for the services which they must of necessity render to the occupants of these premises in common with all other inhabitants.

I shall next discuss the provision that will permit the administrator to fix rents at such rates as may be necessary in order to make the projects available to those families in the community who are unable to pay enough rent to induce private enterprise to supply adequate, safe, and sanitary housing.

The opinion of the Comptroller General holds that the rentals must be fixed at rates which will yield a fair return on the costs of the project. Referring to the project located at Atlanta, which is now completed and ready to rent, I am reliably informed there will be required a rental charge of approximately $9 per room under this ruling of the Comptroller General.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the Members to consider this seriously. We started out to benefit the people who resided in the slum areas. A family consisting of a man, his wife, and five children would necessarily require a five-room apartment because the regulations require that only two persons may occupy each sleeping room. Of course, two of the rooms must be used for other than sleeping quarters, such as a living room and kitchen. This would necessitate a rental of between $45 and $50 per month to accommodate such a family.

A person, in order to occupy such an apartment, would have to have an annual income of $2,000 or more. It is manifest that under such circumstances the low-cost housing program would fail to accomplish its fundamental objective.

Practically all European countries have for many years past subsidized projects of a similar nature. By our partial subsidizing of these projects we are coping with the proven needs of a modern social problem.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of the time to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York, my good friend [Mr. CROWTHER], very properly stated the present situation. He stated that so far as we are concerned today that the opposition is making a mountain out of a molehill. He has frankly stated that so far as the original proposition is concerned, that is water over the dam. I take issue with no man today, and so far as this bill is concerned, who opposed the original appropriation, or who will oppose appropriations in the future for these purposes. But this bill has no relationship to that matter.

This bill is a simple proposition. First, it provides that in the thirty-odd cities where these projects are located, and two of them are located in the city represented by the distinguished Speaker of this House, the Federal Government shall pay a small amount of money in lieu of taxes. My friend, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX], asked certain questions. We have a precedent for this. The Tennessee Valley Authority pays a certain percentage in lieu of taxes to certain States of the Union in which that activity is located. So we have a precedent.

Mr. Speaker, this is not the case of purchasing property to be used strictly for public purposes. No one has the idea of getting the Federal Government to pay taxes in lieu of service charges to cities and municipalities on property used strictly for a public use. I agree with anyone who says this is not a project dedicated to a public use. However, I favor such legislation. It grows out of the emergency, and whether one agrees with it or not it is a condition and not a theory. It is entirely different from the Federal Government carrying out the express purposes conferred upon it by the Constitution.

There is one other aspect. When these projects were started, it was intended that rent should be charged upon the basis of a 45-percent grant.

The purpose of this bill is to let rents be charged upon the theory that a 45-percent grant has been made. Comptroller General McCarl has properly ruled in accordance with the existing law that the rental charged must be upon the complete money outlaid, while this bill will permit the 45-percent grant to be taken into consideration in the establishment of the rental.

These two propositions, I respectfully submit, look at the conditions as they exist today. It is a reasonable and fair bill to meet those conditions.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Michigan to suspend the rules and pass the bill as amended.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RICH) there were—ayes 119, noes 32.

So two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

VETO MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—NAVAL AIR STATION, MIAMI, FLA. (H. DOC. NO. 500)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following veto message of the President of the United States:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 8372, entitled "An act to authorize the acquisition of lands in the vicinity of Miami, Fla., as a site for a naval air station and to authorize the construction and installation of a naval air station thereon."

Section 1 of this bill would authorize the Secretary of the Navy to accept, on behalf of the United States, free from encumbrances and without cost to the United States, the title in fee simple to approximately 650 acres of land on North Biscayne Bay in the vicinity of Miami, Fla., as a site for a naval air station, subject to the provision that if such lands are accepted but not used for such purpose within 10 years they shall be returned to the grantor. Section 2 would authorize the construction and development necessary to establish a complete air station on the site, and section 3 would authorize the appropriation of the amounts necessary to carry out the purpose of the bill, estimated to aggregate $5,000,000, exclusive of annual expenditures for maintenance and operation.

The record of the hearings on this bill before the Naval Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives shows that it is the opinion of the Navy Department that it has no need for this land in time of peace, although it might be needed in time of war. The hearings further show that in the event of an emergency an air station at this place would probably be used more as an auxiliary pilot-training center than for strategic purposes. It is indicated that the city of Miami proposes to sell its bonds to secure funds with which to purchase the lands in reference, at a cost in excess of $300,000, in order that the lands may be donated to the United States. Should the United States accept such lands under these conditions, the local tax burden would be increased, due to the exemption of such lands from taxation. In addition, the local tax rate would have to be increased in order to meet the amortization and interest on the bonds. The citizens and officials of this city can expect no benefits to compensate them for the financial burden to be undertaken in this case, unless the Federal Government, in accepting these lands as a gift also accepts the moral obligation of developing the site as an air station and assigning thereto the necessary administrative and training personnel to place it in active operation. If the Government does not need these lands for use as a naval air station now, or in time of peace, it should not accept such lands and hold them without development for the period of 10 years, as would be permitted under the bill. On the other hand, the Government should not use the tax money of all the people of the United States for the development of a plant not needed at this time just because the citizens of Miami are willing to donate the site.

In view of the foregoing, and especially the opinion of the Navy Department that it has no need for this land in time of peace, I do not feel that I would be justified in giving my approval to this legislation.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 1, 1936.

The SPEAKER. The objections of the President will be spread at large upon the Journal.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the message and the bill be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs and ordered printed.

The motion was agreed to.

VESSEL FOR PACIFIC OCEAN FISHERIES RESEARCH WORK

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 3989) to provide for the construction and operation of a vessel for use in research work with respect to Pacific Ocean fisheries.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when funds are made available as authorized by section 2 of this act, the Secretary of Commerce is authorized and directed (1) to cause plans and specifications to be prepared for the construction and equipment of a vessel for use in such research work with respect to Pacific Ocean fisheries as the Secretary finds will be useful to persons engaged in the fishing industry; and (2) to contract for the construction and equipment of such vessel. Such vessel shall be maintained and operated under the supervision of the Secretary of Commerce.

SEC. 2. There is authorized to be appropriated $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the purposes of the first sentence of section 1 of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, if there is no one else seeking recognition, I demand a second.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I desire to take as little time as possible. I shall try to explain the bill and reserve the balance of my time for gentlemen from the Pacific coast.

The purpose of the bill is to authorize the construction of a fishery research vessel on the Pacific coast. There was such a bill passed for the Atlantic coast a few years ago. The vessel has not been provided, but the situation is such that we believe there should be a vessel that can be used for the purpose of making a scientific research of the fisheries in the Pacific Ocean. Serious question has arisen from time to time with respect to the salmon industry, the pilchard industry, and also the tuna as to their depletion.

The only way in which the Bureau of Fisheries can collect the information is by a scientific study of the migration of the fish and the effect of the fishing operations.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. MAPES. I asked for a second, because at the moment I did not see any minority of the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries on the floor. Is this a unanimous report by the Committee?

Mr. BLAND. Yes; it is.

The Commissioner of Fisheries states:

The salmon fisheries of the Pacific coast and Alaska are the greatest in the world, producing in 1932, 528,626,000 pounds, for which the fishermen received $8,160,000, ranking first in quantity and first in value among the Nation's fisheries. Second in national rank in quantity of production is the pilchard fishery, yielding 312,171,000 pounds, for which the fishermen received $825,000. Next in rank on the Pacific coast and sixth in rank for the entire country is the tuna fishery, producing 63,431,000 pounds, for which the fishermen received $2,406,000.

I call attention also to the fact that other nations of the world have found it necessary to have these research vessels in order to know the habits and the movements of the fish. Great Britain has five research vessels, Scotland three, Ireland one, Egypt one, South Africa one, Norway two, Sweden one, Denmark three, Persia three, Germany two, Belgium one, France three, Portugal one, and Japan one.

The salmon, the tuna, and the pilchard fisheries are so important that it is necessary that there should be a scientific research to know whether depletion is going on or not, in addition to studying the habits and movements of these fish.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. RICH. What is it going to cost the Federal Government to construct this vessel and make this research?

Mr. BLAND. The authorization for the construction of the vessel is $500,000, and it is stated that the vessel can be constructed within the authorization. The annual cost will be about $70,400 per year.

Mr. RICH. I may say to the gentleman from Virginia that the Democratic administration is running true to form in every bill that comes up. If it is not spending billions, it is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars, each minute going further and further into debt to have your children pay the bill. You are wrecking their future and that of the Nation.

I want to say to you men on that side of the House, and I have said it to you time and time again, and I ask you now, where are you going to get the money? [Laughter and applause.] The people in your district this fall will mete out to you what you rightfully deserve.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH].

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, this bill was reported unanimously by the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. As the chairman of the committee [Mr. BLAND] has stated, this country has but one of these vessels. It is the only large maritime country that depends a good deal on its God-given food supply which has not provided ample conservation for its fish industry.

This bill will provide for another ship to operate on the Pacific coast, where our entire fisheries have become endangered. It will also assist in rehabilitating our entire fish supply, and I sincerely hope there will be no objection to its passage. [Applause.]

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. COLDEN].

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, this bill pertains to the stabilization of a staple food of the United States. The fishing industry on the Pacific coast amounts to something like $50,000,000 a year in the production of a valuable food.

A serious controversy has arisen on the Pacific coast as to whether or not we are depleting the salmon, pilchard, or sardines, and tuna fish. We have spent millions of dollars to protect the livestock industry in this country, we have spent millions of dollars for the protection of corn, wheat, cotton, and other products. We have spent millions of dollars to protect and develop industry, and fishing is one of the important industries in this country.

Forty-six percent of the fish production in this country is located on the Pacific coast.

This bill has been passed by the Senate, reported unanimously by the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, and it has also the endorsement of the Bureau of Fisheries. I ask your support for the bill. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

FLORIDA HURRICANE RELIEF, WORLD WAR VETERANS, ETC.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 12869, to liberalize the provisions of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, to effect uniform provisions in laws administered by the Veterans' Administration, to extend the Employees' Compensation Act with limitations to certain World War veterans and other persons, and for other purposes, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.,

TITLE I—WORLD WAR WIDOWS AND CHILDREN

SECTION 1. That notwithstanding the provisions of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, secs. 503–507), in no event shall the widow, child, or children otherwise entitled to compensation under the provisions of that act be denied such compensation if the veteran's death resulted from a disease or disability not service connected, and at the time of the veteran's death he was receiving or entitled to receive compensation, pension, or retirement pay for 30-percent disability or more presumptively or directly incurred in or aggravated by service in the World War: Provided, That compensation as provided by this section shall not be payable effective prior to the receipt of application therefor in the Veterans' Administration in such form as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe and in no event prior to the date of enactment of this act.

TITLE II—AGENTS AND ATTORNEYS

SEC. 200. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is hereby authorized to recognize representatives of the American National Red Cross, the American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and such other organizations as he shall approve, in the presentation of claims under statutes administered by the Veterans' Administration. However, no such representative shall be recognized until a certificate has been filed in the Veterans' Administration, under such rules as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, certifying that no fee or compensation of whatsoever nature shall be charged veterans or the dependents of veterans for service rendered. The rules prescribed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall contain a provision requiring in each claim the filing of a power of attorney in such manner and form as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is further authorized in his discretion, under such regulations as he may prescribe, to recognize any person for the purpose of a particular claim under the conditions and limitations of this section.

SEC. 201. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is hereby authorized, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to recognize agents and attorneys in the preparation, presentation, and prosecution of claims under statutes administered by the Veterans' Administration. The rules and regulations prescribed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may require of such agents and attorneys, before being recognized as representatives of claimants, that they shall show that they are of good moral character and in good repute, possessed of the necessary qualifications to enable them to render such claimants valuable service, and otherwise competent to advise and assist such claimants in the presentation of claims; and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, suspend or exclude from further practice before the Veterans' Administration any such agent or attorney shown to be, or to have been, engaged in unlawful, unprofessional, or dishonest practice, or guilty of disreputable conduct or who is incompetent, or who has violated or refused to comply with the laws administered by the Veterans' Administration, or with the laws, regulations, or instructions governing practice before the Veterans' Administration, or who shall in any manner deceive, mislead, or threaten any claimant or prospective claimant by word, circular, letter, or advertisement. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is further authorized to determine and pay fees in allowed claims for monetary benefits under statutes administered by the Veterans' Administration to agents and attorneys recognized as provided in this title and to prescribe rules and regulations governing entitlement to and the amount and mode of payment of such fees: Provided, That payment of such fees shall not exceed $10 in any one claim, and in all cases fees shall be deducted from the amount of monetary benefits allowed.

SEC. 202. Any person who shall, directly or indirectly, solicit, contract for, charge, or receive, or who shall attempt to solicit, contract for, charge, or receive any fee or compensation except as provided in section 201, or who shall wrongfully withhold from a beneficiary or claimant the whole or any part of the benefit or claim allowed and due a beneficiary or claimant shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall for every offense be fined not exceeding $500 or imprisoned at hard labor not exceeding 2 years, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 203. This title shall not affect that part of section 500, World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended (43 Stat. 628; 43 Stat. 1311; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, sec. 551), insofar as it pertains to fees and penalties for receipt of illegal fees or compensation for services in insurance suits, section 309, World War Adjusted Compensation Act, 1924, as amended (43 Stat. 125; 44 Stat. 828; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, sec. 619), pertaining to unlawful fees, which section is hereby made applicable to claims for benefits under Public Law No. 425, Seventy-fourth Congress, enacted January 27, 1936; that part of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. 979; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, sec. 244), prohibiting payment of a fee in case of commutation in lieu of an artificial limb; that part of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909, and for other purposes", approved May 28, 1908 (35 Stat. 419; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, sec. 113), prohibiting compensation for procuring pension legislation, or any acts or parts of acts prohibiting the payment of fees in claims for benefits administered by the Veterans' Administration. Except as herein provided, all acts or veterans' regulations, or parts thereof, pertaining to recognition of organizations or recognition of or payment of fees to agents, attorneys, or other persons, for the preparation, presentation, or prosecution of claims for benefits administered by the Veterans' Administration are hereby repealed.

TITLE III—AUTHORITY TO ISSUE SUBPENA, MAKE INVESTIGATIONS, AND ADMINISTER OATHS

SEC. 300. For the purposes of the laws administered by the Veterans' Administration, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, and those employees to whom the Administrator may delegate such authority, to the extent of the authority so delegated, shall have the power to issue subpenas for and compel the attendance of witnesses within a radius of 100 miles from the place of hearing, to require the production of books, papers, documents, and other evidence, to take affidavits, to administer oaths and affirmations, to aid claimants in the preparation and presentation of claims, and to make investigations and examine witnesses upon any matter within the jurisdiction of the Administration. Any person required by such subpena to attend as a witness shall be allowed and paid the same fees and mileage as are paid witnesses in the district courts of the United States.

SEC. 301. Any such oath, affirmation, affidavit, or examination, when certified under the hand of any such employee by whom it was administered or taken and authenticated by the seal of the Veterans' Administration, may be offered or used in any court of the United States and without further proof of the identity or authority of such employee shall have like force and effect as if administered or taken before a clerk of such court.

SEC. 302. In case of disobedience to any such subpena, the aid of any district court of the United States or the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia may be invoked in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence, and such court within the jurisdiction of which the inquiry is carried on may, in case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpena issued to any officer, agent, or employee of any corporation or to any other person, issue an order requiring such corporation or other person to appear or to give evidence touching the matter in question; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

SEC. 303. Section 8 of the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended (43 Stat. 609; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, secs. 431 and 432); paragraph XX of Veterans' Regulation No. 10 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, ch. 12, appendix); section 474 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, sec. 121); section 4744 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, sec. 121); section 3 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883, and for other purposes", approved July 25, 1882 (22 Stat. 175; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, sec. 124), and section 3 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. 1085; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, sec. 122), are hereby repealed; and any other acts or Veterans' Regulations, or parts of acts or Veterans' Regulations, in conflict or inconsistent with the provisions of this title, are hereby repealed to the extent of such conflict or inconsistency.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 400. Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 201 and 202 of the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, secs. 472, 475), the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized to discontinue the annual determination of dependency, but nothing herein contained shall prevent the Administrator from requiring submission of such proof of dependency as he, in his discretion, may at any time deem necessary.

SEC. 401. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph II, Veterans' Regulations No. 9 (a), as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, ch. 12, appendix), burial and funeral expenses and transportation of the body (including preparation of the body) to the place of burial shall not be denied by reason of the veteran's net assets at the time of death.

SEC. 402. Effective March 31, 1933, paragraph IV, Veterans' Regulation No. 9 (a), as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"IV. Claims for reimbursement must be filed within 1 year subsequent to the date of burial of the veteran. In the event the claimant's application is not complete at the time of original submission, the Veterans' Administration will notify the claimant of the evidence necessary to complete the application and if such evidence is not received within 1 year from the date of the request therefor no allowance may be paid."

SEC. 403. In determining "annual income" under the provisions of paragraph II (a), part III, Veterans' Regulation No. 1 (a), as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, ch. 12, appendix), payments of war-risk term insurance, United States Government life (converted) insurance, and payments under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, ch. 11), and the Adjusted Compensation Payment Act, 1936 (Public Law No. 425, 74th Cong., enacted Jan. 7, 1936), shall not be considered.

SEC. 404. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is hereby authorized to purchase uniforms and to furnish them to such nonprofessional personnel employed at field stations of the Veterans' Administration under such conditions as he may deem necessary and proper.

SEC. 405. Payment may be made for official telephone service installed in the quarters provided for employees of the Veterans' Administration on Government reservations when authorized under regulations prescribed by the Administrator.

TITLE V—FLORIDA HURRICANE RELIEF FOR WORLD WAR VETERANS AND OTHER PERSONS

SEC. 500. That the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes", approved September 7, 1916, as amended (U. S. C., 1934, ed., title 5, ch. 15), are hereby made applicable to any veteran of the World War or other person attached to camps known as Veterans' Camps Nos. 1, 3, and 5, who was injured, died, or shall die as the direct result of the hurricane at Windlys Island and Matecumbe Keys, Fla., September 2, 1935, and to their dependents, to the same extent and under the same conditions as are provided for employees and the dependents of employees of the Federal Civil Works Administration in the act entitled "An act making an additional appropriation to carry out the purposes of the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933 for the continuation of the Civil Works program, and for other purposes", approved February 15, 1934 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 5, sec. 796), and the special fund established in the Treasury of the United States for administrative expenses and for the payment of compensation awarded to employees of the Civil Works Administration shall be available for the payment of the benefits authorized by this section.

TITLE VI—EFFECTIVE DATE AND REPEAL

SEC. 600. The repeal of laws and veterans' regulations as provided by this act shall not affect any act done or right or liability accrued, but all such rights and liabilities under said laws or veterans' regulations shall continue and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal had not been made, and all offenses committed and all penalties incurred under such repealed laws or veterans' regulations may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if said repeal had not been made.

SEC. 601. Except where otherwise provided, this act shall take effect from the date of its enactment.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi is entitled to 20 minutes and the lady from Massachusetts to 20 minutes.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, this bill takes care of widows and orphans of those presumptive cases who died from some other cause than the ones for which compensated, and they are put on a parity with the widows and orphans included in the bill we passed last year, known as 484. Also, it provides for dispensing with the so-called misconduct clause, so far as it affects these widows and orphans.

Personally, I have always thought that was a very cruel and inhuman provision of the veterans' law to visit upon these widows and orphans the alleged sins of another.

Another thing it does is to take care of the widows and orphans of those veterans who died in the flood of the hurricane under the employment compensation law. As is known, these veterans who were gathered here in Washington seeking employment were given employment by the Florida Emergency Relief Administration and were sent down to the Florida Keys. They were given employment, I believe, at a dollar a day and furnished food, lodging, medical treatment, and I believe the common laborers were furnished with clothing. Last September a hurricane, accompanied by a tidal wave, occurred on the Florida Keys which drowned a large number of these veterans as well as a large number of civilians—men, women, and children, people who lived on the Keys.

I first introduced a bill to compensate those men under the Veterans' Compensation Act. We went into it thoroughly, summoned witnesses, put them under oath, and took their testimony, and that testimony is before you now in this volume of hearings, which can be obtained at the Veterans' Committee at any time. We came to the conclusion that if these men had been in a C. C. C. camp they would have been taken care of under the Emergency Compensation Act. We also came to the conclusion that to put these men or their widows and orphans on the pension rolls under the circumstances would be tantamount to adopting a general pension for World War veterans. Besides some of those men were peacetime veterans, and probably some not veterans at all, and so after going into it thoroughly we adopted this title V, providing that these men be taken care of by being given exactly the same compensation and treated exactly like they would have been had they been in a C. C. C. camp when the hurricane occurred.

The other provisions of the bill are largely administrative, merely straightening out administrative provisions of the present law.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to myself. In those 5 minutes I shall speak of title V, section 500, Florida hurricane relief for World War veterans and other persons. Just 9 months ago today the Works Progress people and the Veterans' Administration, who had these veterans in charge, were warned that there would be a hurricane. Today we shall vote for a bill that will give some sort of aid to them and their families. That hurricane came, as you all know, and it found them totally unprepared to protect those under their charge.

Mr. Speaker, I felt that these veterans who were sent to Florida and who were injured and the dependents of those who died should be given wartime compensation instead of the compensation that is paid to the C. C. C. men. I introduced a bill to that effect.

Let us go back from the time those men left Washington. They were in the transient camps here. They were allowed to stay but 3 days. If they wanted work, they had to go to Florida. In going to Florida they assumed that they would be cared for. Mr. Aubrey Williams, of the W. P. A., testified before our committee that they were special charges of the Government; men who had had a very difficult time; in some cases men who were very much upset nervously.

Mr. Stone, of the W. P. A., who received the men at Florida, stated the same thing. I refer to the sworn testimony of the witnesses. They knew when they sent those men to Florida that in certain months of the year there would be hurricanes; but what sort of provision did they make? These men were placed in shacks that could not withstand hurricanes. No shelter was built to withstand hurricanes. Matecumbe and Windley Islands were practically on the level with the sea. Often at high tide the waters washed the islands.

Mr. Speaker, P. A. Fellows, administrative assistant to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, testified that on the morning of the hurricane he had read in the Washington newspapers of the possibility of a storm in Florida. Although it was a holiday—Labor Day—he was so much concerned he went to the office and conferred with his superior officer and suggested to him that it might be advisable to get in touch with the Florida administration to see that orders for the evacuation or the necessary protection of the men were given.

At 9:45 that morning he telephoned to the Florida State administrator, Mr. Van Hyning, and told him that if it appeared that the storm would strike the keys to get the men out. He told him that he thought that his administrator would prefer to have them out, even if the storm did not strike, rather than stay there—or, in other words, he would rather take the responsibility of seeing them all moved out and moved back again than to have them stay at the risk of injury. What a tragedy it was that his advice was not followed, that the men were not taken out as a precaution.

Mr. Cutler, assistant director of the Florida veterans' camps, stated that on Sunday morning, September 1, he telephoned to the railroad officials and asked them to have two trains in readiness to go to take those men off of Matecumbe Island. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon Mr. Sheldon, the superintendent of the camp, came and countermanded the order for this train. Money has been no object in this administration. Why were not the trains held in readiness?

There were 40 trucks on Metacumbe Island that could have transported every one of those men to safety if they had been used, but those trucks were not used. We find in the record that the keys to those trucks were taken away so that the men could not use them themselves.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that there was gross negligence. I blame no one person, but a number, and I hold this Government directly responsible for the death and injury of those veterans. There has been no more horrible tragedy than the Florida hurricane which killed so many of our veterans entirely unnecessarily, their wives, and their children. In one instance a woman lost her husband and three little children. The superintendent of the camp sent his wife out early, but those women were not sent out.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, with reference to what has been said about these veterans, I ask every Member of this House to read this record. I ask you to read these sworn statements. I ask you to consult the members of this committee who are unbiased and who heard all of this testimony. You will see that we reached the only conclusion that we could have reached.

Now, be it remembered that there were several hundred people living on these keys—men, women, and children—who were in no way connected with these camps. All of those families had automobiles. Any sane man knows that if they had any idea that there would be a tidal wave they would have got in those cars and left; but nobody dreamed there would be a tidal wave, and the man in charge of this camp, Mr. Sheldon, ordered a train, a train of steel coaches, and it came; but about the time this train arrived this tidal wave came, the first one we have been able to find any history of on the Florida Keys. The last man who testified said that Mr. Russell, the postmaster, a man about 60 years old, who was born on the keys, and whose father lived there—he said that Mr. Russell told him he had never seen the water 6 inches deep over that highway in front of his house. This tidal wave came in and that water became 12 or 15 feet deep on that highway. This man Sheldon was there and stayed there during the night, clinging to the cab of that train.

Instead of being criticized, this man Shelton is entitled to credit for staying there with those men and doing the best he could. He was there the next morning combing the beach, helping to take care of them and helping find something for them to eat and caring for them the best he could.

His three foremen were all there and one of them lost his life.

Let me tell you this: There were women and children on those keys. Those people thought as much of their children as anyone, yet something like 200 of them were drowned. Those people, if they had any idea there was going to be a tidal wave would have got out of there some way; but, as it was, when this train came only one of the natives on the entire keys asked permission to get on the train or even appeared for that purpose.

Now, with reference to the responsibility of the Government, we heard that the Weather Bureau had been negligent. We sent for the Weather Bureau officials and their entire report appears in the hearing. The testimony showed the Weather Bureau had done everything possible with the facilities they had, had given all the information it was humanly possible to give, with reference to the approach of this storm. I say that the Weather Bureau needs more facilities; and in my report I said that they need more money with which to provide these facilities.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. BIERMANN. As I understand it at the present time the widow of a World War veteran is eligible to a pension provided that at the time of his death the husband had as much as 30 percent disability, regardless of the cause of his death.

Mr. RANKIN. No.

Mr. BIERMANN. It must be service-connected?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. BIERMANN. And the nub of this legislation is that it includes presumptive disability; is that right?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. BIERMANN. What does that include?

Mr. RANKIN. It includes tuberculosis, paralysis, and other similar diseases that, under the law of 1924, were declared to be presumptively service-connected if they developed prior to 1925.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to have the explanation of the gentleman from Mississippi. I have never been able to develop much enthusiasm for special privileges or donations to veterans who came out of the Army uninjured. A young man, physically fit, owes the duty to defend his country in the hour of her need.

If he emerges from the conflict uninjured, the consciousness and proud satisfaction that he has done his duty in the time of his country's need are his best reward. To turn his service into money and special privileges seems to me to make patriotism a sordid thing, unbeautiful and uninspiring to the young men of today.

But to the men who came out of the Army disabled or who developed later disabilities due to their war service we owe generous compensation. I believe in giving the veteran the benefit of the doubt as to his disability; and, by the same token, the benefit of the doubt should go to his widow and to his children. This bill (H. R. 12869) gives those widows and children the benefit of the doubt. It also removes from them the burden of the "willful misconduct cases." There is some reason for asking the veteran to carry that burden, but I believe there is no reason for imposing it on his widow and children, who do not share his guilt.

I shall vote for this bill. It is a fitting act of generosity to the deserving. If we should confine our aid to the deserving we could be very generous in our help to the disabled veteran and to his dependents. The trouble has been that we have lavished billions on those who had no proper claim for compensation or pension, and perforce, we have come to count the cost in caring for that small minority—the really deserving.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 additional minutes.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. BIERMANN. Is not that man eligible under the law we passed last year?

Mr. RANKIN. No; he was not included under what we call 484; he was not included—or I should say his dependents were not included.

Mr. BIERMANN. Does it include anything other than consumptives?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes. If the gentleman will read the Veterans' Act of 1924 he will find that certain diseases that were developed prior to 1925 were declared to be presumptively service-connected, among them tuberculosis, paralysis, neuropsychiatric trouble, and so forth.

Mr. BIERMANN. These men who are now considered to have presumptive service disabilities are eligible for pension, are they?

Mr. RANKIN. They themselves who are presumptively service-connected; the men themselves get a pension, but if they die from some other cause the widows and orphans do not.

Mr. BIERMANN. This bill corrects that?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. BIERMANN. And that is the whole nub of this bill?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes; and further than that, if the veteran died from what was called a misconduct cause the widow and orphans not only were precluded from receiving compensation but they were in a measure stigmatized, which I think is an outrage and ought never to have crept into veteran laws. It does not apply to the veterans of any other war. It applies only to veterans of the World War. This bill takes that provision out, so far as these widows and orphans are concerned.

Mr. BIERMANN. Then, the cost of taking care of these presumptives is not very large?

Mr. RANKIN. No. The whole thing will cost less than $300,000 a year, even including the widows and orphans of those who died in the Florida hurricane.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. MASSINGALE. What is the basis of the compensation for the widows and orphans of those who died in the Florida hurricane?

Mr. RANKIN. It is on the same basis as the Employment Compensation Act, on exactly the same plan as if these men had been in C. C. C. camps.

Mr. MASSINGALE. It compensates them at the rate of wages the C. C. C. paid?

Mr. RANKIN. It compensates them according to the wages they were paid.

There have been some silly efforts made by some members of the committee to play politics with this matter, but I am glad to say that the more responsible minority members of the committee have been sincere in their efforts to get the facts and to assist in arriving at a proper conclusion.

I desire to especially express my gratitude to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ENGEL] for his able and diligent services. He attended all the hearings, examined all the witnesses, and I am sure there is no one on the committee who is better informed on this proposition than he is. I am going to yield to him next, and I hope you will give him your careful attention. He is not only a veteran himself but in this investigation he has proved himself to be a friend of the veterans who wants to deal justly with them.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have the membership of the House read the hearings. "Whitewash" is written all over them. If you will read these hearings, you will see the efforts made to ban testimony when certain questions were asked by the ranking minority member on the committee, myself, and by others.

You will see the efforts made to prevent veterans from testifying. I asked to have Capt. Watson Miller called as a witness, but he was not called; also, representatives of other veterans' organizations who visited Matecumbe Key. This gentleman went down there and viewed the situation after the hurricane. This is all in the record.

I asked that a little widow who had lost three children and her husband might make a statement instead of testifying. She had previously told me she did not feel she was able to testify without breaking down. She was forced to give her testimony as a witness, and she broke down while doing so.

Mr. Speaker, it is a picture that will live in my mind always. Never before had I felt that women needed the vote more than I did that day, and I was thankful with all of my heart that we did have the vote.

I sat through these hearings and allowed my rights to go by because I feared if I did not the hearings would be closed and the testimony end. They had the votes on the majority side to stop the hearings, and I wanted the facts to appear in the record.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 additional minute.

Mr. Speaker, I asked General Hines in September for information of the hurricane and the victims, and I received no information, no cooperation, from him. I asked the W. P. A. for photographs. They have taken photographs of every other thing they have ever done, but Mr. Apt, of the Works Progress Administration, wrote me that it would cost too much, or words to that effect. But I have photographs, Mr. Speaker, of those buildings, those shacks, showing that they were not fastened down before the hurricane. The Government had a direct responsibility for those men, especially as they were not well. People in flooded areas are always loathe to leave their homes, and that is their own personal responsibility, but, Mr. Speaker, the Government owed a responsibility to those men and that admission runs all through the hearings. Those 690 veterans never should have been sent to such a place.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SAUTHOFF].

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Mr. Speaker, I was a member of the committee, and I attended all of the sessions of the committee which made this investigation with the exception of two, and on these particular occasions I had to be present at other committees to vote on bills. However, I read the testimony of the sessions that I missed, as soon as it was transcribed.

Mr. Speaker, I have tried to view the entire proceedings in an impartial and impersonal manner. I have come to the conclusion that the Government was negligent in the method in which it provided protection for the people on the Florida Keys. It must be remembered that the Government put them there; therefore the Government had a responsibility and a duty. Having put them there, it was the Government's duty to take care of them.

I asked the question specifically of the Weather Bureau witnesses and the others whether there was any danger on the keys at any particular time of the year, and they said, "Yes; during the storm period, June, July, August, and September." Then I asked those who had charge of these camps what particular precautions were taken to prevent disaster during these storms, and the only answer I received to the question was that there had been a discussion as to the cost of a train, but the negotiations had ended because the cost was too high. There had been some discussion as to building permanent quarters as a protection, but that was also abandoned because the cost was too high.

What was done in this instance? When word came of an approaching storm the officials of the camps listened in on the reports over the telephone, which was a 13-line telephone. The radio that they had was not fit for use and did not give them any information. Why it was not repaired or a new one purchased, I do not know. No one seemed to think that was his responsibility. The only one who seemed vitally concerned was Mr. Cutler, a construction engineer. This man took the situation very seriously. He consulted one of the old captains on Sunday, and the captain informed him that he was apprehensive that there was grave danger. When the hurricane signals were up, and we were advised that whenever those signals were put up there was always danger, the captain made his preparations to ride out the storm. That is what they had always done in the past.

Mr. Speaker, I concede that this was one of the worst storms ever experienced in that district. I concede that no tidal wave of the magnitude of this one had ever been felt down there. But, nevertheless, the duty was on those who took the men there to take them out or else provide security against such storms, neither of which was done.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 4 additional minutes.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Mr. Speaker, there were available two chances to get out of those keys, one by a railroad which was in receivership, and the other by motor transportation. The railroad, which was in receivership at that time, did not respond as readily as was anticipated. There was a delay of several hours, and the train did not get through in time to take the people out. I call attention to the fact that on Sunday Mr. Fellows, from the office here in Washington, phoned down to Jacksonville because he was apprehensive about this storm. He had read in the paper about the storm and warned them not to take any chances in reference to getting the people out. Someone, and they cannot pin it onto anybody, because no one admits it, negotiated with the railroad, and finally the railroad official stated that they did not know what they wanted and hung up. The railroad official was holding a train for them, but they would not give him an order to run it in there and take those people out.

That left the motor vehicles, trucks, and so forth. But the keys of these motor vehicles were ordered turned in, and they could not drive the trucks without them. These people, left there helpless, were not able to get out. There was nothing for them to go out on. All modes of transportation had been foreclosed.

Mr. Speaker, if this employer in this instance had been the Standard Oil Co. and all these lives had been lost, every Member here would be condemning them. No one would be seeking to defend the company. The Government should be treated in the same way. I conceive the law to be as follows: An employee assumes a risk of common knowledge, but he does not assume a risk arising from the employer's negligence or breach of duty of which he is not aware.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield two and a half minutes to the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. RISK].

Mr. RISK. Mr. Speaker, I do not think anyone on either side of the House has any objection to those provisions contained in the bill which will effect a liberalization of existing veterans' law. I do not think any of us have any objection to those parts of the report of the committee which deal directly with these liberalizing provisions, but we do object most strenuously to that part of the report which attempts to effect a whitewash insofar as the Government agency having charge of these men is concerned.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RISK. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. I want to say that is deliberately false. There is no attempt to whitewash. The gentleman did not attend the hearings. If he had attended the hearings he would have known that.

Mr. RISK. I yielded to the gentleman for a question. Has the gentleman a question to ask?

Mr. RANKIN. I am through, for the moment, I will say to the gentleman from Rhode Island.

Mr. RISK. Mr. Speaker, in the committee time and time again, although I was there at only a few sessions, being busy in other committees, I saw the technical rules of evidence which apply in a court of law applied time and time again against the gentlewoman from Massachusetts and other members of the committee. When a question arises in the mind of any member of a committee, it is too much to ask that a member be circumscribed by the regular rules of evidence which obtain in a courtroom. That is the reason I object strenuously to that provision in the report. A reading of the hearings will show that I am justified in taking this position.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I endorse this bill so far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. Under suspension, it is a case of voting for that or getting nothing. I have expressed my opinion about title V and section 500, and we shall hear more about that.

Also, Mr. Speaker, I wanted a provision put in the bill that would have given a higher rate of compensation to the widows and orphans of the veterans of the World War comparable with the rate paid in Canada. This was in line with a bill I introduced many, many months ago. But I was not allowed even a hearing.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, we had one able man on the committee who attended the hearings, and I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ENGEL].

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein in chronological order the telephone calls and orders of the railroad, the weather reports, and barometer reading taken at the keys during the hurricane.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I dislike very much to disagree with my colleagues on my own side of the aisle. There were three investigations held with regard to the hurricane on the Florida Keys, one by the committee, one a joint hearing or investigation by W. P. A. and the Veterans' Administration, and a third by the district attorney's office in Florida at Matecumbe.

I attended every session of the committee and in the consideration of this problem I tried to forget I was a Republican and that those on the other side of the aisle were Democrats. [Applause.] I tried to take the position that I was neither prosecuting attorney nor attorney for the defense, but that my duty was to get the facts and all the facts without regard to whom it might hit. The statement I have just placed in the RECORD contains in chronological order every phone call, every Weather Bureau report, every barometer reading, and every bit of testimony of that sort, as a résumé, from 5:40 Sunday morning until the night involved.

The fact of the matter is that as I look back I can only see a horrible picture, men and women being swept off of these keys and their bodies brought back hours afterward to hang on the limbs of trees in mangrove swamps as found there days afterward.

I contend it is a serious matter to place responsibility for this sort of thing on human beings. You cannot hold a government responsible without holding the men who were representing the government responsible. I say you should not hold them responsible unless the evidence is clear and convincing, evidence which you would accept in a court of justice and evidence upon which you would be willing to take the responsibility yourself, and as a member of the committee I say to you that such evidence is not there.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ENGEL. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman heard the insinuations from the other side about a whitewash. I will ask the gentleman if this was a fair investigation.

Mr. ENGEL. So far as I am concerned, the record speaks for itself, and it stands there. Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that no one, not even the Weather Bureau, knew where the hurricance was. On Sunday the hurricane was 400 miles southeast of Matecumbe, traveling westward, and not in the direction of these camps at Matecumbe. Much has been said about a train being ordered for Sunday and canceled, and about the advisability of getting the men out of there on Sunday. The fact is the railroad company attached several extra coaches and came back from Key West to Miami through the camps hauling six empty passenger coaches with a seating capacity of 480. This was late Sunday afternoon. If anyone had been alarmed on Sunday there was ample opportunity for them to have left the keys.

In the chronological report I have prepared from the evidence is contained every order issued and everything done by the employees of the railroad company in getting the train ready and sending it out. The résumé also contains all weather reports issued and all barometer readings taken on Sunday and Monday. Upon these reports I base my statement that no human being is responsible for this disaster.

The gentleman from Wisconsin criticized the methods they had of obtaining the Weather Bureau reports, stating the telephone and radio did not work. The best answer to that argument is that the record shows that those in charge of the camps on the keys did receive all weather reports at the time they were issued until after 4:30 p. m. Monday, when the wires went down.

At 10 a. m. Monday the hurricane was 200 miles east of Habana, Cuba, still traveling westward. At 1:30 p. m. it was 120 miles southeast of Matecumbe, still going in a westerly direction. It was not until 4:30 p. m. Monday that the Weather Bureau reported the hurricane as having turned northward in the direction of the camps at Matecumbe. The fact of the matter is that no one, not even the Weather Bureau, knew where the storm was. To have moved the men prior to this time might have meant moving them into the path of the storm.

When the report of the storm was issued at 10 a. m. Monday and the words were used "Caution vessels in Florida Straits", ships in the hurricane area left the danger zone. The Weather Bureau based its reports in part on radio information it received from ships in the storm area. After these ships left the danger zone, the Weather Bureau was deprived of one of its most valuable sources of information. This, in my judgement, accounts for any inaccurracies in those reports. It would be a wonderful thing, if in the science of weather forecasting, we had reached a point where a weather forecaster could sit in a rocking chair, riding on the crest of the storm, with a radio receiver on his head and a transmitter in his hand. It would be wonderful if we could have heard his voice telling us the storm was 89¾ miles southeast of Matecumbe and was due to arrive in Matecumbe at 14 minutes and 20 seconds past 8 o'clock. Unfortunately we have not yet reached that stage. These weather reports must be based on information gathered by the department from various sources and sometimes this information is not available and unfortunately not always 100 percent accurate.

At no time prior to 1:30 p. m. Monday did the barometer readings at the camps fall below 29.70 or show danger, 30.00 being normal. One reading shows the barometer actually went up from 29.80 to 29.85 from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. Monday, indicating the storm was not going to hit that area.

I wish to say again I dislike very much to disagree with my colleagues on my side of the aisle. Basing my conclusions on the facts and the evidence, I say that it was an act of God and that no one was responsible. The chronological chart which I prepared from the exhaustive testimony and to which I have referred in this short speech, follows:

CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER OF TELEPHONE CALLS, ORDERS, WEATHER BUREAU REPORTS, BAROMETER READINGS, ETC., TAKEN AND GIVEN FROM 5:48 A. M. SEPTEMBER 1, 1935, TO 8:25 P. M. SEPTEMBER 2, 1935, REGARDING THE HURRICANE AT MATECUMBE, FLA.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1935

5:48 a. m.: Mr. F. B. Ghent, director of veterans' work in Florida, talked by phone to Mr. P. L. Gaddis, district superintendent of Florida East Coast Railway, regarding train service in case of possible hurricane.

6:05 a. m.: Mr. F. B. Ghent, director of veterans' work in Florida, talked by phone to Mr. B. L. Byrum, chief train dispatcher of Florida East Coast Railway at New Smyrna, Fla., regarding a train in case of hurricane.

10 a. m.: Miami Weather Bureau advisory was as follows: "Tropical disturbance central, short distance south of Andros Island, moving westward about 8 miles per hour attended by stiffening gales, probably winds of hurricane force, wide area near center. Indications are storm will pass through Florida Straits late tonight or Monday. Caution advise vessels in path. Northeast storm warnings displayed from Fort Pierce around coast to Fort Myers. Squalls late this afternoon. No hurricane warnings up in this section."

10 a. m. (or shortly thereafter): Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps, visited Capt. E. H. Sheeran, superintendent of bridge construction, who has been on the keys since 1905, and who said he was getting ready for a severe blow.

10:33 a. m.: Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps, put in a call for Mr. F. B. Ghent, director of veterans' work in Florida, at Jacksonville. While waiting he also put in a call for Mr. P. L. Gaddis, district superintendent of Florida East Coast Railway, but Mr. Gaddis was out of town, so Mr. Cutler talked to the clerk, whom he told that in view of storm he thought it advisable to make up two trains ready to dispatch at a moment's notice. He told him that the order was without authority, but that he had a call in for Mr. Ghent, who had authority.

10:46 a. m.: Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps, talked to weather bureau at Miami by phone. Telephone records of call, but no information given.

10:58 a. m.: Mr. George Pepper at Key West talked by phone to Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps.

2:42 p. m.: Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps, talked by phone to Mr. F. B. Ghent, director of veterans' work in Florida. Mr. Ghent said he had talked with Mr. Ray W. Shelden, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, who would be at camps shortly to handle situation.

4:00 p. m. (or shortly after): Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, arrived at camps. Called Miami Weather Bureau and received latest warning. Not much change in weather.

4:47 p. m.: Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps, talked by phone to weather bureau at Miami. Telephone records of call but no information given.

5:12 p. m.: Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps, called Mr. F. B. Ghent, director of veterans' work in Florida, and gave him barometer reading and weather report. Mr. Ghent reported similar report from Jacksonville Weather Bureau. It was decided to await further developments before taking action to remove men from keys.

5:15 p. m.: Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, telephoned Mr. P. L. Gaddis, district superintendent of Florida East Coast Railway, at his home in Miami. Mr. Gaddis said train could be assembled and spotted at camps within 3 or 4 hours after order was placed.

10:30 p. m.: Mr. Ray B. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps, talked by phone to Miami Weather Bureau.

10:30 p. m.: Mr. Ray Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, had telephone conversation with the Miami Weather Bureau—Mr. Ernest Carson, associate meteorologist in charge, who said, according to advisory of 9:30 p. m., center of storm was 260 miles east of Habana, moving slowly westward. Mr. Carson said it would be safe to stay on keys until Monday morning. The weather bureau in Miami promised to inform Mr. Sheldon of any changes during night.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1935

3:31 a. m.: Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps, talked by phone to Miami Weather Bureau and informed that tropical disturbance was 275 miles east of Habana, moving westward; beware high tides and storm gales.

8:17 a. m.: Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, talked by phone to Miami Weather Bureau, Mr. Ernest Carson, associate meteorologist in charge, and states reports indicated no change in storm.

9:30 a. m.: Jacksonville Weather Bureau marine forecast: "East Gulf of Mexico, moderate winds except increasing northeast over southeast portion, probably reaching gale force and possibly hurricane force over extreme southeast portion." Hurricane about 175 miles southeast of keys, traveling in westerly direction.

9:45 a. m.: Mr. Fellows put in a call for Mr. Conrad Van Hyning, Florida State director of Florida emergency relief administration. Mr. Fellows was acting chief engineer and had come down to the office immediately upon reading of a storm east of Cuba, Monday being a legal holiday. He found Mr. Aubrey Williams, assistant administrator in charge of relief work, in his office and put in the call to Mr. Van Hyning on Mr. Williams' approval. However, the office at Tallahassee, Fla., was closed, so Mr. Fellows instructed the operator to get him anyone in authority.

10 a. m.: Weather report advisory: "Tropical disturbance central about 200 miles due east of Habana, Cuba, moving slowly westward, attended by shifting gales and probably winds, hurricane force, small area near center. Caution advised vessels Florida Straits next 24 or 36 hours." Northeast storm warnings ordered same area as at 10 a. m. on first were continued.

10 a. m.: Barometer reading, 29.80. (At same time Islamorada lighthouse keeper reports 29.80.)

11 a. m.: At 10:30 a. m. the telephone operator told Mr. Fellows, acting chief engineer, Federal emergency relief administration, that Mr. Conrad Van Hyning, Florida State administrator, Florida emergency relief administration, was in Tallahassee. Mr. Fellows told the operator to call all hotels and at 11 a. m. he reached Mr. Van Hyning and told him of his fears and asked whether the veterans had been evacuated. He told Mr. Van Hyning that Mr. Hopkins would not want anything to happen that would result in the loss of life or injury to any of the men in the camps. Mr. Van Hyning said he thought the veterans had not been evacuated; that he thought they had some people experienced in storm protection whom they could get from Key West or possibly some were already there. (No stenographer was available, but Mr. Lanham, a member of the staff, listened to the conversation, and the conversation was reported to Mr. Westbrook, Assistant Administrator, F. E. R. A., and to Mr. Williams' secretary.)

11:20 a. m.: Mr. Conrad Van Hyning, Florida State administrator of the Florida emergency relief administration, Tallahassee, Fla., attempted to reach Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, to give orders. Being unable to reach Mr. Sheldon, Mr. Van Hyning called Mr. M. E. Gilfond, Florida emergency relief administrator for Monroe County, Fla., at Key West, and asked him to relay the message to Mr. Sheldon. Mr. Gilfond told Mr. Van Hyning there was no reason to be immediately concerned about Matecumbe, that Key West would feel a strong blow.

11:23 a. m.: Mr. Gilfond, Florida emergency relief administrator for Monroe County, Fla., talked by phone to Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, relaying the message.

11:30 a. m.: Barometer reading, 29.81 at Matecumbe.

11:33 a. m.: Mr. Gilfond, Florida emergency relief administrator for Monroe County, Fla., talked by phone to Mr. Conrad Van Hyning, Florida State administrator for the Florida emergency relief administration, reporting that he had relayed his message to Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe.

11:42 a. m.: Mr. Gilfond, Florida emergency relief administrator for Monroe County, Fla., talked by phone from Key West to Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe. Mr. Sheldon told Mr. Gilfond that the barometer was rising at that time. Storm then reported about 200 miles from Keys, heading westward.

11:53 a. m.: Mr. Conrad Van Hyning, Florida State administrator for the Florida emergency relief administration, Tallahassee, Fla., talked by phone to Mr. Gilfond, Monroe County, Florida emergency relief administrator, and told him to relay message to Mr. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, to do everything possible to protect the men.

12 m.: Barometer reading at Matecumbe, 29.85. (Lighthouse also reports 29.85.)

12:43 p. m. (during lunch hour): Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, called Miami Weather Bureau and was informed camps and keys in no immediate danger.

1 p. m.: Barometer reading, 29.85, taken at Alligator Lighthouse. (It will be noted here that this barometer actually went up between the 10 a. m. reading and 12 m. reading and held up to 1 p. m. reading, indicating the storm was not approaching Matecumbe.)

BAROMETER READING BY RICHARD BOW AT CAMP 3, 29.20

1:30 p. m.: Weather Bureau report: "Hurricane warning issued at 1:20 p. m. Hoist hurricane warnings 1:30 p. m. Key West district. Tropical disturbance central at noon about latitude 23°20' longitude 80°15' moving slowly westward. It will be attended by winds of hurricane force Florida Straits and winds gale force Florida Keys south of Key Largo this afternoon and tonight. Caution advised vessels Florida Straits next 24 hours. Northeast storm warnings to remain displayed elsewhere Miami to Fort Myers."

(NOTE.—Key West district takes in all keys south of Key Largo. Storm at this time was about 120 miles from Matecumbe.)

1:32 p. m.: Mr. S. C. Cutler, works director of veterans' camps, talked by phone to Miami Weather Bureau. Telephone records of call, but no information given.

1:37 p. m.: Mr. F. B. Ghent, director of veterans' work in Florida, talked by phone to Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe. Mr. Sheldon told him that barometer was falling fast; that he had better order the train. Mr. Ghent said he would order train at once.

1:45 p. m.: Mr. Ray W. Sheldon, superintendent of veterans' camps at Matecumbe, called the Florida East Coast Railway and talked with Mr. J. M. Shealy, chief clerk to district superintendent, telling him they were expecting the storm to strike the keys and his Jacksonville office was handling with their St. Augustine office the matter of a relief train. He said he had called their office to let them know such action was being taken so they could be in readiness to operate the train when the order was received. Mr. Shealy told Mr. Sheldon to hold the phone as he thought Mr. Gaddis, superintendent of railway (district) at Miami, was calling him from Key West, that Mr. Gaddis was on the phone and Mr. Shealy told him what Mr. Sheldon had said. Mr. Gaddis directed that Mr. A. I. Pooser, superintendent of the railroad, get in on the dispatcher's telephone, which was done. Mr. Gaddis told Mr. Pooser about Mr. Sheldon calling and Mr. Pooser stated the train would be operated promptly after the order was received from St. Augustine. While this conversation was being carried on the official order was received. Mr. Sheldon was promised that the train would be at the camps between 5:30 and 6 p. m.

1:55 p. m.: Mr. F. B. Ghent, director of veterans' work in Florida, talked to Mr. R. C. Unkrich, assistant administrator of the Emergency Relief Administration in Florida, and told Mr. Unkrich train was standing by, ready to leave at an hour's notice. (Mr. Unkrich assumed the train was standing by at the keys, but this was a mistake in his judgment.)

2 p. m.: Barometer reading at camp no. 3, by Richard Bow, 29.66.

2 p. m. to 4 p. m.: The following phone calls and orders were given by Mr. G. R. Branch, yardmaster of Florida East Coast Railway and acting trainmaster, between the hours of 2 p. m. and 4 p. m.:

1. Received call ordering train about 2 p. m. from Mr. B. L. Byrum, chief train dispatcher of Florida East Coast Railway at New Smyrna, Fla.
